when as a lad of ten he herded sheep for his father. His early youth was passed in wholesome rural surroundings and he is devoted to the west, with its manifold opportunities and resources.

Professor Foote is very active in church and Sunday-school work, being a deacon and superintendent of the Sunday-school of the Baptist church with which he is identified. Mrs. Foote is also an active and valued member, and the entire Foote family are interested in church work. The subject is interested in educational matters in all departments and keeps in touch with new pedagogical theories, no matter in what country they are advanced. He is a member of the Montana State Teachers' Association; the National Society for the Promotion of Industrial Education; the National Education Association; and a member of the state text-book commission from March, 1907, to March, 1917. He is also connected with the Religious Education Association. He is the possessor of a well-ordered library.

Professor Foote became a Benedict on June 27, 1900, the young woman to whom he was united in marriage being Lizzie Creighton, daughter of David and Elizabeth Creighton, of Butte. Into their attractive household have been born two sons and a daughter: Leon Creighton, born September 23, 1901, attends school in Dillon, and Marjorie Ione, who has not yet attained to school age, her arrival upon this mundane sphere having been September 7, 1908; and Donald James, born April 22, 1912.

Addison Osgood Foote, father of the foregoing, was born in the state of New York, February 7, 1840. In 1870, the year preceding his son's birth, he came to Kansas and at the present time is a resident of Asherville. Like his son he is a deacon in the Baptist church and takes much interest in religious matters. He is one of that gallant company who marched forth at their country's call in the crucial days of the '60s, his enlistment being in Company I of the Twenty-eighth Wisconsin Regiment. He married Sarah Margaret Gleason, who was born in Wisconsin, July 5, 1847, the date of their union being January 2, 1871. They removed to Kansas shortly thereafter and were among the finest and most admirable citizens of their community, active in religious and charitable circles. The demise of the mother occurred on December 13, 1895, at the age of forty-eight, and her remains are interred in Kansas. There were six children in the family, five being sons and one a daughter, and the subject is the eldest in order of nativity. One married brother makes his home in Butte, Montana, being advertising manager for Lutey Brothers, another brother is a missionary of the Baptist church in Japan. The remaining two reside in Kansas.

JOHN S. BAKER was born July 17, 1857, in Plattsburg, New York. He lived there until he was about fourteen years of age and then removed with his parents to Marquette, Michigan. There he remained until 1872, when he left home, going to Wyoming, where he was a telegraph operator on the Union Pacific System for five years. In 1877 he went to Silver Reef, Utah, where he engaged in the mining business until 1881. He then went back into the telegraph service, operating at various points on the Union Pacific Railroad System. At this time he opened the first station at Fossil, Wyoming, and then as the road expanded he moved with it and opened Montpelier, Idaho, and then Idaho Falls. He remained in the latter place from September, 1887, to 1889, and then went to Pocatella as train dispatcher and agent, remaining there until 1895. He spent about a year prospecting, and in 1896 he again entered the railroad service and took Lima station, Montana, remaining there until 1902, when he was elected clerk and recorder for Beaverhead county. He has held this office continuously ever since.

Mr. Baker earned his first money as a boy in the office of the Morgan Iron Works in Morgan, Michigan, where he learned telegraphy. He received his early education in the public schools of Plattsburg, New York.

Mr. Baker was married in Silver Reef, Utah, in November, 1880, to Miss Mary Theobald, daughter of William and Mary Theobald, where Mr. Theobald followed mining. Eleven children have been born, seven boys and four girls, as follows: Clair was born November 20, 1881, and died February 28, 1906. Alice is married to John N. Cosgrove and now resides in Dillon. Jay S. was born March 5, 1886, and is deputy clerk and recorder in his father's office. Anna is married to J. O. Melton and resides five miles from Dillon. Idaaha is now attending the State Normal school at Dillon. Vera was graduated from the high school as a stenographer and now holds a good position in Dillon. Helen is now attending the public schools in Dillon, as are also George R., Geneva, and Albert S. The eleventh child, a girl, died in infancy.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker are members of the Methodist church and Mrs. Baker is an active worker in church circles. Mr. Baker is a member of the Masonic order, both of the blue lodge and chapter, is a past-master of Evergreen Lodge of Lima, Montana, and a past high priest of Dillon Chapter, No. 8. He also belongs to the Elks and is a member of the Beaver and Social Club.

While residing in Idaho he was appointed by Governor McConnell as a member of the first board of county commissioners for Bannack county. He was alderman in Pocatella, Idaho, for two terms. He is very fond of driving and this is his chief recreation. Mr. Baker has made his own way by energy and ability.

His father was John S. Baker, who was born in Plattsburg, New York. After removing to the west he followed ranching. He died in Deadwood, South Dakota, in 1879, aged about fifty-six years. The mother was Mary Baker, who was born in Plattsburg, New York, and died in Kearney, Nebraska, in 1889, at about fifty-six years of age. The father and mother were married in Plattsburg, New York. There were six children in the family of the elder Baker, five girls and one boy, the subject of this sketch.

GEORGE F. BENNIGHOFF, familiarly known in Billings as "Uncle George," and one of the most popular men in the city, is one of the many German born citizens of the United States who have contributed so much to the growth and development of our country. He was born in Kleinniedesheim, Rheinpfalz, Germany, on the 7th day of April, 1851, and is the son of George and Annie Mary Bennighoff, both natives of the same province in which the subject was born.

George Bennighoff, the father of the subject, was a cabinet-maker, and he lived and died in his native land, there rearing a family of seven children, as follows: George, the first born, who died in Trenton, New Jersey, fifty-four years old; George F., of this review; John; Andrew; Ferdinand, deceased; Julia and Wilhelm, also deceased. All the living children are in America with the exception of John.

George F. Bennighoff was educated in the schools of his native land, both by public and private instruction. He learned the trade of a cabinet-maker, the business of his father, and when he was seventeen years old he came to America. He remained in the east for two years, and in July, 1870, he shipped on board of a whaling vessel sailing out of the port of New Bedford, Massachusetts, as ship's carpenter, and for three years sailed the Atlantic. In 1873 he went back to New Bedford, Massachusetts, and there engaged in house carpentering until 1875, in that year making a trip to California. He went via the Isthmus of Panama, and in San Francisco he worked in the Old Palace Hotel until the following year. Then he shipped on the training school ship of California, Jamestown, as ship's carpenter, until she went out of commission, February 28, 1879. In April of that year he went to Portland, Oregon, and thence to Walla Walla and Spokane. He left Spokane in July and went to Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, where he engaged in carpenter work on the military post then under construction, until December 1st, at which time he returned to Germany, reaching his birthplace on January 17, 1880, this trip home having been brought about by litigation following the death of his father. His stay in the Fatherland was brief, April 7, 1880, finding him on his way back to America, this time accompanied by his sister Julia. They arrived in San Francisco in June, 1880, moving on to Portland, Oregon, soon thereafter, where Mr. Bennighoff engaged in the grocery business for a short time. He sold the business and removed to The Dalles, Oregon, where he took service with the O. R. & N. Railroad, building railroad cars. He left The Dalles in 1882 and went to Sprague, Washington territory, there building a hotel for himself, and remained in the Commercial Hotel until the burning of the town in 1895. As everything looked blue, he sought other quarters, and came to Billings, Montana, purchasing the Grand Hotel in 1896, assumed charge of the same on the 6th of April, 1896, since which time he has been occupied in the hotel business.

His is a first class establishment in every respect, and with the exception of a four-year period, in which he leased the place, he has been the proprietor. In 1911 he resumed the management of the hotel again, which has always enjoyed a splendid patronage, catering as it does to the most substantial trade in the city.

Mr. Bennighoff is a Republican in his political sympathies, and has been an alderman for some eight or nine years. He has never married, but has devoted himself to the care of his sister Julia, who came with him to America on his 1880 trip from Germany.

During the four years in which he leased the hotel, and withdrew from its cares, he took his sister and the daughter, Julia, of his brother Andrew, who is the active manager of the hotel, now, and made a trip around the world, and in 1910 he took his four nieces, the daughters of his brother Andrew, on a trip to Europe, one of the principal missions of their journey being to visit the home of their ancestors in Germany. He thus demonstrated his capacity to separate himself from the cares of business and enjoy life in his own way,—a feat which too many successful business men find themselves utterly unable to perform in later life.

Mr. Bennighoff has proven himself to be a man of singular ability in hostelry matters, as his experience in Billings amply evidences. When he assumed charge of the Grand Hotel it was in a run-down condition, and in bad shape generally. In an incredibly short time the place began to show signs of new blood and life in its management, and the status of the hotel increased with every passing week until it reached the first place in the ranks of the Billings hotels.

Its proprietor has won for himself many firm friends throughout the state during the years of his association with the Grand Hotel,—possessing as he does all the genial qualities of a model host, and the understanding nature which is an important essential in the make-up of the genuine hotel man.

JOHN GUSTAVE LINK. The men who succeed in any enterprise in life, the soldiers who win their spurs on the field of battle, the financiers who amass wealth,—are the men who have confidence in themselves and possess the courage of their convictions. There is a time in every man's life when he reaches the conclusion that envy is ignorance; that imitation is suicide, and that though the world is full of good, no good thing can come to him without self-reliance and the power to gain results. The man who trusts himself and who plans well his part on the stage of life is a success. A strong and sterling character is like an anagram;—read it forward or backward, it still spells the same thing. Since 1896 John C. Link has been engaged in business as an architect in Butte, and since 1905 he has been associated in that line of enterprise with C. S. Haire, their firm being known as that of Link (J. G.) & Haire (C. S.). The main office is at Butte and branch offices are maintained at Helena, Miles City, Missoula, Billings, and Lewiston.

A native of Germany, John Gustave Link was born on the 13th of May, 1870, and is a son of Casper and Josephine (Weishaupt) Link, both of whom were likewise born in Germany, the former on the 30th of November, 1839, and the latter on the 27th of March 1848. The Link family immigrated to the United States in 1889 and the home was established at Denver, Colorado, where the father was engaged in the merchant-tailor business, and where he died in 1892. The mother still survives and her home is in Denver.

The first born in a family of three children, John G. Link was reared to the age of seventeen years in his native land, where he attended school to the age of seventeen years. He was a student in the Royal Academy at Lindau for six years and graduated in 1886, his instruction in architecture having been received under the careful guidance of Professors William Meyer and Joseph Goetzger. He immigrated to the United States in 1887 and settled in Denver, Colorado, where he was employed as architectural draughtsman for a period of six years (from 1887 to 1893). From Denver he went to St. Louis, Missouri, where he was engaged as architectural draughtsman for one year, and in 1895 opened an office for himself, but on account of ill health, and believing that he could find better opportunities, he came to Butte in 1896. Here he entered into a partnership alliance with W. E. Donovan, under the firm name of Link & Donovan, and for the ensuing four years a thriving architectural business was conducted. In 1900 he severed his association with Mr. Donovan and became associated with Joseph T. Carter, continuing to be identified in business with the latter gentleman until 1905. In that year the firm of Link & Haire was established, the same consisting of Mr. Link and C. S. Haire. This firm controls an extensive and lucrative business and is known as the leading architectural concern in the entire state. The firm has designed many of the most prominent buildings in the above mentioned cities, and samples of their work are to be found in most of the cities of the state, as well as in Missouri, Kansas, North Dakota, Wyoming, Idaho and Washington. A large number of public buildings were erected under their charge among which are most of the state schools, the Silver Bow county court house and the state capitol.

In addition to his architectural practice, Mr. Link is interested in ranches and mining properties, and is one of the first eight original locators of the Byron oil field in Wyoming in 1904. In that year he located the Cottonwood oil fields in Carbon county, Montana, and three years later, with his associates, he drilled the first oil well in that district.

In his political convictions Mr. Link is a stalwart supporter of the cause of the Democratic party, and while he is too busy a man to figure actively in politics, he is ever on the alert and is enthusiastically in sympathy with all measures advanced for progress and improvements. In a fraternal and social way he is affiliated with the Knights of Columbus, the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, the Woodmen of the World, the Silver Bow Club, and the Billings Club. In connection with his work he is a valued and appreciative member of the American Institute of Architects and the Montana Association of Architects, being a director in the latter named organization. His religious faith is that of a Roman Catholic.

At St. Louis, Missouri, on September 17, 1895, Mr. Link was united in marriage with Miss Martha Welling, a daughter of Charles Welling, and a native of Germany. Mr. and Mrs. Link are the parents of five children, whose names and the respective dates of births are here entered: Vesta, May 20, 1900; Randolph, January, 19, 1902; Henry, November 28, 1903; Gustave J., April 15, 1908; and Louis, April 3, 1910. The Home of the family is maintained at Billings, where Mr. and Mrs. Link are well known and popular in the best social circles.

WILLIAM WISEHAM DADE TERRETT. With the death of William Wisaham Dade Terrett, of Miles City, Montana lost one of her most brilliant and promising young men. During the years in which he had been a part of the business and financial world of the state he had become known for his keen business sense and his fidelity to whatever duty lay before him. The people of his district had just set the seal of their approval upon him by electing him to represent them in the legislature, and his death came as a personal grief to many citizens of the state as well as to those of his own section. He was always in the forefront of any move which would result in the bettering of conditions in Miles City, and was a fine example of that type of the modern business man who possesses what has been called a civic conscience, ever ready to give time and money to aid in making Miles City a little nearer the ideal of what a city should be.

On the 27th of March, 1879, in the state of Missouri, William Wisaham Dade Terrett was born. His parents were William Wisaham and Priscilla G. (Richards) Terrett. Both the father and mother were natives of the state of Virginia. There were nine children in the family, and Wisaham was the middle one, the most unsatisfactory position of all, it seemed to him. Wisaham Terrett, Senior, determined to come west and try ranching, and therefore located in Montana, where he has since lived. He is the present owner and operator of a ranch in the Tongue River district, near Brandenburg.

Wisaham Terrett, the son, spent the first years of his life in the state of his birth, but later he was taken to Chicago, and there remained with his mother and his brothers and sisters, while his father was preparing a home for them out on the great western plains. Here in the city, Wisaham Terrett secured most of his education at the public schools, for he did not come out to Montana until he was seventeen years of age. His first position upon arriving in Montana was as clerk and teller in the First National Bank of Miles City, Montana. He remained here until 1901, when he accepted a position as cashier of the Mercant's Bank of Forsyth, Montana. This was a rather responsible position for a young man of twenty-two, and that he was deemed capable of filling it spoke well for the way in which he had spent his time since coming into the state. Fill it, he did, to the great satisfaction of those who were interested in the success of the bank. He had a natural ability for finance, and the honesty and stability for which the bank became known was due in no small measure to the efforts of the cashier. He remained in this position for three years, and then came to Miles City, Montana, becoming president of the Calvin Investment Company. This position he held until his death on the 18th of January, 1911. The prosperous condition in which he left his business shows his fine qualities as a business man as nothing else could do. Active and energetic, he never allowed an opportunity to slip by him, and often bested older and more experienced and wealthier men, simply through his youth and enthusiasm.

Mr. Terrett was married on the 6th of August, 1902, to Miss Marguerite Courtenay, a daughter of William Courtenay, who came to Montana in the early seventies. He was a native of London, England, and her mother, who was Fannie Patterson before her marriage, was born in New York City. William Courtenay was a very prominent man in the history of this section of the state, being engaged in the stock brokerage and land business. He made his home in Miles City for many years, and was known for his upright character and the strict honesty of his business relations all over this part of Montana. He was one of the pioneers who came to Montana, not to get rich as speedily as possible, but to establish a home where he and his descendants might live, honored and respected by their neighbors. His ambition was realized, and in the realization of this simpler ambition, wealth came to him also, and when he died, on October 30, 1901, he left a name that was highly respected in the business world. His wife survived him several years, dying on the 16th of July, 1908. Mrs. Terrett was the eldest of six children, and was born in Bismarck, North Dakota. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Terrett: Courtenay, Wisaham, Barbara and Dulany, all of whom are still little tots.

Mr. and Mrs. Terrett were both members and active workers in the Episcopal church. Mr. Terrett was a member of the vestry, and took an active part in managing the business affairs of the church. He was a Mason, belonging to the lodge in Miles City, and he was also a member of the Elks. In politics he was a member of the Democratic party, and though caring nothing for political emoluments, he acceded to the demands made by his friends that he permit his name to be put on the lists as a candidate for the legislature. Then came his last illness, and the news of the election of 1910 was brought to him in the hospital. He was elected with no canvassing, no speech making, no lobbying, standing on his merits alone.

One of the most popular members of the Miles City Club, and in fact of any gathering in which he might be present, yet he was a quiet, reserved man. On closer acquaintance he showed his warm and sympathetic nature, and he was a man who could always be depended upon. His friends always knew where to find him, so to speak, and he never refused to do anyone a favor if it were in his power. His reliability in social matters and in his daily intercourse with people was carried into his business relations, and his loss was a heavy one to the business world as well as to his many friends and acquaintances.

GEORGE W. QUALLS. Montana has recruited her citizens from nearly every state in the Union, and perhaps that is one of the secrets of her vast strides in the march of progress, for as historians have pointed out, it is usually the most enterprising members of the older communities who go forth to settle new states. Mr. Qualls, one of Helena's successful merchants, is a native of Tennessee, born in Middle, on May 14, 1873. His parents, too, were of that state by birth and rearing. Isaac Qualls was a stock farmer, born in February, 1849. He married Elmina Thomas, the daughter of a famous Tennessee lawyer, and they were the parents of six children, of whom George Qualls is next to the eldest. Before he was old enough to go to school, Mr. Qualls' family moved to Missouri, where his father and mother still reside. Mr. Isaac Qualls has now retired from active business, and resides at Long Lane, Missouri. All of the children are still living, three of them in Montana. Leonard Zeroster Qualls is associated with his brother in business in Helena, and William resides at Harlowton, Montana. Of the three sisters, one, Ada Qualls Harper, lives in Pasadena, California; Mattie and Lena Qualls have now both added Ramsay to their names, choosing brothers for their respective husbands. Their home is in Texas, where the Ramsay ranch is known to the stockmen.

George W. Qualls went to district school in Polk county, Missouri, finishing in the public schools at the age of nineteen. He continued his studies in the South-west Baptist College at Bolivar, in the same state, spending three years in that institution. With this foundation of general training and scholastic study, he went to Springfield, Missouri, and entered a commercial school in which he took a complete course. At the conclusion of his business course, he did not at once go into clerical or mercantile work, but instead, returned to the farm and for a year conducted the work there, raising a crop on shares. This proved a profitable venture; the crops were good, and Mr. Qualls disposed of his share at a profit. With his earnings he decided to go west and try his fortune, as he had heard from some of his friends who had preceded him of the wonderful chances that were to be met with in Montana.

Upon arriving in Montana, Mr. Qualls engaged in a typically western occupation, being a cow boy, and in the Prickly Pear valley too, which has an attractive and frontier-suggesting sound. Mr. Qualls was not a genuine tenderfoot, for he had had considerable experience in stock raising on his father's farm, but he found conditions somewhat different in Montana. A year after his arrival he went to the Smith river valley and remained there for two years. He then decided to go back to Missouri to visit his parents and accordingly returned to his boyhood home. After a short stay he came back to Montana and took a position as clerk in a grocery store in Helena. For three years he acted in this capacity and then as he had systematically saved his earnings with this end in view, he went into business for himself. He bought out Charles Stedman and with this stock began his independent career as a merchant. The invaluable business assets of commercial acumen and square dealings have enabled him to metamorphose this unpretentious establishment with which he began into one of the prosperous mercantile concerns of Helena. In addition to this business, Mr. Qualls has some valuable holdings in different properties in other parts of the state. Among these may be mentioned the Sentinel Rock Land and Cattle Company in which he is a director.

Mr. Qualls was married at Bolivar, Missouri, on August 12, 1900. His wife was formerly Miss Rose Tidwell, of that city. They have a family of two sons and one daughter. Garlan D. Qualls was born at Bolivar in July, 1901, and is now a student in Central school, Helena. Hazel Mame and Leo Tidwell Qualls were both born in Helena; the former in October, 1909, and the latter in July, 1911. The parents are members of the Baptist church.

GEORGE W. FARR. Probably there are few professions where the struggle for success is more difficult than the law, but when it is attained its rewards are worth while, a comfortable fortune accruing and an honorable and prominent position in the world being assured. There are certain requisites, however, and these may be summed up as a natural inclination, a university training and tact, discretion and judgment far beyond the ordinary. Among the prospering members of the Miles City bar is George W. Farr, who has been established in his profession here for some sixteen years. He was born July 6, 1875, at Marquette, Hamilton county, Nebraska, and is a son of Elias and Elvira (Butler) Farr.

Elias Farr was born at Watertown, Jefferson county, New York, in 1834, and died in Nebraska in 1903, when aged sixty-nine years, having survived his wife, who was born in Vermont in 1847 and died in 1896. Three children were born to them, the two survivors being George W. and Alma, the latter of whom is the wife of Curtis Hickman, their home being at Lake Charles, Louisiana. Elias Farr was a farmer in the state of Iowa prior to moving to Hamilton county, Nebraska, where he continued his agricultural activities for a time and then engaged for a number of years in banking, subsequently retiring to his farm. He was never a politician, but was well-posted on public affairs and cast his vote with the Republican party. He served through the Civil war.

George W. Farr attended the public schools of Marquette and then entered Nebraska University and was graduated in the law department of that institution in 1896, in the same year coming to Miles City, securing admission to the bar and making this his permanent home. He commands a large and lucrative practice. In many ways he has been a valuable citizen giving support to every movement which, in his opinion, would be for the general welfare, investing in property and setting an example that might profitably be emulated by those who work from unselfish motives as he has done. Mr. Farr served as alderman from the Second ward from 1906 to 1907, and in 1909 and 1910 served as mayor.

Mr. Farr was married in September, 1898, to Miss Claudia Seiver, who was born in Virginia and is a daughter of David E. Seiver, and they have three children, namely: Elvira Claudia, Edgar W. and Lee Butler. Mr. Farr belongs to Crusader Lodge, No. 7, Knights of Pythias, and to Miles City Lodge, No. 537, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and is past president of the Associated Elks' Lodge of Montana and district deputy for the district of eastern Montana. Politically he is a Progressive.

CHARLES W. SAMMIS. Proprietor and manager of the Argyle Hotel, is one of the popular and well known hotel men of Butte, where for a number of years he has been prominently identified with that line of business. He has been connected with the Argyle Hotel since 1900, and has been the main factor in placing this well known European hotel among the leading ones in the Treasure state. A modern structure, with one of the very best hotel locations in Butte, on West Broadway, near Dakota street, and with most excellent management its success is but a natural result.

Charles W. Sammis is a native of Lanmark, Carroll county, Illinois, and was the first white child born in that town, where his life began on February 9, 1862. When he was but a babe his parents removed to Polo, in the adjoining county of Ogle, in that state, and there a few years later his brother, Merritt D. Sammis, the only other child born in the family, first saw the light of day. The father of these boys, Moses E. Sammis, was born and reared in the state of New York, and early in his life became a resident of Illinois, going there with his parents. In 1878 he brought his family west and located at Deadwood, in the Black Hills of South Dakota. He was a merchant in Illinois, but in the Black Hills he followed mining and prospecting, and he died near Rapid City, South Dakota, in 1889, at the age of fifty-six years, and was buried at Rapid City.

The mother, whose maiden name was Martha A. Haynes, was born in Pennsylvania and died in Butte, Montana, on September 10, 1908. From 1902 until her death she made her home with her son Charles. She is buried by the side of her husband at Rapid City. His brother, Merritt, is also a resident of Butte, and is actively and profitably engaged in mining, in which Charles also takes some interest, but reserves the greater part of his time and energy for attention to the requirements of his large and flourishing hotel business.

Charles W. Sammis grew to the age of sixteen in Polo, Illinois, and obtained a good common and high school education there. In 1878 he went with his parents to the Black Hills, and being ready to look out for himself at that time, although he was only sixteen years of age, he engaged in mining and at his trade of carpenter until 1882, when the family removed to about five miles south of Rapid City, where they located on a ranch and where he engaged in stock raising and also gave considerable attention to prospecting and mining. He had learned the carpenter trade in Deadwood, and at intervals during his residence in that spectacular settlement, which has made its mark in large and enduring phrase on the pages of universal history, he wrought industriously and with good results at the trade.

In the spring of 1896 Mr. Sammis came to Butte to live, and for nearly three years worked at his trade, at which he found plenty to do. Early in 1900, as has been noted, he bought a one-half interest in the Argyle Hotel, the owner of the other half being Mrs. Georgia Pinkston. The hotel was new then and occupied a leading place among the houses of entertainment in Butte. Its business was flourishing and its prospects bright, and in a short time Mr. Sammis wished to own it all and be its sole proprietor. So, about six months after he became connected with it, he bought Mrs. Pinkston's entire interest and gratified his wish in the matter.

The hotel has always been conducted on the European plan, and has always enjoyed a large trade and a widely extended popularity. Mr. Sammis is just the kind of a boniface to get and keep up the business, make and maintain a high reputation for his house, and continue and spread its popularity. He knows his business thoroughly and is energetic and vigilant in attending to it, omitting nothing that is within its range for the comfort and enjoyment of his guests, and making its service prompt, complete and satisfactory in every way. He is, moreover, complaisant and obliging in all his dealings, and gives his hostelry a home atmosphere that is altogether agreeable and entirely satisfying.

He takes an earnest interest in the welfare and progress of his home city, county and state, but while he trains with the Republican party in national affairs, he takes no active part in local political contentions. Fraternally he is a member of the Order of Knights of Pythias, holding his membership in the order in the lodge established and working in Butte. He was married in Kansas City, Missouri, on February 12, 1909, to Mrs. Margaret H. Knapp. They have no children and make their home in the hotel. All of Mr. Sammis' success in life is the result of his own ability and efforts. He has managed his affairs carefully and wisely, and has made all his time tell to his advantage. Fortune has never given him any special favors, and circumstances have never been intentionally or demonstratively kind to him. He has depended on his own resources and has found them sufficient to meet all requirements and work out his steady advancement to his present condition of substantial and continuing prosperity.

WILLIAM P. MCCARTY. Determined purpose and definite ambition have marked the course of this well-known and representative member of the bar of the city of Butte, for his advancement has been the direct result of his own persevering efforts, through which he prepared himself for the profession of his choice. His life has been one of consecutive endeavor and as he has depended entirely upon his own resources in securing his professional education he may well be termed a self-made man, the while in his chosen vocation he has made of success not an accident but a logical result.

Mr. McCarty claims the fine old Keystone state of the Union as the place of his nativity. He was born at Honesdale, Pennsylvania, on the 24th of April, 1876, and is a son of John and Catherine (Johnson) McCarty, the former a native of Ireland and the latter of Hawley, Wayne county, Pennsylvania, where her parents established their home in an early day. John McCarty came to the United States as a lad of thirteen years, and he was one of the adventurous argonauts who joined in the hegira to the gold fields of California in the memorable year of 1849. He continued his search for the precious metal with varying success and remained on the Pacific coast for ten years, at the expiration of which he returned to the east, by way of the Isthmus of Panama. He thereafter maintained his home in Pennsylvania until the year 1874, when he went to Leo Valley, Nebraska, and became one of the pioneer settlers of Greeley county, where he took up a tract of land and developed a productive farm. His family continued to reside in Honesdale until 1878, when he moved them to Leo Valley, after he had his home built and his farm under cultivation. There he continued to be actively identified with the great basic industry of agriculture until 1902, when he removed to Idaho, where he continued to devote his attention to the same vocation until 1905, in which year he died, while visiting one of his daughters at Anaconda, Montana, where his remains were laid to rest. He was a man of industry, sterling character and strong mentality, and he well merited the confidence and esteem so uniformly reposed in him. His cherished and devoted wife passed the closing years of her life on the old homestead farm in Leo Valley, Nebraska, where she died in 1883. Of the children two sons and two daughters are now living.

William P. McCarty, whose name initiates this review, gained his early educational discipline in the public schools of Pennsylvania and Nebraska, and this was supplemented by a thorough commercial course in Wood's Business College, at Carbondale, Pennsylvania, where he devoted special attention to the study of commercial law. On the 7th of January, 1896, the name of Mr. McCarty appeared on the list of arrivals in the city of Butte, Montana, and here he soon afterward assumed the position of bookkeeper at the old Hale House, a popular hotel then conducted by Peter Hale. When the latter retired from his connection with this hotel Mr. McCarty entered the employ of Patrick Mullin, who conducted the Mullin House at Centerville. In the meanwhile he passed a civil service examination and upon resigning his position of bookkeeper he became a city mail carrier in Butte, a position which he retained for three years. Within this period, in 1900, he had the distinction of representing Montana at the meeting of the Letter Carriers' National Association, at Scranton, Pennsylvania. In the same year he resigned from the mail service and turned his attention to mining operations, in connection with which he was thus engaged in Nevada and California from 1902 to 1906. Many years previously he had manifested a desire to prepare himself for the legal profession, and his ambition in this respect had not waned in the interim. Thus, while actively identified with mining interests in Nevada, he carried forward with much diligence and care a correspondence course in the Illinois College of Law. In 1906 he returned to Butte, where he was engaged in mine work until he met with an injury which caused him to be confined for some time in St. James' hospital. While thus incapacitated he utilized his time to good advantage by studying law, and that he made substantial progress in his absorption and assimilation of the intricate science of jurisprudence is shown by the fact that in June, 1909, he passed a successful examination before the supreme court of the state, at Helena, and was duly admitted to the bar. Prior to this he had passed a year in the law office of the well-known firm of Donlan & Forrestell, of Butte, where he prosecuted his technical reading under most effective preceptorship.

Since the time of his admission to the bar Mr. McCarty has been engaged in the active general practice of his profession in Butte, and the energy and ambition which made possible his admission to practice have come into effective play in his professional work, with the result that he has gained secure prestige as an able trial lawyer and well-fortified counsellors. He controls an excellent practice, is a progressive and public-spirited citizen and his popularity in his home city is of the most unequivocal order. Mr. McCarty is a member of the Silver Bow County Bar Association, is identified with the Ancient Order of Hibernians and the Loyal Order of Moose and is one of the most popular and valued members of Butte Camp, Woodmen of the World, which is the largest in the state and of which he is clerk. He and his wife are communicants of the Catholic church.

On the 30th of December, 1899, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. McCarty to Miss Amelia A. Pryor, who was born in the state of Pennsylvania and who was an infant at the time of the family removal to Butte. She is a daughter of Michael and Mary (Mooney) Pryor, who came to Butte from Scranton, Pennsylvania in 1879, the father dying in Butte in 1890, and the mother now resides with her daughter, Mrs. McCarty. Mr. and Mrs. McCarty became the parents of five children, of whom three are living,—Audrey, Mildred and Catherine. The deceased children were Allen and Mary. Mr. McCarty is a Democrat in his political affiliations and a member of the Silver Bow Democratic Club.

EDWARD F. O'FLYNN. One of the younger members of the Montana bar, Edward F. O'Flynn, of Butte, has already gained prestige in his profession, his legal attainments, broad capabilities, and persuasive oratorical gifts winning him success both as a lawyer and as a man of affairs. He was born May 9, 1886, in Saratoga, New York, a son of Patrick O'Flynn. He is of Irish ancestry, his grandfather, Edward O'Flynn, having been a life-long resident of Ireland.

Born and bred on Irish soil, Patrick O'Flynn immigrated to America, the land of hope, when twenty years of age, settling in New York state in 1861, a stranger in a strange land. After living there a number of years he moved with his family to Wyoming, where he spent two years. In 1896 he began prospecting and mining in Montana, and is still a resident of this state, his home now being in Butte. He married Mary Baldwin, a daughter of James Baldwin, who spent his entire life of four score years in Ireland, where her birth occurred. They are the parents of two children, namely: Edward F., the special subject of this brief biographical review; and James B., who was graduated from the University of Notre Dame, in Notre Dame, Indiana, with the class of 1911, and is now practicing law in Butte.

But eight years old when his parents moved to Wyoming, Edward F. O'Flynn attended the public schools of Laramie for two years. In 1896 the family moving to Anaconda, Montana, he continued his studies there for awhile, and in 1902 was graduated from the Saint Patrick's parochial school of Butte. The ensuing year he was employed as a clerk in Hennessy's dry goods store in Butte. Going then to South Bend, Indiana, he entered Notre Dame University, from which he was graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Arts in 1907. While in that university Mr. O'Flynn studied law, and also acquired distinction as an orator, being especially talented in that direction. While in Indiana he was very active in campaign work, being a most pleasing and effective speaker on the stump, and in an inter-state contest held at Kansas City, Missouri, he carried off the first prize, a gold medal, being one of ninety-five competing students gathered there from prominent schools and colleges of various states.

After his graduation Mr. O'Flynn taught school for a year in the University of Notre Dame, in Indiana, and in 1908 entered the office of the law firm of Anderson & Parker at South Bend, Indiana, where he continued for a year. Returning then to Butte, he was admitted to the Montana bar in 1909, and has since been actively and successfully engaged in the practice of his profession at Butte, where he has already built up a satisfactory patronage. Taking an intelligent interest in political affairs, he was elected as a representative to the state legislature in 1909, and served his constituents ably and faithfully.

Mr. O'Flynn married, June 8, 1910, in Indianapolis, Indiana, Miss Elsa M. Habing, a talented musician, well known as a sweet-voiced choir singer, the daughter of Bernard G. and Mary (Brummel) Habing. Mr. and Mrs. O'Flynn have one child, Mary Edna O'Flynn, born April 16, 1911, in Butte.

Politically Mr. O'Flynn is a staunch supporter of the principles promulgated by the Democratic party. Fraternally he is a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks; of the Knights of Columbus; of the Ancient Order of Hibernians; and also belongs to the University Club. Religiously, true to the faith in which he was reared, he is a member of the Roman Catholic church.

TRUMAN O. ANGELL, JR. One of the most prominent and successful business men of Butte is Truman O. Angell, Jr., the only men's hat manufacturer in Montana. He is also widely known as the proprietor of one of the most exclusive retail establishments of Butte, which bears the unique name of "The Hat Box."

Mr. Angell is a native westerner, with all the resourcefulness, energy and genius so marked in the people of his section, qualities that have enabled the great west to make such rapid strides toward commercial and industrial greatness during the last quarter of a century. He was born at Salt Lake City, Utah, on August 4, 1873, to Truman O. and Elizabeth (Pyper) Angell. The senior Mr. Angell is also a native of Utah, and during his active career was a prominent contractor and builder in that state. Elizabeth Pyper was born in Pennsylvania, and at an early age went to Utah, where later she was married at Salt Lake City. Both parents are living, and since 1908 have been residents of Butte, Montana.

Truman O. Angell, Jr., completed his earlier education in the public schools of Salt Lake City and afterward became a student at the University of Utah, where he was graduated in 1890. Upon leaving the university he engaged in the hat manufacturing business in Salt Lake City, and from the start his venture proved a success. Ambitious to avail himself of the wider field of opportunity afforded in a state just beginning to develop along manufacturing and commercial lines, though wealthy in resources, he disposed of his business in Salt Lake City and in 1896 removed to the rapidly growing city of Butte, Montana, where he immediately established himself in his former line of business. With keen foresight he judged the future of Butte, and of the state of Montana as well, and the unqualified success that has attended his subsequent career as a manufacturer and as a merchant has well borne out his judgment and his faith.

Associated with him in the men's hat manufacturing business is his brother, R. B. Angell, who is also his partner in the retail establishment, The Hat Box. This store is well stocked and finely equipped and caters to a representative and discriminate patronage. In their business association, Truman O. Angell, Jr., serves as president and R. B. Angell is vice-president and secretary.

Mr. Angell is a member of the Masonic order and is a Noble of the Mystic Shrine. He also affiliates fraternally with the Benevolent and Protective Order of

Louis Breibellus

Elks, and is a member of the Silver Bow Club and of the Country Club. College days are not forgotten, and he is still actively interested in athletics and out door sports. He takes no active part in political affairs, but evinces that broader patriotism distinctive of the day and is an independent voter. Of genial personality, Mr. Angell is popular in both his social and fraternal associations and has a large circle of influential friends.

JAMES J. DORAN. It is always most gratifying to the biographer and student of human nature to come in close touch with the history of a man who, in the face of almost insurmountable obstacles, has plodded persistently on and eventually, through his determination and energy, made of success not an accident but a logical result. James J. Doran, who maintains his home at Butte, Montana, is strictly a self-made man and as such a perusal of his career offers both lesson and incentive. He is office manager of the large concern known as the M. J. Connell Company, at Butte, having worked his way to that important position through diligence and perseverance. He has served with the utmost efficiency as city alderman and has ever manifested a deep and sincere interest in all matters affecting the good of the general welfare of Butte and of the state at large.

James J. Doran was born at Bloomington, Illinois, on the 27th of June, 1884, and he is a son of James C. and Bridget (Feeley) Doran, the former of whom was born in Ireland and the latter of whom is a native of Scotland. The father was born in 1854 and immigrated to the United States when twenty-six years of age. He located at Bloomington, Illinois, where for thirteen years he was engaged in the coal mining business. In 1896 he came to Butte, first engaging in mining enterprises and later entering the employ of M. J. Connell as watchman in the M. J. Connell dry goods store. He was called to the life eternal on the 21st of October, 1911, at the age of fifty-seven years. The mother of James J. Doran came to America with her parents when she was a child. She grew to maturity in Bloomington, Illinois, where was solemnized her marriage to James C. Doran, in 1883. She is now residing with her children in Butte. Mr. and Mrs. Doran became the parents of six children, whose names are here entered in respective order of birth,—James J., William F., Hugh L., Malachi G., Thomas L. and Margaret, all of whom were born at Bloomington.

To the public schools of Bloomington, Illinois, James J. Doran is indebted for his preliminary educational training and later he supplemented that discipline by a course in the Butte Business College, in which he was graduated in 1899. His first position was with the M. J. Connell Dry Goods Company and with the passage of time he gradually worked his way upward until he is now the efficient and popular incumbent of the position of office manager of this large Butte concern. He is possessed of splendid executive ability and his future holds bright promise for an unusually successful career.

In Butte, on the 19th of December, 1907, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Doran to Miss Margaret Mae Dressel, who was born and reared at Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin, and who is a daughter of George and Barbara (McCann) Dressel, both residents of Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin. Mr. and Mrs. Doran have no children.

In his political faith Mr. Doran maintains an independent attitude, preferring to give his support to men and measures meeting with the approval of his judgment rather than to vote along strictly partisan lines. He served the city as a member of the board of aldermen from 1907 to 1909 and during that period exerted considerable influence for the good of Butte. In a fraternal way he is affiliated with the Woodmen of the World, the Knights of Columbus and the Catholic Order of Foresters. He and his wife are devout communicants of the Catholic church and they are popular factors in connection with the best social activities of their home community. Mr. Doran is fond of all out-door sports and amusements, being particularly interested in baseball. He is sociable, courteous and genial and has a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

LOUIS DREIBELBIS, one of Butte's leading business men, and a foremost representative of the drug trade in the northwest, occupies a position in the business world of this section of the country that is distinctly the result of his individual efforts. The rapid and substantial rise of Mr. Dreibelbis is not one in which the element of good luck has played as important a part as has his peculiar personal qualifications. The opportunities of which he took advantage, by being able to detect them, were open to others at the same time. He grasped them when his business judgment dictated, and his thorough knowledge of the business, with original ideas as to methods of development, were the remaining factors in subsequent success.

Mr. Dreibelbis comes from an old Pennsylvania family, whose members have been identified with the history of the Keystone state for nearly two hundred years. He was born in Schuylkillhaven, that state, November 26, 1873, and completed his schooling in the primary grades of his home town, about the time his parents removed to Kansas. His father, Joseph Dreibelbis had, up to this time, spent his entire life in eastern Pennsylvania, where he was a successful timber merchant and married Miss Catherine Ernst, who bore him ten children of whom Louis was next to the youngest.

In settling in Kansas, the family took up their home at Eureka, where the father died in 1896, at the age of eighty-three, and where the widowed mother still resides at the age of seventy-seven.

For a time after the family located at Eureka, Kansas, Louis Dreibelbis attended the public schools there, but later attended the Southern Kansas Academy for two years and then went to work in the business which he has followed ever since, that of the druggist. For two years he worked industriously in Eureka, but a boy's love of a change and of travel prevailed in him, tiring of the rather small town, he went to Fort Worth, Texas. Here he secured employment in the line of work with which he was familiar, but being dissatisfied with the south, after about one year, he returned to Kansas and for a while was located at Hutchinson, then went back to Eureka, intending to make only a short visit with his people. While there a position was offered him which he accepted, and for two years he was employed in a drug store. Again, the desire to better his condition asserted itself, and he concluded to seek a location in the northwest. He came to Butte, in November, 1896, and spent some time in looking for a position. He was a stranger here and found it difficult to convince people of his fitness for the work he desired to do, but his persistence won out and he secured a situation in the store of Newton Brothers, which was then considered one of the leading drug concerns of the city.

Once employed Mr. Dreibelbis had no difficulty in making himself valuable to his employers, and he might have remained indefinitely, but that his desire for travel seized him again, and he went to Great Falls, Montana, and spent a year there with the Randall Drug Company. His former employer in Butte, Mr. Newton, held out inducements for him to return to the latter city, where Mr. Dreibelbis again entered the employ of that gentleman and at the end of one year had saved one hundred and fifty dollars.

With this modest amount as practically his entire cash capital, Mr. Dreibelbis bought a bankrupt stock of drugs on South Arizona street, and removed it to No. 429 North Main street, where in his judgment was an opportunity to build up a prosperous business. By borrowing six hundred dollars, he was able to add to this stock of goods, and for the first time was at the head of his own store.

This business venture had been entered into in direct opposition to the advice of his friends, who could not see anything but failure for Mr. Dreibelbis. He not only thought otherwise, but had the courage of his convictions, and the wisdom of his judgment is fully reflected by subsequent results, which have made congratulations more appropriate than the expressions of sympathy which many thought would be in order.

Mr. Dreibelbis had worked in a number of drug stores, and no matter how large or how small he was always able to learn something, because he was a close observer of men and methods, so that when he was in position to practically apply methods, that to him looked good, the foundation of his success was laid. He knew the ins and outs of the drug trade, as well as how to attract trade and retain it. From the beginning he always endeavored to have his store just a little different from other stores in that line, and many innovations in the retail drug trade in Butte have originated with Mr. Dreibelbis. His first store was a success from the start, and before long it was supplying him with surplus funds for investment. In 1904 he purchased the business of the Newbro Drug Company. This store was about to go out of business, as the result of being poorly managed and its patronage had dwindled until it was a losing investment. Again Mr. Dreibelbis received the kindly warnings of his acquaintances of the certain ruin to overtake him before a month would pass, and again he acted upon his own judgment, putting new ideas into the business, as well as capital. The prudent were certain that it was a hopeless task to build up this run down business, but since becoming his property he has transformed it into one of the finest wholesale and retail drug houses in the northwest. This business now requires the services of from fifteen to twenty clerks and handles everything obtainable in the drug line, altogether comprises one of the foremost mercantile houses in Montana, and distinctively the leading one in its line. As president and general manager, Mr. Dreibelbis has directed the affairs of the company, and has been the prime factor in its success at the same time establishing a reputation for commercial integrity that is not surpassed by any business house in the Treasure State.

Since going into business for himself, Mr. Dreibelbis has bought out a number of drug stores in Butte, and after reorganizing them and placing on a paying basis, has disposed of them. His interests in this line of business are yet extensive, as, in addition to the large business of the Newbro Drug Company, he also owns his original store at No. 429 North Main street, as well as the Colbert Drug Company, and is the president and principal owner of the Family Drug Company, No. 549 South Main street. Mr. Dreibelbis has been essentially a builder and developer, as the various enterprises that have received the stimulus of his able management, have invariably been financial successes.

Among other business interests, he is a director of the Montana Independent Telephone Company, was one of the promoters and is the present president of the Montana Aeroplane and Exhibition Company, and is president of the J. A. Beer Cigar Company, at No. 79 West Park street. He erected and still owns the fine business block at No. 429 North Main street.

Loyal to Butte, and of unquestioned public spirit, no movement of interest or benefit to the city has ever appealed to him in vain. His support of political principles is usually given to those of the Democratic party, yet his interest in such matters is merely that of a business man and citizen, desirous of good honest and capable government.

Socially he is a member of the Silver Bow and the Butte Country clubs, while fraternally he is a Knight Templar Mason and a Noble of the Mystic Shrine. Mr. Dreibelbis was for two years president of the Butte Driving Club, and has always been a lover of a good horse. He has owned some of the best harness horses in the state, and for a number of years found his chief source of recreation in riding and driving, at both of which he is an expert. He is the owner of Allerton Boy, one of the grandest individuals and finest specimens of horse flesh ever owned in Montana, and it is the intention of Mr. Dreibelbis to pension this son of Allerton, since becoming the owner of a Peerless motor car.

The career of Mr. Dreibelbis is one that has probably not been surpassed in Butte mercantile circles for rapidity of rise, and all of which has been due entirely to his own efforts. He has taken a foremost position among the most substantial business men of the city, not by the dint of self-denial and economy, for no one has any keener appreciation of the comforts and pleasures of life which he enjoys to the gratification of his every desire. Straightforward business methods, combined with honesty and fair dealing, have always characterized his business relations.

His generosity is known to all his acquaintances and his open-hearted manner has made and retained a large circle of friends with whom he is both popular and respected.

Mr. Dreibelbis is unmarried.

RASK BROTHERS CLOTHING COMPANY. Starting in a peddler's pack laboriously borne from place to place through the remote rural districts of several western states on the patient back of an ambitious and hopeful trader, the Rask Brothers Clothing Company of Butte, whose store is located at 303 East Park street, had a very small and humble beginning.

The company is composed of John and Sallah Rask, the former being its president and the latter its vice president, and both energetic and productive factors in its management and in bringing about the proportions and prosperity it enjoys. These gentlemen are natives of Syria, a land of universal interest, through which both sacred and profane history have held their splendid march and left their shining footprints. They came to the United States as the land of opportunity early in life, and have made such advancement through their enterprise and business capacity that their mercantile establishment is now considered one of the most active and promising in the busy and progressive city in which it is located. The company handles all kinds of dry goods, shoes and kindred commodities, and enjoys a large, active and profitable trade.

John Rask, the founder of the business, was born at Mount Lebanon, Syria, on July 20, 1875, and is a son of Rask and Kathryne (John) Rask, also natives of that country, where the father died in 1880, and the mother's life began in 1840 and ended in 1885. They were farmers and passed the whole of their lives in their native land. Four of their sons, John, Peter, Sallah and Sarkis, have for a number of years been residents of the United States.

John came to this country when he was fifteen years of age in company with his older brother Peter. They located in Providence, Rhode Island, and there John acquired a considerable knowledge of English and English branches of study in the public schools, which he attended two years. In 1892 he moved to St. Paul, Minnesota, and from that city as a base of operations began business for himself. He bought a stock of portable goods and carried them in a pack on his back to remote farm houses, securing a large and profitable trade in his wanderings.

In 1896 he moved to Butte, and by this time was able to enlarge his venture and carry on his business with greater activity and less discomfort to himself.

Here he bought a team and continued to peddle his goods through the country districts until 1900. In that year he and his brothers Peter and Sallah founded the establishment on East Park street and began to give their attention exclusively to local trade in the store. The business grew and flourished, and the enterprising merchants who started it reaped good rewards for their industry and energy.

A few years after the establishment of the store Sallah Rask became a partner in the business, Peter retiring to open a store at Missoula, and since then Sallah and John have been its sole proprietors and managers. They are very active and progressive in the conduct of their business, keeping their stock up to the most exacting requirements.

In the summer of 1895 John Rask made a visit to his native land, and while there, on August 12 of the year last mentioned, he was united in marriage with Miss Onie Tamer, also a Syrian by birth and rearing. They have seven children: Nasema, who was born on July 23, 1898, and is now attending school in Butte; Nazera, who was born on October 23, 1899, and is also in school here; Amelia, whose life began on April 30, 1902, also attending school in Butte, as are all the rest of the children who are old enough; Nasem, who came into being on October 14, 1904; Harry, whose life began on November 11, 1906; Thomas, who was born on October 11, 1908; and Najeeb, who was born on November 9, 1911.

John Rask is a member of the Catholic church, the Syrian Peace Society and the Fraternal Order of Eagles. In political faith and allegiance he belongs to and works with the Democratic party, and while not a very active partisan, is loyal to his organization and warmly interested in its success. He is one of Butte's rising and prosperous business men, an excellent citizen much esteemed throughout the city, and entitled to great credit for his ardent devotion to his home and family.

Sallah Rask, the brother of John and vice president of the Rask Brothers Clothing Company, was born at Mount Lebanon, Syria, on July 4, 1873, and came to this country in 1895. His connection with the business of the clothing company has already been stated, and nothing further need be said in this connection except that he is fully imbued with his brother's enterprise and progressiveness, and shares in full measure his interest in the abiding welfare of Butte and its residents.

He was married in his native land on August 12, 1895, at the same time as his brother John, uniting himself with Miss Shareffy Karam, who is of the same nativity as himself. Two children have been born to their union: Bady, whose life began in Butte on February 8, 1899; and Ruby, who came into being, also in Butte, on March 6, 1901. Both are students in Butte schools. Like his brother John, Sallah Rask is a true and faithful member of the Catholic church, and like him he also belongs to the Syrian Peace Society. He is devoted to his home and family, and is fond of hunting and fishing, too, and indulges his fondness for them on all suitable occasions. He is a valued addition to the citizenship of Butte, and is well thought of in its business circles, and its civic activities, in both of which he takes an earnest interest and a helpful part.

MOSES BRINIG. The life of Moses Brinig was one which called forth every particle of energy, determination, shrewdness and business tact in the realizing of the ambition which became his when he came to America as an emigrant, and which he was able to accomplish by reason of his possession of those splendid qualities, which make for success in the life of every ambitious man. Coming to this country as a young man with wife and family, to establish and build up a business such as he left, with no capital, neither credit when he began, is a task calling for almost superhuman strength and ability. The worthy accomplishments of this man give ample evidence of what may be done with a proper determination to succeed.

Born in Roumania in 1856, Moses Brinig came to America with his wife and young family in early life. It was the ambition of Mr. Brinig to become established in the mercantile business, and with his natural shrewdness and farsightedness, he recognized the difficulties of getting ahead in the eastern states where business was overdone to so great an extent, and he located in Minneapolis, Minnesota. His capital was too small to permit him to enter into any extensive business, so he did what he could with his little store of money and for some time followed the life of a peddler. He prospered in that, and finally reached that place in his affairs when he felt that he could branch out into a more important business. The West still looked attractive to Mr. Brinig as a market, and he moved to Butte with his family, and it was in this city that he was first able to gratify his life ambition to be a merchant. It was in 1896 when he first arrived in Butte, and at 64 East Park street he established himself in a small store, where he conducted a retail clothing and men's furnishing store. The business prospered to such an extent that he was soon obliged to extend his store space, and he soon removed to 48 East Park street, which afforded him seemingly ample space. In a very short time, however, the demands of his patronage rendered that place entirely inadequate to his needs, and he made another move, this time to 34 East Park street, where he conducted the business with constantly increasing lines up to the time of his death, having risen in a few years from an obscure dealer to one of the leading merchants in the state. Not only had he established this splendid business in Butte, but he had established and was operating at the time of his demise, with equal success, similar stores in Dillon and Bozeman, Montana. Not only did Mr. Brinig accomplish an unusual degree of success in a commercial way, but he was able to give to his family advantages of education which it had not been his good fortune to receive in the home of his birth. He was able to do much in the furtherance of religious and civic work of an elevating nature, in which he was always a leader, and an advocate of the best in everything tending to the common good. Mr. Brinig was a member of the B'nai B'rith of Butte, of the Modern Woodmen and the Woodmen of the World. He was a member of the Brothers of Abraham and vice president of the Hebrew congregation in Butte and one of the founders of the organization. He was also the founder of the Jewish school in Butte. He died in Butte, Montana, on November 26, 1911. The wife of Moses Brinig and the mother of his children was Rebecca (Labovitz) Brinig, born in Roumania, June 6, 1857. She is now a resident of Butte and is the administrator of her husband's estate. She was always the adviser of her husband, and much of his splendid success in life is justly accredited to her wise counsels and her wifely ministrations. She has been a patient and noble mother and is loved and revered by her eight children, seven sons and one daughter.

William Brinig, the son of Moses and Rebecca Brinig, is carrying on the business and is manager of his father's estate. He was educated in the public and high schools and later completed a thorough course in the Butte Business College, with a view to becoming his father's assistant, which he has always been since that time. October 24, 1910, he was married to Miss Birdie Banks, a daughter of John Banks, who was a native of Polk county, Iowa.

WILLIAM E. SIELAFF. Talented, independent and self-reliant, William E. Sielaff has profited by the opportunities which have been granted him, and through his own efforts has made steady progress along the pathway of success, being now well known in the business, fraternal, social and musical circles of Butte, his present home city. A son of Adolph Sielaff, he was born, May 21, 1874, in Cleveland, Ohio, of German ancestry.

Born, October 18, 1843, in Germany, Adolph Sielaff was born, reared and married in the Fatherland. Shortly after his marriage, he bade good-bye to his bride and started for America, hoping in this free country to soon establish a comfortable home. Locating immediately in Cleveland, Ohio, he was there a resident from 1868 until 1876. In that year, responding to the lure of the rich mining regions of the Rockies, he joined a band of six hundred emigrants westward bound, and with two hundred of his traveling companions settled in Idaho. During his earlier life in that region he took part in the Bannack river Indian war, and had many narrow escapes, and various thrilling experiences. He became one of the pioneer settlers of Boise, where he is still engaged in the hardware business. He married Anna Eckelt, a native of Germany. She came to this country soon after he did, joining him in Cleveland, Ohio, and later accompanying him to Idaho. Five children were born to them, William E. being the oldest child.

Brought up and educated in Boise, Idaho, William E. Sielaff was graduated from the high school with the class of 1893, and during the ensuing three years was employed in his father's hardware establishment. Leaving home in 1896, he has since been a resident of Butte, Montana, one of the most busy and prosperous cities of the state. He first found employment with the Pacific Express Company, with which he was associated in various capacities for four years, during the latter part of that time having been cashier for the company. For the past eleven years Mr. Sielaff has been connected with the money department of the Northern Express Company, a responsible position which he is filling ably and satisfactorily.

Endowed by nature with an accurate ear and a wonderful talent for music, Mr. Sielaff has gained distinction in musical circles, among his musical compositions being several operatic pieces of merit which have not yet been given to the public. Mr. Sielaff, in 1900, organized the Montana State Band of thirty pieces, and likewise the Sielaff orchestra of ten pieces, of which he is the leader. He is also a member of the celebrated Boston and Montana Band of Butte. Mr. Sielaff is regarded as one of the accomplished musicians in the state.

In his political relations Mr. Sielaff is independent, being unrestricted by party obligations. He belongs to the Country Club, and is a member of numerous fraternal organizations, including the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks; the Modern Woodmen of America; the Woodmen of the World; the Improved Order of Red Men; the Sons of Hermann; and the Loyal Order of Moose. Mr. Sielaff, who is unmarried, resides at No. 200 Clark block.

ALPHAUS V. FLUHRER, D. D. S. The dentist of today is a man thoroughly trained, whose experience has been gained under the supervision of experts. Not only has he taken the exacting course of study, but he keeps abreast of the times by reading, study and attendance at lectures, thus familiarizing himself with all the discoveries and inventions of the profession. If it were not for the fact that the teeth of the human race are deteriorating so rapidly, the science of dental surgery would preserve them indefinitely. Among the leading exponents of the art of dentistry in Carbon county, is Dr. Alphaeus V. Fluhrer, who has a well-appointed suite of offices in the Improvement Building, Red Lodge, and controls a large and representative professional business. He was born October 16, 1874, in South Cayuga, Ontario, Canada, and is a son of John Andrew and Sarah Fluhrer.

John Andrew Fluhrer was born in Wittenberg, Germany, in 1815, and was twenty-seven years of age when he came to America, being a pioneer of his district in Canada, where he hewed a home from the wilderness. He became a prominent agriculturist and for many years held public office, serving as a member of the school board and as reeve of his township and chairman of the board of county officials. He spent his entire life on his farm and passed away October 14, 1887. His wife, who was born in Bucks county, Pennsylvania, in 1831, died February 22, 1910, having been the mother of seven children, of whom four survive, Alphaeus V. being the fourth in order of birth.

Alphaeus V. Fluhrer spent his boyhood days on the home farm and attended the district schools during the winter months. In July, 1896, he removed to Red Lodge, Montana, and on the 5th of that month commenced contracting and building, in which he continued until 1900. Having decided to enter the dental profession, Mr. Fluhrer had been engaged in study for some time, and on giving up his business went to Buffalo, New York, and entered the University of Buffalo, being graduated from the dental department thereof May 3, 1904. On May 7th he opened his office in Red Lodge, where he has continued in practice to the present time, and is licensed to follow his profession in New York, Pennsylvania, Missouri, Montana and the Dominion of Canada. Dr. Fluhrer is a most excellent dentist, conscientious, skilled and progressive, and from the very first his practice has prospered. He has the full confidence of his city, not only as a professional man, but as a good citizen, and pleasant, genial companion. He is a valued member of the Montana Dental Society, while his fraternal connections are with Star of the West Lodge No. 40, A. F. & A. M., to which he came after demitting from Copestone Lodge No. 373, of Welland, Ontario, and also belongs to Carbon Chapter No. 20, R. A. M., and was a member of the building committee that erected the Masonic Temple here, and one of the directing board as well. He is also a member of the F. O. E. Red Lodge Aerie No. 742. While residing in Ontario he served as reeve of his section, an office that corresponds with that of county commissioner in the United States, and was chairman of the commission for three terms, in addition to holding township offices.

On May 4, 1904, Mr. Fluhrer was married to Miss Margaret Elizabeth Eberley, who was born in Stevensville, Ontario, daughter of Joseph and Sarah Eberley. Dr. and Mrs. Fluhrer have two children: Alphaeus V., Jr., and Margaret E.

JOHN E. HAMPLE. As the commercial metropolis of this portion of the Northwest, Butte, Montana, numbers among its business interests some of the most important enterprises to be found anywhere in the United States. Not only is this a great mining state but it has also agricultural resources of immense and growing value, and is likewise one of the greatest cattle and wool producing sections of the country. The purchase and distribution of these products to all parts of the world is accomplished largely through firms whose headquarters are at Butte. Among those who deal in a class of commodities, the trade in which amounts to an immense volume is Mr. John E. Hample, recognized as the most extensive dealer in green and dry hides, pelts, furs, wools, etc., in the Northwest. It is stated that Mr. Hample handles fully seventy-five per cent of the hides and pelts sent out from the state and during the past twenty years he has supplied the well-known firm of Jeremiah Williams Company of Boston with a large portion of the wool they have received from the state of Montana. The importance and extent of his trade may be judged somewhat from the statement that he buys and sells annually in the neighborhood of fifty thousand hides and several million pounds of wool, besides smaller quantities of other allied products. In addition to purchasing these products from growers throughout the Northwest he is also a producer of sheep and wool on a large scale himself, owning and operating a big sheep ranch at Twin Bridges and Melrose this state.

Mr. Hample has made this line of business a life study and has enjoyed an extensive experience in various departments of the trade, enabling him to achieve a position of pre-eminence as a judge of the class of commodities in which he traffics. Born in Sweden, October 13, 1854, he attended a military school in his native country until his fifteenth year and immediately after the completion of his studies, in 1869, started out entirely alone for America, his objective point in this country being Rockford, Illinois. Ten years later his parents came to this country, settling at Oaks, Sargent county, North Dakota. His father was a native of Germany, a farmer by occupation, and lived to the advanced age of eighty years, his demise occurring at Oaks in 1907. His mother, who was before her marriage Christina Jennings, was born in Sweden and died in 1905, she also having lived eighty years. Of their family of eight children John E. was second oldest.

For five years after his arrival at Rockford Mr. Hample continued to reside in that city and it was there that he learned the hide and wool business. In 1875 he went to Chicago and put his knowledge to immediate use with the firm of Oberne Hosick & Company, well-known dealers in hides, wool, etc., and was associated with the firm for ten years. From 1879 he was their traveling representative and bought hides, furs, robes, and similar goods from the producers and also purchased from Indian traders of the West, his territory including at that time the state of Montana. He maintained headquarters for a year at Miles City, then removed to Helena. In 1886 Mr. Hample severed his connection with the Chicago house and formed a partnership with A. J. Davidson, continuing for the next ten years to engage in the hide and wool trade on an independent basis. He withdrew from the firm in 1896 and came to Butte, establishing his present business and continuing to conduct it ever since. Mr. Hample's commercial training and natural ability for handling large enterprises especially fit him for the management of an undertaking of the magnitude his present business has attained. He has enjoyed a career of uninterrupted success and may justly feel proud of his attainments, they being the result of his own unaided efforts. He is largely interested in the Montana Butchering Company, of which he is president and manager. He also has large interests with E. H. Stanton & Company of Spokane, extensive packers of pork, sheep and cattle. The plant of this concern is one of the most modern and completely equipped plants of its kind in the country, and unquestionably the best in the West.

As a citizen Mr. Hample wields an influence commensurate with his standing and ability and is always ready to lend the weight of that influence to the furthering of enterprises that tend to enhance the interests of this city and state on moral or civic lines. In political affairs he advocates Democratic principles and is an active worker in both state and national circles. Social and religious matters receive a generous share of his attention and he is a member of the Swedish Lutheran church and the Woodmen of the World fraternal order. He is liberal in his support of charitable enterprises and worthy benevolences and occupies a position in the community of enviable standing.

The marriage of Mr. Hample to Miss Minnie LaMott, a native of Iowa, occurred July 4, 1890. Three children were born of this union, Edwin Porter, at Helena, June 16, 1894, and John Milton in the same city January 30, 1896, and Louise, who died about four years old. The elder son is attending a preparatory school at Philadelphia, while John is a student at the Butte high school. Both are preparing themselves for professional careers and will doubtless fill with credit high positions in the world in the future.

ALFRED BRISCOE. As owner and proprietor of the business house known as the Briscoe Mercantile Company, Alfred Briscoe is recognized as one of the more important and prominent men in Cascade. The business, which he established here in 1909, has grown apace since that time, and is today one of the leading concerns in the city. Previously to his inaugurating this business Mr. Briscoe was identified with various other business houses in Cascade, where he acquired a wide acquaintance which has been an undeniable aid to him in his private business venture. He is identified with many of the leading financial and industrial concerns of Cascade, and has in every way fulfilled the highest duties of a good citizen.

Mr. Briscoe is of English birth, his birth having occurred in Shropshire, England, on November 21, 1871. His parents were James and Martha (Wordley) Briscoe, both natives of England. The father was born there in 1829 and died in his home town in 1910 at the advanced age of eighty-one years. He was one of the well-known and highly-respected men of his community, and was an old soldier, his later years having been given to the grocery and mercantile interests. The mother died in 1908, having attained the age of eighty-two years. They were the parents of ten children, of which number Alfred Briscoe was the ninth in order of birth. The others are: Katherine; Thomas James; Rev. Frederick John; Elizabeth; Albert Edward; William Henry; Osborn; James Wordley and Mrs. Martha Amelia Greaves.

As a boy, Alfred Briscoe attended the schools of Shropshire, and when he had left school took employment in a grocery house in Birmingham, England, where he worked for seven years, after which he emigrated to Canada, locating in Alberta in 1894 and taking a government homestead there. He remained there for two years, and in 1896 came to Montana, settling in Cascade, which at that time was a small village boasting a mere handful of settlers. He became interested in ranch life and worked for various ranchers in the Cascade neighborhood for five years. In the meantime, the town of Cascade had made some rapid strides in growth and a number of business houses had located and were doing good business. With the Cash Exchange Company of Cascade Mr. Briscoe secured employment after his five years of ranch life, and his early training in Birmingham stood him in excellent stead here. In 1906 this firm consolidated with the Cascade Mercantile Company, and Mr. Briscoe remained with the new concern until 1909. In October of that year he established the Briscoe Mercantile Company, dealing in all kinds of hardware and machinery, and although he started in a small way the business today is one of the most expansive of its kind in the county. He has made large and worthy progress in his independent business relations, and the future of this young concern is well assured.

Mr. Briscoe is a director of the Cascade Opera house, and in 1911 was elected to the board of aldermen of Cascade. His term will expire in 1913. He was also justice of the peace in Cascade in 1909 and 1910, and in all his relations with the public, either in a business or official way, he has proved himself to be an honest gentleman and a trustworthy citizen. Mr. Briscoe is a Republican in his political allegiance, and is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church. He is a Master Mason, a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Great Falls and of the Modern Woodmen of America, of which order he is clerk of the Cascade Lodge.

On November 8, 1905, Mr. Briscoe was united in marriage with Miss Mina D. Rohr of Great Falls. Two children have been born to them,—Henry James, born October 20, 1906, and Kenneth Alfred, born March 10, 1911.

ANDREW MALCOLM MAC LEAN has the distinction of being the founder of a new industrial trade, the future of which it is impossible to estimate. His factory is a departure from the marble and granite monuments and grave stones in use through the centuries. He offers the public, in their stead the phosphorus bronze and aluminum bronze tablets and monuments which threaten to revolutionize the tombstone industry. The figures, modern or classic, moulded from these peculiar metals, have almost the grace of the statues of antiquity. The care of construction and beauty of line give them the effect of having been chiseled by the hand of a master sculptor. They are impervious to all conditions of weather, practically indestructible, light in weight and so inexpensive in price that people of moderate means can afford to purchase them. Their cost is about one-half that of regular stone of granite and the effect that of carved marble itself.

The company, the only one of its kind in the world, is known as the Riverside Brass and Bronze Works, the factory being situated at Tenth avenue and Ninth street, north, Great Falls, Montana. Mr. Mac Lean is probably the best authority in the country on the fusion of metals. The best years of his life have been spent in the experiments that finally led up to the perfection of the metals with which he works and his present success. Sixteen years ago, he came from Detroit, Michigan to Great Falls to accept a position with the Boston Montana Smelter in the manufacture of brass, bronze and copper castings for the amalgamated company. He was eminently successful in this line, the company never having been able to find his equal. For fourteen years he devoted his time to their service and even now, since he has founded the new company, he receives much difficult bronze casting from the Boston Montana corporation whom he served so faithfully.

His own establishment although young in years, only coming into existence in the autumn of 1910, is very comfortably equipped with modern machinery and appliances. His success has outstripped his most sanguine expectation. Already both the building and the land are free from mortgage and the advance orders keep the employees busy. This for a beginning of little more than a year! The future is beyond surmise. Mr. Mac Lean, as its inventor, has surely paid his debt to mankind, and it is mankind that he would serve. For more than thirty years he has been a leader and an organizer in the unions, having been president of Number 93 for five years. Always he is ready to assist the union with counsel and advice or in a more material manner. Although he is rapidly becoming a large employer instead of an employee his views on matters social and political have not changed. He is a Socialist to the core, anxious to foster the benefits of humanity and eager in the support of his party.

Andrew Malcolm Mac Lean was born in Glasgow, Scotland, on the fifteenth day of October, 1865. His father, Laughlin Mac Lean, a contractor by trade, lived on his native island until eighty-five years of age, meeting accidental death in 1907. The mother, Flora McCal Mac Lean was herself a Scot. She died at her home in Scotland in 1901 being then in her seventieth year. Mr. and Mrs. Laughlin Mac Lean were the parents of eleven children of whom Andrew was the sixth in line. He attended, until his tenth year, the private schools of Glasgow, when he became, what is known in Great Britain as a "Van" boy, a baker's delivery boy, delivering on foot. In this manner he worked for five years receiving in compensation for his services, one dollar and fifty cents a week. When fifteen, he was apprenticed in a foundry to learn the trade of the moulder. Here he served for three years before coming to America where he joined a married sister in Erie, Pennsylvania. Here he "served under instruction" for two years more before becoming a journeyman. From 1885 until 1896, he worked at his trade in the various states spending most of his time in the north central portion of the country. On the fourth day of March, 1889, he was united in marriage at Hancock, Michigan, to Miss Bertha Leibetrau, her father being Laue Leibetrau of Wisconsin. The three children that came to them were all of Canadian birth. The only son, Laughlin Mac Lean, named for his paternal grandfather, died in 1891 while still an infant in arms. He was born in Windsor, Ontario. The older of the two girls, Flora A. was born in Windsor in the year of her brother's death. Minnie L. Mac Lean, the youngest of the family reached her majority on the seventh day of January of this year, 1912. Mrs. Mac Lean died Nov. 26, 1912.

In the fall of 1896, Mr. Mac Lean brought his family to Great Falls, Montana where he entered the employ of the Copper Amalgamated Company. In 1910, he formed a partnership with Chas. H. Small, an expert in this line, for the establishment of the Riverside Brass and Metal works already mentioned. They manufacture brass, copper, bronze phosphorus, bronze and aluminum castings and do machinist work of various kinds in addition to the manufacture of the famous "Grove tablets" for which the demand is so rapidly increasing. He has been a resident of Great Falls since 1896.

Mr. Mac Lean is a member of the Independent Order of Foresters, the Modern Brotherhood of America, and the Eagles in addition to the political organizations to which he belongs. He is a staunch Socialist. The family reside at 716 Sixth avenue, north.

NELSON H. MORGAN. As a worthy representative of the virile young manhood that is making Montana one of the leading states of the Union, Nelson H. Morgan, county clerk and recorder of Sanders county has brought excellent business and executive ability to his important office, and is deserving of mention among his community's most popular officials. Mr. Morgan is a native of Niagara county, New York, and was born May 13, 1879, a son of John and Marietta (Holloway) Morgan. His father was born in New York state, where he resided all his life, and was engaged in agricultural pursuits up to the time of his death in 1892, when he was forty-seven years of age. Mr. Morgan was married in New York to Marietta Holloway, who died in 1906, at the age of sixty-four years, and they were buried side by side near their old home in the Empire state. They had a family of eight children, Nelson H. being the youngest, and one other son resides in Montana, Fred C. Morgan, superintendent of the Flathead Indian reservation at Jocko.

Nelson H. Morgan received his early educational training in the public schools of his native state, later attended high school and a business college at Lockport, New York, and at the age of seventeen years came to Montana and for one year was a student in the University of Montana at Missoula, taking a special course. Even as a little boy Mr. Morgan had displayed industry and thrift, and when only nine years of age earned fifty cents per day pulling beans, and saved his money as the nucleus for a school fund, which was a great help to him in later years. For one year he was employed by a dry goods concern in Missoula, and then removed to Plains, where he became connected with the McGowan Commercial Company, with which he was identified for three years. He subsequently went to Browning, on the Blackfoot Indian reservation, where he remained about three and one-half years, engaged in the same line of business, but at the end of that time returned to Plains and again became associated with the McGowan Commercial Company, this term of employment lasting five years. At the expiration of that period he was appointed deputy clerk and recorder and came to Thompson Falls, and later was elected clerk and recorder, a position which he efficiently fills at the present time. Mr. Morgan is a Republican in politics and has rendered yeoman service in the ranks of that organization. Fraternally, he is a popular member of the Masons, the Odd Fellows and the Modern Woodmen of America, and has filled various chairs, while his wife is a favorite among the members of the Order of the Eastern Star. They are consistent members of the Episcopal church.

On July 4, 1901, Mr. Morgan was married to Miss Maud P. Jones, daughter of Thomas H. and Lenora M. Jones, of Missoula, and three children have been born to this union: Frederick Dale and Naomi, who are attending school; and Ruth Isis, the baby, at home. Mrs. Morgan shares her husband's fondness for baseball and out-door sports, and like him is very fond of music, being a talented pianist. Mr. Morgan has never hesitated to praise his adopted community in every way, and Montana has no more enthusiastic admirer.

JAMES BRODIE. Necessity has been a priceless spur to a great many of the men of success, for under its stress and pressure the individual develops a fuller stature of power, a strength to battle against adversity, and the characteristics of courage, self-reliance and perseverance. James Brodie, a representative and a substantial citizen of Montana who has acquired valuable coal mining interests near the city of Belt and is also the owner of two hundred acres of farming land near there, can attribute to necessity his start in life. Orphaned of his mother at the age of three and of his father two years later, he became a wage earner in the mines of England at the age of eight, and from that time to the present has had to do with mines and mining.

Mr. Brodie was born in Yorkshire, England, on August 16, 1860, to John and Mary (Bates) Brodie, both of whom were natives of County Durnham, England. The father was engaged in mining and died in 1865 when forty-three years of age. Mr. Brodie grew to manhood in his native land, his education being limited to what he was able to acquire in night schools and by home study outside of working hours. In 1884 he came to the United States, and for a year and a half worked in the mines at LaSalle, Illinois. From there he went to Ishpeming, Michigan, where he remained four and a half years. Responding to a restless desire for better opportunities, he left Michigan and went to Wilkinson, Washington, where he worked in the mines until 1896. In that year he came to Belt, Montana, and with an abiding faith in the mineral resources of that section, a faith based on an intuitive apprehension of its possibilities and on years of experience, he continued on, steadily acquiring by industry and persistent effort that property which today makes him one of the wealthy men of that section. What he has accomplished in the comparatively short period of sixteen years is a splendid example of what men can do in the west who have a willing heart, self-confidence, and the courage to push their way through difficulties, and a large fund of energy which they are willing to use in striking hard blows. During his nearly forty-five years of experience in the mining business he not only gave honest endeavor as a laborer but was a deep student along those lines as well. He believes Montana to be one of the richest sections on earth in its deposits of coal, silver, copper, iron, and gypsum and has an especial faith in the district about Belt, which city he thinks will some day be one of the leading mining towns of the west.

In November, 1910, Mr. Brodie located what is now known as the James Brodie mine, at Belt, one of the best veins of coal in the Belt district, of which he and his son are joint owners with the North Montana Coal Company. It is located next to the property of the Anaconda Coal Mining Company, is equipped with all modern machinery for the mining of coal, and the owners are very busy opening up and developing their property. Their tunnel is now in over seven hundred feet and an output of sixty tons per day has already been reached. The coal is of excellent quality, and the mine gives large promise of being one of the big producers of the Belt district. They already give employment to a large number of men. Besides over two hundred acres of coal lands they own two hundred acres of farming land. Belt is extremely proud of such men as Mr. Brodie, and deservedly so, for while chance may enter in to some extent, such showings are really the result of character, ability, and thought applied.

On September 25, 1884, Mr. Brodie was married in England to Miss Mary Elizabethe Crawshaw. They are the parents of seven children, namely: James William Brodie, born at Ishpeming, Michigan, in 1887, who is now in business with his father; Thomas Edwin, born in September, 1891, with his father; Lester, born in 1899; Allen Raymond, born in 1901; John Arthur, born in 1903; Charles Wesley, born in 1905, and Ruth, born in 1906. All except the eldest two were born in Belt and are now attending school there.

Politically Mr. Brodie is a Democrat, and in church faith and membership, with his family, he is a Methodist. While a resident of Wilkinson, Washington, he served as school clerk for a time. Mr. Brodie is well known throughout this section of Montana and is highly respected by all admitted to his acquaintance. In the thriving city of Belt he is known as one of its most energetic and public-spirited citizens, and Montana recognizes him as one of the men who are pushing its progress and prestige.

JOSEPH S. BROWN. The active head of one of Fort Benton's leading business concerns, the Benton Hardware Company, Joseph S. Brown has made a decided impression upon the commercial interests of this city, where during a residence of sixteen years he has risen from obscurity to a leading position among the progressive and enterprising citizens. In the conduct of his affairs he has displayed many of the sturdy characteristics of his race, and has always maintained a reputation for integrity in business matters and probity in private life. Mr. Brown was born at Perth, East Coast, Scotland, August 16, 1866, and is a son of George and Helen (Johnstone) Brown. His father, also a native of Perth, was born in 1828, and died in Scotland in 1895, being a well-known wholesale grocer and the owner of a large fortune at the time of his demise. Mrs. Brown, who was born in 1838, in Scotland, died in that country in July, 1911, having been the mother of ten children.

Joseph S. Brown secured an excellent education in the schools of his native country, and on completing his studies worked in the establishment of his father and at various other occupations until coming to the United States in 1892. On landing in this country, he first settled in Chicago, Illinois, where he secured employment as a clerk in a large store, but after two years decided there was a better field for the development of his abilities in the west, and accordingly journeyed to southern Utah. He spent some time there in the employ of one of the prominent mining concerns, but subsequently removed to Portland, Oregon, and in that city received his initiation into the hardware business, acting in a minor capacity for a considerable period. The year 1896 saw his advent in Fort Benton, when he came to this city to take charge of the books of the Benton Hardware Company. His inherent ability, faithfulness to duty and general efficiency caused him to be promoted from time to time, and nine years after his arrival he had attained the position of manager of the concern, which is recognized as one of the leading establishments in its line in the state. Under his management the company's business has shown a healthy increase, and progressive methods and modern ideas have served to extend its territory to a considerable degree. Mr. Brown is a director and stockholder in the Mackton Coal Company, and the owner of a fine ranch in Chouteau county. He has attained success through the medium of his own efforts, and as one who has worked his own way to the front fully merits the respect and esteem in which he is universally held. He has a wide circle of friends throughout the county, who enjoy his business success and social prominence. In political matters Mr. Brown is a Republican, but has not entered the public arena, although as a public-spirited citizen and one who holds the welfare of his community at heart he takes a keen interest in matters pertaining to Fort Benton.

MORRIS W. BOTTORF, M. D. It is entirely within the province of true history to commemorate and perpetuate the lives and character, the achievements and honor, of the illustrious sons of the state. High on the roll of those who have made the history of medicine in Montana a work of fame appears the name of Dr. Morris W. Bottorf, who for nearly a score of years has been numbered among the medical practitioners at Kalispell, Montana. In addition to the work of his profession Dr. Bottorf is deeply interested in public affairs, his intrinsic loyalty to all matters affecting the good of the general welfare having ever been of the most insistent order.

Dr. Morris Wayne Bottorf was born in the city of White Pigeon, Michigan, in February, 1871. He is a son of Jacob K. and Emily (Barrett) Bottorf, both of whom are deceased, the former having died in 1908, at the age of seventy-two years, and the latter in 1909, likewise aged seventy-two years. Jacob K. Bottorf was a native of Pennsylvania, whence he immigrated to St. Joseph, Michigan, as a young man, there becoming a pioneer merchant. Mrs. Bottorf was born and reared in Ohio. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Bottorf—three boys and one girl—and of the number the subject of this review was the youngest in order of birth.

After completing the curriculum of the public schools of White Pigeon, Michigan, Dr. Bottorf was matriculated as a student in the Hahnemann Medical College, in the city of Chicago, Illinois, in which excellent institution he was graduated, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, in the class of 1895. Immediately after graduation he came west and located for a short time in Missouri, eventually coming to Montana in 1896 and settling at once in Kalispell. He initiated the active practice of his profession in this city and during the long intervening years to the present time, in 1912, has succeeded in building up a large and lucrative practice, in fact he holds distinctive prestige as the most efficient physician and surgeon in this section of the state. He first opened offices in the Conrad Bank building and later removed to the Nofsinger building, where he has one of the finest equipped suites of offices in the entire state. He was one of the first doctors in the territory of Montana and his success was assured from the start. In the early days he traveled many miles daily on horseback to and from his patients, who were scattered over a wide area tributary to Kalispell.

In Chicago, May 31, 1894, Dr. Bottorf was united in marriage to Dr. Phebe A. Anderson, whose birth occurred at Wetmore, Kansas, and who is a daughter of S. Anderson and Mary E. Anderson. Dr. and Mrs. Bottorf have no children.

Fraternally, Dr. Bottorf is a Royal Arch Mason and in politics he is an uncompromising supporter of the principles and policies for which the Republican party stands sponsor. Religiously, he and his wife are zealous members of the Methodist Episcopal church, to whose charities they are most liberal contributors.

OLIVER R. BEATTY. One of the most popular and progressive merchants of Lewistown is Oliver R. Beatty, familiarly known throughout the city as "Dad Beatty," who, as a dealer in agricultural implements and machinery, vehicles, farmers' hardware, and engines, has built up a large and prosperous trade. With a personality that is exclusive and original, he is a diplomat in business, one of the secrets of his success being the absolute confidence he has in his abilities, and his courage in advancing new ideas, which he carries to the finish, never faltering in thought or purpose. He was born December 25, 1858, in Vermont, Illinois, where his parents spent the large part of their lives, and where at their deaths their bodies were buried.

Educated in the public schools of his native town, Oliver R. Beatty began working for wages as a painter and paper hanger when but sixteen years old, receiving three dollars a day in good money for his work. Leaving home when nineteen years of age, he went to Minnesota and the ensuing nineteen years was associated with the Minneapolis and Saint Louis Railroad, for twelve years being in the legal department as claim agent and for seven years having charge of the water service. Severing his connection with the railroad company, Mr. Beatty went to Hutchinson, Minnesota, where he opened a cafe, which he operated a short time, and then sold. The following year he was located at Bemidji, Minnesota, where he ran a steam laundry, and was meeting with good success in his venture until the occurrence of a serious conflagration that destroyed his home and plant, leaving him with nothing, as he had no insurance.

Coming then to Montana to begin life anew, Mr. Beatty was employed for five years in hunting, fishing, and as an engineer in the saw mills of the Tobacco plains country. Locating then at Bonner, Montana, he worked for the Blackfoot Milling Company for a time, and was afterwards engineer in a laundry at Great Falls one winter. Going from there to the Mussellshell country, Mr. Beatty farmed a thousand acres of land for three years. In 1903 he came to Lewistown, and having entered the employ of the Judith Hardware Company was for eight years connected with its implement department. Becoming thoroughly familiar with the business, Mr. Beatty opened his present establishment at 120 East Main street, and in its management has met with phenomenal success, running his store under the name of "Dad Beatty." Familiar with the wants and needs of the modern, up-to-date agriculturist, he has built up an extensive patronage among the farmers of Fergus county, his genial courtesy, cordiality, and fair dealings winning for him the confidence and respect of all with whom he comes in contact.

Mr. Beatty carries one of the finest stock of goods to be found in any similar establishment in Montana, handling not only Rock Island implements and tools, but the Minneapolis line of goods, which includes the famous twenty-horse-power Universal Farm Motor, that has received the hearty approbation of the farmers that have tested it either in farming, threshing, or on the road, and also embraces the Minneapolis Standard Separator, which is a favorite with the leading dairymen of the county. "Dad" Beatty likewise handles the Rock Island Little Giant portable wagon dump and elevator, the Rock Island Liberty plow, Rock Island buggies, and the Schuttler wagons, and carries in his stock the Peoria seeder, and the Winner separator, both of which are highly appreciated on the farm. In fact everything needed in the equipment of a wideawake, progressive agriculturist being found in his store, threshing machines, farm motors, manure spreaders, plows, harrows, grain and cream separators, engines, pumps, vehicles, harnesses, oils and lubricants, farmers' hardware, etc., etc., his aim being to supply the farmers with the best of everything in his line, and at prices satisfactory to the buyer.

Politically Mr. Beatty is a Republican, but not an aspirant for official honors. He enjoys books, good music and good plays, and is exceedingly fond of hunting and fishing, taking trips whenever he finds leisure. He has never married, and being free from domestic cares and tribulations has the more time to attend to his business affairs. He has traveled extensively in our own country, and from personal observations and experience has come to the honest conclusion that the business resources and opportunities outrival those of any other state in the Union.

JOHN W. KENNEDY. Clearly-defined purpose and consecutive effort in the affairs of life will inevitably result in the attaining of a due measure of success, but in following out the career of one who has attained success by his own efforts there comes into view the intrinsic individuality which made such accomplishment possible, and thus there is granted an objective incentive and inspiration, while at the same time there is enkindled a feeling of respect and admiration. The qualities which have made Mr. Kennedy one of the prominent and successful men of Missoula, Montana, have also brought him the esteem of his fellow townsmen, for his career has been one of well-directed energy, strong determination and honorable methods.

John W. Kennedy, who is the owner and manager of the Kennedy Plumbing and Heating establishment, and carries on the most modern and admirably equipped and managed business of its kind in this part of Montana, was born in Louisville, Kentucky, May 24, 1868. When he was a child his parents removed from the Blue Grass State to Omaha, Nebraska, and in that city he received his public school education. When a youth of seventeen he concluded to prepare for a useful career by learning the trade of a plumber and after mastering this difficult and important business in every detail, he set out, in 1889, for Salt Lake City, Utah. There he remained until 1896, being employed by a number of firms. In the fall of the year last mentioned he first became a citizen of Montana, locating at Butte, where for three years he was an employe of the Kruger Plumbing Company. Following that he came to Missoula, where for a time after his arrival he was employed by that important corporation, the Missoula Mercantile Company, whose plumbing and heating department, as previously mentioned, he later bought out, and established a business for himself, which today ranks as first among concerns of its kind in this thriving metropolis. It possesses the most up-to-date equipment made and the work done by John W. Kennedy is uniformly satisfactory. He also owns the splendid modern building which his store partly occupies and it is safe to say that its equal can only be found in the large eastern cities, where all the latest improvements and ideas have been applied to modern construction. He employs seven or eight men throughout the entire year and in busy seasons this number is increased. He is also the president of the Montana Master Plumbers' Association. He possesses all the requisites of the able business man, sound judgment, executive ability and honorable principles. He is one of the substantial men of the city and doubtless an even more successful future lies before him. He is one of the men whose success is entirely due to their own efforts, no silver spoon having been in their mouths at birth.

Mr. Kennedy laid one of the important stones in the foundation of his success by his marriage on June 25, 1902, the young woman to become his wife and the mistress of his household being Frances Wilkin, of Phillips, Wisconsin, daughter of August and Mary Wilkin. They have a fine residence, which is the center of a gracious hospitality.

Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy are communicants of the Catholic church and generous supporters of the same. In politics the subject is a Democrat and since the attainment of his majority has supported its policies and principles. His fraternal affiliations are with the Knights of Columbus and the Elks. Like most well-balanced men, he is fond of the open and thoroughly enjoys a hunting or fishing expedition.

Mr. Kennedy is of Irish extraction, his father, William Kennedy, having been a native of Ireland. He came to America as a young man and located in New York previous to settling in Kentucky. He likewise was a plumber by occupation. He was one of America's gallant native sons who enlisted at the outbreak of the Civil war, and William Kennedy did not come out from the great conflict unscathed, being wounded while in that struggle. This estimable veteran citizen, now a resident of Omaha, is retired. The mother, whose maiden name was Mary Jane Crawley, was also a native of Erin and her demise occurred when the family were residing in Louisville. Margaret Kennedy, a sister of the subject, makes her home with the father in Omaha.

FRANK TOOLE, who has been identified with the business life of Montana for the past fifteen years is one of the leading citizens of Anaconda. He is a self-made man who began his practical career when a boy, and by energy and industry arrived at a point of the larger responsibilities and individual influence.

Mr. Toole was born at Madison, Wisconsin, on March 24, 1865, and is a son of William and Nora (Ryan) Toole. Another member of the family in Montana is John R. Toole, of Missoula, whose sketch appears on other pages. Father and mother were both natives of Ireland, and the former immigrated to this country when a boy, settling in Wisconsin, where he was a substantial farmer until his death. Both he and his wife now lie at rest in Madison, Wisconsin.

Frank Toole attended the public schools, passed through the Madison high school, at the age of seventeen left home and entered the train service of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad, and for thirteen years followed railroading as a career. He was one of the popular and efficient men of that line and during most of this period was a train conductor. In 1897 he left the railroad for the larger opportunities of Montana, and has ever since been connected in some official capacity with the A. C. M. Company at Anaconda. He remained the manager of the lumber department of that extensive concern until June 30, 1911, when it was incorporated the Inter-State Lumber Company, which took over the interests in this line formerly conducted by A. C. M. Co. At that time Mr. Toole became manager of the yard at Anaconda.

Through his important business connections and as an individual citizen, Mr. Toole is one of the prominent men of Anaconda, and is a member of Silver Bow Club, at Butte, and Anaconda Club, at Anaconda. Fraternally, he is one of the active Masons, being a Knight Templar and Shriner, and is also affiliated with the Elks. His politics is Democratic. He married Miss Jean McKenzie, and their only child was William Toole, now a resident of Wallace, Idaho. Mrs. Toole, who was a native of Franklin, Pennsylvania, died at Anaconda in 1908.

PROF. JOSEPH EATON MONROE. An enumeration of those men of the present generation, who have won honor and public recognition for themselves and at the same time have honored the locality to which they belong would be incomplete were there failure to make mention of the one whose name forms the caption of this sketch. He has sustained a very enviable reputation in educational circles, being considered one of the most enlightened of Montana educators and today is giving thoughtful and able direction to the affairs of the Montana State Normal School at Dillon, with which institution he has been identified for fifteen years.

Professor Monroe was born in Xenia, Ohio, November 26, 1864. There he resided until the age of six years and then with his parents left his home in the Buckeye state and went to Muncie, Indiana, where the Monroes resided for nearly nine years. In 1879 they went to Parsons, Kansas, remaining there for three years. Their next removal was to Fort Scott, Kansas, and fourteen years was the duration of their residence at that point. In 1897 Professor Monroe came to Dillon, Montana, and has since that time been connected with the State Normal School, having been identified with it since its organization. He now holds the office of acting president of the college and is professor of physics and chemistry, and much of the prestige and high standing of the institution is directly traceable to his influence.

Professor Monroe is a man of exceedingly fine education. He received his preliminary training in the public schools of Indiana, being graduated from the high school at Muncie. Having come to the decision to enter educational fields, he entered the Indiana State Normal School and subsequently the Kansas Normal College, from which latter institution he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts. He then went abroad and studied for two and one-half years in the University of Glasgow, Scotland, taking special work in physics and chemistry. Then returning to America, he entered the New York University and there finished his post-graduate work.

Both Professor Monroe and his admirable wife are members of the Presbyterian church and have been very zealous in assisting in its campaigns for good. In the matter of politics, to use the Professor's own phraseology, he is "Republican in general and independent in particular," and he takes a very keen interest in public affairs in their bearing upon the general welfare. He belongs to all the Masonic bodies from the blue lodge to the Shrine, has filled all the chairs in chapter and commandery, and has begun those of the blue lodge. He is prominent and greatly beloved in the ranks of this time-honored order, whose ideals of moral and social justice and brotherly love he exemplifies in his own living.

Professor Monroe was married in Fort Scott, Kansas, being of the purest and his command of language wonderful indeed. He is widely sought as a lecturer and his silver-tongued logic has done much to bring success to a number of good causes.

Previous to entering upon his present collegiate work, he taught in various district schools in Kansas, and advanced to principal of several schools in Indiana and Kansas. Following that he was professor of natural science in the Kansas Normal College. He is a member of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and also of the American Chemical Society. He belongs to the Montana Academy of Science, and formerly held the presidency of this august body. He is president of the Schoolmasters' Club of Montana at the present time and locally he is connected with the Beaverhead Club. His attractive personality and fine character have made him universally popular. He finds his chief diversion in good reading and is particularly fond of fishing. Music and the drama are both interesting to him and he has a fine critical knowledge of both.

Professor Monroe was married in Fort Scott, Kansas, April 30, 1895, the young woman to become his wife and the mistress of his household being Elizabeth Eidson, daughter of Mathew B. and Mary J. Eidson, of Fort Scott, where the father for many years was a prominent architect and contractor. His demise occurred at Fort Scott in 1908, at the age of seventy-four.

The father of the subject of this brief record was Hugh Monroe, who was born in Dornoch, Southlandshire, Scotland, in 1813. He came to America in 1836 and first settled in Toledo, Ohio, where he followed the business of a contractor and farmer. He died in Parsons, Kansas, in 1885, aged seventy-two years, and is there interred. The mother, whose maiden name was Jemima Steele, was born in Xenia, Ohio, in 1823, and was summoned to the Great Beyond in 1899, aged seventy-six, while living in Muncie, Indiana. The union of the elder Mr. and Mrs. Monroe was celebrated at Xenia, Ohio. They became the parents of ten sons and daughters, Professor Monroe being the youngest member of the family.

JAMES O'KEEFE. The sheriff of Deer Lodge county today is not confronted with the necessity of personally administering the law as sometimes happened in the "old days," nor does he have to contend with quite such strenuous conditions as seemed to be the natural concomitant of opening the new country, but the position is nevertheless one of great importance, calling for the exercise of a nice discrimination, unceasing vigilance, and the possession of personal valor of the highest type. These characteristics are embodied in the person of James O'Keefe, who is now filling his second term in the shrievalty. Of splendid physique and health, he combines with this physical good fortune a pleasant disposition, amiable but firm, decisive manner, and a winning frankness that makes every man his friend. In personal popularity James O'Keefe is unique.

James O'Keefe, sheriff of Deer Lodge county, Montana, was born on March 22, 1872, in Cork, Ireland, and inherited from his ancestors and the native soil the attractive traits of children of the Emerald Isle. He went to the National schools until fourteen years of age, when he immigrated to the United States by himself, coming west to Flat Center, Nebraska, to make his home with a sister. He continued his education in the public schools of that place for a couple of years, following this with a year's employment on a farm, then went to Cheyenne, Wyoming, where he secured employment as a railroad fireman. He followed that for six years and in 1897 located in Anaconda.

Securing a position with the A. C. M. Company, as fireman of the stationary boilers, he was after the lapse of two years promoted to engineer. After a year in this position he became a police officer of Anaconda. His abilities as a guardian of the peace were quickly recognized and when two years had passed he was elected on the Democratic ticket as sheriff of the county. He is now serving his second term in that capacity, the citizens readily recognizing his especial fitness for the place.

The private life of Mr. O'Keefe has been as happy as his public career has been prosperous. He was married to Miss Ellen Dugan, daughter of Daniel M. Dugan, a pioneer of Nebraska, who rose to considerable prominence among the agriculturalists of that region. Their union has been blessed with four fine children. Emmett and James are pupils of the high school and Mary and John are attending the grade schools. The family are members of the Catholic church. Mr. O'Keefe is affiliated with the Woodmen of the World, Eagles, Elks and the Catholic Order of Foresters. He has by his own unaided efforts accumulated considerable city and suburban property and owns a nice home. He is fond of all athletics and sports, particularly hunting, and has a fine deer head mounted, a trophy of a fine shot he made with his revolver while hunting one day.

The parents of Mr. O'Keefe bore the same name before their marriage, but were no relation. His father, Richard O'Keefe, died in Cork, in 1874. His mother, Ellen O'Keefe, passed away in the same city in 1909. The family of these two comprised six children, all of whom are still living. They are: Luke O'Keefe, a merchant at Boston, Massachusetts; Mary O'Keefe, now the wife of John Regan, a farmer at Flat Center, Nebraska; Katharine, who married and lives in New York; Timothy O'Keefe, engaged in farming near Cork, Ireland; Margaret, now Mrs. Robert P. Stapleton, of Cheyenne, Wyoming; and James, the subject of this sketch.

HOWARD C. PACKER. Equipped with a wide and comprehensive knowledge of the law, and possessing broad, keen and lucid powers of legal exposition, Howard C. Packer is fast winning for himself a position of importance among the representative lawyers of Hamilton, and can look forward to a successful career in his chosen profession. A son of Ezra C. Packer, he was born September 20, 1876, in Canton, Ohio, coming from honored Quaker lineage, the Packer family tracing its ancestry back to William Penn, the founder of the City of Brotherly Love. This family has in many ways been identified with the history of our country, from the immigrant ancestor having been descended many men of prominence and worth, noteworthy among the number having been Asa Packer, the war governor of Pennsylvania, and founder of Lehigh University, at South Bethlehem, Pennsylvania.

Ezra C. Packer was born, reared and married in Ohio. He acquired an excellent education as a young man, being brought up as an Eglish Quaker, and has always taken an active and intelligent interest in anything pertaining to the advancement of learning, having been the projector and founder of Ashland (Ohio) College. In 1884 he migrated with his family to North Dakota, where he bought land, and for a number of years was engaged in farming. Coming from there to Montana in 1895, he purchased a ranch in Bitter Root valley, and there continued his agricultural labors until 1906, when he retired from active pursuits, and is now enjoying a life of leisure at his pleasant home in Hamilton. He married Mary A. Speelman, a native of Ohio, and to them three children have been born, as follows: Bertha, wife of F. H. Cotton, of Mason City, Iowa; W. C. Packer, of Helena, Montana, deputy county attorney of Lewis and Clark county; and Howard C. Packer.

After attending the public schools of Canton, Ohio, for two years, Howard C. Packer continued his studies in the public schools of North Dakota, whither his parents had settled, being graduated from the Bismarck high school with the class of 1893. He afterwards attended the North Dakota Agricultural College until 1895, subsequently spending a year in the University of Montana, at Missoula. Beginning the study of law in Hamilton, Montana, in 1897, he was admitted to the bar in 1904, and during the ensuing four years was actively engaged in the practice of his profession with R. A. O'Hara. On April 1, 1911, Mr. Packer was appointed county attorney to fill out the unexpired term of Judge R. Lee McCulloch, and in this capacity is performing the duties devolving upon him with ability and fidelity.

Public-spirited and energetic, Mr. Packer takes a warm interest in everything pertaining to the betterment of local and county affairs, and as an active member of the Progressive ranks is prominently identified with campaign work as a speaker. Fraternally, he is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

JOHN A. SMITH. Born, reared to the age of twenty and educated in the land of Swedenborg, Gustavus Adolphus and Ericsson, eminent examples of profound speculation, military genius and mechanical ingenuity, John A. Smith, assistant city attorney of Butte, brought in his person when he came to this country at the age of twenty many of the characteristics of the sturdy, sterling and resourceful race from which he sprang, and has used them here not only for his own advancement but also for the good of the communities in which he has lived and labored.

Mr. Smith is a native of Dahlsland, Sweden, where he came into being on March 30, 1869. His parents, Anders Jonasson and Johanna Anderson, were also Swedes by nativity and passed their lives in the land of their birth. They were farmers and well-to-do in their occupation, and were also highly respected as good citizens, warmly interested in the welfare of their country and the progress and prosperity of its people. The father was born in 1826 and died in 1896. The mother's life began in 1836 and ended in 1884.

Their son John A. was educated in the provincial schools of his neighborhood, and while attending and after leaving them worked on his father's farm. He remained at home with his father until he reached his twentieth year, then determined to seek larger opportunities and more rapid advancement than his own country seemed to promise him, and for the purpose came to the United States. After his arrival in this country he journeyed west as far as Bessemer, Michigan, where he found employment as a miner in the Colby iron mines.

He worked there six months, then took another flight in the wake of the setting sun, going to the Black Hills in South Dakota. During the first year of his residence in that region he served as clerk of the hotel in Spearfish. By the end of that time there was great excitement over rich mineral discoveries at Terry, and he moved to that camp. But he did not try his hand at mining, notwithstanding the general impulse of the people of the camp in that direction. He secured a position as a carpenter's helper at Terry. In the summer of 1893 he went to Washburn, Wisconsin, where he assisted the clerk of the court there in his official duties. This connection gave him access to the law library, and he made good use of the chance thus given him to study law. In 1897 he came to Butte, and at once went to work in the copper mines. But he continued his law studies while working in the mines for two years, then completed his preparation for the bar in the office of his brother, Carl J. Smith, then one of the prominent lawyers of the city, but now of Seattle.

Mr. Smith was admitted to the bar in 1900 and at once began the practice of his profession. From the first he was successful in his professional work, rising rapidly in prominence at the bar. He was appointed assistant city attorney after the last election in Butte, and during his tenure of the office has shown himself to be very efficient, enterprising and progressive. He is in the first rank in his profession, and is also highly esteemed as an excellent citizen.

On August 31, 1909, Mr. Smith was joined in wedlock with Miss Eleanor Humphrey, one of the teachers in the Butte high school. They have one child, their son Herbert Humphrey Smith, who was born in Butte on August 27, 1910. The father is a Republican in political faith and allegiance. He has prospered in business and invested his surplus funds in Montana real estate. Among other pieces of valuable property which he owns is his attractive home at 823 West Porphry street. His office is at 115 North Main street.

Mr. Smith is devoted to his business and gives it first attention at all times. But he has it so systematized that he can get away frequently without neglecting it to indulge his taste for outdoor sports of all kinds. He is cordially interested, too, in the progress and improvement of the city and county of his home, and gives every project that he deems worthy or wise his earnest practical support in promotion of the general welfare, but all his efforts in this direction are directed by intelligence and a broad view as to what is best for the community. He is universally regarded as a public-spirited and progressive man, and enjoys in a marked degree the confidence and esteem of the people of his city and county.

JOHN R. E. SIEVERS, PH. G., M. D. In these days, marked by such exceptional progress in invention, discovery and individual accomplishment, there is a natural and imperative tendency to specialization. In no line, perhaps, is this singleness of purpose, this thorough and exhaustive inquiry along a given line more productive of remarkable results than in the practice of medical science. Among the representative physicians and surgeons of Montana who have directed particular thought and investigation along special lines, at the same time keeping in touch with generic progress in a general way, is the eminent man whose career is the subject of this brief review. His prominence is such as to give special interest to any tribute to his efforts and effective labor.

Dr. John Rudolph Emile Sievers is of German birth, his parentage being of a highly respected and well-to-do class. To Jacob and Catherine (Ehlers) Sievers this son was born on May 31, 1869, in Itzehoe, in the province of Holstein. In that locality the father still lives and pursues his vocation, which is that of an apiarist and in which he is both successful and prominent; the mother passed from this life in January, 1912.

In the excellent state schools of his native province the boy received his preliminary academic education, afterward prosecuting his studies in private schools, in which he familiarized himself with foreign languages. As a youth of fifteen he came to the United States and located in Chicago. There he served an apprenticeship of two years in a drug store, making such progress in his studies during that period that in 1886 he was enabled to enter the Chicago College of Pharmacy. In that institution he completed his junior course in 1888, receiving honorable mention and the gift of a work entitled "Principles of Pharmacognosy," by Professor F. A. Flueckiger of the University of Strasburg. Despite the many honors that have since accrued to Dr. Sievers and the many treasures his rich years of travel have brought him, there is scarcely a single object in his possession and certainly no volume in his library which he regards with more pride and pleasure than this book, first material mark of his ability and faithfulness, which bears on its fly-leaf the legend: "Presented to Mr. Rudolph Sievers, for excellence of scholarship in the Pharmaceutical and Botanical Laboratories of the Chicago College of Pharmacy, by (signed) E. B. Stuart (and) E. S. Bastin."

More honors ensued the following year, when the young man completed his course for graduation from the College of Pharmacy. On that occasion he won the honors of his class and received the Billroth prize, a compound microscope. He was granted the degree of Ph. G., and within the same year, after examination by the state board of pharmacy, he was made a registered pharmacist of the state of Illinois. His attitude toward his work is seen in the fact that he further perfected himself in it by pursuing for some months thereafter the study of analytical chemistry under E. F. Richter, of Chicago, formerly of Berlin, Germany.

In 1890 Dr. Sievers began the specific work of preparing himself for the medical profession, matriculating in the Medical College of Northwestern University, and in that Chicago institution completing a thorough course of professional study. He was graduated in 1893, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, and soon afterward was appointed house physician of the Sanatorium Waldheim at Oconomowoc, Wisconsin. In a very short time a still more creditable appointment came to him: In September of that year, as the result of a competitive examination held for that purpose, Dr. Sievers, as the successful candidate, was made house physician and surgeon in the Michael Reese Hospital in Chicago. In 1895, at which time he had become the head of the hospital staff, he resigned in order to pursue further scientific research abroad.

In the autumn of the year mentioned, the Doctor entered the medical department of Leipzig University, Germany, where he pursued a post-graduate course. Having completed this period of study he went to Berlin for further work in the same line. While there he received an appointment as surgeon of the steamship Bellona, of the German-East Asiatic line from Hamburg, a most desirable position in that it offered opportunities for studying diseases under oriental conditions. In March, 1896, he located in Vienna, where in connection with his continued studies in bacteriology, pathology and surgical diagnosis, he gave special attention to gynecology and general surgery; holding in company with Dr. Butler, former house surgeon of the Presbyterian Hospital in Chicago, the position of assistant surgeon, under Dr. D. E. Ullman's presence, Dr. Butler and Dr. Sievers alternating in charge of surgical cases, performing independently of each other operations every day from 9 A. M. to 2 P. M. Their collections of pathological specimens were utilized for further gross and microscopical examination by students, being first sent to the pathological department under the supervision of Professor Kolisko.

In the autumn of 1897 Dr. Sievers returned to the United States, remaining in Chicago for a few months and later visiting the farther west—selecting Butte as his sphere of action. Here he conducts a general practice, but devotes special attention to general and abdominal surgery and gynecology with the most gratifying results. Since coming to this city he has held the position of examining physician for both the Pacific Mutual Life Insurance of San Francisco and for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company of New York. Owing to his rapidly growing practice, which necessarily demanded his entire professional attention, he resigned each of these appointments. His remarkable capacity for work, however, is such that through his having thoroughly systematized his business he is able to find time daily for the research and study which every live physician believes important. His remarkably tireless enthusiasm for the science of which he is such a notable exponent is again seen in the fact that, with all the skill and erudition of which he was already master, he spent the greater part of the year 1911 in study abroad, conducting experimental research in the biological laboratory of Berlin. The medical practice of Dr. Sievers is not only one of the most extensive in the state, but comprises as well the most exclusive and high-class patronage.

Not only is Dr. Sievers' professional ardor evinced by his independent study and investigation, but he is furthermore a prominent member of the Rocky Mountain Inter-State Medical Association, of the Montana State Medical Society, a life member of the Chicago Medical Society and of the American Medical Association. His remarkable capacity is such that he has not been obliged to debar social interests from his life. While a student he was one of the charter members of the Nu Sigma Nu Greek letter fraternity, in the Zeta Chapter, year '93, when that society was organized among the medical students of Northwestern University. Of the non-academic secret societies he has attained the thirty-second degree in the Scottish Rite Masonry and is a Noble in the Bagdad Temple of the Knights of the Mystic Shrine. His social popularity in Club. Dr. Sievers is politically allied with the Re-Butte is also seen in his membership in the Silver Bow publican party.

Mrs. Sievers is of Swiss ancestry. Her father, Dr. Emil Ridell, was born in the great Teuton country; while her mother, Bertha Hoffman Ridell, whose paternal lineage is of the Swiss nobility, was born in New York City. Dr. Ridell became prominent as a physician in the American metropolis. There he was married and there Alma Ridell, now Mrs. Sievers, was born. Dr. and Mrs. Sievers are the parents of two children, both born in Butte. Ruth Ethel, the daughter, was born January 31, 1900, and Arthur Rudolph came to the home on December 21, 1902. In the domestic, as well as in all other phases of Dr. Sievers' life in Butte, he is counted a valuable acquisition to the life of the city.

WILLIAM G. JARRETT of Roundup, Montana, is a well known man in political circles not only in his own community but throughout the state. As a Republican he has taken an active interest in public affairs for many years, and served his party in many capacities. He has been precinct committeeman for several years, and has been a state and a county delegate at a number of conventions. In 1908 he campaigned the state for the Republican ticket, and at the time of the Musselshell county division spent much of his time at Helena fighting for Musselshell. During 1908 he was also the assistant sergeant-at-arms in the state senate. Outside of his political offices he has in addition been connected with the school board, and was secretary for some time for both the United Workmen and the Maccabees. At one time he was state delegate for the Workmen. Besides these other affiliations he is also a member of the Roundup Commercial Club.

Mr. Jarrett was born in Rochester, Minnesota, December 23, 1874, the son of Henry Jarrett, a native of Iowa, and Mary Frances (Paine) Jarrett, a native of Illinois. The elder Mr. Jarrett was a farmer, and was one of the men who took part in the Black Hawk Indian war. He was a man of broad sympathy and charity, beloved by all his neighbors, and was particularly interested in church work. He and Miss Paine were married in Iowa, but later moved to Rochester, Minnesota, where he died in 1900 at the age of eighty-six, and she in 1911 at the age of seventy-three. They had eight children, of whom William G. was the youngest.

William G. Jarrett attended the public schools in Rochester, going through the high school and later taking a course in bookkeeping. Immediately after his graduation he took up ranching, starting in on a salary of eighteen dollars a month. When he was twenty-three years old he started west and arrived in Montana in 1897 where he has remained ever since. For the first twelve years he lived in Livingston where he followed surveying, ranching, mining, etc., but in 1909 he came to Roundup. After working in the mines for a few months, he was appointed clerk of the court of the New Musselshell county. On November 3, 1912, the Republican convention at Roundup, by a large majority nominated him for the office of clerk of the district court and on November 5th the voters indorsed that action by another handsome majority. Mr. Jarrett carrying nearly every precinct in the county.

On September 22, 1902, Mr. Jarrett was married in Livingston, Montana, to Jennie McDonald, the daughter of Sylvester and Mary McDonald of Chestnut, Montana, and they have had four children—Mayme F., at school, Gladys L., at school, William G., Jr., at school, and Edward S., at home. Mr. and Mrs. Jarrett are both Catholics, and Mrs. Jarrett is an active worker in the church activities. She is a member of the Royal Highlanders.

THOMAS J. TROY. A successful career of business enterprise and social service has characterized the life of Thomas J. Troy, the superintendent of the Havre public schools and one of the largest landholders in this part of Montana.

Professor Troy was born in Ontario, Canada, August 22, 1871. He is one of the comparatively few men in whom are combined the studious temperament with unceasing energies for hard work in business and physical activities. During his boyhood his chief ideals were scholarly, and he enjoyed thorough and varied educational advantages. From the grade and high schools he entered the Mount Forest Model school and then the Ottawa Provincial Normal School, from which he was graduated. He later attended the St. Jerome College of Science at Berlin, Ontario, and also took a commercial course in the Carnegie College of Ohio.

As an educator Mr. Troy began his career as principal of the schools at New Germany, Ontario, where he remained three years. Mr. Troy has been identified with the state of Montana since 1897, and has been one of the state's foremost educators. For two years he was principal of the Fort Benton schools, had a similar position at Niehart two years, and since 1902 has been superintendent of the school system of Havre. He came to this city during its important period of growth and development, and has been able to render a lasting service to the cause of education by building a solid foundation for all future educational development in this locality. Throughout the past ten years he has taken a progressive attitude toward all matters connected with his office, and yet has managed to secure the cordial cooperation of his fellow citizens in promoting the welfare of the schools.

In his own life and in his work as an educator, Professor Troy has advocated and practiced the old adage that a clear mind is dependent on a healthy body. In his own hard-working student days he was devoted to athletics, and high ideals of scholarship did not interfere with his gaining equal honors in one of the great field sports. What time he had to give to outdoor exercise he devoted to practice in the putting of the 16-pound shot, and in this event he ranks among the greatest during the athletic contests of the past twenty years. In 1892 he won the shot-put over all competitors at Ottawa, Canada, and during the next twelve years he won twenty-eight gold medals and prizes at different athletic meets. In the Olympic games of 1904, held during the world's fair at St. Louis, he was an entrant among representatives from all parts of the world, and won a gold medal for his performance. He took the gold medal at the Portland world's fair in 1905, and was winner of the state championship at Butte in 1892. Among the trophies of his athletic prowess he possesses thirty-two gold medals and other prizes. Professor Troy is a man of splendid physical development. His broad success in the serious services of life has not only proved the value of the old motto above mentioned, but has also disproved a frequent assertion that successful athletes are seldom noted for achievement in other departments of the world's work.

Professor Troy is closely identified with the educational progress of this state, and is a member of the board of educational examiners for Hill county and of the State Education Code Commission. He is the owner of fifteen first-class residence properties in Havre and Dodson, and is one of the most prosperous citizens of the state. He is a devout member of the Catholic church, and is affiliated with the Knights of Columbus and the Fraternal Order of Eagles, of which he is state trustee.

Mr. Troy married at Butte, June 15, 1903, Miss Emma E. Bronson. The four children born of their union were as follows: Thomas B., born at Havre, Friday, May 13, 1904, now in school and giving promise of becoming an athlete; Clement, born in Havre, June 28, 1906, and died October 4, 1906; William C., born at Havre, August 31, 1907; and Lenore C., born in Havre, April 3, 1911.

Professor Troy's father was William Troy, who was born in Ireland in 1831, came during his youth to Canada, and followed a successful career of farming until his death, which occurred at Ottawa in 1891. Shortly after his arrival in America he met and married Miss Ellen O'Farrell, who was a native of Canada, her parents having been early settlers. She died in Canada in 1892.

WILLIAM B. SHOEMAKER has served his county in the capacity of clerk since 1904, having been recently elected for the fourth consecutive term, a fact which advertises his popularity and ability more eloquently than could any words. He has been a resident of the state of Montana since 1897, and has taken a man's part in the affairs of whatever place he has been located in the intervening years. Born in Franklin county, Pennsylvania, on January 20, 1871, he is the son of Adam and Henrietta (Sentman) Shoemaker. The father, born in Pennsylvania, was for many years a prominent hotel man and farmer of his native town, but in the later years of his life was retired from business activities of all kinds. He died in 1901. The mother, also a native of the Keystone state, died at the family home in 1910. They were the parents of six children, of which number all but two are living. They are: James H., general manager of the Corn Belt Telephone Company, of Cedar Falls, Iowa; Charles L., a commission man of Chicago, Illinois; Gertrude, the wife of John Ferguson, who is the editor of the Conrad (Mont.) Observer; William B., of this review.

In his boyhood, the parents of William Shoemaker moved from the Pennsylvania home to Clay county, Missouri, shortly thereafter going to Marshall county, Iowa. In that locality the boy attended the public schools and later was a student at Stanford Seminary. He left school at the age of seventeen and began to earn his own living, working for the C. G. W. R. R. in their telegraphy department, later being advanced to the position of station agent. In 1897, when he was twenty-six years old, he came to Montana, where he took a position as agent at Culbertson, with the Great Northern Railroad. He remained there for two years, when he was transferred to Shelby, in which place he served in a like capacity for a three years' period. In the spring of 1903 he went to Hinsdale, where he continued as the agent of the Great Northern until the fall of 1904. In that year he was elected to the office of county clerk of Valley county, and resigned his position with the Great Northern with which he had been connected for so many years, and removed to Glasgow, the county seat, and assumed charge of the office to which he had been elected. The excellence of his service and the high esteem in which he is held by the people of the county are evidenced by his four consecutive elections to the office, and indicate the character of the man as a whole.

Mr. Shoemaker has become attached to the state, and is warm in his praises of this section of the country. He has become the owner of considerable ranch lands and holds some valuable city property in Hinsdale and Glasgow. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Modern Woodmen of America and Order of Eagles, and has passed through all chairs of each of the orders.

On July 30, 1903, Mr. Shoemaker was united in marriage with Ella Cummings, daughter of Burr Cummings, a native son of Iowa and a prominent music dealer of Des Moines, that state. Four children have been born to their union: Ray, Gail, Vera and Irma. The two first named are students in the Glasgow high school.

FREDERICK T. GREENE holds distinctive prestige as one of the leading mining engineers of Butte, Montana, where he has resided for a period of fifteen years and where he is a member of the Hodgens-Greene Company, the headquarters of which concern are at 401-3 State Savings Bank building. Mr. Greene was born in the city of Brooklyn, New York, November 22, 1873, and he is a son of William A. and Angenora (Semlear) Greene, the former a native of Rhode Island, where he was born in 1851, and the latter of whom was born in Brooklyn, in 1854. In the maternal line Mr. Greene traces his ancestry back to stanch colonial stock, the original progenitor of the Semlear family in America having settled in New York, whither he came from Holland in 1639. The paternal ancestors of Mr. Greene were of English extraction and were early settlers in this country. William A. Greene has long been engaged in the collar manufacturing business and since 1885 he has been a resident of Waterloo, in the province of Ontario, Canada. Mr. and Mrs. Greene became the parents of three children, concerning whom the following brief data are here incorporated: Frederick T. is the immediate subject of this review; Myra B. is the wife of J. H. Hatch, of New York City; and Carl F. is a citizen of Toronto, Ontario, Canada.

To the public schools of Boston, Massachusetts, Frederick T. Greene is indebted for his rudimentary educational training. At the age of eight years he accompanied his parents to Canada and he was graduated as a member of the high school of Berlin, Ontario, in the class of 1889. In the same year he was matriculated as a student in the University of Toronto, in which he was graduated in 1893. Subsequently he entered the Michigan College of Mines, completing his mining courses in 1897 and receiving the degrees of Bachelor of Science and Mining Engineer. In the fall of 1897 Mr. Greene came to Butte, where for the two ensuing years he was in the employ of the Boston & Montana Mining Company. In that year he removed to British Columbia, where he represented different mining companies in the capacity of mining engineer. On January 1, 1901, he returned to Butte, here accepting a position as chief assistant in the geological department of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company. On June 1, 1906, he resigned the latter position in order to become chief assistant in the geological departments of the Great Northern, Northern Pacific and Burlington Railroads, continuing the incumbent of that position until September 1, 1908. On the latter date he entered into a private practice of his profession, and in March, 1911, he became secretary and treasurer of the Hodgens-Greene Company, of Butte. The business indulged in by this corporation is mainly that of developing mining properties in the state and acting as consulting engineers for a number of prominent mines.

In his political convictions Mr. Greene is a "Stand-patter" Republican, and while he does not take an active part in public affairs he is ever on the alert to forward all measures projected for the good of the general welfare. In a social way, he is a valued and appreciative member of the Silver Bow Club and of the Butte Country Club. He is unmarried.

MICHAEL J. WALSH. With supreme faith in the future of Montana, with whose business, public and military interests he has been connected for the past fifteen years, Michael J. Walsh, of Livingston, is at present devoting his energies to promoting realty ventures and to discharging the duties devolving upon him in the office of public administrator. Mr. Walsh was born at Emmetsburg, Palo Alto county, Iowa, July 22, 1867, and is a son of Thomas and Marie (Nolan) Walsh, natives of Kilkenny, County Kilkenny, Ireland.

Thomas Walsh came to the United States in 1865 on a sailing vessel, and from New York City, where he landed, drifted to Emmetsburg, Iowa, first working as a farm hand and subsequently becoming one of the pioneer agriculturists of Palo Alto county, where he is still living at the age of sixty-five years. He is a prominent Democrat of his section, and has held various public offices, being elected county recorder in 1878 and serving three terms. He was married in Emmetsburg, Iowa, to Marie Nolan, who died in 1891, at the age of forty-four years, and they had a family of two sons and two daughters, of whom the sons survive: Michael J.; and Thomas J., the latter a resident of Fort George, British Columbia.

Like other farmers' sons of his day and locality, Michael J. Walsh secured his education in the district schools during the winter months, his services in the summers being needed on the home farm. Agricultural pursuits, however, did not appeal to the youth, and in 1884 he started to learn the tinsmith and plumber's trade, at which he worked in Emmetsburg until 1890. In that year he removed to Algona, Kossuth county, Iowa, and about three years later went to Burt, Iowa, where he continued to work at his trade until 1897, then beginning to travel over the country as a well driller and in promoting the Brotherhood of American Yeomen. In October, 1897, he came to Livingston and began to work at his trade for Nolan Brothers. At that time he was a member of the Fourth Regiment, Iowa National Guards, and in April, 1898, he joined his regiment at Camp McKinley, Des Moines, Iowa, the Spanish-American War having broken out. He was mustered in as a member of Company F, Fifty-second Regiment, Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and was enrolled April 30, 1898, as sergeant of his company. On May 21, 1898, he was promoted to second lieutenant of Company F, and went therewith to Chickamauga Park, Georgia. On August 26, 1898, the regiment returned to Camp McKinley, and he was mustered out of the service August 30, 1898, and returned to Livingston. Here he worked at his trade until April, 1903, when he was elected city treasurer, and so eminently satisfactory was his administration that he succeeded himself in the following election in 1905. He engaged in the real estate business in 1903, in which he has continued to the present time. He maintains a well-appointed suite of offices in the basement of the First State Bank building, and deals in real estate, loans and insurance, making a specialty of doing business for non-residents, and acting also as notary public and conducting a successful employment agency. He believes Montana to be one of the greatest farming countries in the west, and a great deal of his business comes in handling farm properties. In 1908 Mr. Walsh was elected public administrator, and in 1910 received the re-election to that office, in which he is now serving. Military affairs have always interested him and he has given a great deal of his time and attention to this kind of work. He organized Company E, Second Regiment, Montana National Guard, and October 14, 1901, was elected captain, being promoted to major December 5, 1903, and to the rank of lieutenant-colonel, August 18, 1906. He is a member of the Spanish-American War Veterans, Gen. Harvey C. Kessler Camp, and as a member of the Montana State Rifle Team attended the national shooting match at Sea Girt, New Jersey, in 1905 and 1906, and in 1907, 1908, 1909 and 1910, was in attendance at Camp Perry, Ohio. Fraternally, he is connected with Lodge No. 1274, Knights of Columbus, and Livingston Lodge No. 246, B. P. O. E. He is universally recognized as being one of the foremost business residents of Livingston, and as being made of that stuff which constitutes the best materials for aiding in the building up of a moral and progressive community.

Mr. Walsh was married to Miss Anna Wernert, in October, 1899, who was born in Dubuque county, Iowa, the seventh of the eight children born to Ignace and Katherine Wernert, natives of France, both of whom are deceased. They were married in France and came to this country by sailing vessel, landing in New Orleans, whence they came up the Mississippi river to Dubuque county, Iowa, and later removed to Kossuth county, Iowa, where until his retirement Mr. Wernert was engaged in agricultural pursuits. Mr. and Mrs. Walsh have two children: Gertrude I. and Michael E.

GEORGE F. GIESER. Orphaned by the death of his mother while he was yet a child, and being desirous from his boyhood to make his own advancement in the world, George F. Gieser, one of the leading meat merchants of Butte, has bent all his efforts to the accomplishment of his desire, and has succeeded admirably in his design. He is prosperous and has high standing in the community of his home, and all his success in life is the result of his industry, proper ambition and good management.

He was born in the city of New York on March 30, 1850, and was sent to school there until he completed his education in the grammar school grades. Showing a preference for the meat business from his youth, soon after leaving school he was apprenticed to one of the most prominent meat dealers in his native city, and he served faithfully in his apprenticeship, with close attention to the business until he became a thorough master of his trade in every detail and department of it.

The great city in which he was born and reared had many attractions for him, but the West spoke in his heart with a persuasive voice, and he determined to cast his lot in that section of the country. In 1869 he moved to Kansas City, Missouri, and worked at his trade there for a short time. He then concluded to go back a little farther east, and changed his residence and base of operations to the state of Illinois. He did not remain beyond the Mississippi very long, however, but returned to Missouri and located in St. Louis, where he worked at his trade for some years. He had no difficulty in securing steady employment in that city, as there was always at that time a demand for skilled workmen in his craft.

Kansas City still looked inviting to him, and in 1878 he returned to that bustling metropolis and there established himself in the wholesale and retail meat trade. In 1890 he sold his interests in Kansas City and moved to Ogden, Utah, and for several years was in the front rank of meat dealers in that city. In 1897 he made another change of base, coming to Butte and starting in the same business here. From the beginning of his enterprise in this city he was successful. He made money rapidly and invested it in real estate with a bright future, and his investments have all proven to have been made with judgment. He is now one of the substantial men of property in the city, but is still engaged in the meat business, as he prefers now, as he always has preferred, work to leisure.

Michael Gieser, the father of George F., was born in Germany and came to the United States in 1849, when he was a young man. In 1862 he enlisted in the Union army in the Forty-fifth New York Volunteer Infantry. He served in that regiment to the close of the Civil war and took part in a number of the leading engagements during the sanguinary and momentous conflict, but was never wounded or taken prisoner. He died in New York at the age of sixty years. Mr. Gieser does not remember the name of his mother, or know much about her, as she died when he was quite a young child, and he never acquired much information concerning her.

On September 10, 1881, Mr. Gieser was married in Kansas City, Missouri, to Miss Libbie Schaefer, a native of Pennsylvania. They have had nine children, all of whom are living: Frank, who lives in Butte; Herbert, who is now a prominent mining engineer in South Africa; Louise G.; George, whose home is in Butte, in business with his father; Fred, who was an officer in the United States navy; and Josie, Charles, Bryan and Ralph, all of whom are living with their parents and attending school in Butte. The first four were born in Kansas City, Missouri, the next four in Ogden, Utah, and the last one in Butte, Montana.

Mr. Geiser is a member of the Masonic lodge in Butte, and in religious faith adheres to the Christian Scientist church. In political affairs he is independent, bestowing his suffrage on the candidates he believes best fitted for the offices they seek and are most likely to work for the good of the whole people in the performance of their official duties. He is always deeply interested in the welfare of his city and county, as he has been in that of every community in which he has lived, and at all times liberal and practical in his support of all commendable undertakings for their promotion. He has hosts of friends in Butte and elsewhere, and is regarded wherever he is known as an excellent citizen, public-spirited and progressive.

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN DAWSON. An impressive example of the hustling, up-to-date and enterprising business man of the northwest is found in Benjamin Franklin Dawson, of Glendive, proprietor of a modern and extensive establishment, and dealer in groceries, boots, shoes, tobacco, cigars, wagons and farm machinery. Like many other successful business men of Dawson county, Mr. Dawson came to the western ranges as a cowboy and remained to identify himself with the busy marts of trade and commerce. Now, the owner of a business that has grown steadily ever since its inception in 1904, he is doing his share in advancing and developing his adopted community, and is known as a representative public-spirited citizen. Mr. Dawson was born in Leavenworth, Kansas, November 25, 1860, and is a son of Andrew and Sarah (Osborn) Dawson.

Andrew Dawson was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, and there received his education in the common schools. As a young man he came west as far as Leavenworth, Kansas, where he became a pioneer and for some years was engaged in working at his trade of wheelwright. During the gold excitement, he went overland with an oxteam to Pikes Peak and Denver, Colorado, and was engaged in prospecting and mining in that city when there were but six houses there. At this time Mr. Dawson built himself a "wind wagon," in which he traveled all over that locality, and after spending some few years in Colorado returned to Leavenworth, Kansas, and engaged in building and contracting. After erecting a shingle mill on the Missouri river, near Leavenworth, he began accepting contracts from the United States government, and built army posts throughout the Chickasaw Nation and all over the west. He retired from active pursuits some time prior to his death in 1906, when he was seventy-seven years of age. His wife, a native of Missouri, survives him and makes her home in Leavenworth, and five of their seven children are also living.

The fourth in order of birth of his parents' children, Benjamin F. Dawson secured his education in the public schools of Leavenworth, and his first employment was as clerk in a dry goods store, where he was introduced to the mercantile business. In 1879 he went to California, and subsequently moved on to Oregon, where for some time he was employed as a cowboy. Later he drove cattle over the trail from Oregon through to Cheyenne, Wyoming and up into Idaho, and from Lost river, in the latter state, through to the Musselshell in Montana. He also followed the trail from Musselshell county to Rawlins, Wyoming, and from the latter place to Standing Rock, North Dakota, and later from the Rio Grande up to the Musselshell river in Montana. During the fifteen years that he acted as a cowboy with the Ryan brothers on the Montana range. Mr. Dawson had an adventurous and varied career, but during all this time carefully saved his earnings so that in 1897 he was able to engage in the cattle business on his own account. He continued to conduct a successful business in Dawson county until 1904, which year saw his advent in the general merchandise business in Glendive, where he has since been located. Mr. Dawson is a representative citizen of his section and is highly esteemed by all classes of people throughout the wide scope of territory in which he is known. He is a member of Gate City Lodge No. 37, I. O. O. F., and is a Democrat in politics and an earnest supporter of the principles of his party.

On March 2, 1898, Mr. Dawson was married to Mrs. Mae (Murphy) Gaynor, a native of Iowa, who had a daughter, Willa, and a son, Merle, by a former marriage. They have had one daughter, Frances, and all three children are residing at home. The pleasant family residence of the Dawsons is situated on Merrill avenue.

WILLIAM H. WOODRUFF. Descended from sturdy old New England and New York stock, with records of participation in the Revolutionary war in the family; taught self-reliance and persevering industry, with a scorn of circumstances, by the examples of his ancestors; learning the power of dauntless courage and indomitable will from the career of his father, who never yielded an inch to fate even when her frowns lowered most darkly over him, and feeling within himself the possession of qualities and attributes which fitted him to repeat their performances if necessary, or show the same spirit in other fields of effort, William H. Woodruff, one of the well-known druggists of Butte, has been put to the test in his own career and has stood it with high credit.

Mr. Woodruff is a native of Gold Hill, Nevada, where his life began only July 12, 1874. His eyes opened on this world in a mining camp, and he was soon to see adventures even more thrilling than the rough life and, at times, unbridled excitement of such a place. When he was but ten years of age his parents moved from Gold Hill, Nevada, to Pendleton, Oregon, making the journey through some of the wildest portions of Idaho, Washington and Oregon, traveling with teams and camping by night on the open plains, sleeping with no roof above them but the blue canopy of heaven, and daring danger into the lists against them in every hour of their daily progress. They were hunting a place for future residence, and had not already selected one, or if so, only tentatively, and this accounts for the round-about way in which they made their trip.

Mr. Woodruff is a son of Horatio E. and Ann Gertrude (Flick) Woodruff. The father was a pioneer in California in the early forties, going to that state by the isthmus route, and being on the ground when gold was discovered there in 1848, he naturally became a miner, and was a very successful one. He owned properties adjoining those of Comstock and the Fairs, and worked in conjunction with them. But when the value of his holdings was discovered he was forced out of them.

He then left California and moved to Virginia City, Nevada, and there he was employed as a clerk by one of the leading business men. Then the proprietor of the business offered to sell out to Mr. Woodruff, and the latter accepted the offer. He was firmly established in the confidence and regard of the people because of the strict uprightness and integrity which marked and governed all his dealings, and he was successful in his undertaking from the start.

His prosperity in this venture, and his excellent business management in all his affairs, enabled him to engage in other enterprises, in which, also, he was very successful. He conducted large ranches in Oregon and Idaho, and early in the sixties moved to Montana, where he was a pioneer, but inured to frontier life and fond of it. He died in Idaho in 1906 at the age of seventy-six years. The mother died at Stevensville, Montana, in 1897 at the age of fifty.

Their son William H. obtained his education at Pendleton, Oregon, being graduated from the high school there in 1889. After leaving school he secured a position with a well-known druggist in Pendleton, with whom he remained eight years, becoming an expert pharmacist at the age of nineteen. In 1897 he left Oregon and came to Montana. In this state he worked as a pharmacist in Great Falls and at Fort Benton for some years, locating in Butte in 1901. On his arrival in the city last named he secured a position with Jas. Alterton, who conducted the South Butte Pharmacy at 653 South Utah street, and was one of the successful business men of the city. A short time afterward Mr. Woodruff became the proprietor of this establishment, and he has ever since made it his leading enterprise in business, keeping its reputation up to the highest rank and pushing its trade with all his energy to the benefit of the community and his own advantage in a financial way and in the way of securing for himself the highest standing in the business circles of the city.

On May 4, 1909, Mr. Woodruff was united in marriage with Miss Katharine Ashenbach of Butte, a daughter of George and Marie Ashenbach, esteemed residents of that city. Mr. Woodruff is a Freemason of the Royal Arch degree, holding membership in Monitor Lodge No. 35, F. & A. M., in Butte, and Deer Lodge Chapter No. 3. He also belongs to the Montana State Druggists' Association. In politics he is a Socialist and in church connection a Unitarian.

Mr. Woodruff has two brothers and one sister. His brothers are: Frank, who is a resident of Spokane, Washington, and Joseph, who is an extensive rancher in Idaho. The sister is Miss Harriet Woodruff, who is teaching in a school in Spokane, Washington. Their grandfather, Warren Woodruff, was a native of Machiasport, Maine, and descended from a hero of the Revolutionary war, and the family lived in New England from early colonial days. The maternal grandfather, William Flick, was born and reared in the state of New York, and there was a prominent manufacturer of soap. He also went to California as an argonaut in the pioneer days and secured a considerable fortune in his mining operations. But he lost everything through the failure of one of the early banking institutions of the mining regions. He held high rank in the Masonic fraternity and was a man of prominence and influence in public affairs. He died at the age of ninety-two.

EDWARD BOLEVER. An essentially prominent and influential citizen of Butte, Montana, is Edward Bolever, who has been a resident of this city for the past fourteen years and who is now most successfully engaged in the real estate and insurance business, he being a member of the concern known as the Bolever-Brown Realty Company. He is a self-made man in the most significant sense of the word and in all the relations of life he has so conducted himself as to command the unalloyed confidence and esteem of his fellow citizens.

A Hoosier by birth, Edward Bolever was born in Vanderburg county, Indiana, the date of his nativity being the 18th of January, 1866. He is a son of John and Barbara (Wegel) Bolever, both of whom were born and reared in Germany, whence they immigrated to the United States. The father settled on a farm in Indiana and he was identified with agricultural operations until the time of his death. Mrs. Bolever was born in Baden Baden, Germany, and there was solemnized her marriage. Of the fourteen children born to Mr. and Mrs. Bolever, Edward was the youngest in order of birth.

Edward Bolever received his elementary educational training in the public schools of his native place. He remained at home and worked for his father until he had reached the age of eighteen years, at which time he accepted a position as clerk in the store known as the Kargas Grocery Company, at Evansville, Indiana. Two years later he located at Fort Scott, Kansas, where he engaged in the retail grocery business on his own account and whence he removed, seven years later, to Kansas City, Kansas, there likewise engaging in the retail grocery business. He continued to reside in Kansas City for the ensuing four years, at the expiration of which, in 1897, he came to Butte, here accepting a position as city salesman for Col. A. F. Bray, a wholesale grocer, in whose employ he continued for nine years. From 1906 to 1907 Mr. Bolever was in the employ of the Butte Wholesale Grocery Company and in the latter year he entered into a partnership alliance which formed the Bolever-Brown Realty Company, dealers in local properties, farm lands and insurance. The Bolever-Brown Realty Company enjoys a prosperous and extensive business and holds prestige as being one of the most prominent concerns of its kind in Butte. Mr. Bolever is a man of splendid executive ability and keen judgment and his various business dealings have all been characterized by fair and honorable methods.

In politics Mr. Bolever is a stalwart supporter of the cause of the Republican party and while he does not participate actively in local politics he gives liberally of his aid and influence in support of all measures and enterprises advanced for the good of the general welfare. In a fraternal way he is affiliated with the Woodmen of the World.

At Little Rock, Arkansas, on the 1st of February, 1893, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Bolever to Miss Susan K. Lincoln, who was born at Atchison, Kansas, on the 10th of January, 1875, whose parents are both now deceased. Mrs. Bolever has the distinction of being a member of the Lincoln family of which our martyred president was one of the notable representatives. The original progenitor of the Lincoln family in America settled in Massachusetts Bay Colony in 1632. His name was Thomas Lincoln and one of his descendants, Capt. Rufus Lincoln, great-great-grandfather of Mrs. Bolever, was a prominent and valiant soldier in the War of the Revolution. On the maternal side Mrs. Bolever traces her ancestry to stanch Scotch extraction, and after coming to America they established their home in Wisconsin. Mr. and Mrs. Bolever have no children. The Bolever home at 524 South Montana street is recognized as a center of refinement and generous hospitality and it is the scene of many attractive social gatherings.

JAMES WALTER SPEER, mayor of Great Falls, is giving of his best efforts to the advancement of civic welfare and the promotion of important enterprises in which his concern personally is simply that of a public-spirited citizen. He was born February 25, 1871, on a farm in Jo Daviess county, on the outskirts of Hanover, Illinois, and is a son of Charles and Nancy (Campbell) Speer, the former of Irish descent, and the latter of Scotch parentage.

Mr. Speer was reared to agricultural pursuits and attended school at Hanover until he was fourteen years of age, at which time he went to the home of his brother, in Sioux county, Iowa, working on the farm in summers in order that he might earn the means whereby to prosecute his studies during the winter months. When seventeen he went back home, and with the exception of one year, when he attended Monmouth College, remained there until he was twenty-one. Attaining his majority, he was made secretary-manager of the Hanover Creamery Company, which position he held for four years, and for a time was employed by the Deering Harvester Company, but in 1897 decided to study law and was enrolled at Dixon Law school at Dixon, Illinois. He was graduated from that institution in May, 1900, and in June of that year was census enumerator in his native township. Shortly thereafter he went to Sioux Falls, South Dakota, to locate, but after his admission to the bar in October of that year, came to Great Falls, Montana, which has since been his home. Forming a partnership with W. C. Danks, for a few months he practiced law, and then sold out and engaged in the real estate business, but on January 1, 1903, returned to his legal practice, which he has followed continuously ever since, with the exception of two years when he was deputy collector of customs. He served two terms as county attorney of Cascade county, and scarcely had he left that office when he was elected mayor of Great Falls by a phenomenal majority. Mr. Speer is giving his adopted city an excellent administration, his incumbency having been marked by many needed reforms. In the prime of life, with his best years still before him, and possessing a record as a citizen and public official to which not the slightest blame can attach, Mr. Speer's career of usefulness to his community is only begun, and it is safe to predict that still higher political honors await him. He has always advocated the principles of the Republican party. In the summer of 1900 he was initiated in Kavanaugh Lodge No. 36, A. F. A. M., at Elizabeth, Illinois. On June 25, 1901, he affiliated with Cascade Lodge No. 34, of Great Falls, in which he still retains membership. In 1906 he served the lodge as master. He was exalted a Royal Arch Mason March 14, 1907, in Great Falls Chapter No. 9, the grades of the Scottish Rite were conferred upon him in Butte Consistory in November, 1910, and on December 1, 1910, he was made a noble of the Mystic Shrine in Algeria Temple at Helena. In 1906 he was appointed senior grand deacon in grand lodge; the next year was elected junior grand warden, and was regularly advanced until the 1910 session, when he was chosen grand master. He is a member of the Elks and the Eagles. His business interests include a directorship in the Armstrong Ranch Company and the Montana Implement Company.

In 1904 Mayor Speer was married at Ludington, Michigan, to Miss Grace C. Shorts, the daughter of a practicing physician of that place, and to this union there have been born three children: Jenet, born November 11, 1905; James Walter, born April 4, 1910; and Kathryn C., born June 15, 1911, at Great Falls. Mrs. Speer and the children spent the winter of 1911-12 in Honolulu.

ALONZO E. ROBERTS. The most of the active career of Alonzo E. Roberts has been spent as an educator, in which field of endeavor he has become well known for his ability, energy and sterling qualities of character, but in the business life that he has later taken up as paymaster for the Cottonwood Coal Company at Stockett, Montana he has won equal recognition for his excellent business discernment and fidelity. These relations and prominent fraternal affiliations have served to make him well known throughout this state, and a pleasing personality has brought to him with his wide acquaintance a large association of true friends.

Mr. Roberts is a Canadian by nativity, born in the province of Ontario on March 8, 1870. William H. Roberts, his father was born in New York state but at the age of four he emigrated with his parents to Canada. There he grew to manhood, took up farming, and married Mary Lees, a native of Canada, but of Scotch lineage. He passed away in Canada at the age of fifty-four years but is survived by his wife who resides at Norwich, Canada. William H. and Mary (Lees) Roberts became the parents of seven children, namely: J. W. Roberts, of Great Falls, Montana; D. T. Roberts, of Manitoba, Canada; E. B. Roberts, of Ontario, Canada; John Roberts, of Saskatchewan, Canada; Alonzo E. Roberts of this review; Lew Roberts, of Calgary, Canada; and Mrs. T. F. Mills, of Medicine Hat, Canada. D. T. Roberts, the paternal grandfather of our subject, was born in New York state and was a contractor and carpenter. He lived near Buffalo where he was well known and took an active part in the public life of that section of New York during the earlier years of the last century and prior to his immigration to Canada. He died when sixty years of age. His wife was Elizabeth Wiengardner, who was born in Pennsylvania of German parents, was married in New York state and died in Canada at the age of fifty. William Lees, the maternal grandfather of Mr. Roberts, was of Scotch descent and was an early settler in Canada where he died about 1876 at the age of fifty. He married Mary Hodg, who was born in Wales in 1818 and immigrated to Canada with her parents at the age of twelve. She died there in 1902 at the advanced age of eighty-four years.

After having completed the usual common and high school course Alonzo E. Roberts continued his education as a normal school student and was graduated in 1890. He at once took up the profession of teaching at which he was engaged six years in Ontario, Canada. In 1897 he came to Great Falls, Montana, where for five years he was a teacher in the Franklin school. The next four years were spent as an instructor in the Sand Coulee public schools. Then in December, 1906, he became identified with the Cottonwood Coal Company as paymaster, which position he has continued to fill to the present time in the most satisfactory manner and in which responsible capacity he has entire charge of the company's payroll which includes over 425 employees.

At Glendora, California on December 14, 1911, Mr. Roberts was united in marriage to Miss Blanch Whitcomb, a daughter of F. W. and Jeannette Whitcomb, residents of that city. Mr. and Mrs. Roberts are members of the Methodist Episcopal church. In politics Mr. Roberts is a Republican. He is prominently identified with different fraternal orders, being a member of the blue lodge and chapter of the Masonic order and of its auxiliary branch, the Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Knights of Pythias and the Knights of the Maccabees. He has served as high priest of the Great Falls Chapter of Royal Arch Masons, and as master of Cascade Lodge No. 34, A. F. & A. M., of Great Falls, Montana. He is also a member of the Knights of Pythias and is a past grand of Rainbow Lodge, Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Great Falls. His acquirements, temperament and social qualities are such as make him a popular member of the different circles in which he mingles and all who know him esteem him highly as a man of energy, ability and honor. He stands a worthy representative of the best and progressive citizenship of Montana.

JOHN H. TOLAN is the son of George Tolan who was a native of Indiana. Like many another young man of his time, George Tolan was consumed with the fever to go west and become a pioneer. To him, at that time, Minnesota seemed the far west, in consequence of which he took up a claim in Minnesota and moved there with his young wife, Elizabeth Hunter Tolan.

Bertram H. Dunshee.

Mrs. John Tolan was born in Pennsylvania and came to Indiana with her parents when still quite a child. Together with her husband she helped clear and cultivate the plot of ground on which they took up their homestead in Minnesota. Here, on the 15th of January, 1875, their son John was born to them and here they lived, near the town of St. Peter, until the death of Mr. Tolan in 1906. After the death of her husband, Mrs. Tolan, with the pioneer blood still red in her veins, went to Missoula, Montana, to join her son. There she still lives, taking a real delight in the west that is west.

John Tolan was educated in the public schools of St. Peter, Minnesota. At the age of twenty-two, however, he too, was seized with the longings of the pioneer. His brother had preceded him to Anaconda, Montana, and entered into the mercantile business. Here John joined him in 1897 and became an assistant in his business establishment. Finding that he had no liking or aptitude for trade, young Mr. Tolan went to Kansas, in the autumn of 1899, and entered the law department of the Kansas State University situated at Lawrence. After enjoying three years of legal study and social life on "Mt. Oread," he completed his law course and returned to Anaconda.

Here, he almost at once took rank among the prominent attorneys. For two terms, he was elected county attorney on the Democratic ticket and in 1908 he was candidate for attorney general of the state. By the spring of 1909, he began to see that Missoula was destined to become the chief city of the Bitter Root valley. He had known success in Anaconda but not such success as might be attained in a larger and more thriving city. In 1907, he had married Miss Alma Deschamps the popular daughter of Mr. Gaspar Deschamps, one of the best known and most successful citizens of Missoula. In June of 1909, Mr. and Mrs. John Tolan took up their permanent residence in Missoula. To them have been born two children, Denise and John Hunter. The son, John, Jr., bears the name Hunter as a tribute to his paternal grandmother, who still forms one of the family circle.

John H. Tolan is a member of the Brotherhood of the Protective Order of Elks and a Knight of Columbus. He is a leading Democrat, a powerful attorney and an orator of no mean ability. His service as an after dinner speaker are quite in demand throughout the state. With all the honors that he has attained, Mr. Tolan's career has not yet reached its prime, he being still young in years and younger in his chosen profession.

CARL H. DOENGES. Maintaining a leading position among the contractors and lumber dealers of western Montana, Carl H. Doenges, of Thompson Falls, is recognized as one of the most progressive and prominent citizens of his section, one who has prospered in business, and who has earned success by his enterprise, natural sagacity and well-established reputation for integrity and upright dealing. Mr. Doenges was born January 31, 1872, in Auglaize county, Ohio, and is a son of Louis and Lizzie (Wagner) Doenges. His father, a native of Germany, came to the United States when about six years of age with his parents, settling in Ohio, where he has since been engaged in agricultural pursuits, in connection with which he carried on carpenter work for some years. He and his wife, who also survives and lives on the old homestead in Auglaize county, had four children, Carl H. being the third child and youngest son.

Carl H. Doenges received his education in the public schools of Ohio, and as a youth learned the trade of carpenter with his father. He remained on the home farm during his young manhood, dividing his time between tilling the soil and working at his trade, and on attaining his majority came west, locating first in California, where for two years he worked at his trade. The year 1897 saw his advent in Thompson Falls, and here he has built up a large business in the lumber line and contracting, and at all times has been identified with every public enterprise calculated to benefit the community, giving his services willingly for the public welfare. He has erected more school-houses than any other man in Sanders county, enjoys a large and lucrative clientele, and his integrity is unquestioned. In his political preferences he has been an independent Democrat since attaining his majority, served as a member of the first board of commissioners of Sanders county, and at one time acted as county treasurer to complete an unexpired term. No man stands higher in the esteem of the people of Thompson Falls, and his present leading position is a conclusive proof of what pluck, ambition and honest endeavor will accomplish. He belongs to the Thompson Falls Development League, and swears allegiance to his adopted community, refusing a number of tempting offers from other localities in the belief that his present field possesses features and opportunities not to be found in any other part of the country. Although he is a devotee of out-of-door sports, baseball being his favorite recreation, he is a great reader and in his well stocked library may be found many works of a historical nature. He holds membership in the Masons and Odd Fellows, and his religious faith is that of the Lutheran church.

BERTRAM H. DUNSHEE. If those who claim that fortune has favored certain individuals above others will but investigate the cause of success and failure it will be found that the former is largely due to the improvement of opportunity, the latter to the neglect of it. Fortunate environments encompass nearly every man at some stage of his career, but the strong man and the successful man is he who realizes that the proper moment has come, that the present and not the future holds his opportunity. The man who makes use of the Now and not the To Be is the one who passes on the highway of life others who started out ahead of him, and reaches the goal of prosperity in advance of them. It is this quality in Bertram H. Dunshee that has won him a prominent position in the mining world of Butte, where he has resided for the past fourteen years. He is assistant general superintendent of mines of the Amalgamated Copper Company, and is well known in mining circles throughout the entire northwest.

A native of the fine old Green Mountain state, Mr. Dunshee was born at Bristol, Vermont, on the 13th of April, 1857. He is a son of John and Rosina (Parmlee) Dunshee, both of whom were likewise born at Bristol, Vermont, the former on the 29th of February, 1824, and the latter on the 9th of November, 1835. The father was reared in his native place and in 1848 went west to Mexico, subsequently spending some two years in California. He returned to Vermont in 1853 and five years later moved to Wisconsin, where he was a farmer and ranch-owner for a number of years. In 1864 he made the long overland trip to Montana, where he engaged in mining and was one of the first locators in Prickley Pear Gulch, near Helena. He returned to Wisconsin in 1865, and in 1866 he took his family by the way of the Isthmus of Panama to California, where he resided until his death, which occurred in 1892, at the age of sixty-eight years. Mrs. Dunshee was summoned to the life eternal in California in 1880, at the age of forty-five years.

The first in order of birth in a family of three children, Bertram H. Dunshee received his preliminary educational training in the schools at Santa Barbara, California, later supplementing the same by a course of study in the University of California, at Berkeley, in which excellent institution he was graduated in the College of Mining as a member of the class of 1879, duly receiving his degree of Ph. B. After leaving college he was engaged in mining and milling in California and Arizona for a number of years and in 1887 he came to Montana, settling first in Madison county and later locating at Philipsburg, where he started the Bi-Metallic Quartz Mill and where he remained until 1897. In the latter year he came to Butte, where he has since maintained his home. Here he immediately became identified with mining interests and for the ensuing six years was mining superintendent for the Boston & Montana Company. When that concern was consolidated with other companies under the name of the Amalgamated Copper Mining Company, Mr. Dunshee was made assistant general superintendent of mines, a position he has held since 1903. He is well known in mining circles in this section of the state and in connection with his work is a valued member of the American Institute of Mining Engineers and the Montana Society of Engineers. His present standing as a capable business man is due entirely to his own well directed efforts.

In politics Mr. Dunshee is a stalwart Republican, and while he does not participate actively in public affairs he is a loyal citizen and is every ready to give of his aid and influence in support of all measures and movements advanced for the good of the general welfare. He is affiliated with the Silver Bow and Country clubs and devotes all his leisure time to out-of-door sports. Socially he is genial and courteous, and the popularity that comes from these qualities, together with the distinction that comes from his achievements, makes him a man among many. A thorough business man, a true friend, a jolly fellow and a gentleman,—such will describe the marked characteristics of Bertram H. Dunshee.

At Butte, on the 15th of April, 1903, Mr. Dunshee was united in marriage to Miss Fannie Bowie, a daughter of the late Dr. Clifford N. Bowie, of Philipsburg, Montana. Mrs. Dunshee's parents are both deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Dunshee have one son, Winfield Bowie, born July 25, 1908. In religious matters Mr. Dunshee attends and gives his support to the Protestant Episcopal church, of which his wife is a devout communicant.

WILLIAM PRITCHARD first saw the light of day in Mitchell county of the Hawkeye state, the date of his nativity being September 3, 1869. He received his education in the public schools of the county of his birth and also in Osage and Charles City, Iowa, and left school at the age of sixteen years. The ensuing five years until the attainment of his majority he assisted his father in the work of the farm. At that juncture he decided to see the world, believing like the Bard of Avon, that

"Home-keeping youth have ever homely wits," and desirous of seeing the northwest, he came to Montana. After traveling through the state and visiting the important places in the Treasure state, he went to Chicago and there learned the trade of plumbing and gas fitting, devoting no less than six years to acquiring a thorough mastery of this difficult and important business. In 1897 he returned to Missoula, the memory of whose charms and advantages had remained vividly with him and here secured employment at his trade, in the establishment of Willis Broadbent of this city. He subsequently transferred his activities to the Missoula Mercantile Company and took charge of the plumbing department of that concern. He remained thus employed until he made another comprehensive trip over the wonderful northwest, having in mind the selection of a suitable location in which to establish a business on his own account. After traveling through

Dakota and Minnesota, he paid Missoula the highest compliment within his power by returning to the city, which he liked better than any place he had visited and deciding to locate here after all. In 1905 he began an independent plumbing and gas fitting business in this city in association with William Berriman, who later located at Billings, Montana, after six months of partnership with the subject. Mr. Pritchard bought his partner's interest and has today a substantial, constantly growing and firmly established business. He is admirably located on one of the leading business corners of the business section of Missoula. His thorough knowledge of his business and his fine executive ability and honorable methods have procured for him much success and an enthusiastic patronage.

Mr. Pritchard is interested in the many-sided life of the community. He is independent in politics, being of that broad-minded type which esteems principle above partisanship. He is public-spirited and gives his support to all measures like to result in benefit to the whole of society. He is a Mason on his way to the attainment of the thirty-second degree and is also affiliated with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He is of that typically American product—the self-made man, for he has made his own way to success quite unassisted.

Mr. Pritchard was happily married to Miss Tillie Moen, a native of Wisconsin, and their three children are Dorothy, Lois and William, the eldest, a girl of seven, being a pupil in the public schools.

The subject's father, Richard Pritchard, a native of Wales, came to America as a young boy with his parents and located in Racine, Wisconsin. He for many years followed the calling of a sailor, but eventually left the "bounding main" and became a farmer and stock raiser in Mitchell county, Iowa, where in 1903, his demise occurred. The mother, whose maiden name was Jane Davis, also a native of Wales, survives, and makes her home at Charles City, Iowa, with her daughter, Mamie, now Mrs. Ponto. Mr. Pritchard is one of a family of five children, as follows: Roselia, now Mrs. Charles Hill, of Charles City, Iowa; Robert, assistant to the subject in his business in this city; Annie, now Mrs. L. H. Dunton, of Riceville, Iowa; Mr. Pritchard; and Mamie, now Mrs. Gus Ponto, of Charles City, Iowa.

PROF. HENRY A. DAVEE. A man of broad mental attainments and excellent executive ability, Professor Henry A. Davee, superintendent of the city schools of Lewistown, has met with well-deserved success in his professional career, and has gained distinctive recognition as one of the foremost educators of Fergus county. A son of the late Zachariah Davee, he was born, July 29, 1872, in Martinsville, Morgan county, Indiana, but spent a large part of his earlier life in Illinois.

Zachariah Davee was a native of Illinois, his birth having occurred in Martinsville, Clark county, in 1840. As a young man he spent several years in Indiana, in the town of Martinsville, but on returning to Illinois with his family took up his residence in Coles county, that state. Eventually he removed to Kansas, and there spent his last years, dying in 1908, at the age of sixty-eight years. He married Elvira King, who was born in Indiana in 1842, and died in Illinois in 1882.

The second child in a family of three children, Henry A. Davee was but three years old when his parents moved from Indiana to Illinois, which was his home during the ensuing fifteen years, when the family migrated to Kansas. He received his preliminary education in the public schools of Illinois, and later attended the Kansas Normal College at Fort Scott. Coming to Montana in 1897, Mr. Davee entered the teacher's profession, and, with the exception of one year spent as a student in the State Normal College, at Dillon, taught in the public schools for six years, meeting with good success in his work. Entering the University of Wisconsin in 1904, he was there graduated with the degree of Ph. B., and the following year was superintendent of schools at Roseburg, Oregon. Returning then to Montana, Professor Davee accepted the management of the schools at Lewistown, which under his supervision have made noteworthy advancement in various lines, new courses of study having been introduced, and newer methods of teaching, while the efficiency of each department has been increased.

Lewistown has, indeed, reason to be proud of her educational institutions, which rank favorably with any in the state. The proper housing of the school children of the city is being solved by the Lewistown board of education, which is making a thorough study of the best way of heating, ventilating, and obtaining the best possible sanitary conditions for its school buildings, the city being perfectly willing to spend money for the benefit of children. The corps of instructors in the schools are men and women of talent and culture, nine-tenths of them being college or normal school graduates, and many of them specialists in their particular studies. A thorough training is given in the fundamental branches of learning, while special instruction in music, art, domestic economy and science, and in mechanics, the industrial department, with its well equipped shops being an important feature of the industrial training given to the boys. The new Garfield school building is one of the best in the county, and the new Lincoln school building is not surpassed in the beauty of its architecture, its furnishings, and its equipments by any building of a similar nature in the state. In the domestic science department of the schools the girls are taught how to use thimble and needle; the various kinds of stitches, and how to make them; how to use a sewing machine; the art of cutting and fitting patterns; the making of underwear and dresses; the value of foodstuffs, table setting and serving; and the cooking of plain and fancy dishes; the aim being to help prepare the girls for home makers and keepers, many of them becoming competent cooks and dressmakers through the lessons first learned in the schoolroom.

A staunch Democrat in politics Professor Davee takes much interest in public matters, but is not an office seeker. On November 5, 1912, he was elected state superintendent of public instruction on the Democratic ticket. Fraternally he is a member of the Ancient Free and Accepted Order of Masons; of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, in which he has passed all the chairs; and of the Modern Woodmen of America, in which he has filled all the offices. He also belongs to the Outlook Club, of which he is now president. He is very loyal to the state of his adoption, and says that Montana spells opportunity to the man who is honest, and willing to work.

Professor Davee married, December 24, 1902, at Chinook, Montana, Mabel Flinders, daughter of John and Mary Flinders, and into the household thus established two children have made their appearance, Chalmer and William Robert.

GEORGE HIRSHBERG. The Hirshberg Mercantile Company, at Conrad, Montana, is known as the largest and most complete department store in Teton county. It was established by Joseph, Julius, George and Edward Hirshberg in 1904 and since that time has been under the direct management of George Hirshberg. Mr. George Hirshberg is an enterprising business man, whose initiative and energy have won him a high place in the business world of his community, as well as in the esteem of his fellow citizens. He is financially interested in the Hirshberg Mercantile Company and is connected with other business projects of local importance.

George Hirshberg was born in Germany on August 8, 1880, and is a son of Gustave Hirshberg, now deceased, but a prominent banker in his day in Hohen-salza, Germany. The wife and mother, whose maiden name was Martha Loewensohn, still lives. Three children were born to these parents, and George Hirshberg was the youngest of the number. He was educated in the public schools of his native place up to the fourteenth year of his life, when he entered upon an apprenticeship to the druggist's trade. Three years later, in 1897, he immigrated to America and went direct to Choteau, Montana, where he was for a time in the employ of his uncles, Joseph and Julius Hirshberg, learning the details of the mercantile business under their direction.

Joseph and Julius Hirshberg were both born and reared in Germany and they came to America in early life, settling at Fort Benton, Montana, in the early seventies. They became interested in merchandising and in the live stock business, and opened mercantile branches at various places in the state, including Sun River, Choteau, Robare, and Dupuyer. The establishment at Choteau is known under the name of Joseph Hirshberg & Company. In 1904 the firm purchased the F. D. Kingsbury store at Conrad and continued the business as the Hirshberg Mercantile Company, and this concern is under the management of the subject of this review, as set forth in a preceding paragraph. In recent years Mr. George Hirshberg became interested in farming and acquired about one thousand acres of land, installing an irrigation system which has proved a great success. The farm is located near Aldrich Springs.

The Hirshberg brothers, while never active in political affairs, have ever been loyal and public-spirited in their civic attitude and have always contributed liberally to all public and charitable institutions. They were prominent factors in the early development of this section of the state and formerly were engaged extensively in sheep raising in Teton county. Both are members of the time honored Masonic order and Julius is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Elks, K. of P., and the Woodmen.

On June, 1909, in the city of Minneapolis, Minnesota, was solemnized the marriage of George Hirshberg to Miss Sarah Ginsberg, a daughter of Morris Ginsberg, who is a prominent real estate dealer of that city. Mrs. Hirshberg was born in the state of New York, but was reared and educated in Minneapolis. A son, Gustave Joseph, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Hirshberg on August 12, 1912.

Politically Mr. Hirshberg is an uncompromising member and supporter of the Republican party, and in religious matters he and his wife are devout members of the Jewish Reformed church.

JAMES SHELTON, a prominent real estate dealer in Valier, Montana, was born on the 25th of November, 1875. He is the son of George Wesley and Helen (Collier) Shelton, both natives of Indiana, and now deceased. The father settled in Missouri in 1866, or thereabouts, there engaging in farming, in which business he passed his life. He was a Civil war veteran, and his death took place at Stanford, Missouri, in January, 1902, when he was in his sixty-fourth year. The mother passed away at Maryville, Missouri, in 1880, when she was thirty-one years of age. They became the parents of five children, James being the third born. He was educated in the schools of Maryville to the age of eighteen, soon thereafter becoming engaged in the real estate business. In 1897 he first came to Montana, where he was engaged in various capacities, until December, 1909, when he came to Valier, and here engaged in the land and real estate business. He has continued in the business, prospering in accordance with his efforts, and has acquired a goodly share of lands and other property in the city and county.

Mr. Shelton is a Republican, although he takes no active part in the operations of the party in this locality, and he is a member of the Presbyterian church. He was married in 1908 to Miss Dora Ethel Bishop, the daughter of George W. Bishop of St. Vincent, Minnesota. Three children have been born to them: George Sheridan, Dorothy Ellen and Gladys.

COLIN N. WARD. It is merit that wins recognition for men of any trade, calling or profession, and it has been merit that has enabled Colin N. Ward, the present surveyor of Teton county, Montana, to secure the confidence and high standing he enjoys among the people of that section. He is a young man, as years go, vigorous, industrious and ambitious, and though he has been a resident of Teton county barely five years, he has been placed in charge of responsible duties there and has discharged them with efficiency.

Mr. Ward was born July 11, 1887, at Oscoda, Michigan, a son of John Ward, who also is a native of that state but has been a merchant at Fort Benton, Montana, since 1897, a member of the firm of Ward & Morrison. John Ward was married in Michigan to Flora Campbell and of the six children born to their union, Colin N. Ward is second in order of birth. Through both paternal and maternal ancestors Mr. Ward inherits sturdy Scotch blood.

His education was begun in Michigan and was continued at Great Falls and at Fort Benton, Montana, his high school studies having been completed at the latter city at the age of twenty. After leaving school he took employment with the Teton County Operative Reservoir & Canal Company for the purpose of learning surveying and civil engineering. After three years with this company he removed to Choteau in 1909 for permanent residence and became assistant to George Weed, then surveyor of Teton county. In the fall of 1910 Mr. Ward was elected to the office of county surveyor and has since been engaged in the discharge of its duties. In political views he is aligned with the Republican party but takes no active part in its work. As the owner of 320 acres of land near Brady, Teton county, he is further interested in the development of this section of Montana and warmly supports any project which has that aim in view. Young men of ability and true worth are welcomed in any community, and it is as a type of such citizenship that Mr. Ward is mentioned herein as one of the representative men of Choteau.

JAMES M. HINKLE. The bar of Butte, Montana, is made up of men of more than ordinary intellect, many of whom have come from the older states and with years of professional experience behind them, well equipped in every way to serve clients, whatever may be the subject of contention. To be, then, recognized as a foremost member of such a body proves the possession of legal talents of a high order. Perhaps there is no lawyer in this section of Montana whose name is better known than James M. Hinkle, who has been a permanent resident of Butte since the spring of 1897. He was born in Jackson county, Indiana, December 21, 1852, and is the son of David and Nancy (Day) Hinkle.

David Hinkle was a native of Indiana and it is probable that his ancestry was German. The Hinkles have been long lived, the grandfather surviving to the age of ninety years and the father rounding out a useful life at eighty-five, his death taking place in 1903. In early manhood he married Nancy Day, who was born in Louisiana and died in Iowa, in 1890. In 1854 David Hinkle moved with his family from Jackson county, Indiana, to Jefferson county, Iowa, and engaged there in farming during the remainder of his active life. A few years before his death he moved to Wayne county, Iowa, where he lived during the remainder of his life. There were three children born to David and Nancy Hinkle, Susan A., George W., and James M., of whom Susan was the oldest and James M., the subject of this article, the youngest. George W. took up the profession of medicine and James M., that of law.

James M. Hinkle obtained his education, after passing the public schools, in Axline University and Parsons College, the latter being situated at Fairfield, Iowa, and during his vacations and afterwards he taught school, some fifteen terms in all. He was ambitious to become a lawyer and directed all his efforts toward that end. While engaged in teaching he utilized his spare moments in studying the preliminary law books and afterward entered the law office of the Hon. James F. Wilson, United States Senator from Iowa, at Fairfield, Iowa. He was admitted to the bar in 1880 and at once entered into a law partnership with Rollin J. Wilson, son of Senator Wilson, under the firm name of Wilson & Hinkle, which said law partnership continued about sixteen years, until Mr. Hinkle withdrew and moved to Butte. The firm of Wilson & Hinkle soon sprang into prominence after it was formed and was a pleasant and profitable partnership during the whole time of its existence. During the most of that time they were the attorneys for all of the railroads running through the county, the Burlington, the Rock Island and the Fort Madison and Des Moines railroad systems. Mr. Hinkle's health having given way to some extent, in 1897 he resigned his position as attorney for the several railroad companies named and came to Montana to regain his health, locating in Butte, where he has been engaged in the active practice of his chosen profession and has regained his health.

He first came to Montana in 1890, in connection with the noted contested "will case" of Andrew J. Davis, a millionaire, who died in the spring of that year. Mr. Hinkle represented an illegitimate daughter of Mr. Davis in said matter at first, until he effected a compromise for her with Erwin Davis, of New York, a brother of the deceased, by which an annuity was settled on the daughter and her mother, who lived in Texas. Mr. Hinkle was then retained by Erwin Davis as one of the counsel in said matter in connection with the various litigations relating to the case. In the interests of his clients he spent much of his time in Montana prior to his permanently locating in Butte. Andrew J. Davis had been so well known in Montana as a financier, on account of the millions of dollars in value of his estate, the case excited great interest throughout the United States, and the best legal talent was employed by the litigants. It reflects credit to Mr. Hinkle's ability as a lawyer for the manner in which he performed his part in said litigations.

He was also connected with the litigation in the noted Cochrane "will case" in Texas in 1910, where he took up the fight for a young lady in California, who claimed to be an heir, whose right to share in said estate was ignored and contested by the executor and other heirs, and he succeeded in winning out for her and establishing her right thereto, which meant a fortune to her. In this case he was pitted against some of the leading lawyers from New York and other places in the east who were representing different heirs, all of whom were joined together to defeat Mr. Hinkle's client.

While he is a fighter for the rights and interests of his clients, yet he maintains and practices true ethics of the profession, is true to his clients, courteous to the court and respectful to the members of the legal fraternity.

In Fairfield, Iowa, October 31, 1882, Mr. Hinkle was married to Miss Alna B. Young, a native of Fairfield, and a daughter of William and Sarah (Kirkpatrick) Young, both natives of Indiana. They have two children: Clara, who is now Mrs. Earl T. Gilbert, residing at Pueblo, Colorado; and Fred R., who has adopted journalism and is connected with the Butte Standard, at Butte, Montana. He married Miss Hazel Gindrup, and has one daughter, Marie Willette, born October 15, 1910.

James M. Hinkle

Mr. Hinkle is a Republican in politics and a loyal party man, but has accepted no public office since coming to Montana. While living at Fairfield, Iowa, a city of about six thousand inhabitants, the two great parties were about equally divided and for several years the Democrats had control in city affairs. In order to have certain reforms brought about the leading Republicans determined to make an effort to elect a popular man to the mayoralty, one who might be supported by both parties on account of personal reasons. When the subject was presented to Mr. Hinkle and he found that he was the one whom the Republicans desired to nominate for that office, he demurred and would not consent to be nominated for the reason that he was so occupied in his private law practice that he felt that he could not devote enough time to the interests of the city if elected, but during his absence from the city he was nominated for that office and was elected by about two-thirds of the votes of the city, which of course required a great many Democratic votes to make such a majority. Immediately assuming the duties of mayor he inaugurated and introduced such reforms in the management of city affairs that showed his ability as a public servant in the interest of economical government and made such a successful showing and record that he was renominated for a second term, and at that election there were only seven voted against him, which speaks volumes for him as a public officer and a popular man.

Mr. Hinkle is both a Mason and an Odd Fellow, and treasures his fraternal relationship in both organizations.

JAMES HOLLAND. In every public undertaking, the success of the enterprise is due to the loyal leadership and disinterested service of some one or more citizens. Montana has been fortunate in the quality of her citizenship, that it has produced the leaders when required. Communities and cities like the state at large must depend for progress upon those who are willing to bear the burdens of public trust and responsibility. James Holland has been such a citizen of Havre, and besides his successful career in business has done much to identify his name with the civic history of the city and vicinity.

Mr. Holland was born in Jersey City, New Jersey, May 30, 1854, and was the oldest of eight children born to Martin and Margaret (McMahon) Holland. The father, a native of Ireland, who came to America in 1847, first settled in Jersey City and in 1875 moved out to Nebraska, settling at Friend, where he died at the age of seventy-nine. He was a successful lumber dealer. The mother, who was also born in Ireland, crossed the ocean and settled at Jersey City in 1847, and was married there on July 23, 1852. The father and mother lived to celebrate their golden wedding in their home at Friend, Nebraska. The mother passed away at Omaha, July 11, 1911, aged eighty-one, and both she and her husband now rest at Friend, Nebraska.

James Holland spent most of his youth at Pontiac, Illinois, where he attended the public schools and was graduated from the high school with the class of 1873. He assisted his parents at home until he was twenty-one, and when he embarked on his own career it was without capital or any influence to promote his success except his own efforts and energetic character. From school he had become apprentice to a blacksmith, serving three years at Pontiac, and later working a similar time as journeyman. In 1877 he moved to Deadwood, South Dakota, and established a blacksmith shop of his own for two years, and from there moved to Friend, Nebraska, where his parents lived, and was in the blacksmithing and carriage manufacturing business there five years. During this time he was married. His next move was to Broken Bow, Nebraska, where he engaged in the hardware and implement business. He was a prosperous merchant of that town for sixteen years; was a member of Governor Boyde's staff 1898 to 1899; was admitted to the Nebraska bar in 1891, and during the last two years of his residence there had served as superintendent of the Industrial School, under appointment for Governor Holcomb.

Mr. Holland became a resident of Montana in 1897 and during the first seven years was proprietor of a hardware and lumber business at Gebo, known as the Holland Lumber & Hardware Company. Finally, selling out he moved to Havre, where he has resided since the fall of 1904. Here he established a department store under the name of the Holland Mercantile Company, and did a fine business until the disastrous fire of 1905 swept the town, and he was nearly financially ruined. Since that time he has been engaged in the undertaking and real estate business, and has regained the ground lost. He has put on the market several additions to Havre, among them being University Place, and he has taken a very active part in the upbuilding of this city.

Mr. Holland was the organizer of the Havre Industrial Association and its president four years. Probably his most distinctive service to this vicinity was given in his capacity as chairman of the county reorganization committee, the principal work of which was the creation of the new county of Hill from old Chouteau. He made many friends by his work in this capacity and their appreciation of his services has often denominated him as the brains, heart and shoulders of the movement. In politics he is a Democrat of the radical progressive brand, one of W. J. Bryan's most ardent admirers and has been very influential in the party's work.

As a friend of the schools, he has been a member of the Havre board of education practically ever since coming to this city, and from his own experience believes that industrial education should be taken up in our common schools, that every boy is entitled to a trade, thereby giving him something that cannot be taken away from him between Saturday night and Monday morning. Mr. Holland feels that by doing this we make the boy feel independent. He knows that if he is broke today he can get remunerative employment tomorrow and the temptation of raising a check or appropriating some one's property is removed, thereby cheating our jails and penitentiaries.

Fraternally he is a member of the Elks club at Havre, the Modern Woodmen of America of Havre, and the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the Royal Highlanders of Nebraska. His church is the Catholic.

Mr. Holland was married at Friend, Nebraska, October 20, 1879, to Miss Mary Gavin, daughter of A. L. Gavin, a native of Canada. Mr. Holland always refers to his wife as his better two-thirds, she being in fact a helpmate. Eleven children have been born to their marriage, six of them being deceased, and the five now living are Edith, James G., who is city clerk of Havre and also associated with his father in business, Joseph A. and Josephine, twins, and Dorothy.

JAMES R. WHITE, postmaster of Kalispell for the past twelve years, was born in Boulder, Colorado, on April 16, 1877. He is the son of Fidillar and Mary (Flood) White, natives of Illinois, and Ontario, Canada, respectively. Fidillar White was born in Nashville, Illinois, and died in Kalispell, Montana, at the age of sixty. He was a millwright in his early years and in later life engaged in stock-raising on the Little Missouri in Montana. He was a Civil war veteran, who served in Company G of the Fifty-fifth Ohio Infantry and participated in a number of engagements. He was with Sherman on his march to the sea, and served throughout the war. As a young man, prior to his marriage, he served as a ship's carpenter on a merchant vessel between New Orleans and Liverpool. On one trip when they returned to New Orleans they were captured by Confederates and made prisoners. They made their escape and being picked up by a Federal gunboat made their way to New York. Mr. White returned home to visit his mother, after which he enlisted in the Union service, and fought throughout the remainder of the war. He was a member of the G. A. R. at the time of his death. Mrs. White survived him and is now a resident of Kalispell. When she was twenty years old she came to Illinois from Canada and taught school in that state, later removing to Colorado, where she met and married her husband in 1876.

James White was the only child of his parents. He was educated in the schools of South Dakota and Kalispell, graduating from the high school of the latter place in 1897. On leaving school he took up clerical work, and was also associated with his parents in the restaurant business which they conducted for a time in Kalispell. In 1900 Mr. White was appointed assistant postmaster, in which capacity he served for a year and a half, and on June 2, 1902, was appointed to the office of postmaster by Theodore Roosevelt. He was reappointed in Roosevelt's second administration and was appointed a third time when Mr. Taft came into office, making twelve years in all that he has served his city. Under his regime, the office has maintained a high standard of service, and many improvements have been inaugurated as a result of his long and careful attention to the demands of the public. During his incumbency the office has advanced from the third to the second class, with city delivery, rural free delivery, postal savings bank, and the parcel post.

Mr. White is a Republican, but not more than ordinarily active in political affairs. He is a member of the Elks of Kalispell, the Kalispell Club, and is also a member of the Volunteer Fire Department of the city for the past twelve years. He is a member of the Roman Catholic church and of the Knights of Columbus.

Mr. White was married on October 20, 1909, in St. Paul, Minnesota, to Miss Nellie Ahearn, daughter of John Ahearn of Minnesota. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. White, one which died in infancy and John Russell White, born June 29, 1912.

DR. ALBERT B. CUTLER, who has been established in Kalispell since 1897, is a native of the state of Indiana, born in La Porte in November, 1857. He is the son of Dr. D. E. and Adelia S. (Gregg) Cutler, both of whom are still living in Osage, Iowa. The father was still engaged in active practice of his profession in Osage up until a few years ago, and he was one of the early dentists of his day. He is now eighty-four years of age. The mother of Doctor Cutler, of this review, is enjoying good health, although in her seventy-fourth year. They were the parents of three children: Albert B.; Morris L., also a doctor, who is now deceased, and who was located in St. Paul for many years; Mrs. Chauncy Burch, living in Sioux Falls, South Dakota.

The early life of Doctor Cutler was passed in the schools of Osage, and he later took a medical course at Keokuk, Iowa, followed by a course in dentistry, and later took a term at the Philadelphia Dental College; he also received expert instruction under the care of his father, who was regarded as one of the leading dentists of his time. In 1897 Doctor Cutler came to Montana, and almost immediately thereafter opened offices in Kalispell, where he has conducted a very successful and ever increasing practice since that time. He is known for a skillful and competent dentist, and has won the confidence of the public along those lines. In 1911 Doctor Cutler was joined by Doctor Bughee, another competent and trustworthy member of the dental profession, and together they are engaged in their well earned practice.

Doctor Cutler is one of the prominent men of Kalispell, and is well known to a wide circle of friends in and about the city. He is a leader in fraternal circles holding membership with the Masonic order, the Knights of Pythias, the Woodmen of the World, the Maccabees and the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. He has been a member of the council of Kalispell and was president of the council in 1903. He is a member of the Christian church, the faith in which he was reared. Doctor Cutler is especially fond of fine horses, and is the owner of one of the fastest Morgan stallions in the United States.

In June, 1898, Doctor Cutler was united in marriage at Kalispell to Miss Laura V. Ball of this city. Two children have been born to them:—Erwin B. and Alene, both attending school here.

Dr. Earl V. Z. Cutler, eldest son of Dr. A. B. Cutler, was a graduate of the Iowa City Dental College, and is now a prominent dentist in Osage City, Iowa. The second son, Harold B., who is a graduate of George Washington Law School, is now a prominent attorney at Lewistown, Montana. He was born in Osage City, Iowa.

GEORGE E. HURD is a member of the firm of Hurd & Lewis, leading attorneys of Glasgow and prominent in business circles of the city and county. Mr. Hurd has been identified with the progress of Glasgow since 1897, and he at first filled the more humble position of a telegraph operator, the while he finished up his law studies, preparatory to taking up his profession.

Mr. Hurd was born in Kent county, Delaware, on July 11, 1872, and is the son of James H. and Martha (Godwin) Hurd, both natives of Kent county. The father was a veteran of the Civil war, giving service in Company H of the Delaware Infantry. He was a farmer by occupation, and lived a quiet and uneventful life, sufficiently prosperous to afford his children excellent educational advantages. He died at his home in 1908, ten years after the passing of the wife and mother, whose death occurred in 1898. They were the parents of six children, of which number one is deceased. They are: Charles H., prominently known as a ranchman of Valley county, Montana; W. Walton, liveryman and rancher, of Glasgow; Henry H., a merchant of Glasgow; Elizabeth, the wife of Edward R. Knotts, of Kent county, Maryland; and George E., who is the youngest of the family.

The public schools of Kent county afforded Mr. Hurd his early educational training, which was followed by a course in Dickman College, a preparatory school of Carlyle, Pennsylvania, after which he entered Amherst College, from which he was graduated with the class of 1896, receiving his degree of A. B., after which he attended Harvard University in 1896 and 1897, specializing in law. During his school days at home in Kent county, Mr. Hurd had learned telegraphy as a pastime, and this accomplishment served him to good purpose at the close of his college career. When he had completed his studies in the east, Mr. Hurd determined to see something of the west, and was advised by his brother, who is engaged in the ranch business in Valley county, to come to Montana. Arriving here, he was happily impressed by the opportunities offered by the state, and as he was without means and at the same time being of an independent turn of mind, the young man put his knowledge of telegraphy to use, while he finished up his law studies and arranged to enter on the practice of his profession. He took a position as a telegrapher in Glasgow in 1897 and in a short time was made agent of the station, a position in which he continued until 1900 when he was admitted to the bar of Montana. From the beginning of his professional career Mr. Hurd has enjoyed a pleasing success, and has won a prestige and prominence of an exceptionally high order in the years that have elapsed. In 1902 Mr. Hurd was elected to the office of mayor, having the honor of being the first mayor of Glasgow, and he served three terms in succession, resigning the office in 1907 owing to the press of local business. In 1908 Mr. Hurd formed a partnership with H. M. Lewis, and the firm is known as Hurd & Lewis. Mr. Hurd has specialized as a trial lawyer, and takes the keenest delight in his work in the court room. His ability in that phase of his work is well known, and in 1911 he was appointed special prosecutor for the state, by action of the state legislature. Mr. Hurd is a Democrat in politics and is active in the interests of the party. He has achieved some fame as a stump speaker during political campaigns. He is a director in the Glasgow National Bank, and is the owner of a pleasant home in the city, as well as other valuable city property. While Mr. Hurd was practically without means when he came to Montana, he has, by the exercise of his splendid natural ability and the application of his traits of determination and integrity of the highest order, built up a standing, both professional and social, that is unsurpassed in the city.

J. D. Wynn

Mr. Hurd is a man of a kindly and cheerful disposition, and one of his greatest pleasures is the extended motoring tours he makes through the state from time to time with his family, the length of the trip being governed only by the time he is able to spare from his business.

In 1900 Mr. Hurd was united in marriage with Miss Mary E. Hargadina, of Felton, Delaware, and one son, Robert H., has been born to them. They make frequent trips to their former eastern home, but the charms of western life never permit them to make extended visits, both being devoted to Montana and its many pleasing qualities.

HUGH D. GRANT. A well-known citizen of Anaconda, Montana, is Hugh D. Grant, the owner and proprietor of a blacksmith shop there, who has found in an industrial career ample opportunity for good citizenship, a large experience, successful effort and for the development of skill. He was born December 21, 1870 in Canada, and lived there until he was about seventeen years of age, acquiring his education in the public schools of his locality. In the meantime he served a three years' apprenticeship at the blacksmith trade and in that employment earned his first money while yet a boy. Having mastered his trade, he set out to make his own way in the world and passed over the border into the New England states, locating first in Massachusetts, where the most of eight years was spent in his occupation, the remainder of the time having been passed in New Hampshire. He then came west and for eighteen months worked at his trade at Aspen, Colorado. Following that he came to Anaconda, Montana, where he has since resided except during two years spent in Oregon. The first year here he worked on a salary and then he started in business for himself. After one year he took his former employer as a partner, which association was continued two years, or until Mr. Grant sold out and went to Oregon. The call of Montana brought him back at the end of two years, however, and once more he opened up business independently in Anaconda, this time to remain. He has been successful. Horseshoeing is his specialty and he is an expert in this line. In a case in his shop he has on exhibition nine samples of different kinds of horseshoes, each representing Mr. Grant's own handicraft and skill. There are to be seen the plain grab toe, square toe, toe weight, side weight, the famous plain bevel, the Memphis shoe and other styles of horseshoes, all of which indicates that the maker is a thorough master of his trade. Excellency should be the aim of everyone, whatever the calling, and that has been the aim for which Mr. Grant has persistently striven. He speaks from his own experience when he says that Montana affords more and better opportunities for the young man of worth than probably does any other state in the Union; that here honesty and honor prevail; and that here also any man may realize his expectations if he labors to fulfill them.

Mr. Grant is sixth in a family of eight children. Alpin Grant, his father, who was born in Canada, gave his active years to agricultural pursuits and died in his native country in March, 1910 at a ripe old age. He was a devout Christian and a member of the Presbyterian church. In Canada he was married to Margaret McDonald, who survives him and still resides there. James D. Grant, a brother of our subject, resides in Anaconda and is the only other member of the family located in Montana.

In March, 1892, in the state of New Hampshire was solemnized the marriage of Hugh D. Grant and Bessie McLaren, the latter a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John McLaren of Canada. Their union has been blessed by two daughters and a son, as follows: Essie K., who has completed her schooling and is proficient in music, playing both the violin and piano; Muriel R., now a high school student; and John A., a pupil in the grades. Both Mr. and Mrs. Grant are members of the Presbyterian church and the latter is a member of the Ladies' Aid Society and takes an active interest in church work. Mr. Grant is a member of the Masonic order and the Woodmen of the World, and in politics is a Republican. Though he takes no active interest in political affairs he believes it the duty of every citizen to exercise his right of franchise carefully and faithfully. He enjoys fishing and hunting, and the race track and a good boxing match are always of interest to him. In his home is a private library which indicates that Mr. Grant is an extensive reader and the books on its shelves show that his taste runs to good literature only. It is men of Mr. Grant's character that Montana wants and welcomes as citizens.

JAMES D. WYNN. As the incumbent of the responsible office of sheriff of Dawson county, James D. Wynn is showing qualifications which have gained him a reputation for executive ability and absolute fidelity to the demands of whatever duties he assumes. A resident of the county since 1898, although a young man he has had a varied and active career, and has attained his present high position through the recognition of his worth and ability by his fellow citizens. Mr. Wynn is a native of Colorado, and was born June 16, 1876, a son of John and Mary (Allen) Wynn, of Cass county, Virginia.

John Wynn was born in 1837, and as a young man worked at farming. At the outbreak of the Civil war he enlisted in a Virginia regiment, and served in the Confederate army until the close of hostilities, when he returned to his Cass county property. He was married in Virginia, and some time after the birth of his first child removed to Kentucky, where he continued to farm for a number of years. Later he moved to Missouri, but after a short period spent in agricultural pursuits there, located in Colorado and engaged in prospecting and mining, becoming the owner of a mine and a valuable farm and acting as foreman for a cattle company. Subsequently he went to the state of Texas and later to Indian Territory, now Oklahoma, and there the last years of his life were spent, his death occurring in 1907. He was a Democrat in politics and in religious belief adhered to the faith of the Methodist Episcopal church, of which his widow, who survives him and makes her home in Oklahoma, is also a member. Of their nine children, six are still living: Calla, the wife of Thomas J. Robinson; Emmett L.; Lillie, the wife of James Daniels; Benjamin; James D. and Albert.

James D. Wynn began to attend school in his native state and completed his education in the schools of Fort Worth, Texas. In the spring of 1898 he came to Montana, locating at Wibaux, where he engaged in the saddlery and harness business with his brother, Emmett L., under the firm name of Wynn Brothers, and this association continued until 1903. In that year Mr. Wynn entered the employ of Pierre Wibaux, with whom he continued one year in the cattle business, and after spending the same length of time as a cowboy on the range, engaged in the butcher business at Wibaux. He was subsequently appointed a deputy sheriff under Sheriff George Williams, and in November, 1911, succeeded Mr. Williams as sheriff of Dawson county, an office which he has since filled to the entire satisfaction of his fellow citizens. He is fully entitled to the confidence and esteem in which he is universally held, and is proving one of the most popular officials Dawson county has had. In political matters he is a Democrat.

On October 4, 1900, Mr. Wynn was married to Miss Myrtle J. Nation, who was born in Missouri, daughter of John and Mary Nation, and to this union there have been born two daughters, Mary Clementine and Lillian Gertrude. Mr. Wynn maintains a comfortable residence in Wibaux, although his official duties demand his presence in his office in the court house at Glendive.

JOSEPH W. MUELLER, president of the Northwestern Bottling Works of Butte, and one of the enterprising young business men of that city, was born in Menasha, Wisconsin, on May 25, 1877, and is a son of William and Nettie (Groff) Mueller, the former a native of Koln (Cologne), Germany, who was born in 1852, and came to this country with his parents in his childhood. The family located at Menasha, Wisconsin, where the father remained thirty-five years. He followed engineering for a number of years, and also served for a time as chief of the Menasha fire department. He is now living retired at Laurel, Montana. The mother, whose maiden name was Nettie Groff, was born in Hungary, and came to this country at an early age. She was married to Mr. Mueller in Wisconsin, and died in Billings, Montana, on December 31, 1907, at the age of fifty-six years.

Joseph W. Mueller received a high school education in his native town, and after his graduation came to Butte and entered the employ of the Centennial brewery as a clerk. From this position he rose by rapid promotion on the merit he demonstrated to that of secretary of the company. He remained with the brewery nine years and two months, then decided to try his hand in business for himself.

With this end in view, on September 1, 1907, he bought the Northwestern Bottling Works on West Park street, No. 130, but soon afterward realized that he needed a better location and a more complete equipment, and bought the lot at 320 South Montana street for their enlarged development and greater convenience. On this lot he erected an up-to-date plant of ample dimensions and provided it with everything required for its purposes, the machinery being of the most approved modern types, the sanitary arrangements being the best known to present day development in the line of work to be done, and the arrangement of the factory meeting every requirement of convenience and comfort for those employed in or doing business with it.

Mr. Mueller saw the needs of the case and provided for them. His enterprise has been rewarded with a volume of profitable business that has passed far beyond his expectations and raised him to the first rank among the business men of the city. His plant is the most extensive and complete of its kind in the state, and its output and the demands on its facilities are commensurate with its magnitude, and often go beyond that. The trade has found him ready to meet all requirements at short notice, and seems to have concluded that his factory is equal to any demand that may be made upon it. He meets this faith and justifies it by supplying in the vigor and thorough system of his management what he lacks in facilities of production and delivery, never being behind the necessities of the day as it passes, or failing to supply the wants of his patrons at the hour of appointment, however short the notice.

Mr. Mueller was married in Butte, on October 4, 1905, to Miss Kathrynne O'Connor, a daughter of Peter and Mary (Crane) O'Connor. No children have been born of the union of Mr. and Mrs. Mueller, and the perpetuation of the family name and record is left to Mr. Mueller and his brother Alex, who was born in Menasha, Wisconsin, on May 25, 1887, and is now a resident of Butte. They have also one sister, Jennie, who is the wife of Benjamin G. Schneider, of Laurel, Montana, where she is well known and held in high regard.

Mr. Mueller belongs to the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the United Travelers' Association, the Sons of Hermann and the Butte Business Men's Association. He is a Catholic in religious faith and a Democrat in politics. He was a member of the city council as alderman from the Eighth Ward from May, 1910, to May, 1912. He is an enthusiastic hunter and fisherman, and an ardent supporter of all outdoor sports and amusements. His popularity extends throughout Butte, Silver Bow county and a large extent of the surrounding country, all parts of the section being filled with friends who admire him and have influence to make their admiration effective in practical ways if he should ever desire them to do it.

ALBERT J. ROBERTS was born June 11, 1867, at Central, a small mining town in northern Michigan. His father, Philip Roberts, and his mother, Elizabeth Hamlin, who came to America in the eventful days preceding the Civil war, were of English parentage. Mr. Roberts' home life and environment were good. His early education was received in the public schools of his native village. At the age of thirteen he was obliged, on account of the death of his father, to leave school and find employment in order to help support the home. Later, however, he attended Albion college, at Albion, Michigan, from which institution he received in the year 1896 the A. B. degree. After completing his work at Albion he went to Europe for further study and travel. While abroad he pursued courses at Halle and Leipzig, Germany, and at the Sorbonne, Paris, France.

Mr. Roberts came to Montana in September, 1898. He taught one year at Hamilton. Since then he has been connected with the public schools of the city of Helena, first as teacher of history, but since 1907 as principal of the high school. It is not necessary to mention his standing and influence as an instructor and organizer. To the people of Helena his work speaks for itself.

Moreover Mr. Roberts' professional achievements have received splendid recognition throughout the state of Montana. In December, 1911, he was elected president of the Montana State Teachers' Association. At the same time he was made president of the Montana branch of the American School Peace League. He is also one of the associate editors of the Inter Mountain Educator, the official school paper of the state of Montana. He has served also as president of the State High School Athletic Association, and as director of the State High School Debating League. There is indeed no movement which favors the betterment of the physical, mental and moral life of the state with which he is not actively identified.

Mr. Roberts was married in 1907 to Miss Willa M. Wicks, of Emporia, Kansas. There are two boys in the family, Albert Wicks, born July 21, 1908, and Philip Montgomery, born October 29, 1911.

Mr. Roberts owns property in Helena, and is deeply interested in the business prosperity of the city.

WILLIAM H. MALONEY, the well-known assistant county attorney of Silver Bow county, Montana, is recognized as one of the able lawyers of the city of Butte. When he was a small boy he dreamed of sometime becoming a lawyer, and his happiest visions were of battles fought in the court-room, in which he was always triumphant. His boyhood dream has come near to realization, for he has been very successful. He won the place that he now occupies with difficulty, for he was unable to devote himself wholly to the study of law, only giving to it his leisure moments. He never faltered, however, in his fixed ambition, and it is fortunate for the bar of Silver Bow county that he was of so determined a character. He is now only a young man, but while possessing those valuable gifts which youth alone possesses by right, enthusiasm and ardent loyalty to a cause, the early age at which he was thrown upon his own resources has served to steady him, and he is experienced beyond his years. He has been in practice a little over six years and it would not be fair to prophesy the future, but from what he has already accomplished he is evidently destined to win yet greater successes.

William H. Maloney is a native of Cambridge, Massachusetts, and the ancient walls of Harvard were among the first sights that met his young eyes. He was born on the 15th of March, 1878, and his parents were Walker J. Maloney, who was a native of the state of Maine, and Ellen Muller, who was born in New Hampshire. His parents moved to Canada after a time, and there it was that William Maloney received his education. After his elementary studies were completed he attended Joliet College in the province of Quebec, and here received his college education. He was still filled with his ambitions towards becoming a legal light, and his first real lessons were received at this time, the well-known attorney of Norway, Michigan, being his tutor. These could scarcely be called serious studies, but they served to whet the lad's appetite and make him long for more.

In 1898 he came to the West and settled in Butte. For several years he worked in the mines. When his day's work was over he would go home, and as soon as he had snatched a hasty supper, out would come the law books, and for hours the young miner would sit oblivious to what went on around him. He as yet did not have money enough to study under the guidance of any one, and the intricacies of his subject well-nigh discouraged him from going on with it, but he did not waver, and at last better times came to him. He was able to study under Judge Donlan and Matthew Comming, and under their tutelage was soon ready to take his bar examinations. He passed them and was admitted to the bar in 1905, and immediately commenced practice in Butte. People soon learned that he was a man to be depended upon. He is very quick to grasp the significance of a fact or an event, and then acts like lightning. While very clever and quick to turn everything to the advantage of his client, he despises trickery and underhanded methods, and in fact is what is rarely found, an honest lawyer. For this reason he is gaining each year in popularity, for people soon learn whom they can trust. His brilliancy is unquestioned, and his speeches are well worth listening to.

On the 2d of January, 1909, he was appointed assistant county attorney, which office he is holding at present, to the satisfaction not only of the general public, but of the more critical eyes of his confreres and associates. In politics he is a Democrat, but he believes that the issue lies not so much now between parties as between men. In the coming crisis he believes that every man should vote for the candidate whom he believes best for the welfare of the nation, and not for the man whom his party puts up, simply because he feels that he must stand by his party. It is principles in which Mr. Maloney believes, not parties, though we all concede that they are necessary evils.

Mr. Maloney is very much interested in fraternalism, and is prominent in the various societies of which he is a member. He is worthy president of the Fraternal Order of Eagles for the county of Silver Bow. He is also a member of the Catholic Order of Foresters, of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and of the Loyal Order of Moose. Mr. Maloney was married on the 26th of June, 1906, to Miss Marine Helen Putnam. She was a native of the state of Illinois, having been born in Cuba, that state.

FRANK A. HAZELBAKER, clerk of the district court of Beaverhead county, is a native of Kansas, born in Linn county, that state, on February 15, 1878. He is the son of Sidney J. and Alletta M. Hazelbaker, both born and reared in the Keystone state. The father removed to Kansas in young manhood and there engaged in ranching, which occupation still claims his attention. He served in the Union army as a member of an Illinois regiment. He married his wife in Illinois, removing soon afterward to Kansas. They became the parents of seven children—six sons and a daughter, all of whom, with the exception of the subject, make their homes in Kansas, their native state.

As a boy, Frank A. Hazelbaker attended the schools of Linn county, his schooling there being followed by a course of study in the Kansas Normal College, at Fort Scott, where he was graduated in 1897. He was twenty years old when he first came to Montana, and after locating here he took a review course in the State Normal College, at Dillon. His first work in Montana was in teaching, and he gave his attention to this work for two years, between school seasons occupying himself in work on a ranch. After two years he accepted a position in a mercantile establishment, remaining thus occupied until 1904, when he was elected to the office of clerk of the district court of Beaverhead county. He assumed the duties of that office on January 1, 1905, and has been continuously occupied in that position up to the present time (October, 1912). He has proved himself a capable public official, who well merits the support of his fellow citizens in consideration of his years of faithful service in his present capacity.

Mr. Hazelbaker is in sympathy with the tenets of the Presbyterian church, although not a member. He is a Republican, and has ever displayed a wholesome interest in the political activities of his district. He has been at various times secretary of the Republican state committee, and with but one exception, has been the secretary of every Republican state convention for the past seven years. He is now United States commissioner. At the convention held in Great Falls, September 5, 1912, Mr. Hazelbaker was nominated for secretary of state on the Republican ticket, but in the great landslide of November 5th, he was defeated, although one of the high men on the ticket.

Mr. Hazelbaker is a Mason, having taken all degrees up to Shrine. He is a member of the Odd Fellows, in which he has passed all chairs, and belongs to the encampment and canton of this order. He is also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, the Redmen, and the Elks. He was representative from Montana for the Woodmen to the last head camp at Buffalo, New York, and has passed all chairs in the Redmen lodge. He and his wife are members of the Order of the Eastern Star, and he is affiliated with the Beaverhead Social Club and the Beaverhead Commercial Club, being now president of the latter organization.

On September 3, 1905, Mr. Hazelbaker, was united in marriage with Miss Carrie E. Woodworth, at Wisdom, Montana. One son, Frank Woodworth Hazelbaker, has been born. Mrs. Hazelbaker is the daughter of George and Florence Woodworth, of that place, where they have been located for some years, and occupied in the ranch business. Mr. Woodworth is a man of considerable prominence in this section of the state, having been a member of the Montana legislature in 1903 and 1904, and being otherwise known as a leading man of his district. Two brothers of Mrs. Hazelbaker are Fred E., and George Jr.; the former is married and makes his home in Dillon, while the latter is yet with his parents at Wisdom and is attending school.

JONATHAN C. CURRAH. Success has been worthily attained by Jonathan C. Currah, who is today accounted one of the most prosperous and substantial of Helena's citizens. To his energy, enterprise, careful management and keen discernment his present station in life is attributable. He started upon his career as an independent factor at the bottom of the ladder and now is a leader in his field in Helena—the installing of electric appliances. He is also interested in mining property and was formerly occupied in this industry, as was his father before him.

Mr. Currah was born in Dodgeville, Wisconsin, September 4, 1861. His father, Joseph Currah, was a native of Durham, England. He decided to cast his fortunes with America in 1850, and upon arrival on American shores came to Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. He was a miner by occupation and upon the opening of certain fields he came west about the beginning of the Civil war and located in Colorado. He remained in that state until the summer of 1863 and then went on to Montana, choosing Virginia City as his headquarters. After leaving Virginia City he resided in Dubuque, Iowa, engaged in lead mining, but subsequently removed to Dry Canon, Utah, and engaged in mining. Later he removed to the Blue Cloud mining district, near Helena. He was in active service in the Blue Cloud mine, near this city when his death occurred, at the age of seventy four years. The subject's mother, whose maiden name was Isabella Coatsworth, was also a native of England, and the marriage of these two worthy people was solemnized in Durham. The remains of the father and mother are interred at Helena. They became the parents of ten children, equally divided as to sons and daughters, and Jonathan is the fifth in order of birth.

The public school education of Mr. Currah was acquired at various points, part of it at Dubuque, Iowa, where the family resided for a time. At the age of fourteen years he buckled on his armour for the battle of life, and work was secured for him in the mines in which his father was employed at Dubuque, Iowa. He worked as a miner in the states of Iowa, and Dry Canon, Utah, and Blue Cloud mining district, Montana. He had the spirit of thrift and in several years found himself with a comfortable capital, the result of his saving. He accordingly embarked in the lumber business in Helena, Montana, and also engaged in saw milling on Ten Mile. The date upon which he began business for himself—an important date in any man's career—was January 1, 1898, when he became identified with his present business, the installing of electric appliances and electrical constructing. His establishment is the oldest in this city. Mr. Currah began in a comparatively small way, but has advanced steadily. His business is one of these sound and well-directed ones which has contributed in very definite fashion to the progress of the capital city of Montana. He employs only skilled electricians and does a large business.

In politics Mr. Currah is a Republican, but he takes in public issues only the interest of the intelligent voter. Fraternally he is a member of the Knights of Pythias and of King Solomon Lodge of Masons, of Helena, Helena Consistory, No. 3, and Algeria Temple, Mystic Shrine. He is an enthusiastic out-of-doors man, taking delight in a motor spin or in hunting and fishing. Mrs. Currah is an equally keen sportswoman.

The subject was married on April 26, 1905, at Butte, Montana, to Miss Odella Milot, daughter of Herbert A. Milot, a native of the state. Mrs. Currah was born at Deer Lodge, the date of her birth being November 13, 1876. The Milots are of Montana pioneer stock. The father is now deceased, but the mother resides in Helena. To the union of Mr. and Mrs. Currah has been born one son, Wilbur Melo Currah, on February 2, 1906.

Mr. Currah is a popular and highly respected citizen. By strict attention to the ethics of life he has won a reputation for probity and he has earned and enjoys the honest regard of the community in which he lives. His place of business is at 106 Sixth avenue.

GEORGE J. JOYCE. This well-known and progressive business man has figured conspicuously in the commercial history of Helena and is entitled to mention as one of the representative citizens of this section of the commonwealth. He is engaged in the insurance and real estate business in this city and is a member of the Belgrade Company, Limited, a general merchandise incorporation of Belgrade, Montana. The world instinctively and justly renders deference to the man whose success in life has been worthily achieved, who has attained to a competence by honorable methods and whose high reputation is solely the result of pre-eminent merit in his chosen profession. This is the portion of Mr. Joyce, who is that typically American product—a self-made man.

George J. Joyce was born in New York City, October 9, 1860, and received his education in the schools of the great city in which his eyes first opened to the light of day. He attended both the common and higher departments and subsequently entered New York College, where he studied for a time. At the age of nineteen he found his school days ended and entered upon his career. He followed clerical work in various mercantile establishments for several years in New York, but in 1884 he decided to cast his fortunes with the great west, whose opportunities for the ambitious young man he realized to be superior to those of the metropolis. He first located in the state of Washington, where he followed clerical work and his residence in Helena, Montana, dates from the year 1898. For a number of years he continued in clerical work in the line of accounting and bookkeeping. In the year mentioned he located in Belgrade, and now for a number of years has been associated with T. C. Power, banker and capitalist, this association having continued for fourteen years. The Belgrade General Mercantile Company is a modern and highly successful corporation, of the sort which contributes to the prosperity and prestige of any community in which it is located and no small share of this success is due to Mr. Joyce, who possesses judgment and executive capacity of a high order. He is also secretary of the board of sheep commissioners and for a period of four years was under-sheriff, of Whitman county, Washington.

Mr. Joyce gave hand and heart to the men and measures of what its admirers are pleased to call "The Grand Old Party," but he is a strong Roosevelt man and is now a staunch Progressive partisan. He has always been very active in political affairs and has been influential in party ranks, but he is wholly without aspiration for public office. He is essentially public-spirited and any measure which in his opinion is likely to result in the advancement of the general welfare is sure of his support. He is affiliated with the Knights of Columbus and for two years was at the head of the local society, his term of office expiring on January 8, 1912. He likewise belongs to the Woodmen of the World, the Knights of the Maccabees and is a very busy member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He is a communicant of the Catholic church.

Mr. Joyce was happily married at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, on May 12, 1889, his chosen lady being Miss Margaret Hager, daughter of John Hager, a native of Atlanta, Georgia. They share their pleasant and hospitable home with one son, Harold Hager Joyce, born at Colfax, Washington, July 17, 1894. Their residence is maintained at 11 South Benton avenue, while Mr. Joyce's office is situated at 218 Power Block.

GEORGE R. ALLEN, county attorney of Madison county, Montana, and well known to the legal fraternity of the state, has been a resident of the Treasure state for fourteen years, and is one of the most enthusiastic advocates of the well remembered advice of Horace Greeley to the youth of the land. Early in life he acted upon the admonition of that worthy gentleman and he has never regretted his action.

Mr. Allen was born in Winamac, Indiana, on March 15, 1873, and that state represented his home until he was six years of age. He is the son of George R. Allen, Sr., and Nancy (McCoy) Allen. The father was a native Indianan and lived there the greater part of his life, in late years taking up his residence in Daviess county, Missouri, where he still lives. He has followed the life of a farmer, and lived quietly and uneventfully since the close of the Civil war, in which he took an active part. He enlisted from Indiana and saw much hard service during the term of his enlistment. Mr. Allen has been for years a member of the Christian church, and is a devout and faithful adherent to its principles and doctrines. His wife, the mother of the subject, died in Indiana in 1879, when she was in the forty-fourth year of her life and she is buried near the old home in the Hoosier state. They were the parents of four children, of which number George R., Jr., is the youngest born.

When six years of age Mr. Allen accompanied his father to Daviess county, Missouri, and there he lived until 1892. In that year he went to Idaho, remaining there for three years, during which time he taught school. He next returned to Valparaiso and entered college, resuming his scientific course, and for two years remained in close and careful study, and graduated in 1897, then returning to the west and locating in Montana in the spring of 1898. He again resumed his teaching labors, and for two years was engaged in that work. In 1900 he returned once more to Valparaiso, Indiana, there entering the law school of the University, from which he was graduated in 1902, receiving his degree at the same time. He immediately made his way back to Montana where he began the practice of law at Twin Bridges, and this city has represented the center of his legal activities since that time. He has won a deal of prominence and popularity in his profession with the passing years and has been city attorney of Twin Bridges since 1903, as well as city clerk since 1903. His citizenship is of a high order, and has been a telling factor in his steady advancement in the profession during the years of his residence in this locality.

On July 23, 1902, Mr. Allen was united in marriage with Miss Lurana Black, the daughter of William J. Black and his wife, Ebeline M. Black, of Daviess county, Missouri. They have two children, a daughter and son named Lois E. and Robert H.

Mr. Allen is a young man who has made the most of every passing opportunity, and has achieved a pleasing success where an average individual would have accomplished but mediocre things. His education was secured as a result of his own unaided efforts, his teaching labors paying all the expenses of his university course, and from his boyhood he missed no opportunity to better himself educationally and to advance his preparation for the profession to which he has been for several years devoted. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the Elks, and as a member of the blue lodge has filled all chairs, being secretary of the lodge at present. He is also fraternally identified with the Maccabees. He is a Republican and takes an active interest in the political affairs of the county.

ALBERT KIRCHER. To efficiently perform the duties of such an office as register of United States lands in Montana, a man of tact, good judgment and wide experience is required and such an one is found in Albert Kircher, who is one of the large land owners of Custer county and a leading citizen of Miles City, Montana. Mr. Kircher was born April 8, 1865, at Valley Falls, Kansas, and is a son of Michael and Romana (Albus) Kircher.

Michael Kircher was born in 1835, in Wurtemberg, Germany, and died at Miles City, Montana, in October, 1906. He came to the United States on a sailing vessel in early manhood, landing at New York and going from that city to points in Pennsylvania. Shortly afterward he made his way to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, where he entered the employ of the United States government as a teamster. In this capacity he traveled overland with the first government train that reached Pike's Peak, in 1860, after which he enlisted for service in the Civil war. At the battle of Bull Run he was made a prisoner and was taken to Richmond, Virginia, where he was incarcerated in an old tobacco warehouse. From this exceedingly undesirable place he managed to escape through his ingenuity in twisting his bedding into a rope to let him down from the roof to the ground. A storm made the night dark and full of noise and thus he was able to slip by the guards, and not far from the prison he was fortunate enough to find a friend in an old German saloon keeper. The German ran a great risk in helping his countryman, nevertheless he provided the escaped prisoner with clothing, gave him money with which to buy shoes and called in a barber, also a German, who so changed his appearance by shaving him and cutting off his long hair that there remained little danger of his captors recognizing him. To these good German friends he owed food and shelter until he was able to make his way back to the Union lines, and after rejoining his company served out his full term of enlistment and received his honorable discharge at Fort Leavenworth.

Michael Kircher then married and settled on a farm at Valley Falls, Kansas, where he remained until 1876, when he moved to Missouri, where he continued until 1881. On April 18th of that year he left Missouri for Dakota, where three or four weeks were spent in the neighborhood of Spear Fish, and from there came on into Montana, arriving at Miles City with his family on June 15, 1881. He immediately embarked in farming and dairying and continued to be thus engaged during the remainder of his active life, retiring in 1895. He was well known in this section and was respected for his sturdy integrity. Prior to 1896 he was identified with the Republican party but afterward was a Democrat.

At Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, Michael Kircher was married, in 1864, to Romana Albus, who was born in 1840, in the province of Baiern, Germany. She survives and now resides at Los Angeles, California. Nine children were born to the above marriage, the four survivors being: Albert; George, who is also a resident of Miles City, Montana; Michael, who resides at Warwick, Australia; and Emma, who is the wife of P. E. Coffin, a resident of Los Angeles, California.

Albert Kircher attended school at Miles City and completed a commercial course in the Helena Business College. In 1898 he took up a homestead in Custer county, Montana, near Miles City, and at the present writing owns 280 acres of land, 200 of which is under irrigation. In 1892 he took up his residence in Miles City, erecting here an attractive home and making other investments. For six years he served as jailer, under Sheriff Savage, and also served one term as public administrator and on April 1, 1907, became register of United States lands. He is known to be one of the responsible, reliable men of this section and enjoys the confidence of his fellow citizens both in business transactions of a personal nature and in his public relations. Politically he is a Republican.

On July 6, 1898, Mr. Kircher was united in marriage with Miss Bertha C. Rhode, who was born at Fort Laramie, Wyoming, and is a daughter of George and Bertha (Kruger) Rhode. The father of Mrs. Kircher was born in Germany and came to America in early manhood. Subsequently he enlisted in the United States cavalry and was a member of the body guard of General Crook and was on the Rose Bud engaged in fighting the Indians until 1880. After his military life was over he engaged first in farming in Custer county, Montana, and later in Dawson county, and at present resides with his wife at Ridge Lawn, where he has been a justice of the peace for some years. He is a Democrat in his political views. Mrs. Kircher has two brothers, George and Fred Rhode. Mr. and Mrs. Kircher have one daughter, Helen, who is attending school at Miles City. Mr. Kircher is identified fraternally with Custer Lodge, No. 13, Odd Fellows, and with Aerie No. 885, Eagles, in both organizations being exceedingly popular.

PHILO C. HANSON. President of the McPherson-Hanson company, incorporated, one of the prominent, enterprising and successful corporations in Butte dealing in real estate, mining prospects and properties and investments and in all parts of Silver Bow county and those which adjoin it well and favorably known as a progressive, broad-minded and patriotic citizen, Philo C. Hanson has risen to his present standing and substantial prosperity wholly by his own efforts and well-applied ability. He has had no favors of fortune or especially propitious circumstances to aid him in his progress, but has steadily forged ahead from his young manhood, making his way step by step by his persistent industry and good management.

Mr. Hanson was born in Racine, Wisconsin, on January 3, 1883, and is a son of Lars and Anna B. (Jacobson) Hanson, the former a native of Sweden, where his life began in 1834, and the latter born in Christiania, Norway. They came to this country in early life and were married in Chicago. Soon afterward they located in Racine, Wisconsin, where the father engaged at lumbering and remained in the trade there for a number of years. The family then moved to Butte, Montana, where the father died in April, 1899, and the mother is still living.

They were the parents of seven children, six of whom are living, and all but the last born natives of Racine. The last child was born in Butte, where all six now reside. They are: Philo C., Nathan, Ruth, Christine, Alida and Charles. They all stand well in the community of their home, are upright in their lives, energetic and progressive in business, devoted to the welfare of their city and county, and faithful in the performance of every duty.

Philo C. Hanson began his education in the public schools of Racine, Wisconsin, and completed it in those of Butte, Montana. He passed to the high school here and began its course of study, but left before completing it to attend the Butte Business College for a special course of training as a preparation for mercantile life. He was graduated from this institution in 1903, and at once found employment in the office of the Thompson Investment Company, then prominent in the mining and investment lines of trade. Mr. Hanson remained with that concern until 1909, when he bought the business in partnership with Mr. McPherson. The business was then incorporated under the title of McPherson-Hanson Company, and it has since gone on from year to year with increasing prosperity and prominence until it is now one of the leaders in its line in Butte. The company handles a great deal of real estate, a considerable quantity of mining prospects and property and a large aggregate of investments, and as the gentlemen at the head of it are wise and knowing, alert and enterprising, and at all times closely attentive to their business, their success is easy to account for as a logical result of persistent industry and good judgment.

On March 23, 1909, Mr. Hanson was united in marriage with Miss Edith Terry of Butte, a daughter of Elmore and Sarah J. (Boatman) Terry, prominent residents of that city. One child has been born of the union, a daughter named Dorothy Racine, whose life began in Butte on February 5, 1910. Mr. Hanson is a member of Mount Moriah Lodge, A. F. & A. M., and has attained the thirty-second degree in the Scottish Rite; a member of the Butte Lodge of Elks, and also belongs to the Woodmen of the World in Butte. He is a Methodist in church connection and a Republican in politics. He is a great hunter and an expert shot, and fond of all outdoor sports. He is prominent in Butte and popular in all parts of the city. Young yet in years, vigorous in health, impelled by a lofty ambition to make the most of his opportunities and with the power to do it, he faces a very successful future.

DR. HENRY H. SWAIN. One of the most noted of the educators of the west is Dr. Henry H. Swain, of Dillon, president of the Montana State Normal College and professor of economics and sociology in that institution, which stands as one of the best of its kind in the United States. For over a decade, or since 1901, Dr. Swain has been at the head of the college and under his administration a wise and progressive leadership has brought the school on towards the accomplishment of its purpose and realization of its high mission. He is a man of great power and personality, combining the practical with the idealistic and making realities out of fine projects. Nothing could be more gratifying than the growth of the institution under his management and his prestige is high throughout the length and breadth of Montana, he being frequently called into consultation in matters educational all over the state.

Dr. Swain was born in Providence, Rhode Island, March 29, 1863. He lived there until about six years of age and then went to Iowa, where he remained until about sixteen, when he removed to Wisconsin, which state was the scene of his residence for about six years. He had received his earlier education in the public schools of Iowa and had graduated from the high school of Beloit, Wisconsin, following which he took a four year's course in Beloit College. He began his pedagogical career as a teacher in the schools of various towns in the Badger state, and for eight years was professor of economics in Yankton College, South Dakota. Subsequent to that he continued three years in graduate study in the University of Wisconsin, receiving the degree of Doctor of Philosophy, and then (in 1898) came to Dillon, where he became connected with the Montana State Normal College and here he has ever since remained. In 1901 he was appointed president of this institution and has filled this position continuously ever since. It would be impossible to overestimate the value of his services or the salutary effect of his high ideals and splendid methods.

Dr. Swain was married in Denver, Colorado, July 31, 1889, his wife being Mira L. Olmsted. They share their hospitable home, with its atmosphere of culture and charm, with two children, both sons, Joseph Ward, born December 16, 1891, is a graduate of Columbia

Phil C. Hanson.

College of New York City, and now a graduate student at Harvard University, and Albert F., born March 4, 1894, is a student at the Montana Agricultural College.

Dr. and Mrs. Swain and their sons are communicants of the Episcopal church, and Mrs. Swain is an active worker in its several departments. Dr. Swain is a Democrat in politics. He finds his favorite recreation in reading, and is the possessor of a fine library, which reveals a discriminating taste in literature.

The subject is a son of Rev. Leonard and Julia M. Swain. The father, a Congregational minister, was born in the state of New York and died in 1869, when about forty-eight years of age. His demise occurred in Rhode Island and he is interred in Providence. The mother was born in New Hampshire and died in Providence, Rhode Island, when about forty-two years of age. Dr. Swain was only about three years old when his mother was called to the Great Beyond and when six the death of his father made him an orphan indeed. There were five children in the family of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Leonard Swain, the subject being the youngest in order of birth.

The act of congress under which the state of Montana was admitted to the Union, set aside one hundred thousand acres of public domain for the establishment and support of a state normal school. In pursuance of the same plan the legislative assembly of Montana has passed acts establishing the State Normal School, locating it at Dillon, providing for the erection of buildings, and appropriating money to defray its expenses. The first building was completed and the school opened in 1897. Two principal courses of study are offered. The degree course leads in four years to the degree of Bachelor of Pedagogy, offers abundant preparation for the technical work of teaching, and also gives the teacher a fair equipment of general culture. The three years' course includes most of the professional work of the degree course, but less of general culture and of the more advanced pedagogical study. The Master's degree is not granted indiscriminately, but is a mark of distinction conferred for special merit, the minimum requirements being that a candidate shall already have a Bachelor's degree from the Montana State Normal College, or from some other college or university of recognized standing, and must spend at least one year in resident graduate study at the Montana State Normal College. The law of Montana reposes in the College the sole power to issue certificates authorizing persons to teach in public kindergartens.

The faculty consists of the following: Henry H. Swain, Ph. D., University of Wisconsin, Beloit College, University of Chicago—president and professor of economics and sociology. Joseph E. Monroe, B. A., Kansas Normal College, University of Glasgow, New York University—vice-president and professor of physics and chemistry. Lucy Hamilton Carson, M. A., University of Illinois, Illinois State Normal University, University of Chicago—professor of English. Mrs. Anna W. Owsley, matron. Laura M. Kress, B. L., University of Wisconsin—professor of Latin and German. Robert Clark, M. A., Amherst college, Clark University, New York University—professor of psychology and biology. Theodore Shoudy, Adelphi College,—instructor in manual arts. Grace Graeter Cincinnati Conservatory of Music, instructor in piano and pipe organ. E. Ray Mosher, M. A., University of Minnesota, Western Reserve University, professor of mathematics. Addie E. Bettes, Grand Rapids Training School, University of Michigan, University of Chicago, supervisor of primary training. Harriet A. Dunning, Herrick Studio (Chicago), Valley City State Normal School, instructor in physical culture and expression. Grant E. Finch, M. Ph., Sc. D., Upper Iowa University, University of Chicago, superintendent of the training school. Frank H. Garver, Ph. D., Iowa State University, professor of history and civics. Nina M. Nash, Madison State Normal School, Teachers' College Columbia University, supervisor of intermediate training. Lucy E. Herrick, teacher of vocal music. Lilian R. Free, Wisconsin Library Commission, librarian. E. Agnes Scott, assistant in physical culture.

The college is housed in an elegant and imposing structure. There is a summer school in addition to the regular terms. The social life is of a delightful and elevating nature and every pains is taken to make the life of the student agreeable, as well as profitable. The aim of the college is to teach its students to be of quick perceptions, broad sympathies, and wide affinities; responsive, but independent; self-reliant, but deferential; loving truth and candor, but also moderation and proportion; courageous, but gentle; not finished, but perfecting.

CHARLES L. HARRIS. The present register of the United States land office at Billings, Montana, Charles L. Harris, is a member of the Yellowstone county legal profession whose career has demonstrated what may be accomplished by the man of industry and ability in this rapidly advancing community. Elected to a position of high honor and trust even before he had been admitted to practice, his activities in the field of law have won him a place among the eminent men of his profession, and his executive ability has been evidenced by the capable manner in which he has discharged the duties of his official positions. Mr. Harris is a native of the state of Washington, and was born at Port Ludlow, February 5, 1872, a son of Frank and Elizabeth Skillbeck (Walters) Harris.

Frank Harris was born in New York state, where he received his education, and as a young man came west. He had been educated to follow the profession of law, but chose the vocations of millwright and machinist, and was the builder of some of the first mills on Puget Sound. Subsequently he took an active part in the building and operation of the Dr. Backer railroad from Umatilla to Walla Walla, Washington, with the old strap rails, the headquarters of this road being at Whitman Center. Leaving the service of the company, he went to the Blue Mountains and for some time interested himself in operating sawmills. He then became one of the heads of the mechanical department in the Northern Pacific shops at Ainsworth, Washington, and after several years spent at that place went to the Coos Bay country, in Oregon, and was the contractor and builder of a logging railroad. Mr. Harris then returned to the Puget Sound district, and there his death occurred about 1891. He was not only prominent in business matters, but was well known to public life, and in 1873 was elected on the Republican ticket to the territorial legislature of Washington, in which he was very influential, acting as a member of a number of important committees. Fraternally he was connected with the A. O. U. W., and was a member of the Masonic order. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Elizabeth Skillbeck, was born at Stockton-on-Lees, County Durham, England, and was first married to James Walters, by whom she had one son, James W. She still survives.

Charles L. Harris was the only child born to his parents, and his early education was secured in the public and private schools of his native state. He read law under the preceptorship of Judge N. T. Caton, of Sprague, Washington, and in 1892, while still studying law, was elected county attorney of Franklin county, Washington, but could not qualify as he had not attained his majority, nor had he yet been admitted to the bar. After he had passed his examinations, in 1893, he began the practice of his profession at Pasco, Washington, where he continued until February, 1898, and the 28th of that month saw his advent in Billings. His arrival here was at the time of the trial of William C. Brooks, on trial for killing his wife. Brooks was without counsel, as he had no funds, and the young attorney volunteered to defend him. The trial which followed gave Mr. Harris a substantial reputation and stamped him as a lawyer who would go far in his profession, for, although the very cold-bloodedness of the murder precluded the chance of an acquittal, the strenuous defence made by the accused's attorney caused wide-spread comment and gave evidence that Mr. Harris was a master of law and jurisprudence. Subsequently Mr. Harris became deputy clerk of the court of the thirteenth judicial district, and in 1902 was nominated and elected county attorney, serving one term in that position. On December 16, 1908, was appointed register of the United States land office at Billings, by President Roosevelt, entered upon duty January 15, 1909. He has since acted in that capacity and has shown himself to be an excellent executive.

Mr. Harris is a Republican in political matters, and his fraternal affiliations are with the Knights of Pythias, the Eagles, the United Workmen, the Royal Highlanders and many other orders.

Mr. Harris is author of "The Crow Reservation Homeseekers Adviser," a publication relative to the opening of the ceded portion of the Crow Indian Reservation, and "Harris' Public Land Guide," a recent and complete compilation of public land laws, and departmental regulations and forms thereunder.

On July 4, 1897, Mr. Harris was united in marriage with Miss R. Irene Crane, who was born in Freeport, Illinois, daughter of James H. and Cynthia Crane, the former deceased, and the latter a resident of North Yakima, Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Harris have one son, Charles F.

WILLIAM W. TRACY, manager of the Tracy Electric Supply Company and the Butte Taxi Cab Company at Butte, was born in Ashtabula, Ohio, on October 4, 1875. He is the son of Anson and Frances C. (La-Grange) Tracy, the former a native of Vermont and the latter of Ohio. Anson Tracy was a contractor and builder and died at Ashtabula, Ohio, in 1890.

William W. Tracy was fifteen years of age when his father died, when the widowed mother was left with three children to care for, as the father had been able to provide comfortably for his little family, but was not able to leave them with sufficient income to meet their needs. William W., the second son, at the time of his father's death had finished the course in the elementary schools at Ashtabula, and had had several years' work in the high school. By doubling his efforts he was able to complete the high school training in the spring of 1891, although he was but sixteen years of age. Feeling, to a great extent, the responsibility of the family, he at once accepted a position with the Ashtabula Rapid Transit Company. For two years he served as an employee of this company, and then for one year was connected with the Oil City, Pennsylvania, Street Railway. The work was much to his liking, but seemed to offer little for the future. Being ambitious to become a master in lines of his chosen vocation, he apprenticed himself to the National Tube Works at Oil City, Pennsylvania, where he became an expert machinist, as well as a good electrician. So thorough had he been in his study that he at once obtained a situation with the Chicago City Railway in the department of mechanical and electrical engineering. In the year of the Spanish-American war, 1898, Mr. Tracy, after sacrificing his desire to go to the front to the duty that he felt he still owed to his mother, decided to try his fortune in Montana. He arrived in Helena in the autumn of that year and in the capacity of electrical engineer assisted in the installing and operation of the electrical machinery for the Missouri River Power Company for one year. When this piece of work was completed he spent a little more than a year in East Helena, with the Livingston Reduction Company, serving them in the capacity of electrical engineer.

In 1900 he was called to Butte to act as electrician for the Butte Electric Railway Company, which was at that time installing its service. Although his position as chief electrician for this company was in every way most satisfactory, he having had orders carte blanche in all his work, yet his ambition had always been to be at the head of his own business. With this object in view, he organized, in 1896, the Tracy Electric Supply Company, of which he is the sole owner. This business is located at 1128-30 Utah avenue, where the company does a large wholesale and retail business in electrical appliances of all lines. Mr. Tracy owns and operates the Butte Taxi Cab Company (Inc.), one of the largest transportation companies in the city, with offices in the First National Bank building.

He married Miss Mollie E. Kellogg, of Wicks, Montana, the daughter of James M. Kellogg, formerly of Michigan. Mr. and Mrs. Tracy are the parents of two daughters, Katherine and Helen Irene.

Notwithstanding the demands made upon him by his diversified and rapidly growing business, Mr. Tracy has found time to take an active part in the civic affairs of Butte, serving as alderman from the Seventh ward, in 1910-11. While a staunch member of the Republican party, he is firm in the belief that party politics have no place in the city government. He is a member of Butte Lodge, No. 22, A. F. & A. M., and is also a member of the Knights of the Maccabees, while with his family he is a member of the Presbyterian church.

Mr. Tracy has won for himself a most creditable position among the best business men of Butte, and represents that valuable type of a citizen who is ever ready to encourage a movement or project that involves the advancement or progress of his city and state.

HORACE J. MERKLE, manager of the Prudential Insurance Company for the state of Montana, with headquarters at Butte, where he has resided since 1898, is deeply interested in community affairs and his efforts have also been a potent element in the business progress of this section of the state. He has with ready recognition of opportunity directed his labors into various fields and holds distinctive prestige as one of the representative business men of the younger generation.

Horace J. Merkle was born at Virginia City, Nevada, on the 12th of October, 1879, and he is a son of Thomas and Mary (Dempsey) Merkle, the former of whom was born and reared in the state of Kentucky and the latter of whom is a native of Ireland, whence she came to America, alone, at the age of twelve years. The Merkle home was established in Butte in 1898 and Mr. Merkle is engaged in mining enterprises in the vicinity of Missoula. Nine children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Merkle, and of the number eight are living at the present time, in 1911, Horace J. being the third youngest.

To the public schools of Virginia City Horace J. Merkle is indebted for his early educational training, the same including a couple of years in the high school. At the age of sixteen years he was apprenticed to learn the butcher's trade, which he followed in Virginia City for a period of two years. He came to Butte with his parents in 1898, and here his first employment was as a clerk with the Hennessy Mercantile Company, with which concern he remained for a period of two years, at the expiration of which he began to work for the Gans & Klein Company. In 1899 he was in the employ of the Brownfield Carty Carpet Company, a general merchandise, furniture and carpet concern. One year later he was appointed deputy sheriff, under Sheriff Quinn, and he served in that capacity for the ensuing four years. His next position was in Harry O'Gorman's cigar store and in 1906, in company with Bart L. Monahan, he opened a general brokerage business on the corner of Broadway and Hamilton streets. The firm was known as Merkle & Monahan and a specialty was made of mining stocks. A splendid business was built up and controlled, but the panic of 1907 and the ensuing hard times made continued success a practical impossibility. After closing up his brokerage business Mr. Merkle organized the Merkle Cigar Company, which was incorporated under the laws of the state of Montana, and he was its president. Fine headquarters were maintained at No. 116 West Main street and the company were wholesale and retail dealers in cigars, tobacco and smokers' articles. This was one of the leading shops of its kind in the city. Mr. Merkle retained his interests therein until April 18, 1912. He had previously, on April 17, 1912, been appointed manager for the state of Montana for the Prudential Insurance Company of America.

In politics Mr. Merkle is a staunch advocate of the principles and policies for which the Democratic party stands sponsor, and he is an active worker in the interests of that organization and a member of Butte Chamber of Commerce. In fraternal ways he is affiliated with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and the Knights of Columbus, while socially he belongs to Silver Bow Club. He is a devout Roman Catholic in his religious faith and is a generous contributor to the charities of the church. He is unmarried and resides in the home of his parents, at 411 West Granite street. Mr. Merkle is a great lover of all athletic sports and is quite prominent in Butte as a handball and baseball player. He takes many extended trips into the mountains on hunting and fishing expeditions and is a thorough sportsman in the most significant sense of the word.

DANIEL SHOVLIN. Education and financial assistance are very important factors in achieving success in the business world of today, where every faculty must be brought into play, but they are not the main elements. Persistency and determination figure much more prominently and a man possessed of these qualities is bound to win a fair amount of success. Daniel Shovlin, whose name forms the caption for this article, earned his own education and during the later years of his life he has climbed to a high place on the ladder of achievement. He is one of Butte's most prominent citizens and at the present time, in 1912, is the popular and efficient incumbent of the office of city treasurer.

A native of the fine old Keystone state of the Union, Daniel Shovlin was born in Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, on the 18th of May, 1877. He is a son of Daniel and Katherine (Carr) Shovlin, the former of whom was born in Ireland and the latter in Pennsylvania. Daniel Shovlin, Sr., came to America in 1868 and settled in the Keystone state, where he still resides, his home being now in Mahanoy City, Pennsylvania. During the greater part of his active career he was engaged in mining enterprises but he is now living virtually retired. The maternal grandparents of the subject of this review were born and reared in Ireland, whence they immigrated to the United States in the ante-bellum days. Mrs. Shovlin was called to eternal rest in 1881, and she is survived by her honored husband and two children, namely, Daniel, the immediate subject of this sketch, and John, who is engaged in mercantile business at Mahanoy City, Pennsylvania.

Daniel Shovlin, Jr., received his rudimentary educational training in the public schools of Highland, Pennsylvania, but at the early age of eleven years he was obliged to leave school in order to help support the family. His first occupation was as breaker boy in the Pennsylvania coal mines, and at the age of twenty-one years he came to Montana, settling in Butte, where he immediately became interested in copper mining. From 1898 until 1911 he devoted his undivided attention to mining enterprises, but in April of the latter year he ran for and was elected to the office of city treasurer, being incumbent thereof at the present time. He is proving himself an able administrator of the fiscal affairs of Butte and has advocated and established many changes, which are proving of benefit to the city.

In politics Mr. Shovlin is a staunch and uncompromising supporter of the Socialist party, in the local councils of which he is an active worker. He is a man of broad mind and generous impulses and one who is a willing contributor to all matters calculated to better conditions politically and socially in Butte, where he is a man of mark in all the relations of life. Inasmuch as Mr. Shovlin's success in life is entirely the outcome of his own well directed endeavors it is the more gratifying to contemplate and by reason of his exemplary conduct he has gained the unalloyed confidence and esteem of all with whom he has come in contact.

DONALD McMILLAN. As cashier of the Western Lumber Company at Butte, Montana, Donald McMillan is well versed in lumbering interests in this section of the northwest. He is prominent in athletic affairs in this city and in every connection is a most worthy and desirable citizen.

Mr. McMillan was born in the province of Nova Scotia, Canada, on the 10th of August, 1861, and he is a son of Edward and Jessie (McKay) McMillan, both of whom were likewise born and reared in Canada and the former of whom was summoned to the life eternal in 1892, at the age of sixty-three years. In the agnatic line Mr. McMillan traces his ancestry to Duncan McMillan, a native of Scotland, whence he came to Canada in 1821. Edward McMillan was engaged in the mercantile business during the greater part of his active career and his place of business was located at Whycocomagh, Canada. Mrs. McMillan, who has reached the venerable age of eighty years, resides at Whycocomagh.

The third in order of birth in a family of nine children, Donald McMillan was educated in the public school of his native place and as a young man he turned his attention to bookkeeping. In 1886 he came to the United States, locating first in the city of St. Paul, Minnesota, where he continued to reside until 1898, at which time he came to Butte. For four years after his advent in this city Mr. McMillan was engaged as bookkeeper for the Big Black Foot Lumber Company. In 1902 he severed his relations with the latter concern in order to accept the position as cashier in the offices of the Western Lumber Company, owned by Senator W. A. Clark, in the employment of which concern he has continued until the present time, in 1912. Mr. McMillan is well known in social and business circles in Butte and is everywhere accorded the unalloyed confidence and esteem of his fellow men. Although a Republican in his political affiliations, he does not participate in local politics.

Mr. McMillan has devoted considerable time to introducing and boosting the old Scotch game of curling. In 1905 he organized the Butte Curling Club, which has had a most successful career and which numbers about one hundred members. This club has taken part in numerous tournaments in Canada and has won many honors. In 1909 the Royal Caledonian Club of Scotland invited the Caledonian Club of Canada to play a series of games in Scotland. The Butte Club being affiliated with the Manitoba branch of the Caledonian Club, Mr. McMillan was selected as one of the team. Only three men were chosen from the United States,—one from Duluth, one from Milwaukee, and Mr. McMillan from Butte. The ensuing trip to Scotland was one long to be remembered, and out of twenty-six games played the visiting club won twenty-three, in addition to which it was also presented with a beautiful cup by Lord Strathcona. The members of the club were royally entertained everywhere in Scotland and were King Edward's guests at Balmoral Castle. In addition to his interest in the great game of curling Mr. McMillan is a member of the Butte Country Club. In a fraternal way he is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and the Modern Woodmen of America. His religious faith is in harmony with the teachings of the Presbyterian church, in whose faith he has reared his daughters.

In 1884, at Murray Harbor, Prince Edward Island, Canada, Mr. McMillan was united in marriage to Miss Charlotte F. Clements, who was born and reared in Canada. Two daughters have been born to this union, namely,—Mary Cecilia, who is the wife of Rev. John B. Stevens, pastor of the First Presbyterian church at St. Juneau, Alaska, and Alcinda Auten, who remains at home with her parents.

JAMES H. FRASER was born in Johnston county, Kansas, December 25, 1876, and is the son of William and Charlotte E. (Armstrong) Fraser. His father, William Fraser, claims Ohio as his native state, having been born in Marietta, Washington county, and is now a resident of Kansas. His wife was born in Iowa. She died in 1895 at the early age of forty-five years. They were the parents of ten children, six of whom are living, our subject being the fifth child.

William Fraser was educated in the district schools of his birthplace, and came to Johnston county, Kansas, in 1865. He was engaged in stock raising and diversified farming from the time of his arrival until he retired from active life in 1905. Mr. Fraser has been a member of the Methodist Episcopal church since his boyhood, always living a careful and upright life, and bearing an excellent reputation among his fellow men.

James H. Fraser received his education in the local schools of Johnston county, Kansas, and in 1898, when he was twenty-two years old, he came to Billings, Montana, where he secured employment as a clerk with the A. L. Babcock Hardware Company. He devoted his best energies and interests to his work in that capacity, and later he was made manager of the business, which position he creditably filled from 1904 to 1909. In the latter year, having further demonstrated his capacity for careful management and more firmly established himself with the firm as a progressive and able man of business, a partnership was effected between himself and Mr. Babcock, and the firm is now known as the Babcock-Fraser Company, successor to the Babcock Hardware Company, with Mr. Fraser as vice president and manager of the concern.

Mr. Fraser is recognized in Billings as one of the prominent business men of that city, and one who has a very bright future. On April 6, 1904, he was married to Miss Ella M. Kestner, who is of Vermont birth. Mr. and Mrs. Fraser are the parents of two children, Harold J. and Frances Edna.

Fraternally Mr. Fraser is a member of Billings Star Lodge No. 41, I. O. O. F., and is past noble grand of that order. He is also a member of Billings Lodge No. 394, B. P. O. E.

STEPHEN P. WRIGHT. As general manager and treasurer of the Western Mining Supply Company, dealers in mining machinery and consulting engineers, Stephen P. Wright has been largely instrumental in promoting the growth of that important corporation and he is recognized as one of the foremost business men and citizens of Butte, where he has resided since 1898.

Stephen P. Wright was born at Malone, New York, on the 24th of July, 1858, and he is descended from staunch old Quaker stock. He is a son of Samuel T. and Sarah (Pearl) Wright, both of whom were born and reared in Vermont and both of whom are now deceased. The American branch of the Wright family was founded in the early colonial epoch of our history and the original progenitors of the name in this country were of Irish and Welsh stock. Mr. Wright's maternal ancestors were of English extraction and both the Pearl and Wright families were devout Quakers in their religious faith. In 1857 Samuel T. Wright established the family home at Malone, New York, whence removal was made, in 1865, to Cloverdale, Michigan. In the latter place Mr. Wright was most successfully engaged in farming operations and he continued to reside at Cloverdale until the time of his death, in 1891. Mrs. Wright passed away in 1902 and she and her husband were the parents of six children, of whom the subject of this review was the third in order of birth.

At Cloverdale, Michigan, Stephen P. Wright received his early educational training and after reaching manhood he attended private school for a time. At the age of 18 years he was apprenticed to learn the trades of blacksmith and machinist and he followed those lines of occupation at Muskegon, Michigan, and at Minneapolis, Minnesota. He resided in Minneapolis from 1882 to 1898 and during that period was connected with various street car lines in the twin cities. He was engineer of the first electric railroad in Minneapolis, the same being known as the Twin City Rapid Transit Company and for a number of years he conducted the plant for the Minneapolis General Electric Company. He has devoted most of his attention thus far to engineering work. Mr. Wright came to Butte in 1898 and at that time became one of the organizers of the Western Mining Supply Company, which is incorporated under the laws of the state of Montana with a capital stock of sixty thousand dollars. The company deals in and contracts for mining machinery and controls an extensive and lucrative business as consulting engineers. W. H. Hall is president of the Western Mining Supply Company, S. P. Wright is treasurer and general manager.

Mr. Wright is independent in his political convictions, always casting his vote for the best man, regardless of party organization. His first presidential vote was given to James A. Garfield. Mr. Wright has passed through the circle of York Rite Masonry and he is also a thirty-second degree Mason. He has been honored with many important offices in Masonry, having been Worshipful Master of Plymouth Lodge in 1897 and being grand master of Grand Council, Royal and Select Masters, in 1911. He is likewise affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America and is a valued and appreciative member of the Silver Bow Club.

At Minneapolis, Minnesota, on the 1st of August, 1886, Mr. Wright was united in marriage to Miss Elizabeth Petter, a daughter of William and Katherine Petter, both natives of Minnesota. Mr. and Mrs. Wright are the parents of two children, Grace Elizabeth born in Minneapolis, August 13, 1887, is unmarried and remains at the parental home; and Mabel Irene, born September 9, 1888, is the wife of James Baird, a prominent citizen of Butte.

JESSE B. ROOTE. Of the many successful lawyers who have honored the Montana bar within recent years one of the most prominent is Jesse B. Roote, of Butte, whose legal attainments and scholarly and forceful arguments have given him a wide and well-merited reputation for professional ability and skill. Numbered in the first rank of successful legal practitioners, he is exceptionally well posted on constitutional law. A native of Missouri, he was born April 15, 1870, in Saint Genevieve county, where he received his preliminary education. After his graduation from the State Normal school, at Cape Girardeau, Missouri, he completed his education at Saint Stephen's College, in Anandale, New York, in the meantime studying law for three years. Returning to his Missouri home, Mr. Roote passed the examinations admitting him to practice in all the courts of his native state in September, 1890, and immediately began his professional career. Coming to Butte, Montana, in 1898, he was for two years associated with John B. Wellcome as junior member of the law firm of Wellcome & Roote. On January 1, 1900, Mr. Roote formed a partnership with W. A. Clark, Jr., son of Senator Clark, and until June, 1902, was head of the firm of Roote & Clarke, a period of two and one-half years. Since that time Mr. Roote has been extensively and successfully engaged in the practice of his profession alone, and is widely known as one of the leading attorneys of the state, and in the performance of the duties devolving upon him in this capacity has displayed a wise discrimination, and a keen sense of justice. He has been president of the Silver Bow Bar Association; a member of the American Bar Association; and belongs to the bars of the supreme courts of Missouri, Utah, Montana, and Washington, and of the supreme court of the United States. Recognized among the orators of Montana as one of the most eloquent speakers who ever stood before the people of the state. He is possessed of a personal magnetism and courteous manner that fortify but never betray his stern fidelity to the best ideals, and add to the persuasiveness of his influence for the general good.

Politically Mr. Roote is a Democrat in national affairs, while in local and civic matters he votes for best men and measures regardless of party prejudice. Fraternally he stands high in Masonic circles. In 1891 he was made a Mason in Mansfield Lodge No. 543, at Mansfield, Missouri, which he formerly served as senior warden, and of which he is still a member; he has taken the thirty-second degree of Masonry, and is a Knight Templar, and a member of the Butte Consistory; he is likewise a member of the Bagdad Temple, Ancient Arabic Order of the Mystic Shrine. Socially he belongs to the University Club. Mr. Roote organized, in 1908, the Keating Gold Mining Company, of which he was president until June, 1910, and of which he is now a director and vice president.

On June 19, 1896, Mr. Roote was united in marriage with Miss Rozene Haven Lehman, a native of Shreveport, Louisiana. He has one son, Jesse B. Roote, Jr. Mr. Roote has an attractive home at 607 Grant street, while his offices are located in the Lewisohn building.

December 9, 1905, Mr. Roote was commissioned Judge Advocate General of the National Guard of Montana, with the rank of major, a rank which he still holds.

ROBERT M. SUTHERLAND. Fenton Sutherland, the father of Robert M. Sutherland, came to Utah from the Michigan town of his birth while still merely a youth, his parents being among the Gentile pioneers of Salt Lake City. Both Mr. Fenton Sutherland and his father Jobe Sutherland were capable and prominent attorneys of Utah, being very active in political affairs. They are father and brother, respectively, of the present Senator Sutherland of Utah. It was these same gentlemen, members of the law firm of Sutherland and McBride, who so ably defended the great Brigham Young during his litigation with the government of the United States.

Mr. Fenton Sutherland, junior member of the law firm and son of this most popular of Utah's pioneer attorneys, was married to Mary Ball, daughter of Henry Ball, an Englishman who had brought his young family to Utah that they might have there the religious freedom denied to those of their faith in the mother country. Miss Ball was, to the time of her marriage, a resident of Lark, Utah, the union taking place, however, in Salt Lake City.

Robert M. Sutherland is the only child of this marriage. His father, not being so successful in his practice as had been the grandfather and having his career cut short in the tenth year of the son's life, was unable to give the boy the advantages to which the family had been accustomed. Indeed the young man must have left school then and there and devoted himself to earning a livelihood but for the kindness of an aunt who furnished the funds for two additional years of study. What education he received after the age of sixteen was through his own efforts and outside of the school room. This, necessarily, was not of a professional nature. Immediately upon leaving school he found employment upon a large Montana ranch where he remained for four years, becoming familiar with all lines of ranch life. This experience has been of great use to him of later years in the management of his own valuable ranch. In 1898, he accepted a position as mill hand with the Boston-Montana Mining Company. For eleven years he remained with this company and it was through the strenuous labor of these years that he was enabled to invest in the ranch lands of the Flat Head country that have proven so profitable a possession.

While still employed at the mines, The United States Installment Realty Company of Minneapolis, offered him the position of manager for the state of Montana. This was a savings company much on the order of the building and loan association. After having served this company for only six months Mr. Sutherland decided to join with his brother-in-law, William James Martin, in the establishment of a coal company. They organized the Meaderville Coal Company and are among the best known dealers of Silver Bow county. From the first they seemed to inspire confidence among their patrons and their every effort has brought deserved success. Their office is at the corner of Main and Collusa streets, Meaderville, Montana.

Mr. Sutherland, unlike his brother-in-law, Mr. Martin, is active in the Democratic political circles of Montana, the taste for politics and legislation probably having been inherited from his father and his father's father. He has served as justice of the peace in Basin, Montana, and is local representative, as well as director and stockholder, of the Butte and Spokane Mining Company. This, together with the active management of his large ranch in the Flat Head country, leaves him little leisure. He is, however, a member and treasurer of the Meaderville Volunteer Fire Department and belongs to the lodge of the Modern Woodmen of America.

He was married, in Butte, on the twenty-first day of June, 1904, to Miss Esther Martin. Mrs. Sutherland is the daughter of George and Elizabeth (Duncalf) Martin who, although natives of Michigan, came to Butte from the gold fields of California, in 1885. She is also the sister of William James Martin, the present business partner of Mr. Sutherland in the Meaderville Coal Company.

There have been no children born of this union.

Mr. Sutherland, has not given out for publication the exact amount of his present capital. To figure it one would be obliged to know the capitalization of the Meaderville Coal Company, the amount of stock he owns in the Butte and Spokane Mining Company and the intrinsic value of his beautiful ranch, not to mention other small pieces of real estate. It might be dif-difficult and inquisitive to estimate the worth of all of this but it is, in its entirety, the interest on the saddle horse plus fifteen dollars in cash—the principal with which Robert M. Sutherland started life in 1903. His inheritance was, without doubt, one of which he might well be proud, but an intellectual inheritance, alone, won't multiply a horse into a coal company nor fifteen dollars into a cattle ranch.

HENRY E. ARMSTRONG, M. D. Gifted with a love for his chosen profession, quick of intuition and generous and sympathetic in his work, Dr. Henry E. Armstrong has won the respect and esteem of the citizens of Billings, and by his acknowledged ability has gained an enviable practice. He is a native of Canada, having been born at Orono, in the Province of Ontario, October 29, 1867, and is a son of William and Mary (Elliott) Armstrong.

William Armstrong was born in 1828, in Yorkshire, England, and as a young man immigrated to the United States, settling first in Buffalo, New York, where he followed the trade of saddle maker, which he had learned in his native country. Subsequently he removed to Orono, Ontario, where he continued to follow the same line of business until his death in 1867, when he was only thirty-nine years of age, being the proprietor of a successful harness and saddlery business. He was married to Miss Mary Elliott, who was born in County Fermanagh, Ireland, and she still survives, being in her eighty-fifth year. Three sons and two daughters were born to them, Henry E. being the youngest child. The family is connected with the Church of England.

The early education of Dr. Armstrong was secured in his native place, and he supplemented this by attendance at Trinity University, Toronto, from the medical department of which institution he was graduated with the class of 1894. After spending one year in Brainerd Hospital, Brainerd, Minnesota, he located in practice in Lake Park, Minnesota, but in 1896 removed to Jamestown, North Dakota, where he continued to follow his profession until 1898. Since that year he has been located in Billings, where he has built up a large general practice. In his profession he has steadily arisen until he now occupies a foremost place in its ranks, skill and ability having gained him a wide and enviable reputation. He is a member of the Yellowstone County Medical Society, the Montana State Medical Society and the American Medical Association, and fraternally is connected with Billings Lodge No. 394, B. P. O. E., and other societies. In political matters he is independent and has not desired public preferment, although he keeps well informed on the issues of the day. He maintains a well appointed suite of offices in the Stapleton building, where may be found an extensive and valuable medical library, and the leading journals of the profession.

In 1904 Dr. Armstrong was united in marriage with Mrs. Mattie Chapple, nee Murphy, a native of Ontario, Canada.

REUBEN M. HOBBS. The history of a nation is nothing more than a history of the individuals comprising it, and as they are characterized by loftier or lower ideals, actuated by the spirit of ambition or indifference, so it is with a state, county or town. Reuben M. Hobbs, who is chief accountant for the Butte Electric & Power Company, at Butte, Montana, is a citizen of prominence and influence and one who is ever on the qui vive to do all in his power to advance the best interests of his community.

A native of the state of Illinois, Reuben M. Hobbs was born at Yorkville on the 19th of January, 1874, and he is a son of Franklin and Harriet (Crooker) Hobbs, both of whom were born in the state of Maine, the former on the 20th of January, 1828, and the latter on the 29th of September, 1830. Franklin Hobbs removed, with his family, to Illinois in the days prior to the inception of the Civil war. When that struggle came on he gave evidence of his intrinsic loyalty to the cause of his country by enlisting as a soldier in Company H, Eighty-ninth Illinois Volunteer Infantry. As the war proceeded he was made captain of his company and he served with the utmost gallantry throughout the entire period of the war. After the close of hostilities Captain Hobbs returned to Yorkville, Illinois, where he was engaged in business as a merchant until 1902, retiring in that year. He is now residing, with his wife, at that place, and while this venerable old couple are well advanced in years they are still active, retaining all their faculties. Captain and Mrs. Hobbs became the parents of seven children, six of whom are living, in 1911, and of whom Reuben M. was the seventh in order of birth.

Reuben M. Hobbs received his preliminary educational training in the public schools of Yorkville, Illinois, and in 1891 he was matriculated as a student in the University of Illinois, in which excellent institution he was a member of the class of 1895. After leaving college he went to the city of Chicago, Illinois, where he secured employment in the large music concern of Lyon & Healy. In 1897 he went to Denver, Colorado, remaining in that city for one year, at the expiration of which he came to Montana, locating in Butte in 1898. His first employment in this city was with the Anaconda Copper Mining Co., with which well-known concern he remained for four years. In 1902 he became identified with the Butte Electric & Power Company, taking first a minor position and gradually working up until he was made chief accountant of the company, a position of which he is incumbent at the present time, in 1912. While he does not take an active part in local politics, Mr. Hobbs is a stalwart in the ranks of the Republican party in his political convictions. In religious matters he and his wife are devout communicants of the Protestant Episcopal church and in a social way he is connected with the University Club of Butte, of which organization he is a director, and he is also a valued member of the Phi Delta Theta college fraternity. He is exceedingly fond of music and devotes a great deal of attention to the reading of good literature.

On the 7th of November, 1900, at Butte, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Hobbs to Miss Hazel N. Hines, who is a daughter of George and Olive Hines. George Hines was the first jeweler in Butte and was a citizen of prominence prior to his demise, in 1899. Mr. and Mrs. Hobbs are the parents of two children,—Janet Merrill, born September 8, 1907; and Marian Frances, whose birth occurred on the 15th of July, 1909.

ALEXANDER MACKEL. An able and influential member of the Montana bar, Alexander Mackel is widely known in the broad fields of his profession, his fine legal attainments, his scholarly and forceful arguments, and his many successes, having given him a well-merited reputation throughout Silver Bow county. A native of Minnesota, he was born, December 12, 1875, in Red Wing, Goodhue county, of excellent German ancestry.

His father, Ignatius Mackel, was born, bred and educated in Germany. After the Revolutionary movement in Germany, about the middle of the nineteenth century, he came with Carl Schurz and others to the United States, locating first in Chicago. After the great fire which devastated that city, he moved to Minnesota, becoming a pioneer settler of Goodhue county, where he bought land, and was subsequently engaged in agricultural pursuits. In 1879 he moved to Norman county, Minnesota, where he resided until his death, in 1889. He married, in Iowa, Mary Buss, who was born in St. Louis, Missouri, and died February 12, 1904. Of the seventeen children born of their union, nine are now, in 1912, living, Alexander being the fifth child in order of birth.

Brought up on a farm, Alexander Mackel was educated in the public schools, during the later years of his attendance walking three miles to the village school. At the age of sixteen years he began teaching school, and for two years taught in his home county, spending his long vacations and whatever leisure time he had in the nearby lumber camps, or in the saw mills near Duluth. At the end of three years, Mr. Mackel having saved some money, continued his education at the State Normal School in Moorhead, Minnesota. He afterwards entered the law department of the University of Minnesota, where, at the end of two years, in 1894, he was graduated with the degree of LL. B. In July, 1894, six months after his graduation, he was nominated county attorney for Norman county, Minnesota, on the Populist ticket, and being elected served two years. Going then to Texas, Mr. Mackel was engaged in the practice of law in Jackson county until the breaking out of the Spanish-American war, when, at Dallas, he enlisted for service in the army. Being sent to Austin for examination, he was rejected on account of ill health, and went back to Dallas. A few months later he returned to Minnesota, and in December, 1898, came from there to Montana. Immediately locating in Butte, Mr. Mackel has since been actively engaged in the practice of his profession in Butte, where he has built up an extensive and lucrative patronage. The care of interests involving largely the element of personal trust constitutes a fair share of his patronage, although he specializes in criminal work, and has a large private practice against corporations, branches of the law with which he is especially familiar. In 1902 and 1903 he served as county attorney for Silver Bow county.

Mr. Mackel is a man of good business ability, and is now a director in the Montana Illinois Copper Mining Company, incorporated, and is its attorney. In his political relations Mr. Mackel was formerly a Populist, and an adherent of the Labor party, but since 1910 has been actively identified with the Socialists. Fraternally Mr. Mackel belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, in which he is past noble grand; to the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks; and to the Knights of Pythias. Socially he is a valued member of the Silver Bow Club. Broad and liberal in his religious beliefs, he is an active and faithful member of the Unitarian church.

LOUIS B. WOODS, general agent in the freight department of the Great Northern Railway in Butte, entered the railroad service as a telegraph operator soon after his graduation from the high school, and since then he has filled many positions in a number of different places in the service, and has made steady and rapid progress in it from post to post by frequent promotions. His success has been based on faithful attention to duty, ability in the performance of it and efficiency in every respect.

Mr. Woods is a native of Waverly, Bremer county, Iowa, where his life began on May 5, 1870. He is a son of James Weston and Adeline Estella (Walling) Woods, the former born in Boston, Massachusetts, and the latter in eastern Canada. They were married in Burlington, Iowa, the mother having moved to that city with her parents in her girlhood. She is now living in Denver, Colorado. James Weston Woods moved to Iowa at a very early period in the history of the state and there became prominent as an attorney. He helped to make the state constitution and took an active part in the Black Hawk Indian war, coming out of the struggle with the rank and title of colonel. He died in Iowa in 1883 after a long record of great usefulness to the state.

Louis B. Woods attended the country schools in his native place until he reached the age of eight years. His parents then moved to Eldora in Hardin county, and there he continued his education until he was graduated from the high school. He then learned telegraphy, and, after mastering the art, he secured a position with the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad as station agent. A short time afterward he became connected with the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, remaining with them until 1890. Going from that line to the Cudahy Packing Company at Omaha, Nebraska, and later to the Union Pacific Railroad in Wyoming, where he was employed as station agent and telegraph operator eight years. At the end of that period he came to Boulder, Montana, as block train despatcher for the Great Northern. From Boulder he was transferred to Belt and from Belt to Helena, and in the city last named from the station agency to the traffic department. In 1903 he came to Butte to serve the road in the same capacity, and in 1909 was promoted to fill the position of general agent of the freight department. In his career as a railroad man he has always filled with credit to himself and benefit to his employers the positions he has held, and has many times won honorable mention and high commendation from the officials above him in the service.

Mr. Woods was married in Denver, Colorado, on January 28, 1897, to Miss Julia A. Potter, a native of Pennsylvania and the daughter of David G. and Lydia (Klephans) Potter. Mr. and Mrs. Woods have no children, but Mr. Woods has two brothers: George W. Woods, a train despatcher in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Hon. William Weston Woods, judge of the district court in Wallace, Idaho.

Mr. Woods has taken a cordial interest in the fraternal life of his community and state. He is a Royal Arch Mason and a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and the Royal Neighbors. Of the social organizations around him he belongs to the Silver Bow and the Anaconda clubs. In political faith and allegiance he is allied with the Democratic party, and while living in Helena was the ward representative of that party in the section of his residence in 1902.

Mrs. Woods is also a zealous worker in fraternal and social circles. She is a prominent member of the Women's Club in Butte, belongs to Helena Chapter of the Order of the Eastern Star, and is also conspicuous in the Order of Royal Neighbors. She and her husband are members of the Episcopal church and devoted in their interest in the welfare of the parish in which they hold their membership.

Mr. Woods is something of a sportsman too. He is fond of hunting and fishing, and seeks recreation from the cares of business in these pastimes whenever he has opportunity in the proper seasons. Mr. and Mrs. Woods are among the most highly esteemed residents of Butte, and fully deserving of the cordial regard bestowed upon them.

JAMES T. BOYD. From the rugged, rock-bound coast of Maine have come many of Montana's best citizens, men identified with large affairs and important ventures, who have demonstrated that their stern New England training has been as valuable to them in the practically new country where they have cast their lots as it would have proved in the older east. To this class belongs James T. Boyd, of Great Falls, well known in business, realty and mining circles, and a member of an old and honored New England family whose members participated in the War of the Revolution, and whose founder, Capt. Thomas Boyd, of the marine service, came from Glasgow, Scotland. Mr. Boyd was born in the city of Bath, Maine, October 16, 1867, and is a son of Capt. Alpheus P. and Susan (Truford) Boyd.

Following the example of a number of his forefathers, Alpheus P. Boyd early took to the sea as a means of livelihood, and for many years commanded vessels that sailed to ports all over the world. On retiring from sailing he settled down in Boston, Massachusetts, where he spent his last days, and there his death occurred in December, 1909, when he was eighty years of age. His widow, a native of Maine, is still a resident of Boston and is seventy-two years old. They had seven children, of whom James T. was the fourth in order of birth.

James T. Boyd secured his education in the schools of Boston, Massachusetts, and on completing his scholastic training removed to Duluth, Minnesota, where for three years he worked at the trade of plumbing as an apprentice. On leaving Duluth he came to Great Falls, in 1898, and went to work at his trade, which he continued to follow for eight years. At that time he opened up the large plumbing business which bears his name, but in the meanwhile continued to be employed by the Great Falls Hardware Company. Since locating in Great Falls he has been employed in doing much of the important work in various public institutions, including the Orphans' Home and the New Deaconess' Hospital. An excellent business man and skilled mechanic, he has built up a reputation in his vocation that places him in the foremost rank in this line in Great Falls, although his work has not been confined to the limits of the city. He has shown his confidence in the future of Great Falls by investing in real estate, and also has large interests in mining properties, in all his ventures displaying business shrewdness and acumen and a thorough knowledge of affairs. As one of the energetic, progressive business men of his city he has a wide acquaintance, among which he numbers many influential friends. In political matters Mr. Boyd is a Democrat, but his private interests have been of such a nature as to preclude the idea of his entering the public arena. In religious matters he is an Episcopalian, and fraternally he is a popular member of the Elks and the Electric City Club.

Mr. Boyd was married at Great Falls, January 7, 1907, to Miss Frances Jersen of this city.

JONATHAN G. LOBB, M. D. Classed among the leading physicians and surgeons of Montana, and also holding prestige as one of the most prominent and influential citizens of Great Falls, is Dr. Jonathan G. Lobb, whose proficiency in his calling has been evidenced on a number of occasions since his advent in this city in August, 1910. Dr. Lobb was born in Mariposa township, Little Britain, Ontario, Canada, August 2, 1863, and is a son of John and Lucy (Brown) Lobb. The former, native of England, immigrated to Canada at the age of sixteen years, and shortly thereafter identified himself with the carriage and furniture manufacturing business, with which he was connected during the remainder of his life, his death occurring in 1876, when he was but forty-five years of age. His wife, also a native of England, was a young girl when she went to Canada, and died in 1867, when forty years old. They had a family of four children, of whom three survive.

Dr. Lobb was only thirteen years of age when he was left an orphan by the death of his father, but he managed to secure a good education, graduating from the high school at Bowmanville, Canada. In 1888 he entered a factory in Toronto and learned the carriage trimmer's trade, and during the following year went to Syracuse, New York, where he followed that line of work four years. From his boyhood he had been intent upon entering a profession, and in 1893 found himself financially able to enter college, having carefully saved his earnings since leaving school. In his spare moments he had devoted his whole attention to close and arduous study, and in 1893 he matriculated in the celebrated Rush Medical College, Chicago, from which he was graduated in 1897, immediately after which he engaged in practice at Stanley, Chippewa county, Wisconsin. There, however, Dr. Lobb met with a good measure of success, but the place was small, and, seeking a wider field for the exercise of his abilities, in 1898 removed to Butte, Montana. From that time his success was assured. Associating himself with Dr. George H. Wells, he soon built up a large practice, and his remarkable success in a number of complicated cases gained him a wide-spread reputation. He continued in practice until August, 1910, at Butte, at which time, recognizing the need of Great Falls for a physician and surgeon of his ability and standing he came to this city, which has since been his field of endeavor. The success which rewarded his efforts in Butte has been duplicated here, and no member of the profession stands higher in the confidence of the people. Dr. Lobb is one of whom it may be said he has chosen well his vocation. Possessed of a kind, sympathetic nature, a keen sense of discrimination, and a natural taste for the various branches of the medical profession, he has made a signal success. He has invested to some extent in real estate, owning a handsome residence at No. 1108 Third avenue North, while his well-appointed suite of offices is situated in the Todd building. He also derives a large income from some valuable oil land in Oklahoma. Although a great lover of out-of-door life, Dr. Lobb has considered it his duty to spend a large part of his time in research work, and may often be found devoting his attention to the unraveling of some problem of a scientific nature in his large library, which is well filled with volumes on medicine, science, surgery and kindred subjects. Fraternally, he is connected with Damon Lodge, Knights of Pythias, and Butte Lodge No. 240, B. P. O. E., and he also holds membership in Silver Bow Medical Society. Politically he takes an independent stand, casting his vote rather for the candidate than the political organization.

On April 17, 1905, Dr. Lobb was married at Butte, Montana, to Miss Josephine M. Lyons, a leading member of Butte's social set. Dr. and Mrs. Lobb are members of the Presbyterian church and are well known in religious and social circles.

WALTER E. CHRISTOPHER. With supreme faith in the future of the Plains valley, with the ability to profit by present conditions, and possessing a desire to aid others to do so, Walter E. Christopher, of the city of Plains, is one of the most progressive and public-spirited men of Missoula county, and to his influence and example is largely due the present activity shown in various lines of the city's industries. He holds prestige among the business men of his locality as secretary and treasurer of the Sanders County Mercantile Company, and has also proved his worth in various official public capacities. He is a native of Jersey county, Illinois, and was born November 2, 1872, the youngest of the five sons of John and Mary (Baird) Christopher.

John Christopher was a native of Ohio, and all his life was spent in agricultural pursuits, his death occurring in 1902, when he was seventy-three years of age, and burial being made at the old home in Jerseyville, Illinois. His wife, who passed away in 1910, in Iowa, when seventy-two years of age, was brought back to Illinois and buried at the side of her husband. Walter E. Christopher is the only one of his parents' children to reside in Montana. He secured his education in the public schools of Nebraska and a private school at Beatrice, that state, and as a youth was associated with his father in cultivating the home farm. He was about eight years of age when he accompanied the family to Gage county, Nebraska, and in 1898 came to Montana and secured his first salaried position as an employee of the Missoula Mercantile Company, with which he was connected two years. At that time he came to Plains and identified himself with the McGowan Commercial Company, and after four years there was appointed deputy sheriff of Missoula county, but when he had served something less than a year was elected county treasurer. He acted in that capacity for a period covering four years, and was then elected state senator for Sanders county. In June, 1911, he purchased an interest in the Sanders County Mercantile Company, and as its secretary and treasurer devotes all his time and attention to its interests. He is a valued member of the Plains Valley Commercial Club, and has also been prominent in Odd Fellowship, acting as treasurer of the local lodge for some time. A stalwart Republican in his political proclivities, he is known as one of his party's most active workers in this part of the state, and has declared his intention of continuing to be known as one of the organization's fighters. He is a man of scholarly tastes, greatly enjoying a good speech, or lecture and being equally fond of reading, but outdoor sports have likewise found in him a staunch votary, baseball, hunting, fishing, riding and driving all coming in for their share of favor. It may not inappropriately be said of Mr. Christopher that he is what is known as a "booster" for his locality, declaring that he stands for Montana in general and the Plains valley in particular, and believing that its future is assured, in that it offers better inducements and opportunities than any place in the northwest today. Men who are thus staunch in their championship have always had a beneficial effect upon their sections, no matter where they have resided, and it is probably for this reason that Mr. Christopher is known as one of the leading men of Plains and is so universally popular.

On February 28, 1907, Mr. Christopher was married at Missoula, Montana, to Miss Beulah M. Wheeler, formerly a resident of Illinois. They have one bright child: Mary Meusetta.

HON. BENJAMIN B. LAW. Many of Montana's most prominent attorneys and public men started their careers in other fields of endeavor and took up the profession of law only when they had earned the means to prosecute their legal studies by applying themselves to other vocations. Among this class may be found individuals who have risen to a high position in public life, prominent among whom may be mentioned Benjamin B. Law, of Bozeman, state representative from Gallatin county, and a man who deserves the high esteem in which he is held for the services he has rendered his county and state. Mr. Law is a native of the Old Dominion State, having been born at Glade Hill, Franklin county, Virginia, December 17, 1879, a son of William D. and Mary A. (Dudley) Law, farming people of that state, who are still living in Franklin county. Mr. Law's father was born in 1852, and his mother in 1856, both in Virginia, and of their four children three are still surviving; Benjamin B.; James A., of Carbon county, Montana; and Alexander C., of Lewistown, Montana.

Benjamin B. Law's early education was secured in the public schools of Franklin county, and as a youth of nineteen years he made his way west to Helena, Montana, subsequently securing employment on a ranch in Madison county. He later removed to Bozeman and pursued a course of study in the Montana College of Agriculture, with the idea of fitting himself for farming operations, but after a short period, deciding to enter the legal profession, became a student in the law department of the University of Missouri, at Columbia. He did not graduate from that institution, however, but in June, 1906, located in Bozeman, where he engaged in the practice of law. In November of that year he was elected county attorney of Gallatin county, and his services in that office were of such a character as to warrant his re-election in 1908. Having gained the confidence and esteem of the people of his locality, in 1910 he became a candidate for the office of representative from Gallatin county, was elected after a strenuous campaign, and honorably served in that distinguished position. Mr. Law has been able to bring about the passage of various measures calculated to be of benefit to his constituents and his community, and known as one of the active working members of the assembly. He continues his profession and has a large and representative clientele, his well-appointed offices being situated in the Golden Rule building. An excellent example of the self-educated, self-made man, he is gaining a high position in the esteem of the people of his section, in whose interest he is devoting his best energies. Mr. Law is Democratic in his political views, loyally supporting the issues and candidates of his party. Fraternally, he is connected with Western Star Lodge No. 4, I. O. O. F.; Bozeman Lodge No. 463, B. P. O. E., and Onawa Lodge, I. O. R. M.

In 1912 Mr. Law was united in marriage with Miss Gladys King, daughter of Ernest W. King, a prominent financier, mine promoter and owner and statesman, of Bozeman.

SAMUEL V. STEWART. The name of Samuel V. Stewart, or "Sam" Stewart as he is better known, is perhaps the most heard name in Montana just at this time, for on the 5th of November, 1912, he was elected by the people of that state as their next governor. His name has long occupied a conspicuous place on the roll of Montana's eminent lawyers, and during his fourteen years' connection with the bar of the state he has won and maintained a reputation for ability that has given him just pre-eminence among his professional brethren. In the law, as in every other walk of life, success is largely the outcome of resolute purpose and unfaltering industry,—qualities which are possessed in a large degree by Mr. Stewart. His personal popularity was manifested by the enthusiasm with which his nomination for the gubernatorial office was received by the people and the strength of the vote which he polled at election time.

In Monroe county, Ohio, August 2, 1872, occurred the birth of Samuel V. Stewart, who is a son of John Wilson Stewart and Maria A. (Carle) Stewart, the former of whom died in 1911, at the age of seventy-eight years, and the latter of whom passed into the Great Beyond in 1909 aged seventy-three years. John W. Stewart was born in Marshall county, West Virginia, and at the age of thirty-two years removed to Ohio, whence he went to Kansas in 1883. In the latter state he devoted his attention to farming operations and while greatly interested in local politics and a great booster for the Democratic party he never ran for or held public office of any description. He and his wife were married in Ohio and they became parents of five children, of whom four are living, in 1912, as follows: William R. C. is judge of the North district court and resides in Bozeman, Montana; Harold M. is a prominent lawyer at Bozeman and member of the Montana legislature from Gallatin county, session 1913; Samuel V. is the immediate subject of this article; and Sallie W. resides in Kansas.

Samuel V. Stewart was eleven years of age when the family home was established in Kansas, and in that state he completed his educational training. For some time he was a student in the Kansas Normal College, at Fort Scott, and subsequently he taught school for two years in Kansas. At the expiration of that time he entered the State Normal School, at Emporia, Kansas, there pursuing a two-year course of study. He then entered the University of Kansas at Lawrence, in the law department of which excellent institution he was graduated, with the degree of Bachelor of Laws, in 1898. Immediately after leaving college he came to Montana, where he was admitted to the bar and where he has since been most successfully engaged in the active practice of law. In connection with his law work he is a valued and appreciative member of the Montana State Bar Association, in which he is chairman of the Grievance committee, in 1912.

The pleasantest incident in Mr. Stewart's professional career occurred in Virginia City when he was a novice in practical legal work. A very important criminal case was being tried—he was counsel for the defendant and had arrayed against him some of the best legal talent of the state, the same including the late Col. Wilber Sanders. The case was fought with precision on both sides and Mr. Stewart made his first jury address, which, while the case was not completely won, brought about such satisfactory results as to give him full confidence for his future work.

In regard to the reputation and work of Mr. Stewart as a lawyer the Butte Miner, in an editorial headed "Montana's Next Governor," in an issue of October 21, 1912, has the following: "Mr. Stewart is a lawyer by profession. He has practiced for the past fifteen years in old Virginia City, the capital of Madison county, and has acquired there a large clientele, composed of the best citizens and most successful merchants of the county. In his profession he is recognized as a close, careful student of the law, an accurate drawer of papers, and keen examiner, and an eloquent pleader before a jury. His professional standard of ethics is high, and his ideals of public responsibility are deep and abiding."

In his political convictions Mr. Stewart is aligned as a stalwart in the ranks of the Democratic party, which organization he has served as chairman of the state central committee, having been elected in 1910. Now the crowning honor that the state could bestow upon him has been given him and as her governor he will have a broader field in which to exercise the powers that are so evidently his. The following which was published in the Butte Miner before the election is quoted to show the feeling of the people of the state: "The convention that nominated Mr. Stewart made a wise selection, as subsequent events have proved. He made his foray for the nomination backed by a host of old-time friends and admirers, and he won the place in as clean a fight as was ever made for a nomination at the hands of a political party in Montana. That he had opposition in the convention only sharpened his courage for the fray, and made acceptable the honor when it came to him. Sure of a comfortable majority the day he was nominated, Mr. Stewart has been making rapid strides and substantial gains all over the state. Sam V. Stewart is the ideal type of man for governor of a great and strong state like Montana. His physical presence is commanding, and he looks the leader of men that he really is. Tall, straight, handsome, of powerful physique, strong features, splendid voice, easy and graceful of poise, eloquent of speech, clear and lucid of thought and expression, he appeals to the people as few men in public life are able to do."

In Masonic circles Mr. Stewart is a member of blue lodge and a Shriner, and he is likewise affiliated with the Elks, in which he is past exalted ruler, the Fraternal Order of Eagles, of which he was state president in 1910, the Modern Woodmen of America, the Woodmen of the World, and the Lamb's Club, of Helena. His religious inclinations are toward the faith of the Presbyterian church. As a sportsman Mr. Stewart indulges in fishing and hunting trips, attendance at baseball and football games, and he takes considerable recreation in driving and automobiling. He says that he is a great believer in Montana and does not think there is a state in the Union with as great or as varied natural resources. He is an energetic, progressive citizen, and the following appeal that was made in his behalf during the recent campaign is indeed true: "A vote for Samuel V. Stewart is a vote for the best interests of this state, a vote for the continuance of the Progressive administration now coming to a close, a vote for the best man aspiring to the position, and a vote for the further prosperity of the great Treasure state."

At Booneville, Missouri, April 27, 1905, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Stewart to Miss Stella Baker, a daughter of William and Emma Baker, prominent residents of Booneville. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Stewart, whose names are here entered in respective order of birth,—Emily, Marjorie and Leah PRESTON M. BOSLEY has been a resident of the state of Montana since 1898, and has in the years that have elapsed since then experienced much of success and prosperity financially and in other ways, equally, if not more important. As a boy his opportunities were of a meagre order, the death of his father when he was nine years old sending him forth into the world at an early age as a breadwinner. As a prominent rancher and a lawyer of no little ability, he has won to himself in Harlem a position consistent with his ambitions, but out of proportion to his early advantages.

Mr. Bosley was born at Princeton, Mercer county, Missouri, on the 19th day of November, 1856, and he is the son of Abraham G. and Percilla (McCrea) Bosley. The father was a farmer, and he died on December 18, 1865. The second marriage of his mother caused Preston Bosley to leave home at the age of fourteen, and thus his schooling did not extend beyond the grammar school period. He made his own living in various means thereafter, in the meantime taking up the study of law through the medium of Sprague's Correspondence Schools, which for years past has done so much for the ambitious but impecunious youth of our country, and in this wise acquired a goodly working knowledge of the law as applied to the land business. In 1898 he settled on a farm in Montana in Chouteau county, now Blaine county, and at the same time took up the practice of law in Harlem, specializing on land cases. He was particularly successful in both departments of his business, and has since then purchased another ranch, and it is his intention now to give up his legal practice in the near future and devote his entire time to the management of his ranches. In addition to his ranch property Mr. Bosley is the owner of a pleasant home in Harlem.

On November 5, 1876, Mr. Bosley was united in marriage with Miss Antoinette Everett, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hosea B. Everett, former residents of Ohio, but now living in Harlem. Mrs. Bosley is a sister of Senator T. M. Everett of Harlem. Six children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Bosley, named as follows: Ella, the wife of Judson F. Sharples of Coburg, Montana; May, married to Edward Forbes of Harlem; Hosea G., a student of McAllister College in St. Paul, Minnesota, the ministry being his goal; Gertie J., the wife of H. C. Willetts of Browning, Montana; Everett F. and Lucy, both students at McAllister College in St. Paul.

Mr. Bosley is a Republican, and has been prominent in Harlem politics. He has served the city on its board of aldermen for three terms, and is in every way an exemplary citizen, at all times keeping in mind the best good of the community and exerting every effort to bring about better conditions in the communal life. As a man, he is justly proud of his success in life, and is particularly pleased over the fact that he has been able to give to his children the advantages of higher education, which he was not permitted to share in. It is a happy circumstance that all are worthy of the care and forethought their parents have expended on them, and they may reasonably be expected to reflect honor upon those parents in the years to come.

Mr. Bosley is a member of the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons and of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, in which latter named order he has filled all the offices of the local lodge.

JAMES EDWARD TOTMAN. Numbered among the more prominent and successful representatives of the lumber trade of Montana is James Edward Totman, who, as superintendent and general manager of the Anaconda Milling plant, at Hamilton, stands in the front rank among the leaders of that great industry. A son of the late Henry Totman, he was born June 9, 1849, at Plattsburg, New York, in the beautiful region bordering on Lake Champlain.

A native of New York state, Henry Totman was identified with the lumbering interests of the country during his entire life. Leaving Plattsburg in 1852, he removed with his family to Coopers Plains, New York, where he remained four years. In 1857 he went to Wisconsin, locating first at Green Bay, where he was for a year engaged in lumbering. Going then to Stiles, he remained there three years and was afterwards in business at Oconto, Wisconsin, until his death in October, 1867, while yet in the prime of life. His wife, whose maiden name was Elizabeth Jackson, was born in New York, and at her death, which occurred at Oconto, Wisconsin, in 1885, was laid to rest beside her husband in the cemetery of that city.

Gleaning his first knowledge of the three "R's" in the schools at Coopers Plains, New York, James E. Totman subsequently continued his studies in Wisconsin, attending school at Green Bay, Stiles and Oconto. While living in the last-named place he entered Beloit (Wis.) College, but ere graduating his plans were necessarily changed on account of the death of his father. Immediately returning home, he engaged in the lumber business, which he conducted successfully until 1877. Going in that year to La Crosse, Wisconsin, Mr. Totman accepted a position with C. L. Coleman, for five years superintending his lumber and milling plant. In 1882 he went with Sawyer and Austin of La Crosse, and had charge of the lumber and milling interests of the Sawyer & Austin Company for twelve years at Winona, Minnesota. He came to Hamilton in 1898 as superintendent of the milling plant of the Anaconda Milling Company, holding a position of great importance, trust and responsibility. His entire life has been spent in the lumber industry, and it is safe to say that no man in the great northwest is better informed as regards the lumber business of our country than he. Mr. Totman has acquired valuable interests in the agricultural lands of Ravalli county, and is a firm and enthusiastic believer in the future greatness of the Bitter Root valley.

Mr. Totman has been twice married. He married first Miss Annie B. Duckelow, of New York. She passed to the higher life in 1902, leaving two daughters, namely: Bessie, now wife of Dwight Hughes, of Missoula, Montana; and Eva, now wife of George Beckwith, a prosperous ranchman on the Flathead reservation. Mr. Totman married for his second wife Mrs. Mary L. (Fillmore) More, widow of Daniel More. Fraternally, Mr. Totman holds a place of prominence in the Ancient Free and Accepted Order of Masons, having taken the York and Scottish Rite degrees, and being a member, also, of the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He and his family occupy one of the finest residences in Hamilton, it having been erected specially for him by the Anaconda Milling Company.

HORATIO E. MOODY. Intelligent, wide-awake and enterprising, Horatio E. Moody, of Concord, has built up a substantial and remunerative business under the name of the Concord Feed Company, his unflinching courtesy and prompt attention to the wants of his customers having secured him a liberal patronage. Of English descent, he was born, May 22, 1880, in Johnson county, Kansas, and was there brought up on a farm.

His father, Frederick W. Moody, was born in England in 1842, and sixteen years later came to America with his parents, Thomas and Elizabeth Moody, who settled in Kansas, and there spent their remaining days, the mother dying in 1898, aged four score and four years, and the father in 1904, at the venerable age of ninety-seven years. But a beardless youth when he arrived in Kansas, he assisted his father in the pioneer labor of upturning the sod, and transforming a part of the wild prairie into a garden spot. Soon after attaining his majority, he began farming on his own account in Johnson county, Kansas, where he was an early settler, and has remained there ever since. Industrious and far-seeing, he has been very successful in his operations in spite of the many drawbacks suffered in that state, by the agriculturists, from time to time increasing the acreage of his estate, being now one of the more prominent and wealthy farmers of his community. He married Harriet Owens, who was born in Lexington, Kentucky, in 1848, and to them nine children has been born, namely; Arthur; Mrs. Elsie Byler; William; Mrs. Katie McGee; Edith; Horatio E.; Frederick T.; Francis; and Percy.

Acquiring a practical education in the rural schools of his native county, Horatio E. Moody also became familiar with the various branches of agriculture while young, and in 1898 went to Texas in search of fortune, where he worked on a ranch for a year. Not at all satisfied with his future prospects in the lone star state, he came north to Montana, and for a brief time worked in Billings. Going from there to Cascade, Mr. Moody was employed on a ranch in that vicinity for four years, after which he came to Chouteau county in search of a more desirable position. Entering the employ of J. B. Long, owner of the ranch where now the town of Concord stands, he continued with him until Mr. Long removed. Embarking then in business on his own account, Mr. Moody, in 1910, opened his large feed barn in the new town of Concord, and in its management has met with well-merited success, the feed and hay business which he established under its present name of The Concord Feed Company being one of the foremost enterprises of the kind in the county.

One of the most popular of the younger citizens of Concord, Mr. Moody believes in the town and its prospects, and is ever ready to say a good word in its favor. Fond of outdoor sports of all kinds, he is a most genial companion, and has won a large circle of friends. In his political affiliations he is a Progressive Democrat, and ever ready to advance the interests of his party. Religiously he is a member of the Christian church. He has never married, but is still heart whole and heart free.

ROYAL S. WOOD. One of the men who identified themselves with the new country of northwest Montana and have come to possess an important share in its business and civic prosperity is Mr. Wood, an enterprising and successful young business man of Galata.

Royal S. Wood was born at Oxford, Nova Scotia, January 11, 1878, a son of Rufus O. and Mary E. (Reed) Wood. Rufus O. came to Montana for his health in 1909 and went to Lethbridge, Alberta, where he died in May, 1909, at the age of sixty-seven. He had a long and prosperous business career, and in Nova Scotia conducted a sawmill and also was a dealer in lumber, flour and feed. The mother was born in Nova Scotia, and is now living at the age of sixty-five in Lethbridge.

The first twenty years of his life, Mr. Wood spent in Nova Scotia, where he gained his education in the public schools. In 1898 he moved to Montana, and became a rancher in Chouteau county, and was connected with the then principal industry of this part of the state for seven years. He was later a resident of Great Falls until 1910, in which year he located in Galata. Here, in partnership with the pioneer business man, C. A. McCarter, he established the Galata Lumber Company. He has since bought Mr. McCarter's interest and now conducts the principal business of the kind in this vicinity, dealing in lumber, farm machinery, coal, hay and feed, and has a large trade with the farmers and stockmen of this locality.

Mr. Wood was married in Great Falls, Montana, June 1, 1904, to Miss Emily C. Price. Their one child, born in Galata, September, 1906, is named May E., and is attending school in Great Falls.

As a lumberman Mr. Wood is connected with the Hoo Hoo fraternity. He is a stockholder in the Great Falls Telephone Company. At Galata he is now serving as one of the school trustees, and gives his support to all movements for the advancement and welfare of his home town. He is independent in politics, and his wife is a member of the Congregational church.

WILLIAM A. MATHEWS. Each calling or business, if honorable, has its place in human existence, constituting a part of the plan whereby life's methods are pursued and man reaches his ultimate destiny. Emerson has said, "All are needed by each one," and this is as true in one avenue of life's activities as in another. A man has achieved the highest success who may be called a good citizen, who lives so that he can look any man in the face and esteems his own personal advantage less than the welfare of the community. One of the good citizens of white Sulphur Springs is William A. Mathews, who has resided here since 1905 and is engaged in wagon and carriage-making and blacksmithing. He is one of the several excellent members of society whom New England has given to Meagher county, his eyes having first opened to the light of day on April 25, 1866 in Lincoln county, Maine. His father, Joseph A. Mathews was also a native of Maine, in which state he has spent his entire life and where he now maintains his residence. He engaged in all his active career in the trade of blacksmithing. The maiden name of his wife was Helen Fitzgerald. This estimable lady passed away in 1907, at the age of sixty-nine years and is interred near the old family homestead in the Pine Tree state. She and her husband reared four children, Mr. Mathews of this review being the youngest in order of birth.

Young William remained beneath the parental roof-tree until he reached the age of eighteen years, receiving his education in the public schools and under the capable tuition of his father learning the trade of that gentleman. Upon leaving home he went to Lowell, Massachusetts, where for three years he was employed as a carriage maker; subsequently to that he located in Merrimack, Massachusetts and after a period in that place, went to Boston. Gradually there found an abiding place in his soul the ambition to come west and in 1898 he realized this ambition and crossed the continent to Montana. He first located in Martinsdale, where he conducted a shop for some six years and in 1905 arrived in White Sulphur Springs, where he established his present business. His work has always been in this line and his knowledge of it is unsurpassed, while his financial fortunes have been gratifying. His business is one of those sound and substantial ones, which have added in no small degree to the prosperity of the community in which his interests are centered.

Mr. Mathews is a Democrat, having since the attainment of his majority consistently supported the men and measures of the party of Jefferson, Jackson and Cleveland. He takes no active part in politics, however, the honors and emoluments of office having never proved alluring to him. Fraternally he is a member of the Odd Fellows and the Royal Highlanders and has gone through all the chairs in both lodges. Those topics and pursuits which most engross him are hunting, fishing, horses, the drama, music and good reading. —in short he is fond of all the finer things of life. He attends the Presbyterian church. When interviewed on the subject of Montana, Mr. Mathews said: "If you want health, good water, pure air and a good opportunity in business, come to Montana."

Mr. Mathews laid one of the most important stones in the foundation of his success by his union with Annie Ganning, their marriage being celebrated in 1896 at Merrimack, Massachusetts. They have a son and a daughter, namely: Joseph, a young man associated with his father in business, and Helen, a school girl.

HARRY A. BOLINGER, one of Bozeman's valued and active citizens, prominent in professional, educational and social circles, and a self-made man, has gained prominence through hard toiling and struggle in his early days, and his continued industry and perseverance in later years. Terminating his preliminary studies in the public schools, he did not feel well enough equipped to enter the struggle of business life, and accordingly solved the problem by working his way through the higher educational institutions, always directing his ardent ambition towards a definite goal. Today he has a wide professional reputation, and may well be classed among those who have assisted in advancing their city's interests while forwarding their own.

Mr. Bolinger was born November 30, 1872, near Fort Scott, Kansas, and is the son of Adam and Margaret (Kough) Bolinger. He is of a family of six boys and one girl, he being the fourth child.

Adam Bolinger was born in Huntingdon county, Pennsylvania, April 17, 1838, and Margaret Kough was born in the same county, August 29, 1844. When a young man Adam Bolinger removed to Carroll county, Illinois, where for some years he was engaged in farming and carpentering. In 1866 he went to Bourbon county, Kansas, where he engaged in farming and stock raising, and where he and his wife are now living in retirement.

The early education of Harry A. Bolinger was obtained in the country schools. He later completed the course in the Kansas Normal College of Fort Scott, Kansas, a private normal school founded and then run by D. E. Sanders, who was afterwards president of the State Normal School of Montana. For want of funds, Mr. Bolinger's attendance of that institution was interrupted by intervals during which he taught school and engaged in the lumber manufacturing industry, the latter being in the state of Louisiana.

He graduated from the law department of the Kansas University in the year 1898, working in the probate judge's office at Lawrence, Kansas, during his last year in that school, and until October 1, 1898, when he came to Montana, where he has since been engaged in the practice of law. He engaged in the practice at Townsend for a few months, and for several years at Butte, and in July, 1903 moved from that place to Bozeman, where he has since resided and been engaged in the general practice of his profession. While in Butte he was assistant city attorney for a period of about four years, and assisted in representing that city in much important litigation. He was city attorney for the city of Bozeman for two years, and is and has been a member of the school board at that place for six years, and chairman of that board since 1911.

Mr. Bolinger was married July 8, 1902, to Miss Mary E. McIntosh, who was born near Fort Scott, Kansas, February 20, 1877. She is the daughter of Daniel M. and Sarah I. McIntosh, who were pioneers of Kansas, and who have resided in Gallatin county, Montana, since 1908. Mrs. Bolinger is the oldest of a family of four girls and one boy. Mr. and Mrs. Bolinger have four children: Margarette May, Ruth Elizabeth, Harry A., Jr., and Mary Elizabeth.

For some time Mr. Bolinger has been interested in farm lands, and is the owner of a large grain and stock ranch in the Shields River valley, Park county. In this, as in other ventures, he has been uniformly successful, his versatility being demonstrated in no uncertain manner. He has the happy faculty of making friends and the rarer one of keeping them, and is popular in professional, business and social circles.

AARON M. MIKALSON. The town of Eureka has no more enterprising and vigorously public-spirited citizen than Mr. Mikalson, who has been one of the active business builders in this community. He began his career by running away from home, arriving in Montana without a cent of money. Industry, business ability and solid integrity have in a little more than ten years placed him among the leading business men in northwest Montana.

Aaron M. Mikalson was born at Hudson, Wisconsin, August 12, 1881. His parents were John M. and Sophia (Amundsen) Mikalson, both natives of Norway. The father was one of the pioneers at Hudson, having settled there about 1864. Farming was his occupation, and he is now living retired at Hudson. The mother died at Hudson in 1899 at the age of forty.

The second in a family of eleven children, Aaron M. lived at home and attended the public schools until he was seventeen years old. The spirit of adventure and independence being strong within him, he then left home and started west. Arriving at Great Falls, without money, he got a job with Strain Brothers, and by hard work was soon accumulating the capital for independent business enterprise. Not long after he came to Kalispell and went into the lumber business on his own account, continuing there four years and doing a very good business. On leaving Kalispell he homesteaded a claim in Tobacco valley six miles from Eureka, and the 160 acres on which he was engaged in farming for several years is still in his property assets. In February, 1910, with a capital of several thousand dollars, he established at Eureka his present business in general merchandise—clothing, dry goods, boots and shoes, groceries, etc.—and now has the largest store in town and a trade extending throughout this vicinity. His store building covers a floor space of 40 by 80 feet, and is filled with a well assorted stock.

Mr. Mikalson has taken the lead in various movements connected with the development of his section of the state. He is president of the Eureka Mutual Telephone Company and one of the original incorporators; is treasurer of the Chamber of Commerce; and is secretary of the Lincoln County Fair Association. His politics is Republican. His fraternal affiliations are with the Elks Club in Kalispell, the Odd Fellows at Eureka, of which lodge he is secretary, and the Modern Woodmen of America in Eureka. He also has membership in the Eureka Club.

Mr. Mikalson was married at Harrodsburg, Kentucky, October 12, 1910, to Miss Hallie Lillard, a native of that state. Their one son, born in Eureka, June 6, 1911, is named Norman. By a former marriage Mr. Mikalson has two children: Arthur, born May 21, 1903, and Evan, born February 2, 1905, both natives of Kalispell.

EZRA SLACK is the founder and organizer of the firm of Slack, Miller & Robinson, one of the principal real estate firms in Kalispell, and he is known for one of the most valuable citizens in the city today. He has been a resident of Montana since 1898, and has made Kalispell his headquarters since that time.

Mr. Slack was born in Ontario, Canada, on November 4, 1850. He is the son of James and Abigail (Wooley) Slack, both natives of Ontario, and both of them are descendants of early Pennsylvania settlers.

The father was a farmer, and in 1867 he settled in Michigan where he passed the remainder of his life. He died in 1910, having reached the good old age of eighty-four years. The mother died at the Michigan home in Ubyly, Huron county, in 1905, when she was in her seventy-second year of life. They were the parents of six sons and three daughters, Ezra, of this review being the first born of the number. He spent his life on the farm to the age of thirty, and carried on diversified farming, and thereafter was engaged in mercantile business in Ubyly. When he was forty-eight years old he sold out his business interests there and determined to move to Montana. He visited Kalispell first, and was so impressed with the place that he sought no further for a location and thereupon settled here, engaging almost immediately in the real estate business, timber and farm lands being his specialty. He continued alone in the business, which was successful from the beginning, until 1910, when C. E. Miller became a member of the firm, and one year later A. L. Robinson was added to the personnel of the concern, the firm now being known as Slack, Miller & Robinson. They conduct a thriving and lucrative business in their line, and are known for the dependable methods which have won the confidence of the buying public in this city.

Mr. Slack is a Republican in his political views, but is not a politician in any sense of the word. He has declined various offices of a high order, among them that of mayor of the city, believing that he can best serve the public interest in an unofficial position. He is a Methodist, and is a man of quiet, homelike instincts, preferring the comforts of his own home to any outside enjoyments.

On April 11, 1872, Mr. Slack married Miss Catherine Scott, the daughter of Robert Scott, of New York state. They are the parents of three sons and five daughters, all of whom have reached years of maturity, and are now enshrined in homes of their own. George W. is a resident of Kalispell, and is general overseer of the timber department of the Sommers Lumber Company. Alvin is a farmer, located near to Kalispell. Nettie married B. T. Minch, who is a farmer at Niarada, Montana. Eva married Charles Boomhouer, a farmer of Burlington, Washington. Bertha married Thomas Richardson, who is the manager of a prominent lumber company of Crescent Valley, British Columbia, where they reside. Mary is the wife of Reuben T. Fleek, of Libby, Montana, where Mr. Fleek is engaged in the hardware and plumbing business. Clara is the wife of E. L. McTaggart, a farmer of Edison, Washington. Charles W. is a resident of Seattle, Washington, where he is in business as an architect, carrying on a contracting and building business.

The home of the family is at 402 42nd avenue West, and Mr. Slack maintains his offices in the K. M. building.

JOHN C. MENAPACE, today the leading merchant of Three Forks, Montana, deserves unusual credit for his success. Every step upward in life's battle has been in itself a small skirmish. Always a tireless and energetic worker he never admitted the possibility of final failure.

His father, Martin Menapace, was a native of Luxemburg and was for many years superintendent of the government mines of Germany and France. Hearing marvelous tales of the richness of American ore, he left the Fatherland, bringing his family to the United States, where they settled in Colorado. Miner's luck was not always in his favor and despite his technical knowledge he never made a valuable "strike." His entire life after coming to this country was spent in the quartz fields of Colorado in an almost vain effort to provide the necessities for his large family. He died in August, 1894, and was buried at Trinidad, Colorado. His wife, Margaret Nicholls, of German parentage, is still living at Starkville, Colorado. Mr. and Mrs. Menapace bore bravely much suffering and sorrow. Of the fourteen children who were born to them, ten were taken away. Of those remaining, Joseph B., the eldest son, is still a miner in Colorado. Lena and Martha, the older girls, are both married. Mary, the youngest, is the widow of Robert Swazie, who while superintendent of the Mexican Central Railway was killed and burned by the rebels in the revolution of May, 1911.

John C. Menapace was born in Neulue, Germany, on the 21st day of January, 1878, and came to America with his parents while still in his childhood. Until the age of twelve years he was permitted to attend the public and private schools of Leadville but at that early age it was deemed necessary for him to begin to contribute to the family coffers, which illness and death had depleted. For four years he worked in the mines as a tool bearer, turning his meager wages over to his mother. When in his sixteenth year, his parents moved to Trinidad, Colorado, and here he obtained work as a miner, receiving a man's wages. So strongly was he bound by a sense of duty to his family that until 1894 he continued to use his wages for their support. Feeling the necessity to begin life for himself, he left home for the first time in 1896, being then eighteen years of age, and went to Sheridan, Wyoming, where he found employment in the mines of that place. Later he came to Big Timber, Montana, with the idea of continuing to work at his trade but the mines being crowded, he was obliged to seek employment in the Cottage and Grand Hotel. This was probably the real turning point in his career for had there been an opening for him in the mines of Big Timber he would doubtless have continued his work in the shaft indefinitely, never having the opportunity to discover his gift for fraternizing with his fellow men, nor his commercial ability.

For five years he worked for the hotel company at Big Timber, finally becoming their chief chef, when he moved to Logan and took employment in a restaurant, remaining there for about one year before the place was entirely destroyed by fire. After this casualty, he joined the Rock Island construction gang in their work of bridge building and construction about the station of Logan. During the two years that he was so employed he managed, by practicing the utmost economy, to accrue for himself a small amount of capital with which he entered into the mercantile business in Logan, forming a partnership with Mr. W. A. Roland. Mr. Roland was, at that time, a member of the Montana state legislature. The partnership lasted for four years with most satisfactory results, when Mr. Menapace sold his interest in the business to his partner that he might locate in the new town of Three Forks, Montana. Here he formed a second partnership, this time with Mr. M. S. Bryant, and they opened up the first store in Three Forks, located in the postoffice building. Three years later, Mr. Bryant was obliged on account of failing health to dispose of his interest in the business. He sold to Mr. W. W. Porter, the firm being known as Porter and Menapace. Before the end of the next two years Mr. Menapace disposed of his interest to a Mr. Madden and after a rest of only forty days opened up the general merchandise business which he conducts today with such intelligence and acumen. He has one of the best locations in the city and conducts the leading department store.

Mr. Menapace is always ready to assist with his time or money any cause that can serve Three Forks or the state of Montana. So general is his acquaintance and so genial his manner that he does much toward assuring the success of any measure that he has at heart. He was elected the first alderman of Three Forks and now holds the office of city clerk. On the ninth day of March, 1905, he was united in marriage to Miss Emma Gustavson, a young woman from Wisconsin. They are the parents of one daughter, Olive, now four years of age.

HON. THOMAS D. OLMSTED. "If he's an Ohio man, watch out for him," used to be the political prophecy, and it is appropriate in regard to the Buckeye sons in all walks of life. One of the most progressive of the Ohioans who have been given to the Beaverhead Valley is Thomas D. Olmsted, mayor of Dillon and senior member of the firm of Olmsted-Stevenson Company, general merchants, theirs being a leading enterprise of this section of Montana and one of the most thoroughly up-to-date.

Mr. Olmsted was born in Chilo, Ohio, October 9, 1870. He resided in the town of his nativity until about the attainment of his majority, when he went to Cincinnati and entered the employ of Nelson, Morris & Company, the big packing firm, with whom he held the position of assistant bookkeeper. He remained with them for eighteen months and was then transferred to their Chicago offices in the same capacity. After fourteen months in the "Windy City," Mr. Olmsted was transferred again, this time to Danville, Illinois, where, in recognition of his efficient services, he was made manager of the branch at that place. His residence in Danville covered a period of four years, at the end of which time he severed his connection with Nelson, Morris & Company and went immediately to Omaha, where he became associated with the Hammond Packing Company as chief auditor in their packing department. This was an extremely important position, Mr. Olmsted having many men under his direction, but he successfully met all the requirements. Unfortunately, however, his health broke down and in the hope of recovering it he secured a transfer to Colorado, with Denver as his headquarters, his new position being as traveling salesman for the Hammonds. He continued in such capacity until 1899, when he came to Dillon, with the intention of establishing himself independently in business in this thriving center. To this end he purchased the grocery stock of the O. E. Morse estate and organized the firm of Olmsted and Logan, he himself taking full command. On January 1, 1907, he sold out and purchased an interest in The John W. Morton Company. During his connection with The John W. Morton Company the business was very successful. In February, 1909, the Olmsted-Stevenson Company succeeded The John W. Morton Company and today this company has one of the finest establishments of this character in all the Beaverhead Valley. Not only has he been successful, but his career here has been such as to warrant the trust and confidence of the business world, for he has ever conducted all transactions according to the strictest principles of honor.

Mr. Olmsted received his early education in the public schools of Chilo, and graduated from the high school of Felicity, and after going to Cincinnati he took a course in the Nelson Business College in that city. The most successful and adequate type of business man is born and not made, and from boyhood the subject manifested no small amount of commercial acumen. At the age of fourteen years he made his first considerable sum of money raising shoates. When sixteen he bought an assignee's stock of implements and sold them out at a good profit. This was his first real venture in business.

Mr. Olmsted was married June 29, 1904, in Livingston, Montana, the lady of his choice being Alice Constance Chambers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George T. Chambers, of Livingston. They have a small son, Thomas, born November 15, 1905, in Dillon, and now attending the public schools. The Olmsted residence is one of the favorite gathering places of Dillon, the subject and his wife holding an assured social position.

Mr. Olmsted since his earliest voting days has subscribed to the articles of faith of the Republican party and he takes an active interest in politics, both local and national. Known to be the warm champion of good education, he has for six years past served as member of the high school board. In 1911 he received the compliment of election to the office of mayor of Dillon, and in this office has given a clean, fearless and progressive administration. As mayor that fine public-spirit which is one of his salient characteristics has had opportunity to evince itself and he is one of the most popular officials ever possessed by Dillon.

Mr. and Mrs. Olmsted are members of the Episcopal church. The former is one of the staunchest devotees of baseball in all the county and facetiously declares that he would close the store any time in order to attend a good game. He is fond of the theatre and music and appropriates every opportunity in these lines. He is an all round good citizen, of pleasing personality and the possessor of hosts of friends.

Mr. Olmsted's father, Thomas Bingham Olmsted, was born in Cadiz, Ohio, November 16, 1833, and resided in the Buckeye state throughout his entire life. He was a farmer by occupation. The demise of this good citizen occurred March 15, 1880, when his years numbered fifty-seven, and he is interred on the old homestead. The mother, whose maiden name was Harriet Newel Porter, was born in Brown county, Ohio, June 15, 1840. She survived her husband for many years, being summoned to the Great Beyond December 23, 1911, aged seventy-two, and she now lies beside her cherished and devoted husband. They were the parents of seven children, four of whom were boys and three girls, and the immediate subject of this review is the fifth in order of birth and the only member of the family in Montana.

MICHAEL P. MAHONEY. In the public life and activities of Anaconda and vicinity one of the most influential citizens is the present clerk and recorder of Deer Lodge county. Mr. Mahoney has been identified with Montana since early manhood, and first came into prominence in connection with union labor affairs.

Michael P. Mahoney was born near Dubuque, Iowa, on the 5th of January, 1880. His parents are Eugene and Maggie (Lynch) Mahoney, both of whom were natives of Iowa and are still living on the old homestead near Dubuque. The Mahoneys are among the oldest families of Iowa, the grandfather having settled in that state in 1835, his trip being made with ox team. This settlement occurred eleven years before Iowa became a state, and while most of the present state was still Indian domain. The Lynches settled in Illinois in 1833, so that they too were pioneers of the middle west. Eugene and Maggie Mahoney had ten children, four of them now deceased, named as follows: Mary, living with her parents; Henry, a farmer near Dubuque; Ella, deceased; Michael; John, a farmer of South Dakota; Jean and James, deceased; Joseph L., who is a book-keeper at Dyersville, Iowa; Jean, a clerk at Dubuque; and Bruce, of Dyersville, Iowa.

During the first sixteen years of his life Michael P. Mahoney spent most of his time in the public schools. He then continued to live at home on the farm for three years, and in 1899 came out to Montana, where he entered the employ of the A. C. M. Company at Anaconda. In various capacities he remained with this company until 1908. During these few years he was identified in increasing degrees, with the organized welfare of his labor associates and with the general public interests of the community. In 1906 he was elected president of the Anaconda labor organization, an office he held two years, and in 1908 was chosen to fill the office of county clerk and recorder of Deer Lodge county. His election was on the Democratic ticket, and for a number of years he has been active in his party and a delegate to all the city and county conventions. Among his friends and business associates Mr. Mahoney's reputation for honesty and integrity is solidly founded, and he is one of the leading men of his city and county at the present time. His career is a record of progress from humble beginnings, and with determination, and relying altogether on his own efforts, he has worked his way to influence and useful service.

Fraternally, he is a member of the Elks, the Knights of Columbus and the Ancient Order of Hibernians and is president of the Fraternal Order of Eagles. Among his diversions fishing has first place, a sport of which he is an ardent follower.

FREDERICK WILLIAM BARKER. Connected with the cattle business for many years in Montana, in ventures in which he has both lost and made money, and now the owner of 1,580 acres situated thirty-eight miles north of Glendive, Frederick William Barker has had a career the vicissitudes of which are typical of those of some of Montana's leading citizens. He has accumulated and lost several fortunes, but has kept steadfastly ahead in his chosen field, so directing his energies as to finally gain the goal of success and his coveted position among the leading stockmen of his state. Mr. Barker was born in Wapello county, Iowa, and is a son of J. M. and Rachel (Stant) Barker. His parents, natives of Indiana, were children of North Carolinians, and came to Iowa in 1852, J. M. Barker being a farmer and stock raiser all of his life. He and his wife still reside in Wapello county, and in 1909 celebrated their golden wedding at their home in Ottumwa. They had a family of six children, as follows: Josephine, who makes her home in Austin, Texas; Ida and Stella, of Iowa City, Iowa; Cora, who lives at Ottumwa, Iowa; Frederick William; and Nellie, living near Central, Iowa. All of these children have grown to maturity and are married.

Frederick William Barker grew to manhood on the old farm near Ottumwa, and was given a common school education. He was reared to the life of an agriculturist, but at the age of twenty-one years embarked in business on his own account, going on the trail for the H. S. Cattle Company and helping to drive 3,500 head from Wyoming to the Redwater, in Montana. He continued with that firm for one year, and then began to work on a sheep ranch for Charles Krug. Subsequently during that same year he returned to his old home, where he remained for one year, returning thence to Anaconda, Montana. He was then employed by Walker & Blandinburg to go into the Big Hole Basin, and after spending fourteen months in their big cattle run, again returned to Iowa, spending the next two years in that state and Missouri. While there he was married to Miss Minnie Bridges, daughter of J. M. and Susan (Clark) Bridges, and they have had six children: Grace, Earl, Marjorie, Frederick, James Newton and Fern, all of whom live at home with their parents.

On February 15, 1899, Mr. and Mrs. Barker returned to Montana, he taking a position as engineer in the placer mine of W. R. Allen, in French Gulch, where he remained until winter. Following this, he invested his earnings in a prospecting outfit, but this did not prove successful, and he was compelled to return to Anaconda and find employment in a meat market. During the following spring, however, Mr. Barker came to his present location, going to work on the McCone ranch, where he and his wife each leased 600 head of cattle. They were not through with misfortune, however, for a hard winter followed and they lost nearly all of their stock, but from what was left, about 100 head, they built a new herd, and last year (1911) shipped about 500 head to the markets, as well as 1,280 head of sheep. Mr. Barker filed on a claim of 320 acres, thirty-eight miles north of Glen-dive, and to this he has since added from time to time, being now the owner of 1,580 acres, of which 450 acres are under cultivation and now devoted to wheat, flax and oats. At this time one of his wheat-fields, a tract of sixty acres, is supposed to be one of the most highly cultivated ever grown in any country in the world. He has made numerous improvements of various kinds, and is preparing to replace the old ranch house with a modern residence. In fraternal matters Mr. Barker is connected with Iowa Formal Lodge, No. 442, at Kirksville, Iowa, and in politics he is a Democrat. His wife is a member of the Christian church, but Mr. Barker is not connected with any special denomination, although he is at all times ready to donate to movements of a charitable or religious character. A public-spirited, reliable citizen, with faith in himself and the future of his community, he has deserved all the success that has come to him, and is recognized as one of those whose activities are benefiting the community and its interests.

REV. CHARLES L. BOVARD, D. D. The life work of Rev. Charles L. Bovard, D. D., in the service of the Methodist Episcopal church, has been of unbroken activity since he first entered the ministry in 1882, following his schooling in Hanover College. His labors have called him from one state to another, and in the years that have elapsed since he entered upon his life work he has done duty in many places and among all classes of people. As president of the Wesleyan University at Helena, Montana, he has been called to a most responsible position—a position that not only expresses the highest confidence of his church, but one in which he may find the opportunity for a permanent service to humanity.

Dr. Charles L. Bovard was born in Alpha, Scott county, Indiana, on October 10, 1860. He is the son of James Bovard, born in Steubenville, Ohio, in 1824. In early manhood he removed to Indiana, where he died in 1889 at the age of sixty-five years. He passed his life as a farmer and was a veteran of the Civil war, through which he passed unscathed, although he saw much of its hardships and was a participant in many bloody conflicts of that period. He served as a private in the command of General Thomas, and was later with General Sherman at Atlanta. He was in active service from 1862 until 1865 and was mustered out at the close of the war, after which he returned to his farm in Indiana, and there passed the remainder of his life. His wife was Sarah Young, born at Little Miami, near Cincinnati, Ohio. She died in 1888 at the age of sixty years. She and her husband were both well known and prominent in their community, and were highly respected of all who were privileged to claim their acquaintance. They reared a family of twelve children, many of whom have attained unusual prominence in their vocations. It is worthy of mention here that five of their sons are today occupying high places as presidents of colleges or clergymen—a circumstance which is exceedingly rare and at the same time reflects no little honor upon the parents who produced a family of so much excellence. Charles L. Bovard, D. D., is the ninth in order of birth. Other members of his family are: M. M. Bovard, D. D., founder of the University of Southern California, died in 1891; F. D. Bovard, Ph. D., editor of the California Christian Advocate, San Francisco; Melville Y. Bovard, Ph. D., pastor Summerfield church, Brooklyn, New York; George F. Bovard, D. D., LL. D., president of the University of Southern California, Los Angeles; Wm. S. Bovard, D. D., vice president of the University of Chattanooga, Tennessee; Morton M. E. Bovard, Abington, Illinois; A. C. Bovard, St. Joseph, Missouri; S. G. Bovard, Dupont, Indiana; one sister, Mrs. M. J. Griffith, and two brothers, all deceased.

Charles L. Bovard was educated in the public schools of the community in which he was reared, following which he attended Hanover College, but left this famous old institution in 1882, before graduation, taking a course in the Normal Collegiate Institute, Lexington, Indiana. Later he was graduated Ph. B. from the Illinois Wesleyan University and received the degree of Doctor of Divinity from Moore's Hill College. He entered the ministry of the South East Indiana Conference of the Methodist Episcopal church soon after his college career was finished, and his first charge was at Holman, Indiana. He remained there for two years, and his next charge, North Vernon, Indiana, held him for the space of three years. From there he went to Vevay, Indiana, and was sent thence to Tucson, Arizona. He was next sent to the superintendency of the New Mexico English Mission with headquarters at Albuquerque, New Mexico, spending six years in this field, and returned from there to La Porte, Indiana, where he was stationed for two years. In 1899 he was transferred to Helena, Montana, remaining there for four years, following which he spent three years at Montana View, Butte, and then was sent back to Oxford, Ohio, where he was retained for four years. His next charge, Minot, North Dakota, he shortly quitted, returning to Helena, Montana, in 1910. After serving one year as district superintendent, he was elected to the presidency of the Montana Wesleyan University at that place. The labors of Dr. Bovard have already been rewarded by worthy accomplishments in his new capacity, and the church has an able advocate in control of the affairs of the University in the person of the present incumbent. Through his efforts a movement was started for the improvement and extension of the present university quarters, and in a few weeks he had received by popular subscription over $100,000 for that cause. His former acquaintance in Montana makes him a particularly valuable man to the University, and his popularity and prominence is the direct result of his unselfish and honest efforts in the work to which his life was dedicated three decades ago. Dr. Bovard is a Pythian Knight, having served as prelate of that order as well as pro tem chaplain of the Masonic order, in both of which societies he is prominent and active.

On January 30, 1883, Reverend Bovard was married to Miss Clamenta Smith, of Lexington, Indiana. She is the daughter of Charles W. and Sarah Jeannette (Fitch) Smith, prominent residents of Lexington, now deceased. Mr. Smith was connected with the hardware trade for many years in his community, as a merchant. Mr. and Mrs. Bovard have two sons: William Zelman Bovard, born April 1, 1886; he is an architect and is a married man, living at Helena, Montana. He is the father of one child. Carl Vincent Bovard was born October 29, 1889, at Vevay, Indiana. He married Miss Erma Becker and they are now residents of Long Beach, California.

THOMAS EDWIN LEWIS, superintendent of schools in Cut Bank, Teton county, Montana, was born in Stevens Point, Wisconsin, on July 20, 1879. He is the son of John Alfred Lewis, a native of Cardiff, South Wales, and the grandson of a Welch land owner. When he was eighteen years of age John Alfred Lewis entered the English army, where in ten years of service he advanced by successive steps to the rank of lieutenant, in which capacity he served for four years, and then resigned to come to America. Mr. Lewis arrived in the United States in the autumn of 1867 and settled on a farm in Stevens Point, Wisconsin, in the following year, there remaining until his death in 1895. For years when he first settled in Stevens Point he maintained a school on his farm, which was open to the public, and he was largely instrumental in the building of a community church. Prior to leaving England John Alfred Lewis married Sarah Jane Wilson, born at Sarmarshire, South Wales. She was educated in a private school, as was her husband, and they were married in 1865.

Thomas Edwin Lewis lived the life of the average farmer boy until he was sixteen years of age, and between the ages of sixteen and nineteen he served as a telegraph operator on the Wisconsin railroad. Thereafter, until he was twenty-two years old, he taught school, and then for two years attended the Stevens Point Normal, then one year at Lawrence University of Appleton, Wisconsin, followed by three years of study at the University of Wisconsin, where in 1908 Mr. Lewis received his B. A. degree. The two years following his graduation from the University of Wisconsin were spent in teaching in the Flathead county high school, and the next years he spent in research work in California. In 1911 he took charge of the schools of Cut Bank, and his success in the work is already assured. His acknowledged aim is to build up a high class industrial school system and to train the youth of the town so that they may be able to successfully meet the practical problems of life.

Mr. Lewis is a progressive Republican and an ardent supporter of Senator LaFollette. His politics are based upon principle, rather than party affiliations, and he will cast his vote for Woodrow Wilson in November. While in Wisconsin Mr. Lewis was a member of the Portage county committee representing the LaFollette faction. Mr. Lewis is deeply interested in the civic affairs of Cut Bank, and takes his full share of the responsibilities of citizenship in his community. In the spring of 1912 he was chairman of a committee which created a new city park, built a pavilion and a Chautauqua building. He was also chairman of the Fourth of July celebration committee.

On April 27, 1910, Mr. Lewis was united in marriage with Miss Emma May Robinson. She was educated in the city schools of Mauston, Wisconsin, after which she spent several years in study at the Chicago Conservatory of Music. She was a teacher of music in Milwaukee for two years prior to her marriage. One son has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Lewis, Thomas Gordon Lewis, born in California on April 5, 1911. The family are members of the Methodist Episcopal church.

GEORGE W. LANSTRUM. Among the present generation of young and middle aged men in Montana is George W. Lanstrum, the present efficient and popular postmaster of Helena, who has held that position since May 17, 1910.

J. M. SCANLAND. An excellent type of the aggressive and progressive business and professional man of the present era in the Treasure state is seen in the person of J. M. Scanland, superintendent and directing head of the State Asylum for the Insane, at Warm Springs, Montana. A resident of the state since 1899, Dr. Scanland has, by his force of character and genuine worth, taken a prominent place among its well-known and valued citizens.

A native of Boosier Parish, Louisiana, he was born March 11, 1874, the son of a fine old Southern family that, with its allied connections, included professional men and planters who have for years been prominent in the business life of the south. The advantages of breeding and education which are characteristic of his locality accrued to J. M. Scanland and culminated in his graduation, in 1897, from the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore, Maryland.

Shortly after his completion of his studies the young physician accepted a position on the staff of the City Hospital in the Maryland metropolis. While he was there engaged in his professional activities, inquiries were sent by Dr. O. Y. Warren, then superintendent of the asylum at Warm Springs, Montana, to Dr. J. W. Chambers, professor of surgery at the Baltimore College of Physicians, regarding the immediate need of a competent physician to act as assistant in the Montana institution. Dr. Scanland was recommended for the place and on May 30, 1899, he arrived at Warm Springs, where he at once entered upon the duties of his position.

For nearly five years Dr. Scanland continued as Dr. Warren's assistant, concluding that relation in December of 1904, at which time he removed to Butte, where he began the practice of his profession, in association with Dr. M. G. MacNevin. This connection was retained until the elder physician went to New York City. The private practice of Dr. Scanland was carried on in Butte until April 1, 1907. On that date he returned to Warm Springs and there entered upon the extensive and arduous responsibilities as manager of the institution and interests of which Doctors Mitchell and Musigbrod were the sponsors. In that work Dr. Scanland has since remained. Diversified and extensive as these interests are, he by the able methods of handling which he has applied to them, has shown himself to be a man of rare business capacity and unusual foresight.

Under the management of Dr. Scanland the Warm Springs asylum has been greatly enlarged and improved, until it now enjoys the status of the best equipped institutions of its character in the country. The beautifying of its grounds, with their superb landscape effects; the complete system of fire protection; the installing and developing of various new departments—all these improvements originated with and were accomplished by Dr. Scanland.

Despite his heavy responsibilities as the director of large and important interests, he manifests keen interest in public affairs and is invariably found a supporter of any movement of benefit to the community. A prominent member of the Democratic party, he has served on the county central committee of that organization and is one of the party's advisers and counsellors in that section of the state. His presidency of the Deer Lodge County Fair Association is another of his public activities, while his business and professional ability is also called into requisition in his capacity as a director of the Montana Life Insurance Company and is president of the Montana State Medical Association.

Both individually and with his family, Dr. Scanland is a leading figure socially in this section of the country. Mrs. Scanland, nee Marie Adele Mitchell, is a daughter of the noted Dr. A. H. Mitchell, that pioneer physician of Montana who founded the Warm Springs Sanatorium. The children of Dr. and Mrs. Scanland are Marie Mitchell, Scanland, Douglass Downs Scanland, and Elen Adele Scanland. The Scanland home is distinguished as a center of refinement and culture in the community.

The formal affiliations of Dr. Scanland's social life include his membership in the Masonic order, in the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and in the Fraternal Order of Eagles. In the organization of Ancient Free and Accepted Masons he has attained the thirty-second degree; he is also a Noble of the Mystic Shrine, being a member of Algeria Temple at Helena. His hosts of friends far outnumber his fraternal connections and include the leading men of Montana. Personally popular, he is distinguished for his courteous manner, his gentlemanly bearing and his never failing loyalty as well as for his executive and scientific acumen.

JAMES B. FINLAY. A Canadian by birth, a Scot by descent, and a citizen of Butte by choice, Mr. James Brown Finlay is widely and favorably known in this city of his adoption. His father was James Finlay, born in Farfar, Scotland, where he married Miss Annie Brown, and their oldest son, the subject of this sketch, was named for both of his parents. There were four children in the family, all born in Canada. The father was a farmer and a contractor and is still living in Manitoba, though he has retired from active work, and for the past twelve years has been enjoying the fruits of his early industry. Shortly after their marriage, James and Annie Finlay came from Scotland to Huron county, Ontario, and here James, Junior, was born on April 24, 1874. When six years old he moved with his parents to Manitoba and remained there until 1896. He was educated in the public schools of Canada, graduating from both the high school and from the normal school. After finishing his course, he taught for three years in Canada, and for one year in Cascade county, Montana.

Mr. Finlay had learned the carpenter's trade from his father, and after four years of teaching, he decided to give up educational work and devote himself to his trade, as he preferred a life which brought him into contact with those actively engaged in commercial enterprise. Accordingly, he joined the Carpenters' Union in Great Falls, in 1900, and has ever since been an active and a prominent member of that body. Various offices in this organization have been filled by Mr. Finlay, and in 1910 he was elected to that of financial secretary, a position which he still holds. Another post which he ably fills is that of secretary of the Building Trades Council. Ever since 1908 he has been a delegate to this association. Mr. Finlay owes his prominence in these bodies to his excellent education, his energy, his executive ability, and his talent for leadership. The influence of the leaders of trade organizations is one which is of the greatest consequence to the welfare of the community at large, and it is fortunate indeed when this power is in the hands of an able and enlightened man. Politics is not one of his occupations nor diversions, though he is somewhat inclined to be a Republican. In the fraternal orders he belongs to the Odd Fellows' lodge.

Mr. Finlay was married in Canada in 1895. Mrs. Finlay was formerly Miss Sara Fisher, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fisher. They are both natives of London, England, but have lived in Canada since their marriage, and now reside at Red Deer, Alberta, where Mr. Fisher is in the real estate business. Mr. and Mrs. Finlay have five children, as follows: Sylvia Dreda, Maxine, Loye and Bryson. Since 1905 the family have made their home in Butte, residing at 2021 Second avenue, South. They have many friends among the leading citizens of the city, among whom Mr. Finlay holds a place.

CLARENCE R. FULLER. One of the business men of Anaconda whose success and sterling citizenship are important factors in the general prosperity of the city is the proprietor of the Fuller Drug Company. His establishment is one of the best of its kind in the city, and he is also half owner in the Fuller Drug Company store at Wisdom, this state.

Clarence R. Fuller was born at Pendleton, Oregon, February 16, 1881, a son of R. A. and Annie (Bryant) Fuller, both natives of Oregon. The father is now a carpenter at Missoula, and the mother died in 1883, when her son was about two years old. The latter received his primary education at Corvallis, Oregon, to which place his father had removed, and the home was afterwards moved to Idaho, in which state he finished his early schooling.

When he was fifteen years old he began learning pharmacy at Wallace, Idaho, and four years later was promoted to the degree of registered pharmacist. The death of his mother was one of the early handicaps to his career, and throughout his early years he struggled hard and determinedly in finding the route to successful accomplishment, and the position he has won in the business world is due entirely to his own ability and efforts.

Locating in Missoula in 1899, he was a drug clerk

there for six months, then went to Butte, where he was in the employ of J. T. Finlen and W. E. Webb, two years with each. He then became manager for the Burke Drug Company at Burke, Idaho, and some time later, with F. H. Richardson, bought the business. In 1906 Mr. Fuller sold out to his partner and came to Anaconda, which has been his home since that date. Here he bought the Charette Drug Company, and has built up this establishment to conform with his own progressive ideals of mercantile success. Though still a young man, and having at an early age been put on his own responsibility, he is now the owner of a first-class business, a pleasant home and enjoys the esteem of his associates and fellow citizens.

Mr. Fuller was married in 1904 to Miss Nadine Cook, and they are the parents of one child, Norman Clarence Fuller. Mrs. Fuller, who was born in Missouri, is a daughter of Walter Cook, a prominent mining man of Idaho. One of Mr. Fuller's chief recreations is motoring with his wife and child, and he also enjoys hunting and fishing. Fraternally he is a Mason and a member of the Improved Order of Red Men. His family belong to the Presbyterian church.

JOSEPH BINNARD. A prominent and valued citizen of Butte, Joseph Binnard, head of the legal firm of Binnard & Rodger, is a busy and successful lawyer, eminent, trusted and esteemed, his professional labors being interspersed with such official and public duties as naturally fall to a man of his intelligence and ability. A son of James Binnard, he was born, November 10, 1875, in Rochester, New York, of Hebrew lineage.

Born and reared in Poland, James Binnard immigrated to America in 1861, and for a number of years resided in New York, his home after his marriage having been in the city of Rochester, where he was engaged in mercantile pursuits. Subsequently migrating still further westward, he settled with his family in Palouse, Whitman county, Washington, and was there a resident until his death in 1889. He married Anna Aaron, who came with her parents from Poland to Rochester, New York, when a girl, and she is now living in Spokane, Washington.

But two years old when his parents moved to Washington, Joseph Binnard received his rudimentary education in Palouse. Determined to fit himself for a professional career, he left the high school at the age of eighteen years to enter the law office of Americus A. Wilson, in Palouse, and there for a year and a half read law. Moving then to Spokane, Washington, Mr. Binnard continued his studies with the well-known firm of Feighan, Wells & Hermann, the latter of whom specialized in different branches of the law, having been considered an authority on subjects such as estoppel, res adjudicata, and mortgages. A keen and faithful student, with a clear and comprehensive mind, Mr. Binnard made such good use of his opportunities that on May 13, 1898, he was admitted to practice before the supreme court of Washington. He at once began his professional career in Spokane, where he continued a few months. In 1899 Mr. Binnard removed to Butte, where he was engaged in practice alone, until becoming associated with his present partner, Alexander C. Rodger, as senior member of the firm of Binnard & Rodger, one of the most prosperous legal firms of this part of Silver Bow county.

Active and influential in politics, Mr. Binnard is one of the leading Democrats of Butte, and works earnestly, not only for the interests of his party, but for the highest good of the community. Elected as a representative to the Twelfth legislative assembly, in January, 1911, he was made chairman of the committee on townships and counties, and was also made a member of the judiciary committee; of the fish and game committee; of the committee on new counties and divisions; of the committee on state board and offices; and of the committee on libraries.

Mr. Binnard is a member of the State Bar Association and of the Silver Bow County Bar Association, which he has served as vice president. He is also identified with various fraternal organizations, being a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks; of the Knights of Pythias; and president of the Independent Order of B'nai B'rith; and of the Dramatic Order Knights Khorassan. In December, 1911, Mr. Binnard was elected president of the I. O. B. B. and in 1912, of the Silver Bow Democratic Club.

Mr. Binnard belongs to a family that is well represented in the states of the far west, his father having been one of five brothers that emigrated from Poland to the United States, and settled in the recesses of the Rocky mountains, in Washington, Idaho, and Montana, where they reared their children to lives of industry and usefulness.

JOHN A. TRESSLER, who is the longest established lawyer in Malta, or indeed, in Valley county, is likewise the most popular representative of his profession in this section of the country. He has been identified with the growth and progress of Malta since 1900, and in the twelve years that have elapsed he has builted firmly and surely in the way of a permanent establishment in the regard and esteem of the best citizenship of the county, and has filled a place of no little importance in the communal life of the city.

Born in Palo Alto county, Iowa, on March 29, 1875, Mr. Tressler is the son of Samuel W. and Harriet A. (Lacey) Tressler, the former being a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of Michigan. Samuel W. Tressler was a Civil war veteran, and was a member of Company H of the Ninety-second Illinois Regiment. He saw much service throughout the term of his enlistment and was wounded seven times in action. Mr. Tressler was a prominent contractor and builder at Curlew, Iowa, which represented the family home for many years. They became the parents of four children: Katherine, the wife of Arthur Brown of Curlew, Iowa; William J., a resident of Malta, Montana, where he is prominently engaged in the lumber business, and of whom a more detailed account will be found elsewhere in the pages of this biographical work; Georgina S., the wife of Dr. F. M. Flynn, residing in Los Angeles, California, and John A., of this review.

Mr. Tressler was educated in the public schools of Curlew, his native town, and in 1891 he was graduated from the high school of that place, at the early age of sixteen years. Later he took a business course, which he completed in a most thorough manner, and followed it by a collegiate course, graduating from the law department at Drake University at Des Moines, with the class of 1896. His first actual work in his profession was performed at Sioux Rapids, Iowa, and he later located at Ayrshire, that state, where he remained until 1899. In that year he became impressed with the opportunities Montana offered to the young and ambitious men, and as with him to decide was ever to act, he was soon established in Malta, which he regarded as being one of the most opportune locations for his business at that time. His judgment has been justified four-fold in the passing years, and the highly enviable reputation he has gained in a professional way is a direct result of his skill, his tact and his untiring energy in any task to which he sets his hand. Mr. Tressler has not been content to build his reputation upon his college training alone, but has made further study of legal methods and procedure since beginning active practice. In 1898 he made a trip to Europe for the sole purpose of visiting the legal courts of London and Paris with a view to gaining a knowledge of court procedure in foreign lands.

He spent many weeks in careful study and observation, and his trip afforded him an extended knowledge which has been both gratifying and beneficial to him in his professional capacity. He has the best equipped law office in the county and his legal library is one of the finest and most complete to be found in this section of the state.

Mr. Tressler is a politician to the manner born, and it is not too much to predict that his voice will be heard in the political life of Montana and the northwest in the future, and at no far distant date. Already he has come to be recognized as a leader in county politics, and has on different occasions stumped the county in behalf of the Republican party, while in 1910 he was secretary of the county central committee. Public life affords him the keenest pleasure, and his capacity for business of that nature, together with his legal training and other splendid qualifications, will render him a formidable opponent when he steps into the political arena, as it is almost certain that he will do in the future. He was the first and second mayor of the city of Malta, an office in which he acquitted himself creditably and in a manner prophetic of further official honors. His enthusiasm for the state of Montana has only increased with the passing years, and it is his expressed conviction that within a decade the Treasurer state will lead the northwest in industry, wealth and in every other good thing. In his opinion it is the one best place for the young man with no money, but a goodly portion of ambition. "Here he will find failure an impossibility," says Mr. Tressler.

On April 29, 1911, Mr. Tressler was united in marriage at Malta, Montana, with Miss Florence Mathers, of Nora Springs, Iowa, the daughter of Thomas Mathers of that place, and they maintain their home at Malta, where Mrs. Tressler is active and popular in the social life of the city.

J. HOWARD SUYDAM. The town of Walkerville, Montana, numbers among her citizenship one who has done much for the business progress of the community in the few brief years of his connection with that place. As the owner and proprietor of a thriving and well kept drug establishment, J. Howard Suydam takes a prominent rank in business circles.

Born at Milford, Delaware, on November 9, 1873, J. Howard Suydam is the son of George L. Suydam. The latter named was born at Flatbush, near Brooklyn, New York, in 1836. He was a farmer and commission merchant, and in 1858 went to Sacramento, California, and located there, for a time successfully carrying on a contracting business. Later he returned to Milford, Delaware, and was engaged in manufacturing lines, later removing to Philadelphia and subsequently to New York City, in both places being engaged in commission business. He died in 1904, while his wife, who was Mrs. Roby Lyndon Suydam, died in 1876, when their son, J. Howard, was a child of three years. The boy attended Rockville Center high school on Long Island, and after receiving his regent's certificate he began his first work as a clerk in a Rockville Center drug store. By close application to the details of the business and much study the young man learned enough to warrant him in taking a course of study at the New York College of Pharmacy, which he did by attending the school in the evening and working days. As a result of his labors he was able to graduate from the school in 1893 as a registered pharmacist, following which he went to Florida and clerked in a drug store at Jacksonville and later at Tampa, his stay in Florida covering a period of six years. The fame of the far west, especially Montana, had reached his ears, and he decided to try his fortunes in a different part of the country. His first position was in Butte with the Paxson & Rockefeller Drug Company, and later with the Finlen Drug Company, and he was four years with those firms. It was then he learned of the intention of the proprietor of the Walkerville Drug Company to dispose of his interests, and Mr. Suydam bought the place and set about to make a modern establishment of it. How well he has succeeded in his determination is an open secret, and "he who runs may read;" it is sufficient to say that his greatest hopes have been realized and that he has built up a business which is constantly expanding, and which under his splendid management is yielding the maximum profit with the minimum expenditure. Mr. Suydam is a member of the State Pharmaceutical Association and is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity, being a member of Deer Lodge Chapter, R. A. M. He is a Republican but takes no active part in the political affairs of the city and county, although he takes his full share of the usual responsibilities of a good citizen. He is a member of the Reformed Protestant church.

On June 26, 1906, Mr. Suydam was married to Miss Monetts McGinnis at Ashland, Wisconsin. She is a daughter of William McGinnis. They are the parents of one child, Madeline E. Suydam, born in 1907, at Walkerville.

KNYPHAUSON E. PARK, of Roundup, is another one of Montana's many enthusiasts. He says of his adopted state: "There are no two ways about it. Montana has more natural resources, and is positively the best state in the Union. It will easily support a population five times its present number." Since March, 1911, Mr. Park has filled the position of assessor of the new Musselshell county, and is thus situated in a way to know what he is talking about. He has been a resident of the state since 1899, and has watched and been a factor in its development ever since.

Mr. Park was born in St. Clair county, Missouri, January 12, 1874. He attended the public schools as a boy, spending his vacations doing any odd jobs that he could find. He earned his first money as a child of eight years by cutting corn. With the five dollars which he received he bought a pig. That represented the beginning of his capital, and he afterward saved and invested until before he was out of his teens he had quite a collection of live stock. He worked on the farm until he was twenty-five years old, and then started for Montana. He arrived in May, 1899, and immediately took up the stock business, which he continued until 1911, when he was appointed assessor. He settled first in Fergus. His marriage to Martha E. Pollard, the daughter of John and Catherine Pollard of Clinton, Missouri, took place in Clinton, October 10, 1894, and they became the parents of four children—Flavia I., Custer B., Cecil O., and Viola O.—all of whom are in school.

Mr. Park was himself the oldest son, and the second child in a family of nine children. His father, the Rev. Thomas B. Park, was born in Indiana, but spent most of his life in Missouri, where he acted as a minister and school teacher. His wife, Martha J. (Burch) Park, was born in Missouri, and died there in 1899 at the age of forty-five. Rev. Park moved to Oklahoma in 1906, and died there three years later. Two of their children besides Knyphauson E. are in Montana, Mrs. George Gonser living in the Gallatin valley, and Leroy Park, who is a student at the Normal College in Bozeman.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Park are members of the Christian church, and Mrs. Park is vice president of the Ladies' Aid Society. Mr. Park is a member of the Roundup Commercial Club and of the Pioneer Club, and as a Democrat takes an active interest in politics. He was once a justice of the peace, and has been connected with the school board for many years. Mrs. Park assists her husband in the county assessor's office. Both Mr. and Mrs. Park are well-liked in the community, and are always called upon to assist in any social affairs.

C. C. HURLEY. Dawson county has some of the most learned members of the bar to be found in the state, and one who has gained a position of importance and is known as one of the leading criminal attorneys of Montana is C. C. Hurley, the present judge of the Seventh Judicial District. During the thirteen years that Mr. Hurley has resided in this city he has held positions of public trust, and has proven himself a thorough master of law and jurisprudence and a public-spirited citizen who brings to the duties of his office an enthusiasm and conscientious regard that has at all times protected the interests of the citizens of his community. Mr. Hurley is a native of the Hoosier state, having been born in Clinton county, Indiana, February 12, 1869, a son of James and Mary (Schauer) Hurley, natives of Cumberland county, Pennsylvania.

James Hurley was born in 1842, and during the early 'sixties left his native Pennsylvania for Indiana. There he was engaged in farming until 1883, which year marked his removal to Hall county, Nebraska, and in that locality continued to carry on general farming and stock raising until 1908. He then removed to Perry, Oklahoma, where he purchased a large tract of land, and is now living quietly, enjoying the fruits of a long life of useful endeavor. He is a Democrat in politics, and is fraternally connected with the Masons and the Odd Fellows. His wife, who also survives, was born in 1840 and they had four children: C. C.; Katherine, the wife of C. T. Loper, living in Lincoln, Nebraska; Lulu, the wife of William Pinnell, of Calloway, Nebraska; and Emma, who graduated from Nebraska University with the class of 1903, taught the normal school at Sioux Falls for a time, and is now engaged in teaching the normal school at Cloquet, Minnesota.

C. C. Hurley was educated in Fremont Normal School, Nebraska Normal School at Wayne, and the public schools of Hall county, Nebraska, and when twenty-one years of age began teaching school at Newman Grove, that state. Subsequently he became principal of schools at Osman, Nebraska, later held a like position at Elka, Nevada, and then went to the University of Nebraska, to complete his law studies, which he had been assiduously prosecuting during the time he worked as an educator. After his graduation from the law department of that institution, in 1898, he returned to school teaching, being principal of schools at Glens Ferry, Idaho, but in 1899 came to Glendive and engaged actively in the practice of his profession, in which he has since continued. Mr. Hurley won almost immediate recognition from the citizens of his locality, and in 1902 he was elected county attorney of Dawson county. The excellent and capable manner in which he conducted the affairs of the county attorney's office during the next two years caused his reelection in 1904. An able, just and fearless prosecutor, with a broad and comprehensive knowledge of criminal law, Mr. Hurley has risen to an enviable place among Montana's legists, and also possesses the tolerance, breadth of view and generous public spirit which characterize the superior man. He is known as one of the influential workers in the ranks of the Democratic party in Dawson county, and is active in his support of the organization's principles and candidates.

On June 13, 1906, Mr. Hurley was united in marriage with Miss Fannie Skiles, a native of Wisconsin and daughter of Robert Skiles. They have had one son, who bears the name of his grandfather, Skiles.

WILLIAM JOSEPH TRESSLER is one of the prominent business men of Malta, where he has been located since 1908. He has been a resident of Montana since 1899, however, first as a homesteader, later a rancher, which interests he still maintains to a considerable extent, and since his residence in Malta he has been identified with the lumber business. He has progressed steadily in a financial way since casting in his fortunes with the western state, and is warm in his praises of the opportunities the west offers, more especially Montana.

Mr. Tressler was born in Curlew, Palo Alto county, Iowa, on October 12, 1871, and is the son of Samuel W. and Harriet A. (Lacey) Tressler, natives of Pennsylvania and Michigan, respectively. The father migrated to Illinois in his young manhood and there married Harriet Lacey, who bore him four children, of whom mention is made in the life sketch of John A. Tressler, a prominent attorney of Malta, the same to be found in other pages of this work. The father is a well-known contractor and builder of Curlew, Iowa, where he has lived these many years, and is well and favorably known to a wide circle of friends and acquaintances. He is a veteran of the Civil war also, and mention of his record is made in the sketch mentioned above.

The public schools of Curlew afforded William Tressler such book-learning as he has acquired, and he finished with his schooling when he was sixteen years of age. He early began the serious business of life as a wage-earner with the construction gang of a local railroad line, and after a short time he went to work for a cousin, G. W. Tressler, a prominent contractor of Curlew. He remained with his cousin eight years, and in that time learned the building business from the ground up. When he left his cousin's service he was fully competent to conduct a similar business on his own responsibility, and he accordingly launched out into a contracting business in his home town. He was successful in the business, but he was attracted by the west and in 1899 he gave up his work in Curlew and went to Montana, where he immediately preempted a homestead of one hundred and sixty acres in what was then known as Chouteau county, now Blaine county. He improved the land and made a home for his family there, later bringing them from their Iowa home to the Montana wilderness. He began farming and gradually enlarged his operations till he was doing a full-fledged ranching business. The property has increased in value with each succeeding year, and today the homestead is worth a considerable sum of money. In 1908 Mr. Tressler came to Malta, purchased some property, and again engaged in his old business of contracting and building. In connection with that enterprise, he started a lumber yard, which he has increased in scope from time to time until today it is one of the most complete and modernly equipped lumber yards in this section of the state.

Mr. Tressler recalls the day when he came to Montana, with limited means, but with a sincere determination to succeed if energy and force of character could make success possible. That he has carried out his intention is a patent fact to all, and he is today regarded in Malta as one of the representative business men of the city and county. Much of his success he accredits to the splendid opportunities which the state of Montana offers to home-seekers, and it is his belief that any man with a little money, a determination to succeed and possessing honesty and integrity of character, can find no more likely spot on earth than Blaine county, Montana. Mr. Tressler is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and is district deputy for the order.

On June 8th, 1892, Mr. Tressler was united in marriage with Miss Louisa J. Smith, daughter of Oliver P. Smith, a pioneer farmer and stock man of Iowa, who died there in 1900. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Tressler: Ilo F. and Georgia L.

FRED L. GIBSON. To win success in the field of law a man must be primarily an indefatigable worker, must possess a clear, incisive mind, and be able to express his thoughts in cogent, convincing language; furthermore, he must know men, be a good judge of human nature and quick to grasp a situation. The foregoing are some of the qualities that have aided Fred L. Gibson, of Livingston, to succeed in his profession and to attain his present position, that of county attorney of Park county. Added to them is a natural inclination for his work, a long and careful technical training and an inherent ability that has won for him the unqualified respect of his fellow practitioners at the bar, and the confidence and enthusiastic support of the citizens of his community. Mr. Gibson was born in Dundee, Monroe county, Michigan, September 20, 1874, and is a son of Matthew and Ellen B. (Carney) Gibson.

Matthew Gibson was born in Cattaraugus county, New York, in 1827, and as a youth learned the trade of plasterer. He was taken to Michigan by his parents when he was six years of age, but in 1888 removed to southern Ohio and engaged in farming, and in 1894 located in Madison county, Montana, where he met an accidental death during the same year. His wife, who was born in Monroe county, Michigan, in 1843, still survives him and makes her home in Livingston. They had two sons: Fred L.; and Guy, the latter being engaged in ranching in Madison county, Montana.

The early education of Fred L. Gibson was secured in the common schools of Michigan, and he subsequently attended the Owensville (Ohio) high school and the law department of the University of Nebraska, from which he was graduated with the class of 1899. During that year he was admitted to practice before all the Montana courts, and first located in Virginia City, from whence, one year later, he removed to Forsyth, Rosebud county. He was appointed county attorney in 1901 and elected to that office in 1902 and 1903, but in September, 1903, resigned his office to come to Livingston, where he engaged in a general practice. In 1907 he was appointed city attorney of Livingston. While a resident of Madison county, in 1898, he had been elected to the state legislature, and in 1908 he was sent as representative from Park county. On his return, in 1910, he was elected county attorney, a position he has held to the present time. He has been elected to this office because of his eminent qualifications, and has made a record which every young man entering upon the profession can study with profit. Mr. Gibson is a stalwart Republican in his political views, and is fraternally connected with Hiram Lodge No. 52, of Forsyth.

On July 12, 1899, Mr. Gibson was married to Miss Winnifred Fletcher, who was born in Madison county, Montana, daughter of William A. and Ellen (Gordon) Fletcher, natives of Allegany county, New York. In 1863 William A. Fletcher came overland to what is now Alder Gulch, Montana, and was engaged in prospecting and mining until 1866, in which year he established himself in a meat business in Virginia City. Subsequently he became a pioneer ranchman of Madison county, where the rest of his life was spent, his death occurring in 1905, and where his widow now resides. Of their ten children, Mrs. Gibson was the eighth in order of birth. Mr. and Mrs. Gibson have two interesting children: Kathleen and Alice.

WILLIAM CLUSTON. Among the progressive business men of Great Falls, Montana, none have taken a more prominent part in its industrial activity than William Cluston, of the planing mill firm of McRae & Cluston. Coming to this city practically unknown only a few years ago, and with but little capital save inherent ability and a large fund of industry, through his own efforts he has made a place for himself among the substantial men of this vicinity, and has gained the confidence of the citizens of his adopted city to such an extent that on a number of occasions he has been elected to positions of public trust. Mr. Cluston was born January 2, 1862, at New Brunswick, Canada, and is a son of John and Mary (McKay) Cluston.

Magnus Cluston, the paternal grandfather of William, was born in Scotland and emigrated to America in 1804, locating at Fort Garry as a representative of the Hudson Bay Company. He purchased a farm in eastern Canada, in 1833. His son, John Cluston, was born in Canada, and in early life adopted the trade of blacksmith. Subsequently he became the captain of a steamboat on the Miramichi river, but in his latter years carried on agricultural pursuits. He always lived on a farm when at home. He is now living retired in Canada, at the age of seventy-three years, enjoying the fruits of his industrious and well-spent life. John Cluston married Miss Margaret McKay, who was born in Canada, daughter of George McKay, a native of Scotland, who came to Canada at an early period and became a well-known builder of ships of the wooden type. Mrs. Cluston passed away in 1872, at the age of thirty-two years, having been the mother of five children, of whom William was the eldest.

William Cluston attended the public schools of his native vicinity, and as a lad was apprenticed to the trade of carpenter. Having thoroughly mastered this vocation, worked at his trade in eastern Canada until 1883, and in that year removed to the northwest territory of the Dominion, continuing to engage in carpenter work, and also following contracting and building. For six years he acted as superintendent of public works for the Dominion government, and for seven years worked for the Great Falls & Canada Railway Company, first as bridge foreman and later as superintendent of bridges and buildings, but in 1899 located in Great Falls, and for a short period worked in the smelter as a millwright. At this time he decided to engage in business on his own account, and formed a partnership with Mr. McRae, under the firm name of McRae & Cluston. A small structure was erected at first, but as the business grew additions were made and new machinery installed, until the firm at present owns a large mill, fully equipped with the most modern machinery for all kinds of mill and cabinet work, and giving employment to a small army of mechanics. Mr. Cluston is thoroughly competent to manage the affairs of a large and growing business, and the firm bears an excellent reputation throughout this part of the state, doing business with some of the largest houses in Montana. In political matters Mr. Cluston is a Democrat, and as a member of the state legislature, in 1907 and 1909 introduced a number of important bills and was successful in bringing about the adoption of legislation that advanced the interests of his constituents. He is past master of the local Masonic lodge, and his religious connection is with the Presbyterian church. Mr. Cluston is very fond of out-of-door life, spends his vacations in hunting and fishing, and is a popular member of the Great Falls Gun Club. Although possessed of little capital when he came to Great Falls, he has taken a place among the men of means here, and is the owner of considerable property.

JOHN P. KEARNS. Prominent among the representative citizens of Townsend, Montana, is John P. Kearns, a man of wealth and influence, who is contributing his full share in promoting the industrial and financial interests of his home city, and is widely known as cashier of the State Bank of Townsend, of which he is one of the owners. A son of James Kearns, he was born, December 29, 1871, in Benton, Wisconsin, where his father settled in pioneer days.

James Kearns was born in County Fermanagh, Ireland. He subsequently settled in Benton, Wisconsin, where he was for years one of the leading citizens, being a prosperous merchant. He held many public offices, serving as township treasurer, and in other positions of trust, his death, in 1893, being a cause of general regret. He married Phoebe Tierney, who was born in County Fermanagh, Ireland, in 1842, and came to America with her parents in 1847. With them she spent her first winter in America in St. Louis, Missouri, and the following spring accompanied them to Benton, Wisconsin, where she was educated, having been one of the first pupils of St. Clara's Academy. She subsequently taught school until her marriage, in 1864, to James Kearns. She was the mother of six children, five of whom survive, as follows: James T., of Benton, Wisconsin; Samuel J., also of Benton; John P., the subject of this sketch; Anna; and Mrs. P. H. Murphy, of Townsend, Montana, at whose home her death occurred, January 6, 1912.

After leaving the public schools of his native town, John P. Kearns completed his early studies at a commercial college in Dubuque, Iowa. Thus equipped, he entered his father's general store as an assistant, and during the administration of President Cleveland was appointed postmaster at Benton, Wisconsin, and held the position until the change of administration, in 1897. In 1893, after the death of his father, Mr. Kearns, with his brother Samuel, succeeded to the ownership of the store, with which he was connected until 1899, when he sold his share of the business to his partner. Coming to Townsend, Montana, in January, 1899, Mr. Kearns organized the State Bank of Townsend, of which he is one of the owners, and has since been cashier of the institution, his brother-in-law, P. H. Murphy, being assistant cashier. Mr. Kearns has other important interests in Broadwater county, being one of the five members of the Townsend Realty and Investment Company, which has title to three thousand, six hundred and sixty acres of valuable land adjoining the city of Townsend, the tract which was formerly owned by Governor Potts and President Harrison. The growth of the city being already an assured fact, a part of this land has been laid out in town lots, and made a sub-division of the city.

Mr. Kearns married Sarah Curley, who was born in Galena, Illinois, the early home of the late Ulysses S. Grant. Six children have blessed the union of Mr. and Mrs. Kearns, namely: Katherine Mary, John Claire, James William, Edmund Joseph, Phoebe Sarah, and Margaret Irene. A staunch Democrat in politics, Mr. Kearns has been active in public affairs, and for ten consecutive years served as city treasurer of Townsend, resigning the position in 1911. True to the religious faith of his parents, he is a member of the Roman Catholic church, to which his wife and children also belong.

RALPH E. LOGAN. To the enterprise and progressive ideas of the business men of the younger generation must be given a large measure of the credit for the wonderful growth and development of the Bitter Root valley during late years, as is due to their ability in combining youthful energy and enthusiasm with the lessons taught by those who have gone before them that this section of the state has been brought extensively before the buying public, thus attracting added population and capital and serving to advance its commercial, industrial and agricultural importance. Naturally, those who have been engaged in the real estate business have been prime movers in this forward tendency, and in this connection extended mention should be given the oldest realty firm of Stevensville, that of Logan & Cochran, whose senior member, Ralph E. Logan, has gained an enviable position among the younger generation of Montana's business men. Mr. Logan was born in Rutherford county, North Carolina, November 17, 1882, and is a son of Burchett L. and Emma (Fraser) Logan.

Burchett L. Logan was born in Rutherford county, North Carolina, where he is an extensive owner of plantations and other properties, but in 1899 disposed of his holdings and came to Montana, where he invested heavily in ranch lands in the Bitter Root valley. He now holds prestige as one of the most prominent and influential ranchers and grain men in the entire valley, is president of the Co-operative Creamery at Stevensville, and has numerous other important interests, and his family are widely and favorably known in social circles. Mr. Logan married Miss Emme Fraser, a native of New York state, and they have had six children: William F., who was one of the first to volunteer at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war, becoming a member of Company D, Second Regiment, North Dakota Volunteer Infantry, participating in twenty-five out of twenty-seven battles fought by that organization, and being wounded during the Philippine troubles; Fannie Louise, who married Robert Marks of Harrisburg, Oregon; Mary Pearl, who married Charles McCormack of Evaro, Montana; Simon Rae, a graduate of the Montana high schools and of the class of 1908, Chapel Hill, North Carolina, University, where he received the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and now a well known rancher at Arlee, Missoula county, Montana; Ralph E., and one child that died in infancy.

Ralph E. Logan received instruction in private schools and a military institution in his native state, and accompanied his parents to Montana in 1899. He continued his studies in the Montana State University, at Missoula, which he left in his junior year and supplemented this by attendance at the Pacific University, Forest Grove, Oregon, from which he was graduated. In 1907 he became principal of the science department in the schools of Metford, Oregon, where he held the chair of science for one year, then coming to Hamilton, Montana, as principal but shortly thereafter resigned his position to begin a business career, and during the fall of 1908 organized the firm of Logan & Cochran. This has become the leading real estate concern of Stevensville, and through honorable business methods and straightforward dealing enjoys prestige throughout Montana and the adjoining states. The company owns considerable ranch property in the Bitter Root valley, and makes a specialty in subdividing large properties into small ten or twenty-acre tracts, the land in this section being so productive that a property of this size affords a family with the means of a comfortable livelihood. From a modest beginning, the firm has had a healthy and well-balanced growth, and has done its full share in bringing settlers and capital into the Bitter Root valley.

Mr. Logan is progressive in business and in politics, being an active worker in the ranks of the Progressive party. He has a wide acquaintance and many friends in Stevensville, and shares the family's popularity in the social set.

LEWIS C. FALTERMEYER. Coming of sturdy stock, reared in a frugal and careful home and given fair educational opportunities, Lewis C. Faltermeyer, who is secretary and treasurer of The W. A. Orgain Company, of Wibaux, Montana, has built up his business success on the above foundation, with the assistance of personal effort in the way of persistent industry. He was born in Bavaria, Germany, November 2, 1865, and is a son of Joseph and Krescenz (Lechner) Faltermeyer.

Joseph Faltermeyer and wife were both born in Bavaria, Germany, and both died in America, he in 1895, when aged fifty-two years, and she in 1899, at the age of fifty years. Joseph Faltermeyer was a small farmer in Germany, but he became dissatisfied as he saw his family increasing with no prospect of adding to his acres or of providing for his children in so closely settled a region. In 1872 he came alone to America and located at Faribault, Rice county, Minnesota, where he provided a home and in the fall of 1874 his wife and their three children—Lewis C., Frances and George joined him there. Subsequently four more children were born: Mary, Rose, Joseph, Jr., and Dora. Mr. Faltermeyer found work with the Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, now the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company, and became foreman of construction and continued with that company for about six years. Afterward he was with the Polar Star Flour Mill Company and later he was in the stone quarry business. He was a member of the Roman Catholic church.

After attending the public schools at Faribault for some years, Lewis C. Faltermeyer accepted a position as clerk in a mercantile establishment in that city and continued there for two years. In 1883 he went to Marvel, North Dakota, and as a clerk was connected with mercantile houses until 1890, when he removed to Minto, North Dakota, and for two years following was a clerk in the freight department of the Great Northern Railroad. From there he came to Helena, Montana, as bill clerk for the Great Northern Express Company, one year later accepting the position of cashier for that company, with headquarters at Butte. He remained there for two and one-half years and then made his first visit home. In August, 1896 he went to Redwood Falls, Minnesota, where he was bookkeeper for a large mercantile house until January, 1899, and then returned to Faribault for a short season, in May following becoming a resident of Wibaux, Montana. Here he entered his present company as bookkeeper and when the company was incorporated as The W. A. Orgain Company, he became its secretary and treasurer. The other officers are: W. A. Orgain, president, and Cetius Orgain, vice president. This house carries an immense stock of general merchandise, including groceries, hardware, dry goods, boots and shoes, crockery, glassware, sporting goods, and wagons and farm machinery of all kinds. The business is soundly financed and is in a very prosperous condition.

In 1905 Mr. Faltermeyer was married to Miss Emily Pickering, who was born in Dakota, and they have two daughters: Claudia and Elvira. Mr. Faltermeyer and children are members of the Roman Catholic church, and Mrs. Faltermeyer is a member of the Episcopal church. His political affiliation is with the Democratic party. The first public office he ever accepted was that of assessor of Ferry township, in Grand Forks county, North Dakota, and since then he has served in numerous other capacities. In 1906 he was elected school trustee at Wibaux, Montana, was reelected in 1909, and on March 5, 1910, he was appointed a member of the board of county commissioners of Dawson county, his election to this office following in November. He belongs to three of the leading fraternal organizations of the Catholic church, the Knights of Columbus, the C. O. F. and the K. O. T. M.

FRANK L. SUMMERS. Among the successful ranchmen of the Yellowstone valley, one who has taken an important part in the development of this section and who has witnessed the marvelous changes that have taken place within the space of only comparatively a few short years, is Frank L. Summers, of Billings. Coming to this country as a buffalo hunter, with the passing of the great herds he became a cattle raiser, and eventually transferred his interests to the sheep industry, in which he is at present successfully engaged. Mr. Summers was born in Noble county, Ohio, April 24, 1860, and is a son of John and Harriet (Millner) Summers, the former a native of Connecticut and the latter of Ireland.

John Summers removed to the state of Ohio as a young man, and was there engaged at the shoemaker's trade until 1880, which year saw his advent in Custer (now Yellowstone) county, Montana, where he was a pioneer. After following his trade for two years he located on the homestead on which he now lives, and has been since engaged in farming and stock raising. He is one of the highly esteemed men of this community, and has been active in his support of the Democratic party, being a great admirer of William J. Bryan. Mr. Summers was married in Ohio to Miss Harriet Millner, who also survives, as do five of their seven children, as follows: Charles, who resides near Billings; Frank L.; Elmer G., a ranchman of Yellowstone county; Lottie, the wife of J. L. Guiler, the owner of a fine ranch in this county; Iola, who married E. H. Carle, also of the Yellowstone valley.

Frank L. Summers received his education in the common schools of his native vicinity, and like other farmers' sons of his day and locality spent his summers in work on the home place. His educational advantages were not of an exceptional nature, for at the age of thirteen years he commenced farming out for his uncle, Frank Millner, his wages for the first eight months being five dollars per month, and for the next seven months, nine dollars. The hard, healthy work of the fields gave him an excellent physique, and when he was nineteen years of age he decided to try his fortunes in the West, and with ten other adventurous young men went by train to Bismarck, North Dakota. Subsequently he purchased a mule team, with which he came through to what was then Custer (now Yellowstone) county, where he secured employment at cutting hay for the United States government, to be used at Fort Custer.

He followed that for only one season, however, and in the fall of 1879 located on the Yellowstone river, and during the two following winters was engaged in hunting buffaloes and other game for their hides. He was only twenty-one years old when he homesteaded a claim of 160 acres on Canyon creek, Yellowstone county, and there he remained until 1884, at which time, with others he was engaged in opening up Canyon Creek ditch. In the fall of 1886 Mr. Summers returned to Ohio, where he was married, and in March, 1887, located on his new farm, where he continued to live until 1899, at that time locating in the city of Billings in order to give his children the benefit of better educational advantages. Selling his homestead, he engaged in the sheep business, in which he has since continued, and his animals bring top-notch prices in the Chicago markets. In addition to a ranch located near his old home he has a fine property on the south side of the Yellowstone river, about eighteen miles from Billings. He maintains his home, however, in the city, having a handsome residence at No. 3303 Fourth avenue, North. Mr. Summers has made improvements of the best order, bringing to bear discrimination and judgment, and sparing no effort in placing his properties in the finest possible condition. He has thoroughly demonstrated the possibilities of sheep raising in his section, and is recognized as an able judge of stock. Mr. Summers has found time to spare from his business interests to take a prominent part in fraternal work, and is now a member of Ashlar Lodge No. 29, F. & A. M., Billings Chapter No. 6, R. A. M., Aldemar Commandery No. 5, K. T. and Algeria Temple, of Helena. He is well known in Masonry, having served his lodge as master for one term, his chapter as high priest two terms and his commandery as eminent commander two terms. In political matters he is a Republican, but his activities have been rather as a spectator than as a participant, although he is well informed as to the important issues of the day and takes a keen interest in any matter that pertains to the welfare of his community. Mr. Summers has a perfect right to the title of "Old-timer," and has numerous warm friends among the pioneer settlers of the Yellowstone valley.

On March 12, 1887, Mr. Summers was married to Miss Clara Nowell, who was born in Ohio, a daughter of John and Frances (Lucas) Nowell, the former a native of Maryland and the latter of Ohio. Mrs. Summers' mother died in the Buckeye state, but her father still survives and makes his home there. Mrs. Summers was the fourth in order of birth of her parents' seven children, all of whom are living. Two children, Frances E. and John E., have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Summers.

FRED H. KNISLEY. Since 1906 Fred H. Knisley has been a resident of the city of Missoula, but it was not until three years ago that he became established in business for himself. He is now engaged as the owner and proprietor of one of the most up-to-date and altogether popular places in the city. His pool room is the most modern of its kind, and in connection with it he conducts a cigar store and news stand. The place is steadily increasing in prominence and popularity and the success of the venture has proved to the city the lack of such a place heretofore.

Mr. Knisley was born in Hagersville, Ontario, Canada, on February 24, 1872, and is the son of Benjamin and Sarah (Mallen) Knisley, both native born Canadians. Benjamin Knisley was chief of police in Hagersville for twenty-four years. He came to Missoula about six months after his son located there, and he died in this city in 1909, aged sixty-two. His remains were taken back to his birthplace and interred in the family plot at Hagersville. His wife died in 1895, aged forty-three years. Three children were born to them. Of that number, Fred H. of this review is the only one living, and he now represents all that is left of the family.

The education of Mr. Knisley was of a fair order, he having been privileged to finish the high school course of his home town, and at the age of fifteen, after finishing school, he began to study telegraphy. He was soon a competent operator and at once began work for the Michigan Central Railroad, and he continued in their service for eleven years. He was about twenty-six years old when he came to Missoula first in 1899, and he has been a resident of the state continuously since then. When he first located in Missoula he was employed by the Northern Pacific Railroad as station agent and telegraph operator, and he was stationed at various points along the line until 1904, in which year he went to Butte City for two years as soliciting freight agent for the Rock Island Railroad. He then returned to Missoula and worked for the Missoula Light & Water Company for four years as bookkeeper and cashier. The young man was ambitious to become established in business on his own responsibility, and seeing an opportunity for a wide-awake man, he entered the business which now engages him. His pool and billiard rooms are the finest and best equipped to be found in his section of the country, and the sale of tobacco, cigars, stationery and periodicals has lent a popularity to the place equal to that which it bears by reason of the general esteem in which its proprietor is held in the city. The establishment is well ordered, carefully kept up, and is known as headquarters in good fellowship throughout the city.

Mr. Knisley is a Republican, and is actively interested in the political affairs of his district. At the present time he is secretary of the Republican county central committee, and has done good work for the party since he has been identified with the public life of the county. Mr. Knisley is particularly prominent in fraternal circles. He is a Mason, and a member of the blue lodge and the mystic shrine. He has been master of the blue lodge on three different occasions. At present he is master of Harmony lodge No. 83, and he was master of Hiram lodge No. 319, at Hagersville, Ontario, before coming to Missoula. In 1909 he was master of Missoula lodge No. 13, and is now past high priest of Western Sun Chapter No. 11, and past patron of Electa Chapter No. 7, order of the Eastern Star, at Missoula. He is past thrice illustrious master of Tyrean Council No. 3 Royal and Select Masters, and is its recorder at the present time. He is a member of St. Omar Commandery No. 9, Knights Templar and a member of Bagdad Temple of the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias as well as of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks and the Independent Order of Foresters. He is also a member of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, in which he has held a continuous membership since 1888. Although he is no longer connected with the order in the manner in which he formerly was, he retains his membership in memory of the pleasant associations it brings to him. Mr. Knisley is an ardent sportsman, and baseball is his pet enthusiasm. At one time he played the game himself, and has ever been the most enthusiastic of fans.

J. B. Wilson

On February 12, 1896, Mr. Knisley was married at Cornell, Ontario, to Miss Elizabeth Drake, the daughter of David W. and Elizabeth Drake, of that place.

Mr. and Mrs. Knisley are both members of the Episcopal church of Missoula.

ALBERT W. MERRIFIELD. Since 1900 Albert W. Merrifield, of Fort Benton, has served efficiently in the office of county surveyor of Chouteau county, and during this time has made an admirable record for duties faithfully performed and opportunities promptly seized and fully used. His activities, however, have not been entirely limited to the responsibilities of public service, as he is well and favorably known in financial circles, and holds official positions in several large banking institutions. Mr. Merrifield was born at Amboy, Illinois, October 7, 1869, and on his father's side of the family is descended from English ancestors who settled in Vermont a number of generations ago, while his mother's people, members of the old and honored Ives family of England, trace their ancestry back to William the Conqueror.

Albert H. Merrifield, father of Albert W., was born in Vermont, and as a youth enlisted in Company F, Eighth Regiment, Vermont Volunteer Infantry, with which he served until the close of the Civil war, participating in many hard-fought engagements and rising to the rank of sergeant. When hostilities ceased he located in Ottawa, Illinois, where for many years he was engaged in the manufacture of pianos and organs, and died in that city in August, 1902, at the age of sixty-six years. He was married at Amboy to Lucille D. Tooker, a native of Amboy, Illinois, and to them were born seven children, Albert W. being the oldest.

After attending the public schools of his native place and the high school at Mendota, Illinois, Albert W. Merrifield entered the University of Illinois, and on graduating from that institution secured a position in the engineering department of the Illinois Central Railroad, at Chicago. He spent two years in the service of that road, and then returned to Ottawa, where for four years he worked in the office of the county surveyor, securing experience that has been of inestimable value to him in later years, and then engaged in the private practice of surveying. In 1899 Mr. Merrifield left Ottawa for the West, and March 24th of that year arrived in Chinook, Montana, where he became associated with the county surveyor, continuing with him until his removal to Fort Benton in the fall of 1900, since which time he has acted in the capacity of surveyor of Chouteau county. His executive ability, progressive methods and sturdy integrity of character have won him numerous friends and supporters, and he is also recognized as one of the able and representative young business men of his part of the state, being a director and stockholder in the First National Bank of Harlem, the First National Bank of Chinook and the Benton State Bank. In political matters Mr. Merri-field has always been a Republican, loyally supporting his party's candidates on all occasions and being counted one of the active workers of the organization in Chouteau county. He holds prestige fraternally as a member of Benton Lodge No. 25, Great Falls Chapter and Commandery and Mystic Shrine at Helena, in Masonry, and is also connected with the Fraternal Order of Eagles at Havre. While a resident of Mendota, Illinois, he served as a member of Company B, Sixth Regiment, Illinois State Militia.

Mr. Merrifield was married at Ripon, Wisconsin, August 9, 1911, to Miss Wanda L. Nohl, daughter of Louis Nohl, a native of Wisconsin. To Mr. and Mrs. Merrifield was born a daughter, Wanda. They are well and favorably known in social circles of Fort Benton.

BENJAMIN W. WILSON. A scion of sturdy old Scotch families and inheriting the shrewdness, thrift and dogged determination of his ancestors, with other traits of mind and character which have helped to make the typical Scotchman successful and prosperous in every clime and on every field of action, Benjamin W. Wilson, one of the leading mine owners of Butte, has forcibly exemplified in his interesting career the best attributes and characteristics of his race and most worthily upheld the name and traditions of his forefathers and their record of conquest over difficulties.

Mr. Wilson, who is now the only living representative of his family, was one of its first offspring born in this country. His life began at Traer, Iowa, on February 7, 1875, and there he grew to manhood and obtained the foundation of his academic education. His parents, Andrew and Mary (Brown) Wilson, were born in Scotland and came to the United States at early ages. They found new homes in Iowa, and here they became acquainted and were married. The father owned grain elevators at Traer and carried on a flourishing business in grain until death cut short his labors in the prime of his manhood. He was born in 1849 and died in 1879. The mother died at the age of twenty-eight, when her son Benjamin was an infant. Two other sons were born in the family: Eugene, who died in South Bend, Washington, and Harry, who passed away in Butte, Montana.

Benjamin W. Wilson attended the public schools in his native town and completed his education at the Iowa Agricultural College, from which he was graduated in 1896. Mining had warmly enlisted his attention, and he determined to make it his life work if possible. With this end in view he left the scenes and associations of his boyhood and youth and plunged boldly into the wild excitement and arduous toil of the mining camps in the Black Hills of South Dakota. He prospected all through that region but never struck pay dirt. Thinking he might have a better chance in another locality, he went to Utah, and for some time carried on his prospecting industry in the mining portions of that state. There, also, he was unsuccessful, and then he almost abandoned all hope of ever making a strike that would pay, and in 1899 came to Butte and went to work in the mines here to recoup his shattered fortunes.

After about one year and a half passed in arduous labor in the mines for other persons he once more turned his attention to prospecting and followed it for a time without any good results worth speaking of. He discovered several ore-bearing properties, but after working them a short time abandoned them. At last he located the Bismarck mine in Madison county, about twenty miles south of Jefferson Island, and began its development. He soon found he had discovered a bonanza and formed a company for the purchase of machinery and the further development of the mine. This property is in the mountains about twenty miles from railroad facilities, and by that fact is handicapped to some extent temporarily. But the ore it yields is of very high grade of gold and copper, running about twenty per cent., and with enough first quality ore in sight to make all the stockholders in the company wealthy. Mr. Wilson is the principal stockholder and the secretary of the company he formed. The directors are among the best known and most prominent business and professional men in Montana, and the work of developing the mine is proceeding with gratifying progress. The company has installed a mill and mining machinery costing many thousands of dollars, and is losing no time in getting at the wealth they know awaits them, as the reward of their faith and enterprise, in far greater measure than they have yet realized it. Mr. Wilson is also the owner of two ranches, one at Jefferson Island, Montana, and the other on Puget Sound, opposite Tacoma, Washington.

He is unmarried and mingles freely with his fellow men in social life and through the medium of the fraternal and social organizations. He belongs to the Fraternal Order of Eagles, the Loyal Order of Moose, the University Club and the Elks. He is a firm believer in the principles and theories of government of the Democratic party, but has never taken an active part in political contests. He has, however, given careful attention and excellent support to all projects designed to advance the interests and promote the welfare of the city of Butte and state of Montana. He is fond of outdoor life, being especially devoted to hunting and fishing.

Mr. Wilson's paternal grandparents, John and Jean (McCosh) Wilson, were born, reared and married in Scotland. They came to the United States early in their married life and located in Iowa, where they were pioneers and started the American branch of the family. One of their sons, Hon. James Wilson, has been secretary of agriculture during the administrations of Presidents McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft. They farmed profitably in their new home, labored industriously, lived frugally and gave earnest attention to all the claims of duty in reference to both public and private affairs. After many years of usefulness and upright living in Iowa they passed away there, universally respected as among the best persons in their community.

HARRY W. POWER, M.D. The world instinctively pays deference to the man whose success has been worthily achieved and whose prominence is not the less the result of an irreproachable life than of natural talents and acquired ability in the field of his chosen labor. Dr. Harry W. Power occupies a position of distinction as a representative of the medical profession in Conrad and Teton county, Montana, and the best evidence of his capability in the line of his chosen work is the large patronage which is accorded him.

Doctor Power was born at Bismarck, North Dakota, July 18, 1879, and he is a son of Maurice N. and Sarah (Casey) Power, the former of whom was born in Massachusetts, of Irish descent, and the latter of whom is a native of Ireland. The father grew up and was educated in his native state and after the inception of the Civil war enlisted as a soldier in Company M, Seventy-fourth Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry. He served in the army with valor and distinction for a period of three years and in 1864 he came west as far as North Dakota, settling permanently in that state in 1872. He was a government contractor during his active career but is now living in retirement in the city of Great Falls, Montana, where he has maintained his home since 1899. Of the six children born to Mr. and Mrs. Maurice N. Power, Dr. Harry W. Power was the youngest in order of birth of the four sons. He was educated in the public schools of Great Falls, Montana, and was graduated in the Neihart high school in 1896. Three years later he was graduated in the University of Colorado, with the degree of Bachelor of Science, and in 1900 was matriculated as a student in Northwestern University, in the medical department of which excellent institution he was graduated as a member of the class of 1903, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine.

After graduation in Northwestern University, Doctor Power was in interne in Mercy Hospital, in Chicago, for one year, at the expiration of which he came to Conrad, Montana, where he initiated the active practice of his profession and where he has since been a prominent and influential citizen. He devotes his attention to a general practice but makes a specialty of surgery, having taken post-graduate courses in that particular line on three separate occasions in eastern colleges.

Although not interested in politics Doctor Power is intrinsically loyal and public spirited in his civic attitude and exercises his franchise in favor of the Republican party. In a fraternal way he is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America and with the Woodmen of the World, and in his religious faith is a Roman Catholic. Doctor Power is unmarried.

FRANCIS T. RICKARD. Energetic, enthusiastic, and industrious, Francis T. Rickard, of Shelby, is a firm believer in the advancement and progress of Montana, and is ever ready to add his mite toward the making of a bigger and better state, his especial interests, however, centering in and around Shelby, where he is carrying on a good business as a dealer in real estate. A native of Washington, he first saw the light of this world, as novelists say, November 17, 1880, in Stevens county, Washington.

His father, the late Conrad Rickard, was born in 1836, in Baden, Germany, and there spent his earlier life. Immigrating to America in 1861, locating during that year at Fort Benton, Montana. Subsequently going up the river until he hit the Teton trail, he followed that rude pathway until he reached Washington, one of the newer territories, of which but comparatively little was known. Settling in Stevens county, he took up wild land, and on the farm which he reclaimed from its original wildness spent the remainder of his life, passing away March 27, 1891, at the early age of fifty-five years. He married Lulu Culver, who was born in California in 1859, removed with her parents to Washington in girlhood, and is still a resident of Stevens county. Three children were born of their union, namely: Francis T.; Conrad, of Colville, Washington; and Mrs. Minnie St. Clair, also of Colville, Washington.

Left fatherless while a young lad, Francis T. Rickard began hustling for himself at the age of thirteen years, going to Oregon as a cow-boy. After serving a year in that capacity, he returned to his native state, where he was variously employed for several years, chiefly in some line or agricultural labor. In 1899, Mr. Rickard made his first appearance on Montana soil, and for a number of years thereafter his entire attention was devoted to cattle, as an employee of the T Cattle Company, one of the foremost organizations of the kind in the state. Returning once more to Washington, Mr. Rickard bought land, and engaged in ranching on his own account. Not satisfied with the pecuniary results obtained from working the soil, he sold his ranch and embarked in the meat business, first in Spokane, and later at Colville. Disposing of his market, we next find him in Idaho, later in Oregon. The lure of Montana subsequently called Mr. Rickard to Bozeman, and after living there a short time, he settled in Shelby, Teton county, where he is now prosperously engaged in the real estate business, an industry for which he is well adapted, and in which he is meeting with gratifying success.

Politically Mr. Rickard is an ardent supporter of the principles of the Republican party. Fraternally he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America; and of the Knights of Pythias. He is a lover of outdoor sports of all kinds, but is especially fond of hunting and fishing.

On February 12, 1900, Mr. Rickard was united in marriage with Miss Mamie Schanz, who was born in Osseo, Minnesota, but was then living in Colville, Washington. Mr. and Mrs. Rickard have one child, Dorothy Hazel Rickard, born December 5, 1905.

HORACE GREELEY POMEROY, prominent lawyer of Eureka, secretary of the Eureka Townsite Company, and its legal representative, member of the lower house of the state legislature for Flathead county in 1909, the eleventh session, and city clerk and attorney for Eureka since its organization into a town, is, of necessity, one of the busiest men of the community. He has been a resident of the state of Montana since 1899, but a practicing attorney only since 1906, and in the six years of his identification with the business interests of the city and county, he has forged to the fore with a surety that has been astonishing to his warmest admirers. Mr. Pomeroy was born in Jackson county, Kansas, near Holton, on March 6, 1876, a son of John Franklin Pomeroy and Isabella C. (Clark) Pomeroy. The father was born in Massachusetts and he and his wife still live in Holton, Kansas, he being now in his eighty-first year. He came to Kansas in 1858, when he was about twenty-six years of age. He was a Kansas volunteer throughout the Civil war, and saw much active service at that time. The mother was born in Indiana. When a small child her parents migrated to Kansas, and there she was reared. She is now seventy years of age. They became the parents of the following children: Delia, deceased; Franklin C., who resides in Holton, Kansas, on the old homestead; Horace G., of this review; Alice Lyall, of Chicago; Harriet S. Billard, of Santa Fe, New Mexico; Clara Belle Dunn, of Holton, Kansas; and John A. Pomeroy, also of Holton, Kansas.

John Franklin Pomeroy was twice married. First, December 30, 1862, to Martha Jane Blake, of Indiana, and unto this union but one child is living—Judge Chas. W. Pomeroy of Kalispell, of whom mention is made elsewhere in this work.

The district schools of the farming community where Horace Greeley Pomeroy was reared furnished his schooling during the early years of his life, and he later attended Campbell College at Holton, Kansas, where he took a course in civil engineering. Following his graduation in 1898 he took up school teaching at St. Clere, Kansas, teaching there the winter after leaving college, and the next year going to Kalispell, Montana, where he taught school near Columbia Falls for a three months' term. He then went into the law offices of Foot & Pomeroy as stenographer in December, 1899, and continued with them in the study of the law until 1906, being admitted to the bar in June of that year. Immediately thereafter he went into the county clerk's office as deputy, remaining until January, 1907. His next move led him to Eureka, Montana, where he engaged in the active practice of his profession, and here he has enjoyed a very successful career since that time. Since locating in Eureka he has been the legal representative of the Eureka Townsite Company, one of the big concerns of the city, and he is also secretary of that company. In 1908 Mr. Pomeroy was elected to the lower house of the state legislature for Flathead county, which then included Eureka, and since 1909, the date of the organization of the town, he has been its city clerk and attorney.

Mr. Pomeroy was married on February 15, 1902, to Miss Maude A. Ferguson, of Kalispell, Montana.

He is a Republican in his political convictions, and both he and his wife give evidence of their advanced ideas by their affiliation with the Christian Science religion.

Mr. Pomeroy is a man of quiet and homelike instincts, but possesses a wide circle of good friends throughout the state and wherever he is known. He has built up for himself a reputation for fair dealing and general integrity that is one of his chief assets, and he has succeeded in his profession far beyond the usual measure of success for a man of his age and experience.

NELS C. NILSON was born in Denmark, on June 25, 1866, and there lived until he reached his majority. He is the son of Chris C. and Mary Nilson, both natives of Denmark. The father, who has followed farming in his native land all his life, is still actively engaged in that business, and is hale and hearty at the age of seventy-nine years. The mother died in 1909, aged sixty-five years. They were the parents of ten children, eight of whom are now living. Nels C. was the fourth born in this family, and of his brothers and sisters, four are now living in Kalispell.

Mr. Nilson attended the public schools of his native land until he was in his teens, after which he was apprenticed in the cabinet making trade, in which he continued until he was twenty years of age. When he was twenty-one he immigrated to America, and locating in Minneapolis, Minnesota, he secured a position in a furniture shop, where he remained for ten years. He then removed to Litchfield, where he became established in a similar business, and there continued for nine years. In 1899 he left Litchfield and came directly to Kalispell, and for four years after his coming here he engaged in contract work. He then established the Flathead Woodworking Company in 1903, with quarters in a building 24 x 60 feet at first, but which later developed into a shop of generous proportion, with all modern equipments and conveniences, including electric motors, etc., and with fourteen woodworking machines. The business has grown apace since its inception, and Mr. Nilson is recognized as one of the leading business men in the city today. He carries on a thriving business in his shops and is one of the representative and influential men connected with industrial enterprises in Kalispell.

Mr. Nilson is a member of a number of fraternal societies, among them being the Modern Woodmen of America and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He is a member of the Christian church, the faith of his fathers and in his political views, is in the ranks of the Independents. He is a member of the Kalispell Club, and is prominent in the political, business and social activities of the city.

On September 25, 1889, Mr. Nilson was united in marriage with Miss Bertha Collier, of Cumberland, Wisconsin. They have become the parents of five children, as follows: Leo Nilson, the eldest, was born on July 13, 1892, in Litchfield, Minnesota; he is now engaged in business with his father; Estella, born in 1894, is a student of voice, and is making splendid progress with her studies; Gladys was born in 1897, and is at present attending the high school in Kalispell; Clifford, born in 1899 and Nettie, born in 1901, are both attending school in the city.

ROBERT ALLEN COOLEY, B. S., professor of zoology and entomology at the Montana State College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts, head of the biology department and state entomologist of Montana, has raised himself to a distinguished position in the field of science. Professor Cooley was born June 27, 1873, on his father's farm in Deerfield, Franklin county, Massachusetts, a son of Alfred and Charlotte Maria (Clapp) Cooley.

Alfred Cooley was born in 1844 on the old home stead place in Massachusetts, where he was engaged in farming up to April 1, 1912, and since that time has been living a retired life. His wife, one year his junior, also lives on the old homestead, and they have been the parents of six children, as follows: Cora E., the wife of Charles S. Phelps; Katie, who passed away at the age of twenty-seven years; William H., who married Lula Boyd; Alfred, who died in infancy; Robert Allen; and Fred B., who married Florence Adsit. The family is connected with the Congregational church, of which the parents are active members, and in his political proclivities the father is a stalwart supporter of Republican principles.

Robert Allen Cooley first attended the graded schools in the vicinity of the home farm, and subsequently graduated from the Deerfield high school and Deerfield Academy. In 1895 he was a member of the graduating class at the Massachusetts State Agricultural College, at which time he received the degree of Bachelor of Sciences, and subsequently received the same degree from the Boston University. On being graduated he was given the position of assistant entomologist of the experiment station of the Massachusetts State Agricultural College, at Amherst, and in 1899 came to Bozeman, as a member of the faculty and professor of zoology and entomology at the Montana State College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts. He is a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science in Zoology and is also a member of the American Association of Economic Entomologists and Entomological Society of America, the Phi Sigma Cappa Greek letter society, and Bozeman Lodge No. 18, A. F. & A. M. In his political views he is a Republican.

On June 7, 1899, Professor Cooley was married to Miss Edith M. Cooley, who was born at Sunderland, Franklin county, Massachusetts, daughter of George and Abigail H. (Smith) Cooley. Her father was born at that same place, November 6, 1839, and still resides on the old homestead, where he has spent his whole life with the exception of the time he was in the Union army. He served three years as a member of Company F, Thirty-seventh Regiment, Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, which was attached to the famous Sixteenth Army Corps, and during that time participated in all its movements, including numerous skirmishes, a forced march of forty-five miles to the battle of Gettysburg, and twenty other hard-fought battles, among them such bloody fights as Chancellorsville, Wilderness, Cold Harbor and Spottsylvania. He is now a popular comrade of his local Grand Army of the Republic post. His wife was born in Buckland, Franklin county, Massachusetts, and they had a family of five children, four of whom are now living, while Mrs. Cooley is the third in order of birth. Professor and Mrs. Cooley have three children: Charlotte, Robert Allen, Jr., and Genevieve. The family residence is at No. 810 Central avenue, South, and is a center of culture and social refinement.

H. W. DOUGLAS. By birth a New Englander, by nature a gentleman, by instinct and development a public-spirited man, the life of Postmaster Douglas is one of particular interest. He was born in Voluntown, Connecticut, on August 6, 1855, his parents being B. C. and Abbie A. (Salisbury) Douglas, the latter being a native of Augusta, Maine.

B. C. Douglas, himself a son of Connecticut, was one of the noble veterans of the Civil war. Enlisting in the Twenty-sixth Company of Connecticut Volunteers, he fought throughout that period of national struggle. At the battle of Fort Hudson, he was wounded in the leg, the enemy's bullet having been ever since preserved as a relic of Mr. Douglas' patriotism. The latter part of his life was spent in farming in Wisconsin. He and his faithful wife, both ripe in years, died in 1904 and 1905, respectively, at their home near Wonewoc, Wisconsin.

Postmaster Douglas, when a boy, first attended the country school near the farm at Voluntown, continuing his educational progress at the high school of Baraboo, Wisconsin, after the family came west. Very soon after his graduation he showed his youthful enterprise by going into the mercantile business at Wonewoc, Wisconsin. In 1880 he won as his life companion Miss Alice Graham of Reedsburg, Wisconsin, and their life together has been blessed by three children, now all grown to maturity.

Mr. Douglas remained in Wonewoc, developing his mercantile enterprise, for twenty-five years, ultimately selling his property there and settling in Polson. Throughout his years of commercial activity, the subject of this account has not been content to narrow his activity to more personal efforts. His interest in the public weal led to his election, while in Wisconsin, to membership in the Juneau county board of supervisors, which office he held for seven years. He was also a deputy sheriff for a term of years, in addition to holding various other political offices. Such was his faithfulness in service and such his unswerving integrity as a member of the Republican party that many anticipated and all approved his appointment as postmaster of Polson, by President Taft, in 1911. He still holds and adequately discharges the duties of this office.

Of Postmaster Douglas' three sons, one, Lee, born in Redfield, South Dakota, August 29, 1887, died in Wonewoc ten years ago. Mr. Fred Douglas, who was born in Redfield, South Dakota, August 22, 1885, resides in Polson and is engaged in farming. He was married to Miss Lola Harrison, of Polson, October 13, 1911. His brother, Voir, born April 21, 1896, is still in school. The daughter of the house, Mrs. Mable A. P. Gale, now lives in Wonewoc, Wisconsin, her little son, Douglas Gale, being the postmaster's only grandchild. Her husband, A. P. Gale, who is highly respected by all who know him, is president of the largest bank in Juneau county, at Wonewoc, although but thirty-two years of age.

The Douglas family are valued supporters of the Methodist church of Polson. Both in and out of organizations, Mr. Douglas is a prominent figure in a large circle of friends and influential acquaintances, being a member of the M. W. A. and having attained to all chairs in the I. O. O. F. The conquest of game and large fish constitutes his favorite diversion.

CHARLES W. JUNGBERG. The state forester of Montana is not a man who brings to the task of looking after the enormous timber resources of the state merely a theoretical knowledge of forestry, for he has had experience both as a lumberman and as a lumber inspector; has been game warden and county surveyor; and so knows the situation from various standpoints. With so large a proportion of the state's area in the national forest reserve and with the enormous inroads upon the national supply of timber, it is of the highest importance that our foresters be men who can intelligently carry out the policy of conservation, and who have the will to make their knowledge practical. For this reason Mr. Jungberg is especially adapted to the position he is now filling.

Charles T. Jungberg, the father, was born and raised in Sweden of German parentage and came to this country in the early forties. He caught the gold fever of the "forty-niners," and spent some time in the California gold camps, but he gained nothing but experience from his operations there. He was by profession a mechanical engineer, and settled in Chicago, where Charles, Junior, the eldest of the four children in the family, was born on January 29, 1862. The mother was Pauline Lawson, a native of Gottenberg, Sweden. She was born on June 1, 1839, and is now a resident of Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin. Her husband has been deceased for some twenty years.

The Jungberg family removed from Chicago to Ithaca, New York, and here Charles attended school until he was sixteen. His parents moved to a farm in Wisconsin and for two years Charles followed farming, being the sole support of his mother and younger sisters during this period. He took up the study of civil engineering, and in a short time was able to make this his means of livelihood. For three terms he was county surveyor of Sawyer county. During this time, he was also learning the lumber business, and he worked at that when not engaged in surveying. It was during this period that he held the office of district game warden, and later of lumber inspector.

In 1900 Mr. Jungberg came to Montana, locating in Kalispell, where he was superintendent of the Summers Lumber Company. This concern is the largest in the Flathead district, and for nine years he directed the operations of the company. It was while holding this position that Mr. Jungberg was appointed state forester, and he came from Kalispell to Helena in January, 1909. Ever since 1877 forestry has been a matter of study with Mr. Jungberg, and he has had a wide practical experience in this line of work. He is rightly regarded as an expert in forestry, and since he has been in office he has proved his claim to such reputation by the revision of the forestry laws of the state. These changes have been brought about by Mr. Jungberg's efforts, and have been of the highest benefit to the cause of forestry.

Mr. Jungberg is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America in Wisconsin, and in the same state he maintains his affiliation with the Knights of Pythias. At Kalispell, he belongs to the Masonic order, being a member of both the chapter and commandery.

All the members of Mr. Jungberg's family are natives of Wisconsin. His wife, Mary Ella Gillette, was formerly a resident of Superior, Wisconsin, in which city her marriage to Mr. Gillette occurred on September 7, 1891. The two daughters, Mary Pauline, and Una F., were both born in Hayward, Wisconsin; the former on December 4, 1892, and the latter on April 17, 1894. The family are members of the Methodist church.

Mr. Jungberg belongs to the Progressive wing of the Republican party, and he is naturally specially interested in their policy of conservation of natural resources. He has the sound judgment combined with initiative which is the fruit of a thorough course in the school of experience. He has worked his own way in this great university, which bestows no empty diplomas, and has received "honorable mention" for work already done. He has by no means finished his course, and no one who knows him doubts that he is one who will receive still higher honors.

JOHN W. LUSHER. An eminent business man of Dillon whose integrity has never been questioned and whose dealings are conducted in harmony with the ethics of commercial life is John W. Lusher, proprietor of the Lusher mercantile concern, a modern and splendidly equipped establishment. Indiana has contributed many fine men to the upbuilding of Montana and Mr. Lusher is one of them. His birth occurred in LaPorte, that state, February 2, 1866, and he lived within the boundaries of the state until about seventeen years of age, most of the time being spent in Elkhart, whence the family removed when he was four. In early manhood he went to Sac City, Iowa, and there resided until his thirty-fourth birthday. He then fell victim to the lure of the west and went to Colfax, Washington, where he spent one winter before coming on to Dillon, where he has ever since made his home. The date of his arrival in Dillon was February 28, 1900.

Mr. Lusher had been in mercantile business in Iowa for seventeen years and naturally he took his place in the world of affairs in this state as a merchant. His first store was established in the building now occupied by Lovell's barber shop and Brown's tailoring shop in Bannack street. In comparison with its present proportions it was then a small concern. In three years the business outgrew the 1,500 square feet of floor space that the store offered and he was forced to move to more capacious quarters. He moved to his present location at 14 and 16 North Montana street, which at that time had 3,300 square feet of floor space. Business continued to grow and in 1909 he added another room of 1,500 square feet, which gives him nearly 5,000 feet at the present time. The store has a fine and widespread reputation in Beaverhead county for fair dealing and is a popular trade center for both town and county custom. The stock includes men and women's wearing apparel, dry goods, shoes and millinery. The standard makes in every line are in stock and the Lusher goods have stood the test of service and the critical judgment of style. Mr. Lusher is everywhere accounted one of the enterprising and progressive business men of Dillon and is one who, it is safe to say, has no peer in his knowledge of the dry goods business. As one intimately concerned in a line of industry which has important bearing upon the progress and stable prosperity of the community he occupies a representative position in business circles.

Mr. Lusher's father was John Lusher, who was born at Muhen, Canton Argau, Switzerland, November 9, 1840. Thus the subject is from the stock of the brave little republic which has sent many hardy citizens to America since the Revolution, the Swiss-American people being among the most intelligent, patriotic, industrious and upright of our great and wonderful cosmopolitan population. John Lusher came to the United States when a boy of eleven, settled first in Clyde, Ohio, and finally removed to Elkhart, Indiana, where he engaged in mercantile business for over thirty-five years. He is now leading a retired life in Chicago. The mother, Cynthia J. (Garland) Lusher, was born in Rochester, New York, in 1842, and was united to John Lusher in Clyde, Ohio, in 1859. She died at Huron, Ohio, August 20, 1888, at the age of forty-six years, and is there interred. There were six children in the elder Lusher family, two boys and four girls, the subject being the fourth in order of birth. He has one brother in Montana—Charles R. Lusher. He is married and resides in Conrad, where he is engaged in mercantile business.

Mr. Lusher, immediate subject of this brief biographical notice, is a Republican in politics, but is interested in public affairs only as an intelligent voter. He is, however, very loyal to Republican policies and principles and will do all in his power to assist its cause. Fraternally he is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, the Elks and the United Artisans. He is a lover of good music and finds much pleasure in lectures and public speaking of high order, also in hunting. He is a thoroughly self-made man and accordingly self-reliant and thrifty. He earned his first money as a boy of ten working for Will J. Davis, the famous actor, who was in the sewing machine business at that time in Elkhart. He next found employment in a knitting factory, receiving for his services the modest sum of two dollars and a half a week. His training in the mercantile business was in his father's store and under the able tuition of that gentleman. His education was secured in Elkhart's public schools, but that early discipline he has materially supplemented by good reading and the like. He has seen Dillon develop from a small town to the present, thriving, hustling city and believes that this has been but the beginning of its development.

Mr. Lusher was happily married in Sac City, Iowa, September 15, 1887, the lady of his choice being Nettie

A. Baxter, daughter of Anson and Marie Antoinette Baxter, of Sac City. Mr. and Mrs. Lusher are held in universal confidence and esteem and maintain a hospitable and attractive home.

CHARLES A. SMITH. There never yet was a citizen of Dillon or of Beaverhead county who did not know, either personally or by reputation, Charles A. Smith, or, as he is far more generally known, "Charlie" or "Horse" Smith. He gets the latter nickname from the fact that he has dealt in horses from his youth up and is now the largest independent live stock and real estate operator in all the state of Montana. He is a splendid democrat in every sense of the word save the political and allows no "Misters" to be attached to his name. He is a very interesting personality and Dillon is fortunate in the possession of a citizen so alert, progressive, loyal, honest, breezy and independent—in fact, he fairly embodies in himself the meaning of the west.

Charles A. Smith is a product of Illinois, his birth having occurred in Dixon, that state, on July 4, 1862. Anyone born on such a date could not fail to be a good American. His life by no means began under auspicious circumstances, for before he was born his father and two sisters died and a certain family in Dixon offered to adopt and rear him. He did not see his mother again until he was twenty-two years old. Until he was seven years of age he remained in Morrison, but at the end of that time his foster parents removed to Yellow Medicine county, Minnesota, and there the subject resided until about twenty years of age. He then went to Decatur, Illinois, where he stayed one winter, and went thence to Profitstown, Illinois, where he remained three years, during which time he bought and sold horses. His next change of residence was to Lake Minnetonka, Minnesota, where for three years he followed the same business, and in connection with it contracting. North Dakota next claimed his interest and within its boundaries he lived for about a dozen years. He was the first independent stock buyer in Cavalier county, North Dakota, and while in that state he plunged deeply into the real estate business, and in so doing received his first real set-back. He bought the townsite of Osnabrock in Cavalier county, North Dakota, and had erected several excellent buildings, when the panic and drought of 1897 came on, and, to couch it in his own language, he had to "sell out at a sacrifice to avoid going broke."

Mr. Smith's residence in Dillon dates from the year 1900 and his residence here of more than a decade has given him no reason to regret his identification with the commonwealth. As mentioned in a preceding paragraph, he is the largest independent real estate and live stock operator in Montana and his famous semi-annual midwinter auction sales have attracted national attention, drawing to Dillon people from over all the United States.

It is unnecessary to state that Mr. Smith began the battle of life at an early age. In fact he has made his own way from about the age of twelve years and he is as self-reliant as his training would warrant. He first experienced the peculiar joy of being a wage-earner at about the age of eleven, when he worked on a farm for six months at ten dollars per month and then gave the entire sum to his foster parents. He showed that he was a hustler then and he has been hustling ever since. When still a small lad he drove a harvester and made two dollars and a half a day, which sum likewise went into the family exchequer.

His first real venture in business was at about the age of seventeen years. He bought five calves at seven dollars per head, having ground sorghum and cut corn at seventy-five cents per day until he paid for them. He then traded until he had seventeen head, upon which he sold them all and bought others, and in this fashion kept on accumulating until he had made enough to pay off a seven hundred and fifty dollar mortgage on his adopted father's farm. He had the unerring commercial instincts with which the true business man is born, and these manifested themselves very early. After the above affair he bought cattle for Baxter & Whitman, of Granite Falls, Minnesota, and subsequently started on the course which eventually brought him to Dillon. He received his education in the public schools of Illinois and Minnesota.

Mr. Smith laid one of the most important stones in the foundation of his success by his marriage at Park River, North Dakota, in the year 1894, to Belinda C. Anderson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Anderson, of Osnabrock, Mr. Anderson having been a farmer and prominent politician of that locality. He was born in Canada, March 3, 1836, and died in 1893. Mrs. Anderson was also born in Canada in 1836, and died in 1884. To the union of the subject and his admirable wife have been born three sons and a daughter. Three are deceased. Charles Stanley, the eldest of the children, was born at Osnabrock, North Dakota, and died in Dillon; Minnie C., born at Osnabrock, died when seven weeks old; George Allen, born at Osnabrock, October 22, 1899, is now attending school at Dillon; Clarence Smith, born July 11, 1903, died the next day, July 12.

Mr. Smith finds great pleasure in several fraternal and social connections. He belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and the Beaverhead Social Club, being one of the board of directors and virtually the father of that new and flourishing organization. He is also chairman of the advisory committee of the Beaverhead Commercial Club. Since 1906 he has been a member of the Percheron Society of America. He is a Republican in political conviction, but takes no active part in politics, and though, on account of his popularity and standing, frequently solicited by his friends to run for office, has steadfastly refused. He is a celebrated baseball fan and his favorite diversions are racing, good plays and music. Both the subject and his wife incline toward the Methodist Episcopal faith and the latter is actively interested in the affairs of the church. His real mother, whom he found when he was twenty-two years of age, is now a beloved member of his household in Dillon. His father is interred in Dixon, Illinois.

Mr. Smith is one of the leading citizens of Montana, commanding the confidence, respect and good will of the entire community. Everybody likes him and seeks his company; he is wonderfully entertaining, a natural comedian, and an inimitable story teller. It is safe to say that he knows more excellent anecdotes than any other man in Montana. He is one of Dillon's most energetic boosters, a real "live wire," and, as some one has said, "When any thing is needed they always send Charlie. He is the go-get-'em man, he DOES things." He is kindly and whole-souled and would go out of his way any time to do a man a favor. He bears no ill-will towards any one and is always smiling.

EDWIN A. J. JESSE, born in Pewaukee, Wisconsin, February 18, 1879, and now a prominent resident of Roundup, Montana, is a man of action, a man who has worked hard for what he has gained and who has never been a quitter. Educated in the public schools and the high school of Pewaukee, every experience, no matter how hard or how unpleasant, he has had since he has accepted as a continuance of the training begun then, as playing a necessary part in his development. Efficient and capable, his neighbors expect him to play a leading part in Montana's future. He is now a member of the city council of Roundup.

Mr. Jesse's father, Frederick Jesse, was born in Germany and came to this country and settled in Wisconsin when he was fourteen years old. A blacksmith by trade, his strongest outside interest has always been politics. He now lives in Milwaukee, and nothing that he can accomplish for the good of his city is ever left undone. A lack of civic pride is a crime to him. He is also an Odd Fellow, and a prominent man among them. His wife, Antonia Pomplitz, was also born in Germany, and came to the United States to settle in Wisconsin, where their marriage took place. They had nine children, of whom Edwin A. J. is the second child. The children are now scattered all over the United States, with only one brother, Arnold P., in the real estate business at Ingomar, besides Edwin A. J. in Montana.

Edwin A. J. Jesse lived in Pewaukee until he was eighteen years old, when he moved to Star Lake, Wisconsin, to follow the lumbering business. He remained there over a year, and then became a traveling salesman. After a year at this latter occupation he started west. Wyoming claimed him as a citizen for one summer while he was employed there by a railroad, but he was still restless to go farther west. He arrived in Montana in 1900, and has been a permanent resident of the state ever since. He lived in Butte for a few years, occupying his time at mining and work which his interest in several properties demanded. He then came on to Roundup and opened a cement plant. After a year as a contractor he sold out his business to his partners and bought out the Jones Land Company, which operates extensively in the Musselshell valley and in the Judith Basin. He is still engaged in this business.

Mr. Jesse is interested in church work, particularly in the charitable side of it, and is also an active Republican. He is a member of the Roundup Commercial Club and of the Pioneer Club. He has never married.

JOHN J. O'LEARY. One of the most successful druggists of Butte is John O'Leary, a Canadian by birth, and one of the seven children of Michael and Katherine (Gallagher) O'Leary. Both of the parents were born in Canada, the father at Ontario in 1844, and the mother at Veil Lake in 1862. The elder O'Leary was a miner and smelter, and for a number of years before his death, in 1903, followed his occupation in this city. His wife died at Anaconda in 1901. All of the children, James, Thomas, Michael, Peter, Mary and Annie O'Leary, are still living. John is the second eldest of the family and was born at Ottawa on December 20, 1876. When he was but three years of age his parents moved to Saginaw, Michigan, and after six years' residence in that state they again moved, this time to Tacoma, Washington.

Mr. O'Leary attended school in Tacoma, and later went to college at Spokane, where he took a general course. While a school boy in Tacoma he served his apprenticeship in the drug business, with Mr. Walter St. John, and afterwards he clerked for him for four years. After this he came to Butte and clerked in the store of Mr. Newbro, and also worked in the store of Paxton & Rockfeller, and for several other leading druggists of Butte. After four years spent in the northwestern territory of Alaska, where he was quite successfully engaged at gold mining, he returned to Butte and re-established the store at 601 West Park, which was very much run down at that time. It was up-hill work to instill new life into the old establishment, but Mr. O'Leary had confidence in the future of his undertaking so that even the indebtedness of $4,500, which he incurred in re-stocking and generally improving the business did not appall him. He simply put all his attention to the building up of his trade and as he has an unfailing supply of energy, coupled with a thorough knowledge of the business, he soon built up a good trade and paid off all indebtedness on this store. His next move, in June, 1907, was to buy out the establishment at 1017 Talbot avenue. This, too, he re-stocked, incurring obligations of $18,000, and made into an up-to-date drug store, and ever since that time his success has been uninterrupted. The returns from his business have been large, and Mr. O'Leary has judiciously invested his surplus, after ridding himself of all indebtedness and putting a generous share back into his business to keep it up to the top notch of efficiency. He is a member of the Pharmaceutical Association of Montana, of the National Pharmaceutical Association, of the National Retail Druggist Association, and of the Silver Bow Druggist Association.

On July 25, 1904, occurred the marriage of Mr. O'Leary and Miss Alice M. Hope, of Butte, Montana, a native of Empire, Nevada, daughter of James Hope. Mrs. O'Leary completed her schooling at Held's Business College, San Francisco, and previous to her marriage was chief operator at the Rocky Mountain Bell Telephone exchange at Butte. No children have been born of their union. Mr. and Mrs. O'Leary are members of the Catholic church, and in politics Mr. O'Leary is independent. Horseback riding is one of the favorite pastimes of both Mr. O'Leary and his wife. He is the owner of several valuable blooded horses, and so takes a double pleasure out of that delightful exercise. He is fond of hunting and fishing and he does both with characteristic energy. Like most really capable men, he can put his entire attention to the matter in hand, whether it be work or recreation. This is one of the secrets of his successful achievements in the realm of business. Personally he is of a sociable temperament and his unusual business talents have not in the least detracted from those which make for friendship and popularity.

JAMES C. JENSEN. Prominent among the business men of the younger generation, who through their own industry and persistent effort have achieved success in their chosen vocations, may be mentioned James C. Jensen, of Lavina, proprietor of a flourishing meat business and one of his adopted community's popular business citizens. Mr. Jensen is a native of Denmark, that sturdy kingdom that, although small in size and population, is great in history, and was born November 19, 1886, a son of John P. and Anna (Christiansen) Jensen, natives of Denmark, where they spent their lives. John P. Jensen was a carpenter by vocation, and although he held no high position in official life was known as an honest, industrious citizen and was highly esteemed by all who knew him. His wife passed away at the age of fifty-four years, having been the mother of five children, there being three sons and one daughter living at this time in the United States.

James C. Jensen received his education in the public schools of his native country, and lived in Denmark until reaching the age of fourteen years, at which time he went to Germany. There he was apprenticed to the trade of butcher, following it in the Fatherland for about nine years and then coming to the United States. For about one year Mr. Jensen made his home in Wisconsin and then came to Montana, first accepting a position with a bridge gang on the new Milwaukee railroad, in order to familiarize himself with the English language. Being economical and industrious, he steadfastly saved his earnings, having determined to be the proprietor of a business of his own, and in 1911, having accumulated the necessary capital, came to Lavina and opened his present establishment. The success which has rewarded his efforts should be of a nature encouraging to the youth of any land, for on his arrival in this country Mr. Jensen had neither financial backing nor influential friends, but hewed out his own career and through earnest and conscientious effort built up a good business. His training was long and thorough, embracing all branches of the meat business, in addition to which he is an expert sausage maker, this being a regular part of the training in Germany. His establishment is equipped with the most modern machinery and appliances and modern ideas have served to make it one of the leading meat markets in this part of the county. He also ships much of his sausage product to the neighboring towns and in this way has built up a very lucrative trade.

Mr. Jensen is unmarried. He is fond of hunting, fishing and driving, and the exceptional advantages offered by Montana in this way are greatly appreciated by him, only adding to his belief that the Treasure state will in the near future be ranked as one of the leading commonwealths in the Union. He is a popular member of the Lavina Commercial Club and his religious belief is that of the Luthern church. Politically he is independent and takes no active part in matters of a public nature.

FRANK J. O'BOYLE, president of the Silver Bow Commission Company and traffic manager for the Hennessy Company of Butte, is one of the well known business men of the city. He was born in Minneapolis, Minnesota, on April 19, 1878, and is a son of Andrew and Julia (McDonald) O'Boyle, the former a native of Montreal, Canada, born there in 1850, and the latter of Beaver Dam, Wisconsin, where her life began in the same year as that of her husband. Andrew O'Boyle was an early settler of St. Paul, Minnesota, and there achieved success as a contractor and builder. He erected several of the largest and most imposing structures in the city. He located in St. Paul in 1873 and died there in 1910. Mrs. O'Boyle passed away in the same city on November 30, 1911. They were married in Elroy, Wisconsin, and they had six children, as follows: Mary, who died young, Frank G., Elizabeth, James A., Elsie and Margaret, all excepting Frank J., reside in St. Paul.

Frank J. O'Boyle was educated in the public schools of St. Paul, and after leaving school he entered the service of the Great Northern Railroad as a clerk. He remained in the service of that road for four years, then passed four in the employ of the Minnesota Transfer Company. During the next seven years he was on the clerical force of the Northern Pacific Railroad, and at the end of that period came to Helena, Montana, to accept a position in the freight department of the Great Northern in that city.

In 1905 Mr. O'Boyle moved from Helena to Butte, having been engaged to manage the traffic department of the great establishment of the Hennessy Company in the latter named city. In his position as traffic manager he has rendered and is still rendering this company very efficient service, and is considered by its heads one of their most valuable employes. His services are highly appreciated and liberally rewarded by the company, and his obliging disposition and accurate knowledge of all details connected with his department of the business have won to him the fullest confidence and high regard of all who have dealings with the company in his branch of its operations.

Several years ago Mr. O'Boyle found a field for the employment of his surplus energy by organizing the Silver Bow Commission Company, of which he has been president from the beginning of its history, and which has been very successful in business, yielding to its stockholders handsome profits on their investment in it.

On June 21, 1905, in Helena, Montana, Mr. O'Boyle was united in marriage with Miss Gertrude Miller, born October 19, 1883, in Chicago, Illinois, and who was at the time of her marriage a popular school teacher in the capital city of the state. She is a daughter of Simon F. and Mary (Sullivan) Miller, who died when Mrs. O'Boyle was a child, and she was reared by Mr. and Mrs. John Keller of Helena. Mrs. O'Boyle graduated from St. Vincent's Academy and Helena Teachers' Training School. She became well known as an elocutionist. The children born to Mr. and Mrs. O'Boyle are:

Francis J., who was born in Butte on March 28, 1906; Eileen G., who was born in Butte on May 13, 1908; Donald J., born on December 26, 1909; and Lorene M. and Lawrence D., twins, the date of whose birth was October 28, 1911.

Mr. O'Boyle is, with reference to his fraternal relations, a Knight of Columbus and a Modern Woodmen of America. In their religious affiliations Mr. and Mrs. O'Boyle are devout and zealous members of the Catholic church. In politics Mr. O'Boyle is an independent worker for the good of the city and county, without regard to party considerations. Everything that will promote the advancement of the city or county or minister to the welfare of their residents has his earnest and serviceable support.

EDWARD C. LEONARD. A citizen who has figured prominently in the business, public and social life of the state of Montana, and who has thus contributed in his sphere of action to the well being of the commonwealth and to the advancement of its normal and legitimate growth, is Edward C. Leonard, of 205 North Merrill street, Glendive, who has handled more property than any other man in Dawson county. Mr. Leonard was born on the farm of his father in Poweshiek county, Iowa, July 14, 1867, and is a son of Joshua and Ellen H. (Ady) Leonard.

On the paternal side Mr. Leonard is descended from natives of Wales, while his maternal ancestors came from England and were related to the old and honored Howard family of that country. His father, the son of an Ohio farmer, spent his boyhood days and was educated in the Buckeye state, and on first locating in Iowa settled at Muscatine, where he engaged in farming and was married. Later in life he removed to Poweshiek county, where he continued to follow agricultural pursuits, was known as one of the pioneer farmers and stockmen of that county, and some ten years prior to his death retired from active pursuits and settled in the town of Brooklyn, where he died in 1900, at the age of sixty-seven years, his birth having occurred in Ohio in 1833. His wife, also a native of Delaware county, Ohio, now makes her home at Brooklyn, Iowa. They had a family of seven children, as follows: Charles W., who lives at Rockwell City, Iowa; Minna, the wife of R. D. Ackley, of Brooklyn, Iowa; Oliver H., of Tulsa, Oklahoma; Alice, the wife of C. H. Ehrich, of Brooklyn, Iowa; Edward C.; Nora, the wife of Howard Simpson, living in West Liberty, Iowa; and Helen, who makes her home in Chicago. Joshua Leonard served for about sixteen years as county commissioner, was a member of the school board for some length of time, and was known throughout his community for his honesty and integrity, frequently being named as referee in settling the disputes of his neighbors. Originally a Whig and later a Republican, he cast his first vote for John C. Fremont. In religion he adhered to the faith of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Edward C. Leonard was educated in the schools of Poweshiek county and Iowa (now Grinnell) College. His first mercantile venture was in the general merchandise business in Brooklyn, Iowa, where he continued from 1889 to 1900, and in the latter year came to Glendive. For about three years he followed the same line of business, but since then has been interested in realty matters, and the large transactions with which he has been connected have made his name known throughout this part of the state in connection with land deals. His operations have been so extensive that within one year's time he has sold over 100,000 acres of land. At this time he owns about 7,000 acres of his own, and has many thousands listed for sale. Of his own land 1,600 acres are under cultivation, while the other property includes some of the best city property to be secured, including improved and unimproved business and residence sites. He has been progressive and public-spirited, so conducting his affairs that they have resulted in the greatest measure of good to his adopted city. He is the secretary and treasurer of both the Dawson County Development League and the Farmers Grain Company, is a school director, a director of the Dawson Fair Association and a member of the Board of the Dawson County Club. Like his father he is a Republican in his political views, and his fraternal connection is with Poweshiek Lodge No. 198, Knights of Pythias.

On December 12, 1902, Mr. Leonard married Miss Etta Heath, a resident of Brooklyn, Iowa, and a native of Indiana. Her father, Charles Heath, was born in 1849, in Indiana, and died at the age of thirty years, having been the father of six children, of whom three are living. He spent all his life in agricultural pursuits, and at the time of his death, which occurred on his fine Iowa farm, he was also engaged in general mercantile pursuits. He and his wife, also a native of Indiana, were faithful members of the Methodist Episcopal church, and in political matters he was a Republican. To Mr. and Mrs. Leonard there have been born five children: J. Cecil, Marjorie, Grace, Helen and Ruth.

DANIEL J. DONOHUE, M. D. Not only professionally prominent but also active in public affairs in Dawson county, Montana, Dr. Daniel J. Donohue, of Glendive, occupies a foremost place in the best citizenship of this section. He was born April 30, 1874, at New Richmond, St. Croix county, Wisconsin, and is a son of Charles and Mary (McGoldrick) Donohue.

Hon. Charles Donohue is one of the representative men of St. Croix county, Wisconsin, and has had a busy life filled with much accomplishment. He was born in the city of Cork, Ireland, and was a motherless little boy when he accompanied his father across the Atlantic ocean. The lad had but few educational advantages, in fact may be said to be entirely self-taught. The father remained for a time in the state of New York and then drifted west as far as St. Croix county, Wisconsin, where he subsequently died. Charles Donohue in early manhood made a prospecting trip to Colorado and engaged there in mining for a few years, when he returned to St. Croix county and followed an agricultural life until 1878. From that date until 1897 he was in business at New Richmond, dealing in agricultural implements. When excitement was at its height concerning the great gold discoveries in Alaska he started for the northwest on a prospecting tour and remained for five years more or less engaged during this period in mining and locating mines, and since returning to New Richmond acts as a professional mining expert. In 1889 he was elected sheriff of St. Croix county and served one term, enjoying the distinction of being the first Democratic incumbent of the office in that county. In 1891 he was elected register of deeds, was reelected for a second term, and was particularly honored by his party by being appointed a delegate-at-large from Wisconsin to the Democratic National Convention held at Denver, Colorado. In 1909 he was first elected mayor of New Richmond, Wisconsin, and in 1911 was reelected and is serving in this office at the present time. He married Mary McGoldrick, who was born at Dubuque, Iowa, and died at Stillwater, Minnesota, in 1891, the mother of eight children, the three survivors being: Daniel J.; Anna, who is the wife of Dr. J. M. Hagan, of New Richmond, Wisconsin; and Matze, who is the wife of Michael Barger, cashier of a banking institution at Linton, North Dakota.

Daniel J. Donohue attended the New Richmond schools, the high school at Hudson, Wisconsin, and St. John's University at Collegeville, Minnesota, and in the class of 1899 was graduated from the Physicians and Surgeons Medical College, which has been merged with the Minnesota University. After one year spent as house surgeon at St. Joseph's Hospital, St. Paul, Minnesota, he practiced at New Richmond from the spring to August, 1900, when he came to Glendive and has been in practice here ever since, making a specialty of surgery.

Dr. Donohue has always been a loyal and patriotic citizen and at the present time is major in the First Regiment, Montana State Guards. On April 28, 1898, he enlisted in Company C, Third Regiment, Wisconsin Volunteers, commanded by Col. M. T. Moore, of La Crosse, Wisconsin, for the Spanish-American war, and was honorably discharged at Hudson, Wisconsin, January 7, 1899. On April 1, 1909, he was appointed a member of the State Board of Health by Governor Edwin Norris, for a four-year term. On numerous other occasions he has been particularly honored, in November, 1900, being elected a member of the Montana House of Representatives, this being an honor, indeed, as he was the first Democrat ever elected from Dawson county, which is normally Republican, being called the banner Republican county of the state. Locally he has served terms as health officer of the city and county and served one term as alderman from the First ward. In the serious civic problems which every city faces, it is a good omen to find men like Dr. Donohue willing to grapple with them for the public good.

On December 30, 1905, Dr. Donohue was married to Miss Effie McEvoy, who was born at St. Paul, Minnesota, and they have three children: Charles D., Evelyn and Daniel J. Dr. Donohue is a member of the Roman Catholic church. His fraternal connections include the Knights of Columbus, the Spanish-American War Veterans, at Butte, and life membership with St. Paul Lodge No. 59, Elks, and the Knights of Pythias. He is identified with the leading medical organizations of the country.

WILLIAM N. WAUGH, a successful and well-known attorney of Butte, was born in Clinton, the extreme northeastern county of New York, on June 23, 1875. His father, William H. Waugh, was a native of Ireland and lived in that country until he was eight years old. He was born in Belfast, on July 12, 1835, and in 1843 came with his parents to the United States and found a new home in the village of Champlain, Clinton county, New York, a short distance from Lake Champlain and very near the Canadian line. There he grew to manhood, obtained his education and, after reaching manhood, engaged in manufacturing and merchandising at various points in northern New York, and lastly at Mooers Forks, that state. He was a gentleman of much more than ordinary intelligence and force of character, and besides being successful in his business operations, he rose to prominence and influence in his locality, and had a potent voice in the management of all its civic and political affairs. For a number of years he held an important official position in the state prison at Dannemora, New York. He died in Mooers Forks in May, 1907, at the age of seventy-two years, lacking about two months. The mother, whose maiden name was Margaret Armstrong, was a daughter of William J. and Susan Armstrong. She was born at Mooers Forks, Clinton county, New York, and died at the same place on April 30, 1905. She was also of Irish ancestry, her parents having come from the north of Ireland. She and her husband were the parents of but one child, their son William N., who with his own children are the only living representatives of the family except two half brothers, issue of a prior marriage of the father.

William N. Waugh was educated in the public schools of his native town and the high school in Plattsburg in the same county. His first employment after leaving school was as a telegraph operator and accountant for the O. & L. C. Railroad, now owned by the New York Central Railroad, in whose employ he remained five years or more. At the end of that period failing health obliged him to resign his position and seek a change of climate and occupation, and he came to Butte to find what he sought in these respects.

Mr. Waugh arrived in Butte in the spring of 1900, and soon afterward was appointed messenger to the deputy clerk of the criminal department of the Silver Bow county court. His experience in that position created in him a desire to study law, and he began preparing himself for the practice of the legal profession. After living in Butte one year, and thereby becoming eligible for the position, he was appointed deputy clerk of the county court, and three months later was made chief deputy clerk of the whole district, a position in which he gave the public excellent service for about two years.

He kept up his study of law diligently and systematically, and before resigning his clerkship was admitted to the bar. He at once began the practice of his profession, and in this he has been actively and profitably engaged ever since. He has had a general practice of large extent, and also served as assistant county attorney under James E. Murray from 1906 to 1908. He is interested in an active mining company, too, and a director of several mercantile corporations. Fraternally he belongs to the Masonic order, holding his membership in What Cheer Lodge, No. 689, at Norwood, in the state of New York.

Mr. Waugh was married in Butte, on March 8, 1903, to Miss Lewis Manker, a native of Kansas City, Missouri, and the daughter of C. E. Manker. Four children have been born to the union, all of them natives of Butte. They are: William N., Jr., born in May, 1905, Marie Antoinette, Vera and Marjorie. The family residence is at 114 South Idaho street.

WILLIAM XAVIER SUDDUTH, M. D. Although his professional eminence has brought him a larger measure of distinction than comes to many men yet in the vigor of their powers, perhaps Dr. William Xavier Sudduth, whose magnificent estate of 30,000 acres surrounds Broadview, Montana, is as proud of what he has scientifically developed on this land, as of any of his conquests over disease or of his successful battles for the cure of both mental and physical ills. Dr. Sudduth is a remarkable man. He was born January 18, 1853, at Springfield, Illinois, and is a son of Dr. James M. and Amanda E. (Ashmore) Sudduth.

James M. Sudduth was born October 8, 1818, in Kentucky, and died in 1895. His parents were Thomas and Anne (McCreary) Sudduth, both of whom were natives of Kentucky. In 1839 Thomas Sudduth liberated his slaves and moved to Ohio, and later emigrated to Springfield, Illinois, where both he and wife died. James M. Sudduth attended school in Kentucky, afterward accompanied his parents to Illinois, where he began his medical reading, and in 1851 commenced practice in Menard county, Illinois, later removing to Sangamon county. In 1854 he entered Rush Medical College, Chicago, Illinois, and as a special student under the late Dr. N. S. Davis was graduated in the class of 1855, returning then to Menard county. He engaged there in medical practice until 1861, when he was appointed a member of the board of sanitary commission by President Lincoln, the duties of this body including the transporting of army supplies to the front. Just prior to the battle of the Wilderness he was appointed assistant division surgeon of the Twenty-eighth Regiment, Illinois Volunteer Infantry, under Dr. West, and saw active service in the battles of Atlanta, Corinth and Missionary Ridge. In 1885 Dr. James M. Sudduth, in partnership with his son and David Fratt, organized, at Bloomington, Illinois, the Musselshell Cattle Company, with a capital of $240,000 and headquarters at Billings, Montana. He remained president of this company until his death and was then succeeded by the subject of this sketch. He married Amanda E. Ashmore, who was born in Illinois and died in 1897. Of their family of three children, two survive: William Xavier and Margaret.

William Xavier Sudduth prepared for college at the Illinois State Normal University, Normal, Illinois; was later graduated Ph. B., from the Illinois Wesleyan University, Bloomington, Illinois, and also received therefrom the degree of A. M. in 1889. Ten years prior to this, however, in 1879, he had commenced the study of dentistry, in 1881, engaged in dental practice for two years at Bloomington, Illinois. In 1883 he began to read medicine under Drs. James B. Taylor and William F. Mittendorf, of New York; attended lectures at the College of Physicians and Surgeons in that city, and the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia, receiving the degree of M. D. from the latter institution in 1885. During the three succeeding years he spent the larger portion of his time as a graduate student in the universities of Berlin, Heidelberg and Vienna.

From 1884-90, Dr. Sudduth was a director of the physiological and pathological laboratory of the Medico-Chirurgical College of Philadelphia, and lecturer on clinical microscopy and genito-urinary diseases, with several leaves of absence, during which he was engaged in post-graduate study abroad and lecture courses in the universities of Iowa and California. In 1890 he was elected professor of pathology and oral surgery in the Philadelphia Polyclinic and College for Graduates in Medicine, but did not enter upon the duties of the position, as he was considering the matter of leaving that city to accept a similar position in the medical department of the university at Minneapolis, Minnesota. There he entered upon his duties in July, 1890, filling the chair acceptably for five years, resigning in 1895, and entering into medical practice in the city of Chicago. Shortly afterward Dr. Sudduth established the Alpha Sanitarium, at Lake Forest, Illinois, a private home and the pioneer institution of its kind in America, for the treatment of functional derangements and morbid mental states that occur during adolescence. This home became widely known and as years passed its scope was somewhat enlarged. In his many years of medical experience Dr. Sudduth had realized the great need for such an institution and so sound and scientific were his conclusions that he had no difficulty in interesting other advanced thinkers and prominent men of medicine; and the consulting faculty of that sanitarium was made up of men of eminence in medical science.

Dr. Sudduth's contributions to medical knowledge have been numerous and could his books, papers and lectures be collected a fine scientific library would result. For seven years he was on the staff of senior editors of the "Annual of the Universal Medical Sciences," Philadelphia, having the departments of embryology, anomalies and monstrosities. He also edited the International Dental Journal during 1888-89, in 1885, his article on "Embryology and Histology," produced in the "American System of Dentistry," exciting much favorable comment. The greater number of his articles have been on strictly scientific subjects and they display a fund of knowledge and of careful thought and investigation that place them among the valuable writings of the time. It is useless to endeavor to place before the readers of this work all these contributions, for they appear in numerous reports and in many of the leading journals of the day, but mention may be made of a few that illustrate the many fields of investigation in which Dr. Sudduth has walked with open eyes. In 1887 his "Special Forms of Ossification" was read before the Ninth International Medical Congress; in 1888 his "Products of the Epiblast" was read before the American Medical Association, Newport, Rhode Island; in 1894 appeared "The Antrum of Highmore in its Relation to Vocal Resonance," in the Journal of the American Medical Association; in 1895, "The Present Scientific Status of Hypnotism," Chicago Review; "A Study in the Psycho-Physics of Music," Minnesota Magazine, April, 1895; "Psycho-Physics of Sleep," in connection with the treatment of insomnia, Journal of the American Medical Association, December, 1895; "Suggestions as an Ideodynamic force," 1896; "Hypnotism and Crime," Journal of the Medico-Legal Society, New York, 1895; "A study in the Psychology of Inebriety" and "Modern Methods of treating the Antrum," read before the American Medical Association, 1896. A reprint of "The Psychology of Narcotism," read in the section on Neurology and Medical Jurisprudence at the forty-seventh annual meeting of the American Medical Association, gives Dr. Sudduth's titles as follows: Fellow of the Chicago Academy of Medicine; professor of morbid psychology, Chicago Post Graduate School; consulting physician and neurologist, Chicago Eye and Ear Hospital; and chief consulting physician of the Alpha Sanitarium.

In but small measure has credit been given in the above brief review, of the wonderful things that Dr. Sudduth has accomplished in what may be termed his professional activities and no less wonderful results have been brought about in an entirely different direction by this man of resistless energy and thoroughly enlightened understanding. For more than forty years he has been identified to some extent in the development of the great west, and during all the strenuous years when mental effort must have engaged a large proportion of his time, his thoughts have wandered to that land of promise, far toward the setting sun, where, gradually he was acquiring land, which has resulted in his present vast possessions in Montana. A scientist by choice and profession, he early recognized that Montana was a rich field for scientific experimentation. It might be too long a story for these pages to record how he was first led to take his present interest in alfalfa, on which wonder working plant he is perhaps the greatest living authority today.

To the ordinary man alfalfa was merely a rich forage plant, useful, yes necessary to the cattlemen of these wide ranges, but to Dr. Sudduth it appeared in a very different guise, finding in it not only the elements for the growing of stock but also for the nutrition of mankind. He has made many experiments and has developed many forms of alfalfa that possess great nutritive qualities and there is prospect that a beginning has but been made. He may be named as one of the world's benefactors on account of his scientific work in this direction, for if he can produce a food for the human race, rich in protein and without starchy matter, that can be grown where nothing else will flourish, his fame is assured.

At the American Land and Irrigation Exposition, Madison Square Garden, New York City, November 3-12, 1911, Dr. Sudduth was awarded the Van Cleve cup for the best general exhibit, open to all along the line of the Great Northern Railroad, to the person who demonstrated the best and widest uses for alfalfa as food for man and beast. At Minneapolis, Minnesota, he secured the L. W. Hill cup, awarded for a similar object at the Northwest Products Exposition, November 12, 1912. He also won the J. J. Hill cup at the Billings Dry Farming Exposition, 1910, for the best general exhibits. Dr. Sudduth's achievements rank with those of Luther Burbank as discoveries of science while the results promise to be yet more generally beneficial.

Dr. Sudduth was married in 1875, to Elizabeth

(Staple) Ballard, who was born at Lexington, Kentucky, and was a daughter of Dr. James L. and Katherine (Hogan) Ballard, the latter of whom was born in Jessamine county, Kentucky, in 1832, and was a resident of Saybrook, Illinois.

Miss Mabel Sudduth, Dr. Sudduth's only child, is in close sympathy with her father and is a successful farmer herself. She has taken prizes for several years at the dry farming contests both in Montana and in Wyoming and was the first woman delegate to represent her state at the dry farming congress, being sent by the governor of Montana to the International Dry Farming Congress at Colorado Springs, in 1911.

Dr. Sudduth's experiment station has been maintained on the farm of his daughter, near Broadview, Montana. This young lady left college with failing health but regained it through open air life on her land, where she has for several years been thoroughly interested in intensive farming.

An interesting experiment is now in progress in the city of Chicago, Illinois, Dr. Sudduth having made a contract with one of the large bakeries of that city for the making of six kinds of health bread, upon the principles he has evolved from his study of the alfalfa food question, and doubtless other sections will soon have an opportunity of testing the value of alfalfa flour and other scientifically prepared products of a plant that has been known in Egypt from ancient days.

Dr. Sudduth has recently removed to Great Falls, Montana, where he will hereafter reside and engage extensively in growing pedigreed alfalfa seed and in manufacturing the many stock and human foods that he has evolved from this wondrous legume, "the Father of foods" as the Hebrew original, allafafa, reads when liberally translated.

WALTER D. NEELY, the assistant postmaster of Butte, was well trained for the duties of his present position by long experience in the postal service in capacities lower down, and the manner in which he meets the requirements of the station he now occupies shows that the seed sown in his training fell on good ground and is yielding an abundant harvest of benefit and satisfaction for all the patrons of the office, as well as for the government by which he is employed.

Mr. Neely was born in Knox county, Illinois, on March 5, 1877, and is a son of Charles R. and Mary (De Long) Neely, also natives of that state, where they are still living. The father is a farmer and has passed the whole of his life from his youth to the present time (1912) in that occupation. Although he has had many temptations to locate in other parts of the country, he has found the rich soil of the Prairie state and his surroundings in his home neighborhood from boyhood sufficient for all his requirements, and has remained where he began operations.

Walter D. Neely was reared in his native county and obtained his education in the public schools, finishing at the high school in Galesburg, from which he was graduated in the class of 1897. In October of the same year he entered the postal service as a clerk at Galesburg, and there he remained until February 1, 1900, when he was transferred to Butte, beginning his service in this city also as a clerk, and continuing it in that capacity for a number of years, all the time making an excellent record for ability and fidelity and broadening and deepening his popularity among all classes of the people.

On June 17, 1907, he was appointed assistant postmaster, greatly to the gratification of all the residents of the city, and he has filled the office to their entire satisfaction ever since. He is a gentleman of superior business ability and acumen, is careful, painstaking and accurate in the highest degree, has an affable and obliging disposition and is in all respects the courteous and courtly product of high social culture at work for the public good in a very important and responsible position, with all the qualifications required for the best administration of the affairs of his office.

As an evidence of Mr. Neely's devotion to his country and his interest in the welfare of the government he has so long served with great fidelity, it should be stated that when the Spanish-American war was in progress he asked for and obtained leave of absence to join the army recruited to carry on the war, and in June, 1898, enlisted as a private in Company C, Sixth Illinois Volunteer Infantry. In this company he served until November 26, 1898, going with General Miles on his expedition to Porto Rico and participating in the triumphs the veteran of several wars won on that tropical island, which brought it under our flag. In consequence of his military service Mr. Neely is a member of the organization of United Spanish War Veterans, and is at this time commander of Henry W. Lawton Camp. He is very popular socially throughout the city and county of his present home, and well deserves all the regard and good will the people bestow upon him.

RICHARD P. SUTTON, in the theatrical world known only as "Uncle Dick Sutton," is a veteran producer who is recognized in the east and loved and honored throughout the west.

He is the son of David P. Sutton, of Virginia, who in his young manhood moved to the sister state of Kentucky and chose for his wife Isabella Reynolds, one of the fair daughters of the native soil. Mr. and Mrs. David Sutton erected the first frame house in Mt. Freedom, Jessamine county, Kentucky, and here began their married life. The building served not only as a residence but as a public hall, a general store and the government postoffice, Mr. Sutton having been appointed postmaster for Mt. Freedom. The mercantile business was conducted after a manner quite its own, and the little store became a godsend to the pioneers of the surrounding country. True, they settled their accounts annually, and then not often in cash, but they were, generally speaking, an honest and upright people, so that Mr. Sutton at the time of his death, in 1850, had accumulated a considerable estate.

There were left to mourn his death a widow and seven small children, four sons and three daughters. The oldest daughter, Mary, is now the wife of Mr. J. B. Smith, of Bloomington, Indiana, her sister Margaret, who married Mr. Tobias Slocum, being a resident of the same city. Martha, the third daughter, is Mrs. William Andrew. George H. is an employe of one of the large railroads, his headquarters being in St. Louis and David P. has his residence in Shelbyville, Illinois.

Some years after the death of the husband and father, Mrs. Sutton became the wife of John Coley and by this marriage the mother of two more children, John W. Coley, who died in childhood, and Benjamin F., a farmer in Kentucky. In 1854 Mr. Coley, the second husband, was carried away in the terrible cholera scourge of 1854. His wife, left with nine children, the oldest son of whom was scarcely ten years of age, returned to Lexington, her childhood home, in the hope of being able to educate her little ones. The strain proved too much for her and she, too, passed away, in 1857. The three little girls, having no one to care for them, were placed in a home for orphans.

Richard Sutton, the oldest of the boys, who had been born in that first frame house in Jessamine county, April 15, 1845, took his two younger brothers and went to the home of an uncle in Evansville, Indiana. The uncle received them warmly and adopted them as his own. There for four years Richard Sutton lived as a member of his uncle's family. At the age of sixteen he insisted on beginning life for himself. He procured employment on the river in the winter and traveled with a circus in the summer, posting bills and acting as general roustabout. In 1874 he opened a restaurant in the railway station at Moberly, Missouri. Three years later he formed a partnership with Robert J. Cannon and entered into the restaurant business in Ottumwa, Iowa. This line of work, however, was never to his liking and the next year he purchased the right of city bill poster. From this it seemed only a step to the management and control of the Lewis Opera house. "There is a niche in this world for every man. The only difficulty is in finding it," Richard Sutton had found his niche. So popular did he become with both the professionals and the patrons who frequented his house that he was during his six years of service presented with two gold headed canes as tokens of their confidence and good will.

He discontinued the management of this house with the intention of going to Chicago to make a name for himself, but some good fairy seemed to hold him back. Perhaps it was a fairy in the person of Miss Fanny Keeler, a Canadian girl who was making her home in Albia, Iowa. In any case, she finally consented to become Mrs. Richard Sutton and has always been the inspiration of her husband's life, his helpmate in time of need, and his companion in his success. Their domestic life is most enviable.

After their marriage the young couple made an extensive tour of the country but returned to Ottumwa, where they rented a small hotel. With the genial nature of the host and the good management of the young wife they were soon compelled to twice double the capacity of their small house. Mr. Sutton at this time assumed also the management of the Turner Theater. After the expiration of a two years' lease on this opera house, he decided to try his fortune on the road, the good wife managing the hotel until the experiment might be tested. He acted as showman in the summer and traveled with a "Uncle Tom's Cabin Company" in the winter. It was he who conceived the idea of two Toppies and two Marks in the "Uncle Tom" shows. So successful was this venture that for twelve years he continued in the same line of work, owning his scenery, cars and other equipment and acting as his own manager.

His first long trip was to the western coast, where the "Mammoth Uncle Tom's Cabin Company" was most popular. During the following year he made his first visit to Butte, and so pleased was he with the town that he then and there agreed to make it his future home should the time ever arrive for him to discontinue his nomad life. The following year he visited Butte with "3008 Combined Shows" known generally under the name of "Richards' Three Big Shows." This time they remained in Butte for three days, July 5th, 6th and 7th. In the spring they made an extensive tour of the south, playing in Texas, Alabama, Georgia, and Louisiana, then returning through Oklahoma and the west. On reaching Salt Lake City, Mr. Sutton received from some citizens of Butte a proposition to bring the shows, of which he was manager and part owner, and locate permanently in that city. So flattering did this proposition appear that he at once cancelled the further engagements in the west and made straight for Butte. On arriving he was much chagrined to discover that the men who had made him the offer were not to be found. Nothing daunted, however, he rented the Casino, a house of doubtful reputation, but the only one available.

Here he established his company and ran his performance for six continuous weeks. The success was almost unprecedented and Mr. Sutton realized that his own fortune was made. He gave up all thought of the road and began to look for a suitable site for the erection of an opera house of his own. In the meantime he leased the Caplice Hall, corner of Montana and Park streets, and opened here on the 19th of October, calling the house "The Family Theater" which name it still bears. This was the first theatrical business to be established in Butte. Five years afterward Mr. Sutton purchased the Grand Opera House. He took the deed to his ever loyal wife, saying: "Here is a little gift for you," which gift Mrs. Sutton still preserves in her own right. Their next step was to erect "The Sutton Theater" now called "The Orion Theater," located on Broadway. Three years later he built a house which he called "The Lulu," in honor of his only daughter. It is now known as "The Broadway." Quite recently this pioneer manager purchased the Grand Opera House at Great Falls, Montana.

About this time he was instrumental in organizing "The Northwestern Theatrical Association," of which he is vice-president and secretary, Mr. Calvin Heilig being president and John Cort, manager. This association is a recognized power throughout the world of amusement.

In 1908 "Uncle Dick Sutton" was compelled to retire from active managerial service, but will always be in the work to which he has devoted a lifetime of honest effort. Uncle Dick is genial, versatile and kindly of soul. Never has he been known to turn away from his door a member of the profession who was in need. Butte is indebted to him for many acts of public generosity as well as for the large part he has played in making her one of the leading cities of the northwest. Many times has he opened his opera houses and turned the proceeds into the channels of city charity.

He votes the national Democratic ticket, but insists that the city of his choice should not soil her skirts in the mire of party politics. He still retains his membership in the News Boys Club and the Traveling Men's Association, much to the delight of the other members of these organizations. He belongs to the Silver Bow Club and to the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

"The Show World" for April 25, 1908, contains a very good article on the usefulness in the theatrical work of "Uncle Dick Sutton." May his last years bring him the peace and comfort that he so richly deserves.

MAXWELL B. EYERMAN is a native of California. His father, Bernhart Eyerman, came to America from Germany when a young man, and was one of the "forty-niners" who went to California in that exciting time. Mr. Eyerman made the journey from New York to the Golden Gate by going around the Horn, and the trip consumed six months. He became established in the mercantile business at San Jose, and lived there until his death in 1908. He had served the country of his adoption as a soldier during the Civil war. The mother of Mr. Maxwell Eyerman is also a native of Germany, who came to America as a young girl, and in San Francisco met and married Mr. Eyerman. Her maiden name was Anna Klinkeberg, and she is now sixty-one years of age, and still resides in San Jose. She is one who may be truly said to be "sixty-one years young," for she is in the full vigor of her powers.

It was in the town of San Jose that Mr. Maxwell Eyerman was born on April 11, 1878. He attended the public schools and graduated in 1893. He then started to work in the fruit industry, but decided to learn the photographer's trade after he had been out of school for a short time. He served his apprenticeship with Mr. Taper, one of the best artists in San Francisco. After two years in Mr. Taper's studio Mr. Eyerman came to Butte and for four years was engaged in what his German ancestors would call his journeyman's service. In 1900 he started in business for himself. It required some time for him to gain a foothold and to build up a trade of his own, but his artistic ability and his knowledge of the craft ultimately won him recognition as a photographer and as an artist, and now the Elite Studio is one of the best known in the state, and the beautiful work which it puts out attracts the widest and the most favorable notice. His portrait work and the lighting effects which he produces are especially worthy of comment.

In 1901 Mr. Eyerman was married to Miss Elizabeth Burns, a popular young lady of Butte. They are the parents of two children, Maxine B. and J. R. Wharton Eyerman, both born in Butte. The elder little girl has just started to school and the younger is attending kindergarten. The family are members of the Episcopal church.

Like his father, Mr. Eyerman has a military record. During the Spanish-American war he went to the Philippines, and spent two years in active service. He was taken sick while in the Islands, but this did not interfere with the performance of his duties. For a long period he was on the firing line day and night, and he did not escape exciting adventures along with Major Silverthorne's division of the army. He received his honorable discharge at San Francisco, and returned to Butte to resume the work he had interrupted to go to the front. He is a member of the order of the Spanish War Veterans, and also of the Elks. By means of these affiliations and because he is decidedly sociable by nature, he has a large acquaintance throughout the state, and counts a host of friends in this commonwealth. In politics he is a Republican, but has never aspired to office. He is a devotee of the rod and the rifle, and has some fine pelts as trophies of his skill.

JOHN L. TEMPLEMAN. A well-known and successful attorney of Butte, John L. Templeman was born near Axminster, Devonshire, England, on March 11, 1872, and began his education in the public schools of that country. At the age of ten years he was brought by his mother to this country and located with her in Jasper county, Iowa, where he completed his district school training and then entered the New Sharon high school, from which he was graduated in 1893. He next attended Iowa College, and graduated therefrom in 1897, when he entered the law department of the University of Virginia, from which he was graduated in 1899, with the degree of LL. B.

Locating in Butte in 1900, he was, soon after his arrival, admitted to practice in the supreme court and began his professional career in that city. He made an immediate connection with the law firm of Roote & Clark and thus continued until 1903, when he was appointed city attorney of Butte and served until his successor qualified in 1905. He then resumed his partnership relations with Messrs. Roote and Clark for one year and at the end of that time became associated with Hon. William A. Clark, United States senator from Montana, as one of his legal advisers. In March, 1908, he formed a new partnership with Henry L. Maury, Esq., and that partnership is still maintained. Mr. Templeman is extensively interested in mining operations in Montana and adjacent states which interests require much of his time.

Mr. Templeman's father, Robert J. Templeman, was a native of England, where he was engaged in farming and raising live stock until the end of his life, in 1881, at the age of forty-one years. The mother, whose maiden name was Mary A. Little, died at Parsons, Kansas, in 1907, at the age of sixty years. She and her husband were the parents of six children, John L. and his four brothers and one sister: Robert, Charles, Joseph and Henry and Kate Templeman, who is now a resident of Parsons, Kansas. The male members of the family are living in various places, and in their several communities they are representatives of elevated manhood and the best American citizenship.

John L. Templeman was married in Butte, in June, 1902, to Miss Irene Isabelle LeBeau. They have no children of their own, but are rearing an adopted son, Percy LeBeau Templeman, whom they took into their home in 1905. He is now attending school in Butte. Mr. Templeman is a prominent member of the Montana Bar Association, the Silver Bow and University Clubs, and other professional and social organizations. In politics he is an ardent Democrat, firmly fixed in his faith in the principles of his party as the promise and fulfillment of the highest and most enduring good to his state and the country, and in all its campaigns he is one of the hardest and most effective workers for the success of its candidates. He stands high as a lawyer, has wide popularity as a man and is admired for his public spirit and progressiveness as a citizen.

A. CARLTON McDANIEL. Devoting his time and energies to the profession of his choice, A. Carlton McDaniel, of Butte, is meeting with most satisfactory success as a lawyer, having within a comparatively few years built up a good practice, his success in life being entirely due to his own unaided efforts. A native of Kentucky, he was born, February 21, 1877, in Montgomery county, which was also the birthplace of his father, the late Judson McDaniel. He is of Scotch-Irish stock. The grandfather served in the War of 1812, the founder of the branch of the McDaniel family to which he belongs having immigrated to this country in colonial days.

Born and reared in Montgomery county, Kentucky, Judson McDaniel became a tiller of the soil, and was engaged in general farming until his death, December 9, 1905. He married Mary E. Blevins, a native of Madison county, Kentucky, where her birth occurred March 10, 1845. She died May 26, 1886, having borne her husband four children, as follows: Cora, deceased, was the wife of S. E. Anderson; Charles lived but two years; A. Carlton, the special subject of this brief biographical record; and Kate, who is unmarried, and now resides in Lexington, Kentucky.

Brought up on the home farm, A. Carlton McDaniel laid a substantial foundation for his future education in the rural schools of Montgomery county, Kentucky, after which he continued his studies at the Kentucky Training School, at Mount Sterling, from there going to the University of Virginia. Coming to Montana in 1900, Mr. McDaniel entered the law office of Jesse B. Roote, in Butte, as a law student, and while there took a correspondence course in law. In December, 1903, he was admitted to the Montana bar, and has since 1906 been actively engaged in the general practice of law in Butte, and has been eminently successful in his professional career.

Mr. McDaniel married, in Butte, Montana, June 22, 1910, Miss Nell Fair, who was born in New Brunswick, a daughter of S. R. Fair, now a resident of Butte. Politically Mr. McDaniel is a Democrat, but is not active in party ranks. Fraternally he is a member of the Ancient Free and Accepted Order of Masons, and socially he belongs to the University Club. Religiously he is a member of the Christian church.

CHARLES AUSTIN. Among the prominent and popular citizens of Butte, one who is specially deserving of mention in this history of representative business men of Montana is Charles Austin, who is secretary of the Merchants' Association of Butte, and who has here maintained his home since 1904.

A native of the province of Quebec, Canada, Charles Austin was born on the 15th of June, 1862, and he is a son of Thomas and Emily (Rogers) Austin, the former of whom is deceased and the latter of whom is now residing in London, England. The father was born and reared in England and as a young man was an officer in the British army. He was ordered to Canada in 1861 and remained in that country for the ensuing eight years, at the expiration of which he returned to England. He was in the army for twenty-one years and for twenty-three years was in the British war office. He retired from active service when in his sixtieth year and four years later was summoned to the life eternal, dying in London, in 1904. Mrs. Thomas Austin was a native of England and her marriage was solemnized at Dover, England. She has reached the venerable age of seventy-eight years and is now living in London.

The second in order of birth in a family of five children, Charles Austin, of this notice, was a child of seven years of age at the time of his parents' return to England, where he was reared to maturity and educated in a military institution. After reaching man's estate he became interested in the legal profession and for two years studied law in the offices of Taylor & Gale, at Winchester, England. For seven years thereafter he was in the office of the old law firm of Meynell & Pemberton, at London. In 1888 he returned to Canada and for the following twelve years was associated with a prominent law firm at Montreal. In 1900 he decided to try his fortune in the States and in that year came to Montana, settling first at Norris, where he became manager of the Red Bluff Gold Mining Company, a large Canadian corporation. He continued to be interested in the mining business at Norris for the ensuing four years and in 1904 came to Butte, where he is now assistant secretary of the Merchants' Association of Butte. Of this influential association D. J. Hennessy was its first president, succeeded by Chas. E. Virden, its second president, until 1912 when John Ferns was elected and is now its president. Mr. Austin is also secretary of the Virden Retail Merchants Association of Montana, and has acted in this capacity since the year after its inception—ten years ago.

In the city of London, England, on the 28th of August, 1886, Mr. Austin was united in marriage to Miss Edith Hammond, a daughter of Hamilton Hammond, who is deceased, and of Elizabeth (Ross) Hammond, who is a resident of London, England. Mr. and Mrs. Austin have one child, Claud Charles Austin, whose birth occurred in London, July 4, 1887, and who is now maintaining his home in England, where he is an engineer in the service of the British branch of the Westinghouse Company.

In his political convictions Mr. Austin accords a stalwart allegiance to the principles and policies for which the Republican party stands sponsor and while he does not take an active part in public affairs he is ever on the alert to advance all measures and enterprises projected for the good of his home city. In York Rite Masonry Mr. Austin is past master of Mount Moriah Lodge A. F. & A. M., at Montreal, Canada, and is now affiliated with Mount Moriah Lodge in Butte. He is a member of Montreal Chapter No. 7, of the Royal Arch Masons, at Montreal. He is also a member of Montana Commandery No. 3, Butte, of which he is the present Recorder and was made a Noble of the Mystic Shrine in Algeria Temple, but demitted to become a charter member of Bagdad Temple of Butte. In their religious faith he and his wife are members of the Protestant Episcopal church, to whose good works they are liberal contributors. Mr. Austin is very fond of all out-of-door sports, being an active member of the Curling Club of Butte and taking a keen interest in the local foot-ball and cricket matches. He is fond of hunting and has made a number of hunting expeditions into the neighboring mountains. He is well known throughout the entire state and the list of his personal friends is coincident with that of his acquaintances.

Henry J. Schumacher,

JAMES L. WHITE, manager of the Broadway Shoe Company at Butte, is a native of Bloomington, Illinois, where his life began on August 19, 1877. His father, James Robert White, was born in Illinois but is now a prominent resident and architect of Webster City, Hamilton county, Iowa. The mother, whose maiden name was Mary Coale, was born in Indiana. They were the parents of five children, four of whom are living, and James L. was the third of the five in the order of birth. He obtained his education in the public schools, beginning it in the lower grades and finishing with a full course of four years in the high school. He afterward pursued a course of special training for business in the Webster City, Iowa, Business College, completing the whole course of his academic and business instruction at the age of sixteen years.

The first regular work he did in the way of earning a livelihood was as a helper in the wash room of the Beaumont Laundry of Webster City. He remained in the employ of this company five years, and at the end of that period was its superintendent of agencies. When he left the laundry he secured employment as a salesman for the Burlson & White Shoe Company, of Webster City, with which he remained eighteen months. While in the employ of this company he was diligently studious of the business and acquired a good, practical working knowledge of it, and also a strong liking for it which led him to make the shoe trade his line of work during all his subsequent years, and the knowledge then acquired has been the basis of his success in the trade.

In the year 1900 he moved to St. Paul, Minnesota, and there for one year filled a position in the shoe department of the big department store of Messrs. Schuneman & Evans, one of the leading mercantile emporiums of the northwest. He passed the next year in the employ of the Regal Shoe Company's agencies at St. Paul and Minneapolis, and before the end of his service with that company became the assistant manager of its Minneapolis store. He was next chosen for the responsible position of manager of the Waldorf shoe store in St. Paul, which he filled for a year, and then passed eight months with the Stanley Shoe Company in Minneapolis. At the end of that period he returned to St. Paul, and during the next two years was the manager of and buyer for the Stanley Company's store in that city.

In February, 1909, Mr. White came to Butte and took charge of the establishment of the Broadway Shoe Company, then located at 21 East Broadway, but which moved to the present location, 38 North Main street, in March, 1910. This store deals exclusively in shoes and other footwear for men, and is one of the well known and prosperous mercantile establishments in the city. Mr. White is still its manager, and he has a financial interest in the company that owns it. It makes a specialty of the Florsheim shoes and its own trade-mark is "The Worthmore," which is a popular make of shoes and has a very extensive sale and a high reputation.

Mr. White takes an earnest interest in the progress and improvement of the city and state of his adoption, and is ready to take an active part in helping to advance them in every way available to him. Public affairs engage his attention locally only as they affect the welfare of the people, and he deals with them without regard to political or personal considerations, always casting his ballot for the candidates he deems most likely to render the public good service, and making the rule his only guide and basis of action. In national politics he is allied with the Republican party.

On October 21, 1903, Mr. White was united in marriage at Barron, Barron county, Wisconsin, with Miss Doris B. Myers, a native of that state and the daughter of J. W. and Elizabeth (Dimmitt) Myers, esteemed residents of the city in which the marriage took place.

Mr. White is practically a self-made man in business in the most acceptable meaning of the phrase, and is known and esteemed for his excellent business qualifications and his independence and straightforwardness as a citizen. The gentlemen with whom he is now associated in the Broadway Shoe Company are those with whom he has been connected during the past seven years in the other stores mentioned and his relations with them are entirely congenial and harmonious.

HENRY J. SCHUMACHER. The task of supplying food of the right kind and in sufficient quantities to the people of a large city is first and foremost in importance to every portion of its inhabitants. Stores and provision markets are the very heart of commercial and industrial effort in any community and their number and size are the best possible barometer indicating the general prosperity of the section whose people they serve. The provision men of Butte, Montana, are charged with supplying not only the wants of that city, but this is a market center to which a large surrounding country looks for its daily rations. There are a considerable number of distributors of meats and meat products at this point, one of the largest and most important being Henry J. Schumacher, head of the Schumacher Meat Company, whose establishment is located at 24 East Park street. Mr. Schumacher transacts business on a very extensive scale, dealing with both the retail and wholesale trade, the extent of his custom demanding the use of as high as three hundred and fifty dressed cattle a month, besides many sheep, hogs, etc., to keep his assortment of meats complete. To cater to the large trade he enjoys, requires the employment of an average of twenty assistants, this fact indicating and contributing to the importance of Mr. Schumacher's establishment as an influential factor in the life of Butte from a commercial standpoint.

Mr. Schumacher is a native of Mecklenburg, Germany, where he was born April 2, 1873, the son of John and Sophia (Detmer) Schumacher, both of German birth who came to this country the same year that Henry J. was born. The family settled at Milwaukee where the father followed the occupation of contractor and builder throughout the remainder of his life. Mr. Schumacher's mother died in Milwaukee in 1889.

Henry J. Schumacher was a member of a family of ten children and was obliged to become self-supporting when a small boy of nine years. Under these circumstances his schooling was almost entirely neglected and he was obliged in later years to make up for this deficiency by studying at odd times as opportunity permitted. Being of a plucky and persevering disposition, however, he succeeded in acquiring a large fund of knowledge, enabling him to carry on his commercial and civic duties in a manner exceedingly creditable to himself and the community at large.

When he had arrived at a sufficient age to make it possible Mr. Schumacher sought employment in the meat packing plants of Milwaukee and held his first position under Patrick Cudahy, who afterwards became the well known meat packer, but was then an employe of the old firm of Plankinton & Armour. After completing his apprenticeship in the Armour packing houses Mr. Schumacher for several years worked in various smaller retail establishments, and was for eight years one of the valued employes of H. Mahler & Sons of Milwaukee. In 1894 he found himself in position to engage in business for himself, as he was at all times thrifty and industrious and saved his earnings, and for a time conducted a shop in his native city. Believing that greater opportunities were to be found in the west for one in his line, he later sold out his Milwaukee business and spent the subsequent three years as a resident of Colorado Springs, Colorado. The year 1900, however, found him in Butte and in the employ of Patrick Mullin. Six months later Mr. Mullin disposed of his meat business and Mr. Schumacher then accepted a position in the Metropolitan Market, a branch of the Butte Butchering Company. Proving himself entirely competent and trustworthy, he was given charge of the market in which he worked and retained that responsible post for a period of four years.

Desiring to again become an independent operator Mr. Schumacher next formed a partnership with W. G. Hansen and these two gentlemen for two and a half years conducted a large market at 119 East Park street, and a branch at 121 West Park street. Selling out his interest in the partnership Mr. Schumacher formed the Schumacher Meat Company, and opened up business at 222 East Park street, where he catered to the wholesale and retail meat trade on a constantly expanding basis until April 10, 1912, when fire destroyed his place of business, and, by a singular coincidence his residence was completely destroyed the same day by a disastrous fire in the south part of the city. On September 12, 1912 he opened a new establishment at 24 East Park street, the most sanitary meat market and sausage factory in the northwest. He is one of the best judges of live and dressed meat animals in this section of the country, handles high class products only, and has built up a profitable business on a foundation of fair and honest treatment of every customer whose trade he acquired.

Not only as a commercial factor is Mr. Schumacher influential in Butte's activities, but he is also a strong force in all efforts of a political or civic character that tend to enhance the name and fame of the city and state of which he is an honored citizen. He is a man of strong social instincts and is a member of several of the best fraternal organizations of the country including the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, and the Modern Woodmen of America; is also identified with the Butte Chamber of Commerce.

On September 8, 1895, Mr. Schumacher was united in marriage with Miss Jennie Ryan, a native of Ausable, New York, where she was born June 25, 1873. Her parents were Lawrence and Jane Ryan, both of New York birth and Irish ancestry. Mr. and Mrs. Schumacher have a pleasant, hospitable home in Butte, and are held in high esteem by a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

FRANK M. TENNEY. Active, progressive, and intellectual, Frank M. Tenney, manager and managing editor of the Great Falls Daily Leader, of which he is part owner, holds a position of note among the leading journalists of Montana, having through his own persevering efforts won success along lines fertilized by his unflagging energy. Coming from honored New England stock on both sides of the house, he was born, August 18, 1870, in Aurora, Illinois, a son of Solomon A. Tenney.

Born, in 1829, in New Hampshire, Solomon A. Tenney was of Revolutionary ancestry, and was lineally descended from one Thomas Tenney, who emigrated from England to Massachusetts in 1639, and settled in Rowley, Essex county. He belonged to a family of considerable prominence, among the eminent men with whom he was distantly connected by ties of kinship having been the Hon. Daniel Webster, one of New Hampshire's favorite sons. In 1837 Solomon A. Tenney followed the march of civilization westward, and was one of the pioneer settlers of Aurora, Illinois, where he subsequently resided until his death, April 2, 1903. He married, on March 24, 1853, Mary S. Cleveland, a distant relative of the late Grover Cleveland. She was born in New York state, April 28, 1834, and died in Aurora, Illinois, February 14, 1909. Six children blessed their union, four of whom are living, Frank M. being the youngest child of the family.

Receiving his preliminary education in Aurora, Illinois, Frank M. Tenney attended first the public schools, and in 1886 was graduated from Jennings Seminary. Going then to Evanston, Illinois, he completed his early studies at the Northwestern University, and at the age of twenty years entered the broad field of journalism, becoming a reporter for the Aurora Beacon, a semi-weekly paper. A year later he assumed the management of the Daily News, at Aurora, Illinois, and held the position for eight years. Going then to Grand Rapids, Michigan, Mr. Tenney was for a brief time reporter for the Daily Press. Returning then to Illinois, he was associated with the Chicago City Press Bureau, and the Chicago Daily News, until August, 1900, being eminently successful in his journalistic work. Then, feeling the need of a change, Mr. Tenney came to Montana, and for two years lived in Carbon county, near Bowler, where he was variously employed, for a short time having been engaged in the sheep business. Locating at Great Falls in November, 1902, he became associated with the Daily Leader, first serving as advertising solicitor, then as a reporter, later becoming business manager, and afterwards city editor. Since February, 1908, Mr. Tenney has had full control of the management of the paper, and as managing editor has met with unquestioned success. Under his judicious management the paper has been greatly enlarged, its circulation tripled, and its advertising capacity doubled. Full of personal resources and of undoubted confidence in himself, Mr. Tenney labors with enthusiasm, putting his individuality into his work, the Daily Leader being today the foremost Republican organ in the state.

Successful also in business, Mr. Tenney has acquired considerable property, having valuable real estate holdings in Great Falls. An active member of the Republican party, he exerts a healthful influence in local politics. Socially he belongs to the University Club of Great Falls, and is a member, religiously, of the Episcopal church.

On December 6, 1904, at Riceville, Montana, Mr. Tenney was united in marriage with Nellie Rice, who was born in Leadville, Colorado. Her father, Col. David Rice, a pioneer settler of Montana, is an extensive ranch and mining man, and a prominent and influential citizen of Riceville. Mr. and Mrs. Tenney have one son, namely: Minard Rice Tenney, whose birth occurred at Great Falls, Montana, March 13, 1906.

A. E. SCHWINGEL. By a continuous devotion to the demands of his responsible position as cashier of the Conrad Banking Company, and by an ability equal to its requirements, A. E. Schwengel has gained a place of note among the influential and successful men of Great Falls, which has been his home for the past twelve years. Of German lineage, he was born, August 19, 1876, in New York state, being the youngest boy in a family consisting of seven sons and five daughters.

His father, John A. Swengel, was born in Germany, and there acquired his elementary education. At the age of thirteen years, shortly after the death of his father, he came with his widowed mother to the United States, locating in western New York. When ready to settle in life, he chose the occupation of a farmer, and was there engaged in tilling the soil until his death, in 1905. A strong Republican in politics, he was prominent in public affairs, and for some time served as county superintendent of the poor. His wife, whose maiden name was Mary Miller, was born in Illinois, and is now a resident of Wayland, New York.

Educated in the public schools of Wayland, New York, and in the Corning high school, A. E. Schwengel was trained to habits of industry on the home farm. Not content with the rural life to which he was reared, he completed a course of study, including stenography, at a business college, and was afterwards engaged in clerical work in his native state for two years. Leaving home in 1898, he went to Lima, Ohio, where for two years he was stenographer for the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton Railroad Company. While thus engaged he accepted a position with the Great Northern Railroad, and coming to Great Falls, Montana, in May, 1900, was identified with the road a short time. On the establishment of the Conrad Banking Company, in August, 1900, Mr. Schwingel was made stenographer and messenger for the company. Showing marked ability and fidelity in that capacity, he has since been promoted from time to time, and since 1905 has rendered efficient and highly satisfactory service as cashier of the institution. Mr. Schwingel is likewise vice-president and director of the Lincoln Land & Live Stock Company; vice-president of the Belt Valley Coal Company; and one of the directorate of the Board of Commerce. Politically he is a Republican, but is not active in public matters. While a resident of Lima, Ohio, he served as a private in Company C, Ohio National Guards.

Mr. Schwingel married, September 24, 1902, at Geneseo, New York, Mabel C. Burley, a daughter of William Burley, and they have two children, namely: Milton Frederick, born at Great Falls, Montana, August 4, 1903; and Burley Carlyle, born May 13, 1907, in Great Falls. Mr. and Mrs. Schwingel are members of the First Church of Christ, Scientist, at Great Falls. They are extremely hospitable people, and their home, at 611 Fifth avenue, North, is ever open to their large circle of friends.

RAE J. LEMERT. As Mr. Lemert's name would indicate, his paternal ancestry is of French stock. Jean Paul Lemert, a famous Huguenot pastor of Paris at the time of the massacre of St. Bartholomew in 1572, was one of his forebears. This family was driven from France by that persecution and settled in the Rhine country. Nearly two hundred years later, in 1760, Laban Lemert came to Virginia and founded the American branch of the family. It was his son, Lewis Lemert of Fauquier county, Virginia, who had charge of Washington's estates in the northern part of the old dominion for a number of years, and the letter of authorization, written by the first president himself, is one of the prized possessions of the Lemert family. Lewis Lemert was a member of the Society of Friends. His descendants intermarried with representatives of many distinguished houses of that region, people of divers beliefs and training, but having in common the spirit of worthy and determined ambition. Among the ancestors of Mr. Lemert who have left their records on the history of the early days of America are Peter Glasscock, a Welsh sea captain who settled in Fauquier county soon after the Revolution and founded the towns of Paris and Upperville; George McNish, a Scotch Presbyterian missionary who arrived in Virginia in 1691; Moses Green, an officer in the Second Virginia State Regiment during the Revolution; George Naylor, who was one of the prominent men of the colony during its early history, and John Adams, who came to Prince George county, Maryland, in 1706. He was a grandson of Sir Edward Littleton; of Mounslow, Salop, keeper of the great seal of England under Charles I, and a descendant of Edward III of England.

Mr. Lemert's mother was Sobie S. Powell, who was born at Napoleon, Ohio. Her father, John Powell, was a pioneer merchant and a leading citizen of Henry county. The Powells are of Quaker stock, although Mrs. Lemert's grandfather, Benjamin Powell, was not an orthodox Friend, for he became a soldier in the War of 1812 and lost a leg at Sackett's Harbor. This branch of the Powells emigrated from Wales, and settled at Westbury, Long Island. Thomas Powell, the founder of the American branch was born in Wales in 1641 and died at Westbury in 1721. Mrs. Lemert, too, is of Virginian ancestry on her mother's side, as her mother was Esther Magill, daughter of Samuel Magill, a Scotch-Irish Virginian, born in 1778.

Beverly W. Lemert, the father of Rae J. of this review, was born at Elizabethtown, Licking county, Ohio. He served through the Civil war, advancing from the post of second lieutenant to captain of Company A, 76th Ohio Volunteer Infantry. At his discharge for disabilities contracted during service, he was breveted major. Shortly after the close of the war, Major Lemert moved to eastern Kansas and from 1870 until 1900 practiced law there. At the latter date he retired and came to Helena, where he and his wife now reside.

Rae Lemert was born in Napoleon, Ohio, on December 12, 1866. Before he was of school age, his parents had moved to Neosho county, Kansas and he received his education in the common schools there. In 1882 he graduated from the high school of Osage Mission, receiving the degree of B. A. The same year he began teaching in the county schools, and studying law in his father's office. He continued in the legal work with his father for some years, but gave it up to go into journalism. The first paper with which he was connected was the Fort Scott Daily Monitor of Fort Scott, Kansas, upon which staff he was city editor. After two years here, Mr. Lemert again took up the law with his father, this time in the town of Garden City, Kansas. This association lasted until 1889 when Mr. Lemert, Jr., went to Pueblo, Colorado, and there founded the Security Abstract Company. After conducting this concern for a time, Mr. Lemert disposed of his interests in that business and went to Salt Lake, where he entered the United States' land office, as examiner of titles. In 1900, he was transferred to Helena, but resigned after a few months' work here, to take up journalism again. He was employed on the Helena Independent and later on the Helena Daily Record. In 1905 Mr. Lemert founded the Montana Chemical Company and conducted its business for four years, at the expiration of which, he sold out and, with Mr. M. J. DeLano, bought the Union Laundry Company of Helena, and reorganized it as the Domestic Laundry Company. Mr. Lemert is now president of this company as well as of the Montana Linen Supply Company and the Domestic Cleaning Works, both of this city. Besides this, he has some mining interests and is a stockholder in a number of corporations of Montana, and is the owner of some valuable rental properties in Helena.

Mr. Lemert has always taken a lively interest in politics, being a life-long Republican, although latterly he has aligned himself with the Progressive movement. He has never been desirous of holding office himself, but he has done a great deal to put his party's candidates into their positions. In several campaigns, the state committee have called upon him to fill speaking engagements in important districts.

In the ancient and venerated Masonic fraternity, Mr. Lemert has been a prominent member, both of the York and of the Scottish Rite bodies, and of the Mystic Shrine. He has been master of the Helena Chapter of Rose Croix No. 3, and an officer of three other Scottish Rite bodies in Helena. He is also a member of the Odd Fellows, of which he is past presiding officer; of the Eagles, the Red Men, and the Knights of Pythias. In the purely social organizations, he belongs to the Lambs Club and Commercial Club.

On May 3, 1902, Mr. Lemert was united in marriage to Miss Florence May Smith, the daughter of S. H. B. and Katherine Smith, of Salt Lake City. The marriage took place in Helena. There have been no children of the union.

Mr. Lemert has the tastes of a student and also of a collector, both of which he indulges. His fondness for books is evidenced by his fine library of some 3,500 volumes, to which he is steadily adding. Of late years, he has been especially interested in geneological investigations and has given all his leisure time to that fascinating line of research. Numismatics is another of his fads—if one may apply so frivolous a word to an interest which has found expression in so valuable a collection of coins as Mr. Lemert has brought together. His 12,000 specimens are especially noteworthy for the rare Greek and Roman coins of silver and copper, of which he has a great number. The collection also contains a fair sprinkling of medieval specimens.

Of the most distinguished ancestry, and descended of men who were powers in the civic, military and intellectual life of the American colonies, Mr. Lemert worthily carries on the name he bears, and adds his contribution to the heritage of good citizenship and intellectual advancement which is to preserve and to amplify the power of the republic.

CHARLES L. F. KELLOGG. Madison, Wisconsin, is the native place of Charles L. F. Kellogg whose father, Lafayette Kellogg, came to that state in the pioneer days, and bore a prominent part in the early history of Wisconsin. Both he and his wife, Rosa Catlin Kellogg, were natives of New York state. Mr. Kellogg was the first clerk in the supreme court of Wisconsin, entering upon that office at the organization of the court, and retaining it until his death in 1878, June 4th. He was but fifty-nine years old at the time of his demise. Charles was then something over twenty years of age, as he was born on February 14, 1858. His mother died when he was but five years old.

Charles grew up in the university town and received the benefits of its excellent schools. Upon completing the high school, he took the law course in the university, and graduated from it in 1882. When he had finished his studies in the state university, Mr. Kellogg went to Seattle, where he practiced law for a number of years and where he became connected with the Seattle, Lake Shore & Eastern Railroad, having charge of their auditing department. In 1897, he went to St. Paul and for three years was associated with the law firm of Richardson & Lawrence. This was an excellent opening, but Mr. Kellogg had spent too many years west of the Rockies to find even the lively and progressive city of St. Paul "western" enough to suit him, so in 1900, he went to Butte as cashier of the Hennessy Mercantile Company. For five years he held this position, and then in December of 1905, came to Missoula and organized the Northwestern Abstract & Title Company. In the short time of its existence, this business has become one of the strong institutions of the city. The presidency of this concern is filled by Mr. Kellogg and Mr. J. B. Bliss is secretary. They do an extensive business throughout the western part of the state.

It is characteristic of the natives and the residents of Missoula to regard their town as the most desirable spot for commercial undertakings and for a place of residence to be found in the entire United States, but even in a city where that is the general attitude, Mr. Kellogg is known as an enthusiast on the advantages and the attractions of Missoula. Mr. Kellogg's activities in the interest of the city are not confined to verbal ones, but he is always ready to do a generous share in promoting any enterprise for the good of the place. He is no politician, but this does not interfere with his being eminently public-spirited. In 1910 he was vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce, and in 1911 president of that organization. He has also held that office in the Missoula Club, of which he is an interested and an influential member. Besides these bodies, Mr. Kellogg belongs to the Masonic fraternity.

Mr. Kellogg was married at St. Paul in March, 1898.

His wife is Marian Ellithorpe Kellogg, born in Rochester, Minnesota. Few people have made so many friends and such a place for themselves in the community in so short a time as Mr. and Mrs. Kellogg, and none are more loyal Missoulians.

HARRY L. OWEN. Recognizing the fact that in the journalistic field there is plenty of room for men of brains and vim, the young man whose name appears at the beginning of this article has chosen for his calling the newspaper profession, with what degree of success is shown in his present well-kept establishment and the excellent business he enjoys. As editor and proprietor of the Plainsman, a spicy, up-to-date, well printed and thoroughly reliable newspaper, he is proving himself an advocate of progress along all lines, an able writer and a man who has the welfare of eastern Montana at heart. Mr. Owen was born at Kasson, Minnesota, June 12, 1881, and is a son of Vidocq S. L. and Sophia (Hilton) Owen. His father, who was born in Wisconsin, was an educator for more than a quarter of a century, acting as superintendent of schools in numerous cities, but is now a commercial traveler and makes his home in LeSueur Center, Minnesota. Of their seven children, Harry L. is the oldest.

The early education of Mr. Owen was secured in the public schools of DeSmet, South Dakota, and he later took a high school course at Adrian, Minnesota, and subsequently became a student in commercial law under a university professor in St. Paul. The newspaper business seems to have had a fascination for him even as a lad, for when he was twelve years of age he earned his first money selling papers, but subsequently turned his attention to mercantile lines and worked during vacations in various stores until about seventeen years of age. At that time he became a general office boy and reporter, and while thus engaged learned the printer's trade, which he subsequently followed in the printing department of the J. R. Watkins Medical Company, at Winona, Minnesota. After two years spent in that position he went to St. Paul, where he worked in the printing department of the West Publishing Company, continuing with this firm until coming to Montana. His first location was in Missoula, where he was connected with the Daily Sentinel as foreman of the job printing department, and in July, 1911, he came to Plains and purchased the Plainsman plant of the J. A. McGowan estate. Since taking charge he has made numerous improvements, not only in the quality and appearance of the paper, but in the equipment of the plant and offices. Mr. Owen is conducting his paper along independent lines, but is deeply interested in politics, and is fearless in championing the candidates or principles which he deems right. Although new to the state, it has not taken him long to discover its virtues, and he is now an enthusiastic "booster" for Montana. It is his opinion that from a climatic point of view there is no spot finer; that the water, soil and other conditions are conducive to wonderful growth; that the natural resources, such as timber, mineral, etc., are here in inexhaustible quantity and only awaiting development; that there is a prolific field for investment; that it is the hunter's paradise; in short—that as a whole Montana in general, and the Plains valley in particular, spell inspiration, happiness and success. Mr. Owen has not been slow in laying his views before the people through the medium of his excellent newspaper, and the power of the press being recognized, it will be appreciated that he may lay claim to belonging to the class of citizens who are developing the best interests of this community. Although Mr. Owen's journalistic duties demand a great deal of his time and attention, he finds time to enjoy baseball, fishing and hunting, and still maintains an interest in athletics of all kinds, having been a baseball player and track runner during his earlier years. His able articles on various subjects show that he is a close student of good literature, while he is also able to write and converse intelligently upon music, singing, theatricals, the opera and elocutionary entertainments.

On June 27, 1911, Mr. Owen was married at Merriam Park, Minnesota, to Miss Winifred H. Tower, daughter of Isaac W. and Theresa Tower, of Luverne, Minnesota. Like her husband, Mrs. Owen is possessed of much business ability, and is now engaged in conducting a millinery establishment in Plains.

OVID S. DRAPER. Every section of this great nation of ours, as well as many foreign countries, have sent great numbers of the flower of their manhood and womanhood to populate the new and developing Northwest and to share the splendid advantages offered to energy and ambition. From the South has come Ovid S. Draper, a native of Georgia, who in recent years has resided in Montana and proved an enterprising factor in the life of the communities in which his interests have been centered. Mr. Draper, who for a considerable period was employed in the Anaconda Mining & Milling Company's stores at Bonner, was on January 1, 1911, appointed postmaster of this place by President Taft, and has proved a most able and faithful servant of Uncle Sam in his postal affairs.

Mr. Draper is a native of Macon, Georgia, his birth having occurred in that city on November 23, 1858. He received his general education in the primary and high schools of his native place, but at the age of sixteen bade farewell to his desk in the school-room and became an actual factor in the world of affairs. He found employment as a clerk in Macon and engaged in that capacity for a number of years, his taste for wandering—the usual heritage of youth—taking him into various states of the southwest. He eventually engaged in business independently in Georgia and later in Arkansas, his particular field being mercantile business and this period of his career being some eleven years in duration. In 1900, he became imbued with the ambition to come to Montana, of whose opportunities he had heard remarkably good report, and in the year mentioned, he located at Deer Lodge, where he secured employment with the E. L. Bonner Mercantile Company, with whom he remained until 1907. In that year he went to Spokane, Washington, and was employed as salesman there for two years, but the charms of Montana were by no means dislodged from his memory in his removal to other scenes, and he returned this time to locate in Bonner, a suburb of Missoula. Here he entered, as mentioned previously, the Bonner branch of the Anaconda Mining & Milling Company, and remained with the same until his official appointment. He has won general esteem in this locality and is a man of genial and pleasing personality, among his gifts being that of notably fine conversational ability. He is very popular in lodge circles and holds membership with the Odd Fellows, being an officer of the grand lodge and secretary of the local order. He is also a member of the Woodmen of the World. He is independent in politics, being of the broad-minded type which sees greater logic in the support of the best man and the best measure than in maintaining a fervid partisanship.

Mr. Draper was married November 6, 1909, to Mrs. Minnie (Selfridge) Bien, widow of the late Frank Bien, of Deer Lodge, Montana. Mrs. Draper was born at Saratoga Springs, New York. Their union has been blessed by the birth of a little daughter, Dorothy Ovide, and they also share their attractive household with Mrs. Draper's daughter by her previous marriage—Frances Pauline Bien.

The subject's father, James Monroe Draper, was born in Georgia and was prominent in railroad circles during and previous to the Civil war, as superintendent of the Southwestern Railroad, running from Macon to Montgomery, Alabama. The death of this gentleman occurred in the year 1865. The mother, Sarah Ann Hamilton Draper, also a native of Georgia, is deceased. Mr. Draper had two brothers and two sisters, as follows: Robert Lee Draper, a prominent publisher, since 1896, a resident of Little Rock, Arkansas; Aden Hamilton Draper, a veteran (Confederate) of the Civil war, who was wounded and made prisoner at the time of the great conflict between the states, became prominent as a contractor and railroad builder, and died at Oxford, Alabama in 1911; Edna Frances, now Mrs. W. C. Clark, of Anniston, Alabama; and Mary Cordelia, now Mrs. A. H. Crawford, of Lincoln, Alabama.

Mr. Draper has three uncles on the maternal side who were soldiers in the Civil war and prominent in military annals, these gentlemen being Capt. John Hamilton, Henry Hamilton, and William Hamilton.

The mother of the subject's wife, Elvira Eaton Selfridge was a native of the state of New York. The father made several trips from the Empire state to Montana prior to the coming of his family, having made the first one as early as 1857. He finally decided to locate here and prepared a home for his wife and children, who came on in 1880. Mr. Selfridge became a prosperous contractor and builder at Alder Gulch, erecting some of the largest buildings in Helena, Deer Lodge and Virginia City.

HERMAN J. MEYER. Numbered among the representative business men of the city of Butte is Herman J. Meyer, who is vice-president of the Butte Commercial Company, which is one of the most extensive wholesale liquor concerns in the state and of which he was one of the organizers. Large and definite success has crowned the efforts of Mr. Meyer in connection with his business operations and this success has been won in the face of many obstacles, as he has been dependent upon his own resources from his boyhood days and has made his own opportunities, even as he has gained his education largely in the practical school of experience. The lash of necessity has a tendency to develop strong and self-reliant characters, and this has been significantly shown in the career of Mr. Meyer, who has pressed steadily forward, with undaunted determination and ambition, and who has won for himself a place of secure order as one of the substantial business men of the Montana metropolis, where his circle of friends is large and where he stands exemplar of the most loyal and progressive citizenship.

Herman J. Meyer was born in Ozaukee county, Wisconsin, on the 4th of June, 1874, and is a son of Charles G. and Clara (Helmuth) Meyer, both of whom were born in Germany, where their marriage was solemnized. Charles G. Meyer was born in the year 1827 and in 1841 his parents came from Germany to America and numbered themselves among the pioneer settlers of Wisconsin, where they contributed their quota to the development of that commonwealth and where they passed the residue of their lives. Charles G. Meyer was reared to maturity in the old Badger State and eventually became one of its prominent and influential citizens. For a number of years he was engaged in the mercantile business and finally he became a prominent factor in the political affairs of his state, as a stalwart supporter of the cause of the Democratic party. He was at one time the candidate of his party for representative in congress, but met defeat with the rest of the party ticket. He was one of the early settlers of Ozaukee county, Wisconsin, and wielded much influence in the furtherance of its civic and material development and progress. In the year 1883 he disposed of his interests in Wisconsin and removed with his family to California, where his death occurred later, in January, 1885. Upon his widow was thus laid the heavy responsibility of caring for the children and through a series of reverses she lost most of the financial resources left by her honored husband. Thus Herman J., of this review, who was one of the elder children, early found it incumbent upon him not only to provide largely for his own maintenance but also to assist his mother in caring for the other members of the family. His filial devotion never wavered and it was a source of great satisfaction to him that he was able to give to his devoted mother the solicitude and comfort which she so richly merited at that time and in the later years. She was born in 1842 and was summoned to the life eternal in 1904, having passed the closing years of her life at Milwaukee. She was married in her native land, and accompanied her husband on his return to the United States, in 1866, after he had been traveling in his Fatherland, where he formed her acquaintance at this time. Both were devout communicants of the Lutheran church, in which faith their children were reared. Of the seven children three died in infancy, and one son, Ernest, died at twenty-seven years. Of the three now living Herman J. is the second eldest.

Herman J. was about nine years of age at the time of the family removal to California. In Los Angeles, that state, he attended the public schools until he had attained to the age of fourteen years, and from that time forward he numbered himself among the world's practical workers. He followed such vocations as offered him a livelihood and enabled him to assist his mother, and he passed the greater part of the intervening years in California until 1900, in October of which year he arrived in the metropolis of Montana, the city of Butte. Here his first employment was with the Capilce Commercial Company, and with this concern he continued to be identified for seven years, within which, by faithful and efficient service, he won promotion to the position of manager of one of the departments of the extensive business. In the meanwhile he carefully conserved his finances, ever looking forward to engaging in business in an independent way. His worthy ambition was realized on the 9th of January, 1907, when he became one of the organizers of the Butte Commercial Company, of which he has been vice-president from the beginning of operations. W. A. Wiloughby is president of the corporation; Joseph P. Ledwige is secretary; and James J. Canning is treasurer. Through careful and conservative methods and progressive policies this company has built up a large and important enterprise,—one which takes front rank among similar business undertakings in the state. An adequate corps of traveling representatives is retained and the trade of the company now extends throughout the various states of the Northwest, so that it constitutes a valuable contribution to the commercial precedence of the city of Butte.

The same alert and progressive attitude that has characterized the business career of Mr. Meyer has marked his attitude as a citizen, and he is ever ready to lend his influence and co-operation in the support of measures and enterprises tending to advance the best interests of his city and state. He is an active factor in local politics and in a generic way credits himself as a member of the Democratic party. He has a host of friends in the state of his adoption and in his home city is affiliated prominently with various Masonic bodies, including the Knights Templar and the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He holds membership in the Silver Bow Club and is a member of the United Commercial Travelers' Association. Mr. Meyer owns a beautiful home of modern design and facilities, the same being located at 640 South Montana street and being known for its cordial hospitality.

In Milwaukee, Wisconsin, the native city of the bride, was solemnized, on the 29th of June, 1904, the marriage of Mr. Meyer to Miss Clara Wolfgram, a daughter of Frank Wolfgram, a well known citizen of the Wisconsin metropolis, and the one child of this union was Carl Wolfgram Meyer, a fine little son who was born in Butte, on the 17th of February, 1906.

CLIFFORD W. POWELL. Belonging to those who hold to the belief that the resources of Montana are as yet far from being developed and that the state can support three times its present population and still have room to spare, Clifford W. Powell, vice-president and active head of the First National Bank of Plains, and treasurer and manager of the clerical department of the McGowan Commercial Company, is widely known as one whose activities in the fields of business and finance have tended to greatly advance the interests of his community. A shrewd and capable banker and merchant, he has also demonstrated his ability as a public official, and he enjoys in a marked degree the confidence and personal esteem of all who know him. Mr. Powell was born at Summit, New Jersey, June 27, 1869, and is a son of Willoughby and Virginia (Wheeler) Powell. His father, a native of New York state, now resides in Brooklyn, is a veteran of the Civil war, and is engaged in the insurance and mercantile business. Mrs. Powell died in 1891, at the age of fifty-seven years, and was buried in Brooklyn. Of their six children, Clifford W. was the fifth in order of birth.

Clifford W. Powell commenced his studies in the public schools of his native place, but when he was seven years of age his parents removed to Brooklyn. On completing his education when about fifteen years of age he began working for his father in the insurance office, his first salary being three dollars per week. He subsequently became connected with the banking and brokerage firm of H. Knickerbocker & Company, of Wall street, New York, remaining with this concern for nearly three years and securing an excellent training in matters of a financial nature. His next connection was with the Fourth National Bank, with which he was connected for about three years, and then spent some time with the Nassau National Bank, Brooklyn. On giving up the banking business temporarily, Mr. Powell engaged in the umbrella business in New York, as a member of the firm of Connor, Wallace & Company, with which he remained about five years. In 1900 Mr. Powell changed his residence to Montana, locating first at Pony, where he remained about one year, and then going to Deer Lodge, which was his field of operation for a like period, being engaged in work of a clerical nature at the state penitentiary. On coming to Plains he became associated with the McGowan Commercial Company as treasurer and manager of the clerical department, a position which he still holds. During the spring of 1904 the First National Bank was organized, he being elected vice-president of the institution after serving some time as cashier. This is recognized as one of the solid, substantial banking houses of Sanders county and its officials have so conducted its affairs as to gain the entire confidence of the people of the community. Mr. Powell is a member of the Montana Bankers Association and served on the executive council thereof for one year, and also belongs to the Plains Valley Commercial Club, of which he was the first president. A staunch Republican in politics, he served as the first mayor of Plains, a capacity in which he acted for four years, and is now one of the county commissioners of Sanders county. His religious faith is that of the Congregational church. Mr. Powell is fond of reading and maintains a well-stocked private library, but also believes in outdoor sports, and is an ardent baseball "fan." One of his community's most progressive men, it is a source of satisfaction to Mr. Powell that his progress has not been aided by favorable circumstances or any luck except that which industry, energy and ability gains for one. His standing among his business associates is high, and he has made and retained numerous friendships since coming to Plains.

On October 16, 1906, Mr. Powell was united in marriage at Newport, California, with Miss Sallie Peabody, daughter of Henry A. and Sallie Peabody, of that place. Two interesting children have been born to this union: Henry P. and Virginia W.

MISS DAISY F. BLACKSTONE, superintendent of schools of Chouteau county, has through her energy, ability and high character, won to herself a position of trust and responsibility in the county of Chouteau, which, in point of public service of an especially high order, distinguishes her from others of her sex in this section of the state. Born in Lafayette county, Wisconsin, she is the daughter of Theodore and Mary (Hardy) Blackstone, the father a native of the state of Wisconsin and the mother of Pennsylvania. Theodore Blackstone was a son of Judge Blackstone, who was prominent in Wisconsin for many years. The former was a civil engineer and passed his life in that profession. In the latter years of his life he was a resident of the state of Montana, where he died in 1900. The mother still lives, and makes her home on a ranch in Chouteau county, near Chinook.

Miss Blackstone was educated in the schools of Shellsburgh, Wisconsin, and was there graduated from the high school, after which she pursued a two years course of study in the Platteville Normal School. After her graduation from that institution, Miss Blackstone engaged in teaching, and for eight years was engaged in the public schools of Montana, for the greater part of the time in the schools of Helena. In 1908 she came to Fort Benton, and was there elected to the important office of county superintendent of schools, an honor which came in direct recognition of her splendid ability as an exponent of the teaching profession. She has held the office continuously since that time, being re-elected in 1910, and has at all times administered the affairs of the office in a manner highly creditable to herself and wholly acceptable to the public. She has shown unusual ability in the matters of organization and systematizing, and has succeeded in placing the schools of the county on a standard with schools of more metropolitan sections of the country, thereby proving to the county that administrative positions are occasionally handled by women with quite as much skill and effectiveness as could be desired.

PHILIP I. COLE has made Choteau, Montana, the center of his professional activities since 1900, in which year he established his home and business in this city. With the passing years he has found secure vantage ground in the community, and is regarded as one of the able and progressive young attorneys of the county. He has won a considerable prominence in the city in various departments of service, and is known for one of the valuable citizens of Choteau. As county attorney from 1905 to 1909, director of the Citizens State Bank, chairman of the high school board, and a member of the firm of Cole Brothers, engaged in stock and sheep raising, he is easily one of the busiest men of the city, and in all these various places he has given valuable service and won the confidence of his townspeople.

Born in Forrest, Ohio, on August 16, 1869, Mr. Cole is the son of David D. and Mary C. (Bell) Cole, both natives of the state of Ohio. The father died in Choteau, on October 3, 1903, while on a visit to his son, and is buried at Beebe, Arkansas, where he had made his home since 1881. He was sixty-three years old when he died. He was a farmer by occupation, and a veteran of the Civil war, serving through three years of the conflict in the Forty-ninth Ohio of the Union army. The mother yet lives and is a resident of Choteau, Montana. She was the mother of eight children, —six sons and two daughters, Philip being the third born.

In the public schools of Beebe, Arkansas, Philip Cole received his common school education, after which he took a four year course in the state university at Little Rock, finishing at the age of twenty-two. He thereafter studied law in the office of W. T. Tucker of Little Rock, and was admitted to the bar on March 4, 1897. He began the practice of his profession in that city, but in 1900 removed to Montana, settling directly in Choteau, which has since represented the scene of his operations in a professional way. As previously mentioned, he was elected to the office of county attorney in 1905 and served without interruption through 1909. He conducts a general practice and is particularly successful as an exponent of the law. On April 15, 1911, Mr. Cole was elected to the position of chairman of the high school board, and he has filled that place in a most worthy and satisfactory manner. As a member of the firm of Cole Brothers, he is interested in one of the big stock companies of the county. They own four thousand head of sheep, cattle and horses, and the ranch is enjoying a high state of prosperity. Mr. Cole is a member of the Methodist church and a member of its board of trustees, as well.

On September 20, 1898, Mr. Cole was married to Miss Carrie E. Sadle at Little Rock, Arkansas. She is a daughter of R. B. and Nannie J. Sadler, natives of Missouri. They have one child,—Myrna May Cole, born in Chouteau, Montana, on November 13, 1904.

MARTIN JACOBSON. Prominent and influential in the business and public life of Cut Bank, Martin Jacobson has been a leader in the development and advancement of the mercantile and industrial interests in this part of Teton county, in the meantime having served his fellow-citizens in many offices of trust and responsibility. A native of Denmark, he was born, September 17, 1874, in Randers, where he lived until eighteen years of age.

His father, Carl Jacobson, was born, bred, and married in Denmark, his birth occurring in 1847. Migrating with his family to the United States about 1892, he crossed the country to North Dakota, becoming one of its early pioneers, and having taken up land, cleared and improved a fine farm. He is now living retired at Minot, North Dakota, enjoying a well-deserved leisure. His wife, whose maiden name was Annie Thybo, was born in Denmark in 1849, and died in Minot, North Dakota, in 1911.

Martin Jacobson acquired his first knowledge of books in Denmark, and after coming with his parents to this country, attended the public schools of Minot, North Dakota. He was subsequently variously employed for a time, principally in ranching and rail-roading. He first visited Montana in 1893, but did not then remain long, going back to his old home in North Dakota, and later settling in Minneapolis, Minnesota. Coming from that city to Montana in 1900, Mr. Jacobson located in the newly organized town of Cut Bank, and soon after erected one of the first buildings in the place. Putting in a miscellaneous stock of goods, he began business on a modest scale, and has since built up an extensive and lucrative business, having been liberally patronized by the people in and around Cut Bank. He also started the Pioneer Lumber Company, of which he was president, it being now one of the leading industries of the kind in Teton county.

Mr. Jacobson married, in 1898, in Minot, North Dakota, Miss Ingeborg Bakke, and they have two children, namely: Mabel, born at Minot, North Dakota, in 1900; and Irving, born at Cut Bank, Montana, in 1904.

A staunch Republican in politics, Mr. Jacobson has been very active in public affairs, and in every position to which he has been elected has served with ability and fidelity. He has represented his district in the state legislature, has been United States commissioner and has filled the office of postmaster. Religiously he is a Lutheran.

MOSES WILLIAM PETTIGREW. The editor who brings his superior intelligence to the literary activities of the Shelby News is a man of thoroughly practical points of view and of a strongly typical American spirit. The latter is perhaps partly a natural sequence of his long line of colonial and military ancestors. Mr. Pettigrew's earliest progenitor in this country was James Harvey Pettigrew, a Scotchman who settled in Virginia in 1660 and whose family provided a general in the great conflict for independence. The direct line from James Harvey Pettigrew to the representative of the family who is the subject of this sketch, is as follows: Moses W., James H., Moses W. and Charles W., the last being the father of Editor Pettigrew.

Charles Pettigrew was a merchant and farmer, born in 1832, of Republican principles and Presbyterian faith. His wife, born in 1834, was in her girlhood Miss Sarah E. Dalton. At their Illinois home, on April 27, 1859, was born the son who was named for two of his ancestral line. Moses William Pettigrew was given the advantages of the public schools and later of an academic course providing exceptional literary and scientific equipment.

When a young man Mr. Pettigrew prepared himself for the study of the law. He practiced his profession with success until the year 1900, when he was obliged because of ill health to change his vocation to one of a less confining nature. In that year he came to Montana, where he has since engaged in the agreeable journalistic pursuits that now claim his time and attention and in which his labors are productive of results so eminently satisfactory to his public.

Mr. Pettigrew has always given allegiance to the principles of the Republican party. During his professional career in Kansas he was honored by being elected to the responsible office of district attorney, which office he held for two terms. He has also been popular in fraternal organizations, having held all positions in the Masonic order.

Mrs. Pettigrew, nee Nancy K. West, was a daughter of Prof. John W. West, who was for many years a prominent Kentucky educator. Her marriage with Mr. Pettigrew occurred in 1886. They were the parents of two children, a son named Moses and a daughter called Ruth, both of whom are now attending high school in Salt Lake City, Utah.

DR. J. ARTHUR LAMB has been identified with the medical profession in Kalispell since 1901, and has gained with the passing years the confidence and esteem of the public, winning to himself a generous and lucrative practice in the city and its vicinity. Until 1911 he was engaged in practice alone, but in that year he became associated with Dr. Little, and they have since carried on their work jointly, and with a pleasurable degree of convenience and satisfaction. At one time Dr. Lamb's practice reached as far as Libby and north as far as Canada, but this growing practice in Kalispell has compelled him to eliminate places of any distance from his calling list.

Dr. Lamb was born in Ontario, Canada, on January 1, 1874, and he is the son of W. A. and Ellen (Black) Lamb. The father was born in Canada, where he still lives. He is identified with a prominent life insurance company in Ottawa, Canada, and is yet active in business. The mother is a native of Scotland, who came to Canada in her young days. They became the parents of three children,—Walter, Edith and Arthur. The two first named are still residents of Canada.

J. Arthur Lamb, who was the second child of his parents, was educated in the public schools of Canada, and after his graduation from the high school of Ottawa he entered McGill Medical University at Montreal, Canada, from which fine old institution he was graduated in 1898. Following his graduation, the young doctor went to New York, where he entered New York Lying-in Hospital, serving there for one year. He then moved toward the west, and located in Sand Coulee, where he was engaged in practice for one and a half years, following which he came to Kalispell, becoming established here in 1901, as intimated in a previous paragraph.

Dr. Lamb has come to be known and recognized for one of the coming men of Montana, in whose future he has implicit faith, and where he is permanently established in his profession. He is a member of the Medical Society of Flathead county, and also ex-president of the society, and is city health officer. He is a member of the Masonic fraternity, and has passed through all chairs of the lodge, chapter and commandery. He is a member of the Kalispell Club and a director of the Masonic Temple Association.

On December 30, 1910, Dr. Lamb was united in marriage with Miss Maud Talbot of Kalispell, Montana, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Talbot of Columbia Falls, Montana.

ASA WILLARD was born in the state of Maryland on the fourteenth day of August, 1876. His father was John Willard, a successful merchant of Maryland, who spent his life in his native state and in the state of Missouri, where he was also in the mercantile business. He died at the family home after his son had reached his maturity. His wife was Ida Myers, herself a daughter of fair Maryland.

The mother was most ambitious that her son acquire not only a scholastic but a professional education. After he had finished the elementary schools of Maryland, he entered the State Normal School of Missouri situated at Kirksville, his intention at that time being to become a school man. At the end of his normal course he accepted a position in a book store at Kirksville. While here he became much interested in the cures effected through osteopathy and in the general work as carried on by the profession. Having spent several years as a layman in the Mecca of the osteopath he was in a position to judge of the sincerity and usefulness of their school of medicine. So greatly did it appeal to him that he forsook his former ambitions and entered the Kirksville school of osteopathy from which institution he was graduated in January of 1900.

Immediately upon his graduation he started for the West, where he located in Dillon, Montana. After the fourth year of his practice in Dillon he moved to the more promising city of Missoula.

With the coming of the year 1904 he began his work in his new home and has been a most successful practitioner almost from the first. Not only is he at the head of his profession but he is a prominent and progressive citizen in all of the affairs that touch the welfare of the city of his adoption.

In 1901, Mr. Toole, then governor of Montana, appointed him to membership on the State Board of medical examiners, Dr. Willard being the first physician of his school to occupy a like position in the state. So satisfactory was his service that he was reappointed by Governor Norris the following term and again reappointed in 1911. He is at the present time one of the most widely respected members on the board. He has also been for two terms a member of the state board of health of Montana.

Ever since becoming a citizen of Montana, the doctor has been chairman of the executive committee of the state association of osteopathy. From 1902 until 1906 he served as president of the society.

Asa Willard D.C.

Dr. Willard being a man of scholarly attainments with his heart in his work, has contributed some valuable articles to osteopathic literature. Most of these appeared in the journal of the National Osteopathic Association, published in New York City. This publication has the honor of claiming Dr. Willard as one of its associate editors.

The doctor was married in 1907 to Miss May Curfman, a young woman who had come to Missoula from Iowa a few years before her marriage. Their home is the happier for the arrival of two attractive children.

Doctor Willard devotes so much of his time to the practice and the prosperity of his profession that he finds few hours for relaxation and recreation. He is, however, a member of the Masonic lodge and takes pleasure in wearing the emblem of the Mystic Shrine.

While still very young in years, not having reached by several milestones the prime of life, the doctor stands absolutely at the head of his profession in Montana and has been recognized by his fellow physicians through the entire country.

ERNEST GODFREY SHAFFROTH has been located in Montana since 1900 and in the years of his residence here has been identified with the machinist's business, for a time in the employ of the Great Northern, but since 1901 engaged in an independent business. He has realized a pleasing degree of success in his vocation and Kalispell knows him for one of the representative men in his line of work, giving open acknowledgment to his ability by extending a generous patronage to his establishment.

Born in Switzerland, on August 19, 1868, Mr. Shaffroth is the son of Peter and Elizabeth (Grunder) Shaffroth, both natives of that country, and he was but two years of age when he came to America with his parents. Peter Shaffroth was a resident of Columbus, Nebraska, from 1870 until the day of his death, which occurred on April 22, 1912. He engaged in agriculture there until ten years previous to his demise, the last decade of his life being spent in retirement from the activities of business life. The wife and mother died in 1896 at the family home in Columbus, Nebraska, when in her sixty-second year. Three children were born to them, Ernest of this review being the youngest.

Until he was fourteen years old Ernest Shaffroth was privileged to attend the public schools of Platte county, Nebraska, after which he remained at home on the farm until he was twenty-two years old. In that year he removed to Lincoln, Nebraska, there securing employment with the Eagle Iron Works and serving a three year apprenticeship at the machinist's trade. Thereafter he served eight years as a journeyman machinist in that place, and came to Montana in June of 1900, locating immediately in Kalispell. For one year he worked at his trade in the shops of the Great Northern Railway, but in 1901 he saw an opportunity to become independent and he and James A. Coram established the Kalispell Iron Works, the first business of its kind to be located in this city, or indeed, in Flathead county. This partnership endured until January 1, 1907, at which time Mr. Shaffroth sold his interests and established his present business. He took a partner at first, and the concern was known as Shaffroth & Michaels. They continued a thriving machinery and automobile repair business as partners until January 1, 1911, when Mr. Shaffroth once more bought out his partner, and he has since continued as the sole proprietor of the business. He has discontinued the automobile repair department of the business and devotes his attention exclusively to building special machines and machinery repair, his being the only exclusive business in the city.

In the years of Mr. Shaffroth's residence in the city he has taken a prominent place in the civic affairs, and has assumed the full duties and responsibilities of citizenship. He is a Democrat, but has not been especially active in county politics of late years. In 1910 and 1911 he represented the First ward on the board of city aldermen, and gave excellent service to the city in that capacity. Mr. Shaffroth is prominent in fraternal circles and is identified by his membership in the Masonic order, being a member of the Knights Templar and past commander of Cyrene Commandery No. 10. He is a member of the Christian church.

On February 8, 1910, Mr. Shaffroth was united in marriage with Miss Rose Jones, the daughter of James Jones, a native of England. A daughter was born to Mr. and Mrs. Shaffroth on December 19, 1910.

WINFIELD SCOTT AND REUBEN THOMAS FLEEK. The progress and enterprise of any growing city is perhaps as clearly indicated in the class of business men, representing the varied interests of the place, as in any other respect, and at this juncture reference is made to the firm of Fleek & Fleek, prominent hardware merchants in Libby, Montana.

Winfield Scott Fleek was born April 12, 1851, near Brodhead, Wisconsin. He is a son of Reuben G. B. and Mary Ann (Bowen) Fleek, the former of whom was born in the state of Virginia and the latter in Pennsylvania. The father removed from the Buckeye state to Wisconsin in 1847 and there devoted the residue of his active career to cultivating a fine farm which he purchased in the vicinity of Brodhead. He was called from the scene of his mortal endeavors in the year 1904 and his cherished and devoted wife passed to the life eternal in 1893. They were the parents of four children, of whom Winfield S. was the first in order of birth.

The boyhood and youth of Winfield Scott Fleek were passed in Wisconsin on the old homestead farm, in the work and management of which he early began to assist his father. His education was received in the neighboring district schools and up to the age of twenty years he remained at home. In 1870 he located at Greene county, Wisconsin, and after engaging in different lines of enterprise finally turned his attention to the real estate and insurance business. In 1910 he came to Libby, Montana, where his son Reuben T. had settled in April, 1909, and in the following year he and his son purchased the established hardware business of A. L. Thompson, who opened headquarters as a hardware merchant here in 1902. This is the only exclusive hardware store in Lincoln county and the business is conducted under the firm name of Fleek & Fleek. Messrs Fleek are dealers in heavy and shelf hardware and they make a specialty of plumbing and tinning.

When Mr. Fleek came to Libby he organized the Lincoln County Abstract Company, W. S. Fleek being president of the company and his son Reuben being the secretary.

Winfield Fleek was married, November 3, 1873, in Brodhead, Wisconsin, to Miss Mary F. Johnson, a daughter of Thomas C. Johnson, who was born in Illinois. Her birth occurred in Illinois, May 22, 1854. Mr. and Mrs. Fleek have two children, Lotta L., a resident of Pendleton, Oregon; and Reuben T., concerning whom further information is given in the following paragraph.

Reuben T. Fleek was born in Wisconsin on the 12th of April, 1875. He was educated in the public schools of Brodhead, Wisconsin, and was graduated in the high school of that city in 1894. After leaving school he entered upon an apprenticeship to learn the tinner's trade, which took him three years, and thereafter he was a journeyman tinner for ten years. He came to Montana in 1900 and located in the city of Kalispell, where he worked at his trade for several years. In 1909 he was elected clerk of Lincoln county and he served in that capacity for eighteen months, after which he and his father engaged in the hardware business, as already noted. He is secretary of the volunteer fire department in Libby and in politics is a stalwart Republican, although not an active politician.

In Kalispell, Montana, February 2, 1895, Reuben T. Fleek was united in marriage to Miss Marian Slack, a daughter of Ezra Slack and a native of Michigan. This union has been prolific of two children, as follows: William Rodney, born in Kalispell, December 11, 1906; and Kathryn, born in Libby, November 10, 1910.

Both father and son are valued and appreciative members of Libby Lodge, Free and Accepted Masons and Reuben T. is likewise affiliated with Kalispell Lodge, No. 725, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. They are both members of the Libby Chamber of Commerce and in religious faith they are devout communicants of the Episcopal church. In addition to their business interests in Libby, Messrs. Fleek own many acres of valuable timber lands in various sections of Montana. They are business men of marked ability and as citizens are loyal and public spirited, giving their hearty support to all measures and enterprises projected for the good of the general welfare. They are well liked in Libby and here have a wide circle of acquaintances and intimate personal friends.

WILLIAM A. GREGG. A business man and citizen of Polson who is both enterprising and prosperous, Mr. Gregg began his business career without capital, and by his persevering industry and ability has gained a creditable position in life.

William A. Gregg was born in Lenawee county, Michigan, December 13, 1870. His father was William Gregg, a native of Ireland who came to America and settled in Lenawee county in 1865, and for many years has been one of the substantial farmers of that locality. The mother, whose maiden name was Margaret Stewart, was also born in Ireland, and was married in Antrim county before their emigration to America. She died in Lenawee county, Michigan, in 1904, aged seventy, having been the mother of six children.

The youngest of the family, William A. spent the first twenty-two years of his life on the home farm, with attendance at the public schools. He was also a student in Brown's Business College at Adrian, and after completing his course there established the Star Laundry at Adrian. Though young in business he did very well and conducted the laundry a year and a half, then selling to Wm. McDonald of that city. For a little more than half a year he filled a clerical position with McNaughton, Walker & Company, wholesale and commission merchants at Detroit, and then started for the Northwest, which for more than fifteen years has been his home and the scene of his successful business career. On April 5, 1896, he located in Towner county, North Dakota, where he took up a homestead, proved up, and still owns this property.

For a number of years Mr. Gregg had cherished a fancy for the jeweler and watch-maker's trade, and at Minot, North Dakota, he entered the store of J. W. Rode and acquired this trade during his two years there. He then came to Montana and for four years worked with the Hauser Company in Havre, and then for several years with H. W. Stringfellow's mercantile company in the same city. He then established and became a partner in the Pioneer Grocery Company, incorporated, at Havre, but in 1908 sold his interest to his partners and located in Polson, which has since been his home town. Here in partnership with J. J. Ober, he bought the C. F. Gates Mercantile Company, which became the Polson Mercantile Company, a very prosperous concern. His interests in this business having been sold to J. G. Dunbar in October, 1911, he and Mr. Ober then opened a real estate office. Since March, 1912, Mr. Gregg has been sole proprietor of a very successful business in general real estate. He has large holdings in South Dakota and at Havre, Montana, and city and residence properties in Polson. He also does a large insurance and bonding business, representing some of the best known companies.

Mr. Gregg is Republican in politics, and for a number of years has been an active member of the Presbyterian church. He was married in Detroit, Michigan, June 7, 1902, to Miss Elizabeth Anderson, a daughter of James Anderson. Her father was born in Glasgow, Scotland, and is still living there. Mrs. Gregg came to America at the age of sixteen and lived with her uncle, R. W. Anderson, of Detroit, Michigan. The children of Mr. and Mrs. Gregg are: William Alexander; Mildred Louise; Thomas Stewart; Robert Kenneth; and Harold Anderson, all Montana products and with no greater pleasure than living amid such pleasant surroundings.

JAMES F. TAYLOR. To James F. Taylor has come the attainment of a distinguished position in connection with the business world of Butte. His life achievements worthily illustrate what may be attained by persistent and painstaking effort. He is decidedly progressive in his ideas and at the present time, in 1911, is president and owner of the thriving business known as Taylor's Collecting Agency, the offices of which are located at Nos. 22-23 Silver Bow block.

A native of Missouri, James F. Taylor was born near Keytesville, on the 10th day of February, 1877. He is the son of James F. Taylor, Sr., a native of Tennessee, whence he removed with his parents to Missouri when a lad of but twelve years of age. The father is a retired farmer and stock raiser in Chariton county, Missouri, where he has long resided and where he is honored and respected by all with whom he has come in contact. He has reached the age of sixty-two years. The mother of the subject of this review was Hulda Kazell in her maiden days and she was born and reared in Tennessee, her ancestry having been of Welsh and German extraction. She was summoned to the life eternal February 17th, 1877, at the early age of twenty-five years, survived by three boys, James F. Taylor being a baby only seven days old.

He passed his boyhood and youth in the place of his birth, where he received his preliminary educational training. At the age of fourteen years, in 1891, he attended the Salisbury Academy, at Salisbury, Missouri, not finishing the term. Leaving home without the consent of his parents to make his own way in the world, he secured his first employment on a farm for a meager salary of eight dollars per month, working in the capacity as a farm hand for a year and a half. He then went to St. Louis, Missouri, and secured employment with the Hamilton-Brown Shoe Company. He remained with the above firm for six months, working for the munificent salary of four dollars per week. Being unable to exist on this salary, he finally secured a position with the Suburban Street Car Company, and where he began to attend the night sessions of a business college. Too close application to work and study, however, soon impaired his health, and in order to recuperate, he went to Santa Rita, New Mexico, where he secured a job on the celebrated Tea Box ranch, conducted by Patrick & Hobson and located near Santa Rita. He was interested in ranching for a period of fourteen months. At the end of that time, he went to Pueblo, Colorado. Finding it hard to secure employment, he was compelled to secure a position in the Colorado Fuel & Iron Company's steel works, at one dollar and forty cents a day. He soon engaged in the laundry business, purchasing a horse, wagon and harness for the modest sum of thirty-five dollars and rapidly built up a large trade for himself. Eventually the Laundrymen's Association took a stand against him and refused to give him a contract whereby they would do his work on a commission basis. He eventually secured a contract with Wm. H. Metz, proprietor of the Colorado Springs Steam Laundry Co., in Colorado Springs, for a period of five years on a fifty per cent. commission basis, express one way. And so successful was he in this enterprise, at the end of the five year contract, he renewed the contract, having five wagons on the job steady all the time besides the office help required, and several sub-agents through the southern part of Colorado. He disposed of this business for a little better than two thousand dollars. After investing that sum in real estate, he accepted employment with P. F. Collier Publishing Company, as a traveling representative. Years later, he came to Butte to take charge of the company's office here. He continued with the concern until August 29, 1907. At that time he became connected with the Taylor Laundry Company. At the end of five months, seeing the possibilities in the collection field, he established his first office at his residence, 721 Colorado street. One of his first assignments was to take over the business for the different doctors, afterwards contracting with the Montana Independent Telephone Company in the states of Montana, Idaho and Washington. Gradually he branched out and got other assignments, and from his first month's collections of $129, he has branched out until he now has a business of 831 clients, 38,000 claims. He has about twelve experienced workers and collectors in his employ and carries on his business in a very scientific manner. He has never had any serious trouble in his career, is firm and reliable, and has the full confidence of the best business men in the state. He is decidedly energetic and a hard worker, and his present high standing is due entirely to his own efforts.

Mr. Taylor was married December 31, 1908, at Butte, to Miss Sallie Evans, a native of Ashland, Pennsylvania. Mrs. Taylor passed to the life eternal on the 7th day of October, 1911, and is survived by one daughter, little Maud Montana Taylor, whose birth occurred September 12, 1910.

In politics Mr. Taylor is a stalwart Democrat and in a fraternal way he is a valued and appreciative member of the Modern Woodmen of America. His religious faith is in harmony with the tenets of the Baptist church, to whose charities and benevolences he is a liberal contributor. Mr. Taylor is sociable by nature and is exceedingly fond of home life, all his love and interest being centered in his little motherless daughter.

PHILIP R. LONG, the popular clerk of the district court of Lincoln county, is one of the young men who have won prominence in the public life of the county through the efficient performance of the duties in connection with their official positions. He has lived in the West since his youth, but was born in Columbus, Indiana, on June 27, 1888. He is the son of David F. and Mary M. (Dorons) Long, the former a native of Maryland and the latter of Missouri. David Long came to Indiana in early life, and was a pioneer settler of that state. He passed his latter days in Kalispell, after his retirement from business activities, and died in that city in 1910 at the age of seventy-four years. He was a merchant of considerable prominence in Columbus, where he spent so many years of his life. The wife and mother died in Kalispell in 1911, one year after the death of her husband. They were the parents of seven children.

As a boy in Columbus, Philip Long attended the schools of that place, later attending school in Kalispell. Following his school attendance he went to Seattle, Washington, and worked in the abstract office in that city for some time, later returning to Montana and settling in Kalispell where he entered the law office of his brother, T. D. Long, a practicing attorney of that city, and he continued in that service until July 1, 1909, when he was appointed clerk of the district court of Lincoln county. He still retains the important post and continues to perform the duties of the position with the thoroughness and regard for detail which is a characteristic of his nature. Mr. Long is of a quiet and somewhat studious nature, fond of home life, and finding much pleasure in reading and study. He is a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and the Masonic fraternity, in which he is identified with the blue lodge of Libby. He is a Democrat and a member of the Episcopal church.

CHARLES H. SPENGLER. Fortune is elusive, but seldom is the victory lost to him who grapples with her with determination and self-confidence. There are many citizens of Montana who are accounted successful men but there are few who owe what they have accomplished to other than their own pluck, perseverance and intrepid endeavor. Charles H. Spengler, a master mechanic who has charge of the entire mechanical department of the Butte, Anaconda & Pacific Railroad and resides at Anaconda, Montana, entered the workers' ranks in youth and has forged steadily forward because he gave of his best ability to whatever duty was at hand.

Mr. Spengler was born in Washington, D. C., October 22, 1869, the sixth of seven children and the youngest son of Theodore and Sarah (Brock) Spengler. The father was a native of Germany and came to the United States as a young man, locating first in Philadelphia, but later removing to Washington, D. C., and thence to St. Paul, Minnesota, in 1883, where he died shortly afterward when about fifty-five years of age. He was one of the 200,000 or more German-Americans who bravely fought under the Union flag during the Civil war, and after that struggle had closed he was in the government service at Washington, D. C., for a number of years. He was engaged in the clothing business at St. Paul, however, at the time of his death. The parents were married in England. Sarah (Brock) Spengler, the mother, is still living and resides at St. Paul, Minnesota.

Charles, who was but four years old at the time of the father's death, received his education in the public schools of St. Paul, and in that city when about fifteen years of age he earned his first money by working in a large music store, his salary at the start having been eight dollars per month. This money he gave to his mother and for many years thereafter he contributed to her support. On severing his connection with the music store he began learning the machinist trade, his first position in this line being with the Chicago & Western Railway Company. In 1901 he came to Havre, Montana, where he entered the employ of the Great Northern Railway Company in the capacity of general foreman and remained eight years; then he came to Anaconda to fill the same position for the Butte, Anaconda & Pacific Railway Company, and in 1910 was promoted to the position of master mechanic, being placed in charge of the entire mechanical department of this railroad. Not the work, but the character of the workman and of his work, has been the key to his success.

At St. Paul, Minnesota, on the 30th of June, 1895, Mr. Spengler married Amy Marie Latimer, whose parents are John and Mary Latimer, of Algona, Iowa. Mr. and Mrs. Spengler have one son, Walter A., now a student in the Anaconda high school.

Mr. Spengler is a Republican but takes no active interest in political affairs. While a resident of Havre, Montana, he served as an alderman two terms and was also chief of the volunteer fire department there. In his religious belief he leans toward the Lutheran denomination, while Mrs. Spengler is a member of the Presbyterian church and is one of the prominent and active workers in the Ladies' Aid Society of that church. Fraternal ties have been formed by Mr. Spengler in the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, the Independent Order of Foresters and the Knights of Pythias, and he has been an officer in the last named order. In the way of recreation he finds pleasure in hunting and fishing and in athletic sports he especially enjoys boxing, occasionally participating in a contest himself. He likes Montana and its people and considers it the great home state of the future.

A. FREDERICK TOLER. The retail business of Butte, Montana, is in the hands of a group of enterprising and progressive men who are interested not alone in their own individual success but strive continually for the benefit and improvement of the community at large. In these respects no element is more alert than that which comprises the drug trade of the city, and in this department of trade one of the leading representatives is Mr. A. Frederick Toler, a pharmacist of years' experience whose store is located in commodious quarters at 401 South Main street. The firm name under which the establishment is conducted is A. F. Toler, Incorporated, Mr. Toler being secretary of the company, J. R. Davenport, president and treasurer, and A. B. Davenport, vice-president.

Mr. Toler evinced as a boy a natural aptitude for chemistry and natural philosophy, which studies he took up under a private tutor immediately after his graduation from the Oxford, Ohio, high school at fourteen years of age, his being the class of 1890. His apprenticeship with a druggist ended when he had reached his eighteenth year, that being his age when he received his diploma as a registered pharmacist. For fifteen years subsequent to his registration he continued to follow his profession as a pharmacist as an employe, and the greater portion of the time he was a resident of various towns and cities in Ohio. The date of his arrival in Butte was June, 1901. His first position here was in Newton Brothers' drug store, where he continued to work for sixteen months, then left to accept a similar position with the old Eagle drug store. After a short time he resigned that connection and then for five years was head pharmacist in the drug store of C. B. Hoskins.

This last named position ended Mr. Toler's career as an employe, for upon his resignation of his position with Mr. Hoskins he organized the company of A. F. Toler, Incorporated, and opened his present store, which is without exception the largest and most important business of the kind in the section of the city in which it is situated. The venture proved an unqualified success from the start and trade is increasing with gratifying rapidity. Mr. Toler's ability and reputation as a pharmacist are unsurpassed and his business and executive talents are of the highest type, so that his success in conducting a drug business was a foregone conclusion.

Mr. Toler is a representative of one of the oldest families in the United States and springs from distinguished ancestry on both the maternal and paternal sides of the house. He was born in Butler county, Ohio, March 23, 1876, the son of John C. and Mary H. (Gailliard) Toler. His father, who was born in Union county, Indiana, September 7, 1833, and died in 1903, was a photographer by profession. The founder of the Toler family in the United States was George Toler, who came from England and settled at Fairfax, Virginia, and the grandfather of our subject was a soldier in the War of 1812. His mother was a daughter of a Methodist clergyman who came from England with his family when she was a child of seven years and settled at Cincinnati, Ohio. She was reared in that city and was married to Mr. Toler at Oxford, Ohio, in 1866. The Gailliard family is of French extraction and occupied positions of distinction in William the Conqueror's time.

Mr. Toler is a worthy descendant of his distinguished ancestors and is entitled to much credit for the high success he has achieved entirely through his own unaided efforts. He occupies a foremost position in leading commercial and social circles of the city, his standing as a substantial business man and a gentleman of high character and pleasing personality justly entitling him to that place. Fraternally Mr. Toler is affiliated with the Masonic order, being a member of Lodge No. 158 at Marysville, Ohio.

FRANK P. BIRRER was born in Riverside, Iowa, February 23, 1874. He resided in that place until he was twenty-seven years of age, when he came to Dillon, Montana. He arrived here in March, 1901, and has made this his home ever since. He is the leading contractor of the city and has an office and factory second to none in the Beaverhead valley.

He worked only one year under a boss and then went to contracting. The business of building is a natural one for Mr. Birrer. As a child he played with tools and was continually trying to construct something. He earned his first money as a boy by playing at country dances on a violin which he had made himself. He was supposed to receive one dollar per night for this service, but he states that he played many a night without receiving a cent.

Mr. Birrer learned every detail of his construction business through practical experience. He draws all his own plans and specifications. He has designed some of the finest residences in Dillon, and in the season of 1911 he drew fourteen sets of plans. He secured his early education in the public schools of Iowa, but at the age of sixteen had to give up further study on account of his father's ill health.

Mr. Birrer is an active member of the Catholic church. In politics he is Democratic although the tendency is toward independence. He is a member of the Order of Modern Woodmen of America, is now venerable council and has held this position most of the time since the lodge was organized. He is the chief of the Dillon fire department. Mr. Birrer is fond of all out-door amusements, and is devoted to reading and to music. He is a self-made man.

He was married at Riverside, Iowa, in June, 1897, to Miss Rosa M. Knebel, of Sigourney, Iowa. There is one child in this home, a boy, Ivo M. Birrer, who was born in April, 1899, and is now attending school in Dillon.

Mr. Birrer's father was Martin Birrer, who was born in Alsace-Lorraine, then under the control of France. He came to America when a young boy. He has followed farming all his life, and is now living in Iowa, on the old homestead, and enjoying his age in retirement. The mother was Christina Birrer, who was born in Germany. The marriage of this couple took place in Iowa. There were eleven children in the family of the elder Birrer, six girls and five boys, the subject of this sketch being the fourth child. Two brothers and one sister are now living in Montana, as follows: Mary Seraphina, who is keeping house for her brother Andrew V. Birrer, on a ranch near Dillon, and Nicholas M. who is married and is associated with Mr. Birrer in his contracting business.

HON. HARRY ALBYN FRANK is one of Butte's younger barristers, who has been practicing his profession in that city, with a steadily growing reputation, for a dozen years, during which time he has also attained political eminence in the state of Montana. Mr. Frank is a Nebraskan by birth and education, born at Falls City July 7, 1877, and his parents were Albyn L. and Jennie (Stanley) Frank, the former of Clearfield, Pennsylvania, and the latter originally of Quincy, Illinois.

In the public schools of Omaha, Nebraska, Harry Albyn Frank received his preliminary education. His collegiate course was pursued in the University of Nebraska, from which institution he was graduated in the year 1896, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. His professional alma mater is Cornell University, from which he received his degree of Bachelor of Laws with the class of 1898.

Mr. Frank began his legal career in Omaha, Nebraska, where he was engaged in practice from 1898 until 1901. In the latter year he came to Butte, where he has continued in professional activities until the present time.

The responsible office of chief deputy county attorney of Silver Bow county was accepted by Mr. Frank during the year 1907-1908. The following year his character and ability received due tribute in his election as a representative to the Montana legislature, for the term of 1909-10. In connection with his duties in that capacity he was further honored by being made chairman of the judiciary committee of the house.

Mr. Frank's political prominence is primarily connected with his loyalty to the Democratic party, although his public acceptability has been by no means limited to a partisan camp. The social affiliations of ex-Representative Frank include his membership in the orders of Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons and in the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks.

LEVERETT S. ROPES was born at Ispeming, Michigan, on July 21, 1868. His father's people were of English origin, the American branch of the family being founded in 1635. His mother's maiden name was Eunice L. Rouse, and she too is of English descent. Her birthplace was Lockport, New York, from which place she removed to Marquette Michigan. Here, in 1867, she was married to Julius Ropes, a chemist and geologist.

Leverett S. Ropes inherited his father's interest in geology and to this the family owed a great good fortune. When the boy was thirteen, while out prospecting on some property in which his father was interested, found a piece of rock which he carried to his father. The chemist examined the rock and found that it contained a large percentage of gold. The land upon which it was found, when developed, became the Ropes Mine, which produced three quarters of a million dollars. Julius Ropes continued to operate the mine until 1893, when it was closed. Mr. Ropes died in 1905, at the age of sixty-nine. His widow, Mrs. Eunice Ropes, now resides in Michigan.

After graduating from the high school in Ispeming, Leverett S. Ropes entered the Michigan School of Mines, from which he received his degree in 1893. For a time after finishing his studies, Mr. Ropes was instructor in the college, but soon abandoned the theory of mining, for its practice. He went first to North Carolina, later to Georgia, and thence to Ontario to follow his profession as a mining engineer. In 1901 he came to Montana to take charge of the Corundum mining properties in the Gallatin valley. This was at that time a new venture in the mining industry, at least in this section of the state, and to Mr. Ropes belongs the credit of organizing and developing it. He remained some time with the company, after completing its organization and getting it into running order, and then came to Helena to take charge of the Bald Butte mine. From 1908 to 1910 he was connected with the General Land office and in that work was sent to all parts of the state. In 1909 Mr. Ropes was elected county surveyor and is still filling that office. About a year later, on April 1, 1910, Mr. Ropes and Robert McIntyre opened an office in the Power block, as surveyors and mining engineers, continuing until September, 1911, when the partnership was dissolved. The field of their operations embraced various sections of the state. Among the properties with which Mr. Ropes has been connected may be mentioned the Corundum mines, the Bald Butte mine, the Cataract copper mine, the Alta mine, the mines at Jardine, and the Havre coal mine. Mr. Ropes is manager of the Elkhorn Duluth Development Company, and is employed as consulting engineer on many other of the larger mining industries of the district, as he is recognized as one of the ablest of his profession, possessing both the training of the college and the practical experience of the prospector and the miner. He is an enthusiast on his profession and deeply interested in it as such, and not merely as a means of livelihood. Besides being president of the Montana Association of County Engineers, Mr. Ropes is a member of the American Institute of Mining Engineers.

Mr. Ropes was married at Franklin, North Carolina, on December 12, 1894, to Miss Eleanor H. Deal, daughter of Rev. John Archibald Deal, an Episcopal clergyman now living at Gainesville, Georgia. The five children of this marriage were born in three widely distant places. Dorothy Eleanor, now in high school, began life at Franklin, North Carolina, on October 16, 1895. John Lyman Ropes is a Canadian by birth, his native town being Combermere, where he was born on December 6, 1900. Judith Ropes, whose birthday is the same as Lincoln's, was born in Helena, in 1907; and Leverett Deal was born May 12, 1912. Besides these children there was another son, who was born in August, 1899, and died in early childhood. Mr. and Mrs. Ropes are members of the Episcopal church. Of the lodges, Mr. Ropes is affiliated only with the ancient Masonic body. In politics he is a Republican, and as much interested in party affairs as his very busy professional life permits. In the party as elsewhere, he counts a long list of acquaintances and an unusually large number of friends.

MAUDE GRIFFIN. As superintendent of the schools of Musselshell county, Miss Maude Griffin is filling one of the most responsible positions in the gift of the people, and in the year which has elapsed since her election to the office she has conclusively demonstrated her fitness for the duties devolving upon her, and is a happy example of the fact, not everywhere admitted, that women are as capable of holding public office as are men.

Miss Griffin was born in Almy, Wyoming, and is the daughter of George N. and Katherine (Proud) Griffin. The father was born in England and came to America as a young man. He has been identified with the coal business all his life, and is now superintendent of the Republic Coal Company at Roundup. He is prominent in Roundup in many ways—politically, socially, fraternally and in church matters. He is a devout Christian gentleman and is an earnest member of the Methodist church, at present holding the office of superintendent of the Sunday-school. He takes an active and intelligent interest in political matters. He is a Mason of high degree and was a member of the first state assembly in Wyoming, holding many important official positions while there. His wife was also born in England, coming to the United States in her girlhood. They were married in Illinois, and became the parents of eleven children, Miss Griffin of this review being the fourth in order of birth. With the exception of one daughter who is a resident of Chicago, the entire family is living in Montana.

The early education of Miss Griffin was received in the public schools of Wyoming, where she was born, and later, when the family removed to Montana, she attended the schools of Bozeman, which was followed by a course at the State Normal College at Dillon, Montana. Miss Griffin was graduated from the institution in 1908, and after leaving college she taught in various Montana cities for three years. In 1908 she came to Roundup, her home having previously been at Bozeman, where the family had been located since coming from Wyoming in 1901, and when the new county of Musselshell was formed, Miss Griffin was appointed county superintendent of schools, taking charge of the office on March 1, 1911.

She is an adherent of the Methodist church, of which her parents are members, and she champions the cause of the Republican party at all times, having an active and intelligent interest in political matters of national import. She is an ardent tennis player and a most enthusiastic baseball "fan," while camp life and all outdoor exercise appeals to her to an unusual degree. She is a student of the best in music and literature and is the owner of a choice private library. She has great praise for the public school system of Montana, which she claims is second to no other state in the union, and it is safe to say that the system in her county will never deteriorate while she is in charge.

WILLIAM M. ENRIGHT. If history teaches by example, the lessons inculcated by biography must be still more impressive. We see exhibited in the varieties of human character, under different circumstances, something to instruct us in our duty and to encourage our efforts under every emergency. And, perhaps, there is no concurrence of events which produce this effect more certainly than the steps by which distinction has been acquired through the unaided efforts of youthful enterprise, as illustrated in the life of William M. Enright, present receiver of public moneys from the United States land department located at Billings, Montana. Mr. Enright is a native of Perth, Ontario, where he was born April 22, 1870, and is a son of Timothy and Catherine (Gill) Enright, natives of Limerick, Ireland, and Perth, Ontario, Canada, respectively.

Timothy Enright learned the trade of tailor in his native Erin, and as a young man made his way to the New World, settling first in Canada, where he was married. Shortly thereafter he moved to Rochester, in which city he followed the vocation of a merchant tailor until his death. He and his wife had six children, of whom two are living: Catherine and William M. The latter remained with his parents in Rochester until he was eleven years of age, at which time he journeyed to St. Paul, Minnesota, and there resided with his married sister, Mrs. D. M. Collins, pursuing his studies in the public schools. When he was about sixteen years of age he went to Chicago to live with his brother, Maurice J. Enright, and soon found employment in the knit goods department of the wholesale firm of John V. Farwell Company. After spending about one year with this well-known concern, Mr. Enright began his railroad career with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad Company, having charge of all incoming freight in car-load lots, and held this position from 1888 to 1892. In the latter year he removed to Sioux City, Iowa, where he became city passenger agent for the Union Pacific Railroad and in 1894 left that company to become chief clerk of the freight department of the Great Northern Railroad, at Sioux City. In 1896 Mr. Enright was made city passenger and ticket agent for the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad and Union Pacific Railroad joint office, but in 1901 removed to Superior, Wisconsin, and was city ticket agent for the Chicago & Northwestern System. Subsequently he was made traveling passenger and freight agent for the same road at Helena, Montana, and held the office until 1905, when he became traveling passenger and freight agent for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, with headquarters at Butte, Montana. Previous to the building of this road in Montana, Mr. Enright had been engaged to travel through the state looking over the country and gathering data as to the best part of the state through which to run their lines. As a railroad man, he became well known throughout the middle and northwest, and was recognized as a railroad operator of superior capacity and ability. Having begun his career in a humble position, he has thoroughly familiarized himself with all the details of railroad business and management, and has earned promotion by hard work and thorough honesty, intelligent effort and efficient services. He has made a close study of what may be termed the science of railroading, has a broad knowledge of the principles governing railroading and all the rules and regulations pertaining to railroad traffic, and is a man, also, of extensive general information. The duties and responsibilities of the positions he has held have demanded his entire attention, but he has also found time to give to public-spirited movements in whatever community he has found himself. A staunch Republican in political matters, and a member of the state central committee of his party, Mr. Enright's services were recognized February 15, 1909, when he was appointed by President Roosevelt to the position of receiver of public moneys from the United States land department located at Billings. Fraternally he is connected with the Knights of Columbus, of which he is state deputy, and with Billings Lodge, No. 394, B. P. O. E. He is a member of the committee on railroad traffic, which is controlled by the Commercial Club of Billings, Montana.

He was nominated for state treasurer by the Republican party in Great Falls, Montana, on September 5, 1912, but met defeat in the great Democratic landslide when Woodrow Wilson carried nearly every state in the Union.

On November 8, 1899, Mr. Enright was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth McNamara, who was born at Sioux City, Iowa, daughter of William C. and Catherine (Brady) McNamara, natives of New York state, who are now living at Long Pine, Nebraska. Mr. McNamara, who was for many years a well-known railroad contractor, is now the owner of a large ranch in Nebraska, and is a leading Democrat of his locality. Mrs. Enright is the only child of her parents. She and her husband have had four children; Catherine, Florence, William J., Jr., and Maurice.

LAUCHLAN A. McDONALD, who has for the past five years been actively engaged in the nursery business in the near vicinity of Billings, Montana, is a man of varied experience, unusual education, has traveled extensively, and is in every respect calculated to occupy a prominent place in whatever community his lot may be cast.

He was born in Delaware county, New York, February 15, 1841, and is the son of Neil and Mary Ann (McQuarrie) McDonald. Neil McDonald was born in New York state and died in Toronto, Canada, at the age of fifty-four years. His widow survived him until the year 1871. Both Mr. and Mrs. McDonald were of Scottish extraction. They were the parents of seven children, five sons and two daughters, all of them but one son, of whom we write, having passed away in young manhood and womanhood. The father, Neil McDonald, was a grain merchant, and was also connected with the milling industry. In the year 1847, when his son Lauchlan was but six years of age the family removed to Toronto, where the elder McDonald built a number of flour mills and grain elevators, and there he carried on an extensive grain and flour milling business, in which he was always particularly successful.

Lauchlan McDonald received a liberal education, every reasonable advantage being his, and in 1859, when he was eighteen years of age, he had the further privilege of accompanying his uncle, Arthur McQuarrie, then a diplomat representing the Canadian government, on a trip covering a period of three years. They went direct from Toronto to New York City, thence to South America, via the Isthmus of Panama, Nicaragua route, visiting en route at Paraguay, Uruguay, Ecuador, La Paz, Brazil, Argentine, Venezuela, Buenos Aires, Rio de Janeiro, Punta Arenas, West Indies, Havana de Cuba, Key West (Fla.) and many other points. They returned to Toronto after an absence of three years, and the younger McDonald was much benefited by his extensive travels and broadened by his early contact with the world.

The constant traveling during those years made the quiet home life irksome to the young man, and after spending a few months at home with his parents he set out on a trip to Old Mexico. He spent some little time in that country, going on from there to Los Angeles, California, and thence to Denver, Colorado. This trip consumed two years' time, following which he returned once more to his home in Toronto, and there he remained for six years, caring for his widowed mother, his father having died in the meantime. On his next pilgrimage he went directly to Chicago from Toronto, thence to New York City, and passed from there on throughout the southern states, after which he returned home. In 1871 his mother died, and after closing up the affairs of the family in Toronto he left for the States once more, by which he had been so visibly attracted for many years, and he spent nearly three years in prospecting and mining in Colorado, Arizona, Nevada and Idaho. In 1875 with a party of eight he set out for the Dakotas, via Omaha, Nebraska. Methods of traveling were primitive, even in '75, and they made the trip in one of the time honored "prairie schooners." Their outfit included several yokes of oxen and a number of cows, horses and mules. Their trip across the prairies from Omaha to the Black Hills was attended by many thrilling adventures, they being beset on various occasions by Indians, who made things lively for them in every encounter. Unaccompanied and unhampered as they were by women and children, the trip was more of an exciting adventure than a hardship, and when they finally reached their destination after thirty-five days of continuous traveling, their original party was undiminished by their numerous encounters with the Redmen.

Reaching the Black Hills, Mr. McDonald promptly began mining and prospecting on his own account, and he spent seven trying years in that work, with only indifferent success. He finally decided that the life of a prospector in a new country was too uncertain of success, and he gave up the game and bought a ranch in one of the valleys of the Black Hills. He spent two years in ranching, then sold out his interests and eventually went into the saw-mill business, locating in Spearfish, South Dakota, and building a saw mill, planing mill and sash and door factory, which industry he conducted in connection with a contracting and building business. But a comparatively short time elapsed when he decided to go out of the manufacturing business. He again disposed of his interests, and immediately turned his efforts to the nursery business, which had held his attention for some time. He successfully operated a nursery plant for about seven years, when he began to cast about for a better location. He went to Montana to look over the country, and he was so well pleased that he located in Missoula county near the city of Missoula, and there he entered a partnership with D. J. Tighe, the firm being known as McDonald & Tighe, and for five years they managed a very successful nursery business in that location.

In 1906 they sold their interests and located two miles northeast of Billings, Montana, in Yellowstone county, they having bought a tract of one hundred and sixty acres of finely irrigated land, and organized what is known as the Montana Nursery Company, Incorporated, Lauchlan McDonald being president and manager of the concern. They have seventy-five acres planted to apples, cherries, peaches, plums and small fruits, and the business is in an especially thriving condition. Their concern is well and favorably known in the agricultural world and among exclusive fruit growers, and the project bids fair to make a phenomenal growth in the coming years.

Mr. McDonald has by his own efforts and by his own intrinsic worth as a man made for himself a name in a new country, and he ranks high in that community which he has helped to improve by virtue of the activities of the project of which he is the head. In politics he upholds the principles of Democracy, and he is somewhat of a fraternity man, being a member of Spearfish Lodge No. 18, A. F. & A. M.; Spearfish

Chapter, R. A. M., at Spearfish, South Dakota, and of the Modern Woodmen of America, also at Spearfish.

JOHN H. HUNT, M. D. In the galaxy of eminent professional men in Montana may be found the names of many who have won a high reputation in the prolific fields of medicine and surgery, and among these Dr. John H. Hunt, of Glendive, holds a prominent place. During the twenty or more years that he has been engaged in active practice in this city his skill has won him the full confidence of the people of Glendive, who have recognized and appreciated the services he has given to his community. Dr. Hunt is a native of Grant, Smith county, Tennessee, and was born January 31, 1862, a son of Thomas S. and Susan (Barbee) Hunt.

Thomas S. Hunt was born in the state of Kentucky, and was there given the advantages of a common school education. After graduating in medicine he removed to Tennessee and located at Grant, there marrying and carrying on a general practice until 1875. During that year ill health caused his removal to the state of Kansas where, near Burton, in Harvey county, he was engaged in the healthy, out-door life of the farm, and became widely known as an agriculturist and stockman. In politics a Whig and later a Republican, while in Tennessee he served one term as a member of the state legislature, and in fraternal matters was connected with the Masons. His death occurred in 1900, when he reached the age of seventy years, while his widow still survives him and makes her home in Harvey county, Kansas. Of their family of five children, three are living: John H., Berry W. and Milford E.

John H. Hunt received his preliminary education in the public schools of Tennessee and Kansas, later attended Kansas University, and subsequently went to Ann Arbor, Michigan, and attended the State University there. He was graduated in medicine in the class of 1900, and first located at Brainerd, Minnesota, where he spent one year in the Northern Pacific Hospital as an interne. At that time he came to Glendive and engaged in general practice, in which he has continued to the present time, building up a large and representative clientele. He has well-appointed offices in the Merchants National Bank building, and is a member of the Tri-County Medical Society, the Montana Medical Society and the American Medical Association. He fraternizes with the Masons, the Odd Fellows and the Knights of Pythias, and in political matters is a Republican, although he has never cared for public office, being entirely devoted to his profession. He has been the Northern Pacific surgeon for the past fifteen years.

On October 21, 1896, Dr. Hunt was married to Miss Alice M. McLain, who was born in King City, Missouri, a daughter of Andrew and Anna Catherine (Chandler) McLain, natives of Richmond, Indiana, both of whom are deceased. Mr. McLain came to Montana in 1883, and during the remainder of his life was engaged in ranching in Dawson county. He and his wife had a family of six children, Mrs. Hunt being the fifth in order of birth. To the Doctor and his wife two children have been born; Helen Gertrude and John McLain.

FRANCIS J. EARLY. In the quaint town of Roscommon, Ireland, on the ninth day of August, 1878, Francis J. Early was born. He was the youngest of a family of ten children, six sons and four daughters. All of the brothers and sisters, excepting two of the younger girls, grew to manhood and womanhood and most of them still remain in the land of their birth.

The father, Patrick Early, was a small Irish land holder. He passed away when his last born son was only five years of age, leaving his family comfortably situated for that time and country, and little dreaming of the prosperity that his boys were to attain in a strange land beyond the seas. His wife, Ann Early, bore, before her marriage, the same family name as her husband, belonging herself to the Early clan. She lived until the third of March, 1905. Although she never left her native land, she lived to see her eight children—two of the daughters had died in infancy—well on the road to success.

Francis finished the work of the highest grade in the public schools of Roscommon when twelve years of age and was given the unusual opportunity of three additional years of study before starting his apprenticeship in the shoe and boot making trade. After finishing this trade he worked for two years and a half for John O'Keefe in a men's furnishing establishment. Being a good manager by nature and having a few expenses, he was able to lay aside in a few years what looked to his fellow townsmen like a small fortune. With this money in his possession, he started out, alone, in July of 1900, to visit his older brother, James Early, who had left their Irish home some years before for the richer country of America. It was Francis Early's intention to spend the summer visiting with the brother and in the autumn return to his work in his own land. So attractive did our eastern states appear to him, however, that he almost immediately abandoned all thought of returning to Ireland. Almost his first move was the wise one of entering a business college at Worcester, Massachusetts, where he could readily learn not only the American accent but the methods of the American business man.

When his year of study was finished Mr. Early started for Butte, Montana and with the little capital remaining to him opened a men's furnishing house at No. 825 E. Front street. Here he did a flourishing business from the beginning until, in 1906, he was able to purchase the property located at Nos. 717-719 E. Front street, this being in an excellent business locality on one of the main streets of the city, and directly opposite the Union station. Here Mr. Early now conducts one of the largest mercantile concerns of Butte, having cleared over one hundred thousand dollars in the six years since his change of location.

As soon as his business success warranted such a step in the year 1904, Francis Early was joined in marriage to Miss Annie McNarny, the daughter of Hugh McNarny of County Cavan, Ireland. In August, 1906, there was born to them, in the city of Butte, a son whom they called Francis Joseph and two years later, his brother, James Albert, came to keep him company. This younger son arrived on the day after Christmas, in 1908. The children are being reared in the church of their fathers, the Early family having always been Roman Catholics, as have been the McNarny's likewise. Mr. Early's religious teaching prevents his belonging to any of the popular secret orders. He is, however, one of the active members of the Business Men's Association of Butte. He feels that he owes a great debt of gratitude to the brother who was the family pioneer in the land of plenty, and almost as great a one to the friend who first told him of the wonders in the golden west.

ROBERT C. ROSS. The rapid increase in the population of the entire west and accompanying phenomenal development of cities and rural communities commercially and industrially has made the whole section an alluring field for the operations of real estate men with talents for that line of business endeavor. Butte is no exception to this rule, and numbered among this progressive city's leading factors in this department of activity we find Mr. Robert C. Ross. While Mr. Ross does an extensive real estate business, in that department being associated with E. F. Kilmer, his operations are by no means confined to the city, or even the state limits, for he also negotiates many large deals in outside properties and has a considerable clientele in Salt Lake City.

Mr. Ross' active connection with the real estate business in Butte dates from August 1905 and from the comparatively small beginning made at that date he has built up his present large operations in this line and developed the various ramifications of his business in a manner highly creditable to one of his high order of executive abilities. Previous to engaging in realty dealing Mr. Ross was for several years an influential factor in the commercial life of the city through his ownership and conduct of four of the principal barber shops in Butte. Three of these tonsorial parlors were located on Arizona street and one on south Main, while all were well equipped and in the hands of the best workmen in this line that could be secured. During the four years that he was engaged in this business he developed an exceedingly profitable custom and when the interests were finally disposed of by him they brought him a handsome profit.

Mr. Ross has spent his entire lifetime in the western part of this country and Canada and knew from early boyhood the hardships of pioneering. He was born in Minneapolis, Minnesota, March 17, 1880, the youngest of a family of eight children, and was but four years old when his father, who was a physician, moved the family out on the frontier of Western Canada, settling at Calgary in 1884. Dr. Ross had been there but a year when death overtook him and he left a widow and a family of fatherless children in straightened circumstances. Mr. Ross' father was a native of Maine, but on his mother's side he has native Scotch blood. Mrs. Ross was before her marriage Jessie McIntosh, and she came with her parents from Scotland to Ontario, Canada, when a child. Her death occurred in 1903.

At the time that Mr. Ross was taken as a small child to Calgary the country was wild and unsettled and he was the first white child and the only one for many miles around. He attended the schools of northwest Canada until his sixteenth year and at that age started out with a capital of thirty cents to make his way in the world. He was a youth full of pluck and energy, however, and nothing daunted, determined to make a success of his career. He first apprenticed himself to learn the printer's trade, Thomas Braden, proprietor of the Calgary Tribune being the man who gave him the opportunity to do this. So competent and valuable an assistant did he prove himself to be that Mr. Braden retained him in his employ after he had thoroughly mastered the printer's art in all its departments for nine years.

In 1897 Mr. Ross decided to abandon printing for other pursuits, however, and in that year he went to Boston and secured employment as a barber, and having learned that trade he came to Butte in 1901. After working five months as an employe he established his various shops here, as previously stated, and subsequently sold them to engage in his present real estate business, and in which he has achieved much success.

On January 23, 1912, he became secretary and treasurer of the Montana Orchard Land Company, and in February, 1912, he became associated with Nicholas H. Gramling in the organization of the Montana-Wyoming Land Company, of which he is half owner. This concern, while but recently organized, has had a remarkably successful career.

Mr. Ross was married in Butte, Montana, September 22, 1903, to Miss Mary Jones, a native of Bevier, Missouri. This union has been blessed in the birth of two children, Robert Wesley born December 2, 1905; and Lee Wayne, born November 10, 1909.

In civic affairs and all that has to do with the progress and development of Butte and this section of the northwest, Mr. Ross is vitally interested and an influential factor. He is a man of independent thought and action, liberal in his views, and is held in high esteem by all who have the pleasure of his acquaintance.

WELLESLEY CONSTANTINE MESSIAS. A man who for the past ten years has been prominently identified with the upbuilding of Butte, Montana, and is now connected with the most influential financial interests not only of this city but of the state of Montana is Mr. Wellesley Constantine Messias, well known as chief clerk of the Clark interests of which Senator Clark is owner. Mr. Messias has had a most interesting career and been connected at various times with enterprises of first importance and world fame, while his experience in unusual lines has given him a breadth of knowledge rarely equalled.

Mr. Messias was born in Jamacia, British West Indies, February 9, 1859, and grew to manhood at that place. His early ancestors were of English stock, but the family went to Jamacia in the early days of the preceding century and remained there continuously, becoming one of the influential factors in the life of that interesting island. Mr. Messias' father, John Thomas Messias, was a native of Jamacia and lived there throughout his entire life, his death occurring in 1886, when he was seventy-nine years of age. The position which he filled during his life was that of registrar in the cathedral at Spanishtown, Jamaica. The mother of our subject, also a native of the island, died the same year as her husband when sixty-two years old. They were the parents of seven children.

The advantages enjoyed by Mr. Messias in youth in Jamaica were not such as are available to the people of the present day, for then there were no public schools to attend, and he acquired his education under private tuition. He proved to be a diligent student, however, and secured a fund of knowledge that has enabled him to fill a prominent place in the community and important positions in the business world. In 1884 Mr. Messias left his homeland and went to the Isthmus of Panama, where for fourteen years he maintained his residence. During that long period he worked first under the French government as a time keeper on one of the dredges which was working in the heart of the forest in an effort to construct the Panama canal. At that time work was being prosecuted in the swamps about five miles from the site of the Atlantic Coast terminal and conditions were decidedly unpleasant and life surrounded with great hardship. Mr. Messias was accordingly gratified when he was able to leave that work to accept a position in the freight department of the Panama Railroad Company, which he filled for fourteen years.

In 1901 he left the Panama country and came direct to Butte and has been a resident of this city continuously ever since that date. Upon his arrival here he accepted a position with the Butte Gas Company, leaving that to connect himself with the Henningsen Produce Company, and later became bookkeeper of the Montana Cash Grocery. An opening with the Clark interests presenting itself, Mr. Messias seized the opportunity to improve his condition and soon worked up from junior clerk in the office to the top as chief clerk, that being the position he now so ably fills.

On January 22, 1884, in Jamaica, occurred the marriage of Mr. Messias and Ada Sophia Feurtado, whose parents, Septimus and Rebecca Feurtado, were also natives of the island, her father having been chairman of the parochial board of St. Catherine there. They were originally of English stock and people of fine blood. Mr. and Mrs. Messias have two daughters. The elder, Laurie Hyacinth, is a woman of fine business ability and has for eight years been a stenographer in the office of Senator Clark, now being head of the stenographic force. Ivy Beatrice is also a talented stenographer, in the employ of Professor Spencer D. Kelly, principal of the Butte high school. The Messias family enjoys the highest standing in social circles of the city and their home is one of the most charming and hospital in Butte.

Mr. Messias is one of the most prominent religious workers of this city and he has connection with various organizations under direction of the church which give him national repute in this respect. He is a devout communicant and vestryman of St. John's Episcopal church, and is superintendent of St. John's Sunday-school, a member of the standing committee of the Diocese of Montana, and the national council member of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew for Montana. Other organizations of which he is a member are the Ancient Order of Shepherds and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Mr. Messias is a man of strong and interesting personality and enjoys the highest respect of the entire community.

WILLIAM J. GALAHAN. After a period of twenty-eight years of activity in the ranching business, preceded by mercantile experience covering a number of years, Mr. Galahan, in the year of 1901, severed his connection with the ranch business and engaged in the sale of implements and feed—a trade which has occupied him since then up to the present time. He has had a wide and varied experience in his life thus far, and has seen the seamy side of existence as well as the more favorable aspect. He has always been on friendly and intimate relations with hard work, and knows the value of a dollar perhaps as well as any man who might be found. Possessing all the characteristics that go to make a model citizen, Mr. Galahan has ever been active in the interests of whatever community he has been identified with, and has given worthy service in many lines of civic activity.

William J. Galahan was born in New York City, on December 23, 1843, and is the son of Thomas and Ellen (Stokesberry) Galahan. The father was born in Ireland, and came to America as a small boy, settling first in Pennsylvania with his family and later in New York. In subsequent years he became a resident of Kansas, which state was his last home. He was a veteran of the Mexican war, serving throughout with much distinction and credit. Both he and his wife died in Kansas, after long lives of usefulness, and are there buried. They became the parents of seven children, William being the second born. He attended the public schools of Oneida county, New York, his parents having removed from New York City to Oneida county when he was six years of age. There they settled on a farm, and he divided his time between the farm and school duties until he reached the age of thirteen, when the family moved to Kansas. He continued in public school attendance there until he was in his eighteenth year, when he began clerking in a store in his home town. He received a salary of $15 monthly for the first while, but was gradually advanced, and he remained with the firm until his removal to the west in 1862. He began his western life by going into the freighting business, plying between the Missouri river and Denver, using ox teams as a mode of conveyance. He followed the work for two years between these points, then began freighting between Denver and Salt Lake, in which he continued for a season. He then transferred his activities in that line to the route between Salt Lake and Virginia City, continuing therein for another season, after which he disposed of his freighting outfit, and having saved something from his business in the past three years, opened a dry goods store at Nevada, a small mining camp near Virginia City. For two years he carried on a thriving trade in dry goods and clothing, then moved his stock to another small mining town in Madison county, by the name of Rochester. When the mines closed down some time later he sold out his stock and moved on a ranch located in Madison county, on Wisconsin creek. For a period of twenty-eight consecutive years he devoted his time to the ranch business, following stock-raising and general farming until in the fall of 1901 he removed to Twin Bridges and opened an establishment for the sale of implements and feed, a business which has claimed his attention ever since, and which, under his watchful care and management, has come to be one of the most thriving and lucrative in the county.

Mr. Galahan is prominent in Twin Bridges socially and in a business way. He is a member of the Masonic order, and has filled all chairs in the blue lodge, of which he has been treasurer since 1900. He is a member of the Order of the Eastern Star, as is also his wife. He is a Republican of solid conviction, but takes no active part in the political affairs of the county. He has served as a member on the board of aldermen, and while he has been solicited to stand for various other offices of honor and importance, he has always declined to do so. He is, and always has been, keenly interested in matters pertaining to the educational conditions of the district wherein he lives, and while living on his ranch was clerk of the school board for many years. He is a member of the Pioneer Society of Montana.

In 1865 Mr. Galahan was married at Salt Lake, Utah, to Miss Isabella R. Tarbet, a native of Scotland. They became the parents of a family of thirteen children, eight boys and five girls, of which number but six are living today. They are: John C., who is married and lives at Absorokee, Montana; George B., living with his family at Twin Bridges; Amos A., also married, and living on a ranch near Twin Bridges, as do also Harrison and Walter; Rosella, the only living daughter, is married to Clark Kempf and lives in the home town.

DUNCAN S. MACKENZIE, M. D. The city of Havre has never had a more efficient and popular mayor than the present incumbent, Dr. Mackenzie, who is now serving his second term. The doctor is a very successful physician, and since locating here a few years ago has gained a very influential position in this portion of the state.

Dr. Mackenzie was born at Wabasha, Minnesota, May 3, 1879, a son of D. M. and Annie (Campbell) Mackenzie. His father, who was a native of Perth, Ontario, came to Minnesota in 1850, and is now living at Havre at the advanced age of seventy-six years. He was among the earliest settlers of Minnesota, was there during the Indian wars in which he took part, and his home was burned by the Indians during one of their raids. The mother died at Wabasha, Minnesota, in 1906, aged sixty-six years.

D. S. Mackenzie, after his graduation from the high school of his native town, decided upon a career in the medical profession, and spent two years at the University of Minnesota in preparatory academic work. His professional studies were continued in the Rush Medical College of Chicago, where he was graduated with the degree of M. D. in 1901. He then located in Havre, and with Dr. Almos as partner was soon busied with a large and profitable practice. His personality and high standing in the community led to his election as chief executive of the city, and at the close of his first two years' term (April 1, 1912), he was reelected. He is a Republican and as such, was elected as the first state senator from Hill county in November, 1912.

Dr. Mackenzie is a director in the Northern Montana Telephone Company, and has many other interests that attach him to the state of his adoption. He is a Republican, a member of the Presbyterian church, and fraternally affiliates with the Masons, the Mystic Shrine, the Elks and Woodmen of the World.

Dr. Mackenzie married, in July, 1902, Miss Laura Eggers, and they are the parents of two children: Joseph C. who is in school and Janet M.

KENNETH CHRISTIE. Conspicuous among the rising young business men of Butte is Kenneth Christie, a man of sterling worth and character, who began life for himself, poor in pocket, but rich in energy and ambition, and through his own exertions has steadily and surely climbed the ladder of attainments, being now president of the Montana Transfer Company, one of the most busy and essential industrial organizations of the city. A son of Hugh S. Christie, he was born, December 18, 1882, in Ontario, Canada, of substantial Scotch lineage. His paternal grandparents, Simeon and Margaret Mary Christie, were born and reared in Scotland. Immigrating to America, they settled on a farm in Canada, and there spent their remaining days.

Hugh S. Christie was born in Canada, in 1843, and is still a resident of Martintown, Ontario, where he is living retired from agricultural pursuits, enjoying the fruits of his earlier years of toil. He married Annie McIntosh, who was born in Canada, a daughter of Finley McIntosh, a farmer who emigrated from Scotland to Canada, settling on a farm. She died November 24, 1910, on the home farm, in Canada, aged sixty-seven years, leaving six sons, as follows: Simeon W., a farmer, still lives in Canada; Dr. Finley J., of Minot, North Dakota; Dr. Herbert H., of Esterhazy, Saskatchewan; David E., a farmer in Stetler, Canada; Kenneth; and Fred G., secretary and treasurer of the Montana Transfer Company.

Receiving excellent educational advantages in his Canadian home, Kenneth was graduated from the Martintown High school with the class of 1898. Beginning life then as a wage-earner, he worked as a dairyman and farm hand for awhile in Canada. Coming then to the States in search of more remunerative employment, Mr. Christie located, in 1901, in Butte, Montana, where for four years he was variously employed. In 1905, perceiving the need of a business similar to the one in which he is now engaged, he embarked in draying and transferring on a very modest scale. Having no capital with which to start in such an undertaking, Mr. Christie for awhile hired teams whenever he found a job of hauling or transferring. Attentive to his business, and prompt in the execution of his orders, he soon built up an extensive patronage, and as his business increased he wisely invested his accumulations of money in teams, and needed equipments, having now seven fine teams of his own, and keeping a number of men constantly employed. In 1909 Mr. Christie had the business incorporated under its present name, The Montana Transfer Company, of which he is president and general manager. In 1910 the corporation purchased the business of the Citizens' Coal Co., dealers in coal and builder's material, which has been added to their original business.

Mr. Christie is both prominent and popular in the business and social circles of the city, and is a member of both the Silver Bow Club and the Country Club. He is an expert horseman, and fond of outdoor recreation. He is a straightforward Republican in politics, and a member of the Presbyterian church.

EDWIN C. CARRUTH. During a residence of nearly twelve years in the state of Montana, Edwin C. Carruth of Havre has taken a prominent part in affairs as a newspaper man, as a business builder, and a leader in civic enterprise. He was born in Lake City, Minnesota, the 7th of May, 1866, and since he was nine years old has been self-supporting, helped his own family, and in his later prosperity has done much for the communities of which he has been a resident. His father was Virgil D. Carruth, an honored soldier of the Civil war and whose body now rests at Arlington, Virginia. He was born in New York state and died at the age of seventy. He entered the army as a member of the Forty-fourth New York and was subsequently with the One Hundred and Forty-fourth regiment of that state. The father was in all the Potomac campaigns, in the battles of the Wilderness and at Bull Run, and many other engagements. At his first enlistment he served three years, and then reenlisted, his total service being four years and six months. Throughout most of his civil career he was identified with teaching as a profession, and for a quarter of a century was superintendent of schools in Polk county, Minnesota. He married Julia E. Cooley, a native of New York state and still a resident of that state, and they were the parents of two sons and two daughters.

Edwin C. Carruth had the advantages of the public schools at Crookston, Minnesota, until he was nine years old, and then became general utility boy with the merchandise firm of Fontaine & Anglim at Crookston. His wages at the beginning were ten dollars a month, and he remained with the firm for ten years, winning promotion to larger responsibilities and laying the foundation of a substantial business career. On leaving that firm he became associated with W. E. McKenzie in the management of the Crookston Times, and was identified with journalism for the next fifteen years or more. During his youthful days in Crookston, roller-skating became a popular amusement throughout the nation, and taking up this fascinating art Mr. Carruth soon developed into one of the experts and had no superiors anywhere. He won medals for his skill at Crookston, Fargo, Winnipeg, Minneapolis and Fergus Falls, and during 1884-85 held the championship of the entire northwest in this sport. His record of one hundred miles in six hours, fifteen minutes and six seconds has never been equalled on roller skates.

After six years, in 1893, he and Mr. McKenzie bought the Plain Dealer at Grand Forks, South Dakota, and he continued in the business there until 1901, when they sold the paper. During his residence in Crookston, Mr. Carruth served as city clerk, and has always taken an active part in public affairs. In 1901, on moving to Montana, Mr. Carruth became manager for E. V. Hausers' Havre Hotel, which was destroyed by fire in 1904. About that time Mr. Carruth was granted a franchise by the city for the construction of a telephone system, and spent most of the year in building up the independent telephone business in this city. In 1904, in partnership with F. A. Carnal, he established the real estate and insurance firm of Carnal & Carruth. In the fall of 1906, on his election as county attorney for Chouteau county, Mr. Carnal withdrew, and the business has since been conducted under Mr. Carruth's name. Another of his local enterprises was the construction of the New Havre Hotel, which was opened in March, 1905. He is owner of ninety per cent of the stock in the Havre Hotel Company, which is the corporation owning this hotel.

Mr. Carruth is one of the Democratic leaders in northern Montana. He was secretary of the North Dakota state central committee from 1896 to 1902. At Havre he has been clerk of his school district for the past four years. In the division of Chouteau county, and for the last two years, Mr. Carruth's office has been the headquarters for the county division committee, of which he was secretary and one of the most active members. This work of division required careful management, and the greatest credit for its successful performance was due to James Holland, chairman of the committee. Mr. Carruth was one of the organizers and has since been a member of the Havre Commercial Club. Fraternally he is a member of the Masonic lodge and chapter at Havre, the Knight Templars commandery at Great Falls, and the Elks club, the Knights of Pythias and the Eagles at Havre. His religious connection is with the Presbyterian church. He is fond of outdoor life, especially duck shooting, but through an exceedingly busy career he has retained his best affections for his home circle. He has never used tobacco or liquor.

On September 8, 1888, Mr. Carruth married Miss Emily A. McKenzie, who died at Grand Forks, July 22, 1902, and is buried at Crookston. His second marriage occurred in Helena, Montana, January 19, 1907, when Ethel Dewar became his wife. She is a native of Crookston, Minnesota. To this marriage one daughter was born, February 17, 1911, her name being Ethel Cooley Carruth.

HARRY L. WILSON, junior member of the firm of Nichols & Wilson, attorneys and counsellors at law of Billings, whose professional ability has contributed a due quota to the precedence of the firm, was born at Lanark, Carroll county, Illinois, June 19, 1879, and is a son of Frank J. and Cordelia (Miller) Wilson.

Frank J. Wilson was born near Scranton, Pennsylvania, in 1853, and was educated in his native state and in Illinois. As a young man he gave his attention to the profession of teaching, but later he entered the paint and oil business, and until 1880 was the proprietor of an establishment at Lanark, Illinois. In that year he removed to Iowa, and for five years was engaged in farming in Tama county, but subsequently removed to Jewell county, Kansas, where he was for some years engaged in farming and house-painting. In April, 1894, Mr. Wilson removed to Miles City, Montana, where he met his death in a runaway accident October 27, 1903. He was married September 20, 1878, in Lanark, Illinois, to Miss Cordelia Miller, a native of that state, who was born in 1857, and now resides at Long Beach, California, as do two of their children. Harry L. is the elder.

Frank J. Wilson was a Democrat in his political views, and while in Jewell county, Kansas, held the office of assessor. At the time of his death he was serving his second term as a member of the city council of Miles City. He also held official position in the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and was a well-known and prominent citizen. We are allowed to quote from an article published in the Yellowstone Journal, of Miles City, which appeared at the time of Mr. Wilson's death: "In the taking away of Frank J. Wilson this community suffers a greater loss than it may be aware of. The death of a good citizen is always a loss to the community in which he lives, but when we lose a good citizen who has taken up a part of the burden of public cares, and has brought to the performance of this task a fund of good judgment backed by inborn honesty of purpose and determination to countenance nothing but what is right, the removal of such a public servant from his sphere of usefulness by the cold hand of death increases the weight of the calamity and brings a sense of deep and irreparable loss to all who knew the man. It was the good fortune of the writer to have enjoyed in late years the close friendship of Mr. Wilson and to have had the opportunity to judge him both as a man and as a public official during that period. As he was not effusive in his friendships, it is probable that there are not many people here who knew him intimately. To all such it can be honestly said that both in public and private life his one aim was to do what his judgment commended as being right, and if the evolution of events should ever disclose that he was in error, no one could be more prompt or more honest in confessing the error and adopting the right view. But it was rarely that this came about, for his judgment seldom played him false and his deductions of a matter of public import, after due consideration, were well worthy of adoption. It is therefore with the most poignant regret that the little circle formed by the city council, of which the victim of yesterday's terrible accident was a conspicuous member, will regard this sudden taking away, mourning no less his genial companionship and sustaining friendship than his wise counsel and splendid example to do right as he saw it, though the heavens fell.

"On his private life there was no blemish. As a husband and a father he was a homely ideal of unostentatious devotion, strengthening day by day, and year by year, the bonds of affection that, though now riven, will ever serve to keep the memory of the departed green and sweet with those whom he has left behind.

"Miles City has lost from its citizenship in its brief existence men who have, from one cause or another, been better or more widely known, but never one of greater intrinsic worth as a citizen and a man. He came to us years ago quietly and unostentatiously and thus he grew into our life until something over three years ago the people of his ward chose him unanimously as their representative in the city council, and after two years' service he was again unanimously chosen a year ago, to succeed himself, and had he lived his term of service would have only been ended by his peremptory refusal to accept reelection. In his private business his affairs steadily grew better from the start of some ten years ago, and the full measure of his prosperity was enjoyed by his family whose sustaining prop is now so rudely plucked away. It is a sad pleasure to thus record the virtues of a departed friend, but nevertheless a pleasure, as it is meet and proper that all should know what manner of man he was."

Harry L. Wilson received his preliminary education in the public schools of Tama county, Iowa, and Jewell county, Kansas; graduated from the Miles City High School in 1897, and then entered the law department of the Northern Indiana University, at Valparaiso. After his graduation therefrom, in 1899, he was associated with C. R. Middleton, of Leavenworth, Kansas, for about a year and one-half, and in January, 1901, came to Billings. At this time he entered the law office of O. F. Goddard, as clerk and stenographer, and during the fall of 1904 was elected county attorney of Yellowstone county, in which office he served eminently for three terms. Retiring from the office in January, 1911, he formed a partnership with Judge Edmund Nichols, and returned to the practice of law under the firm name of Nichols & Wilson. Although in practice here for only a comparatively short time, the foundation for an excellent business has been established. Mr. Wilson is a young man of engaging personality, and is recognized as one who will go far in his profession. In political matters he is a Republican and was the gubernatorial nominee of his party at the fall election of 1912.

Mr. Wilson holds membership in Ashlar Lodge No. 29, A. F. & A. M.; Billings Chapter No. 6, R. A. M., and Aldemar Commandery No. 5, K. T.; has been a member of Billings Lodge No. 394, B. P. O. E., of which he has been district deputy one term, and also represented his lodge in the National Grand Lodge on three occasions. He is chairman of the Young Business Men's Committee of the Young Men's Christian Association.

On September 30, 1903, Mr. Wilson was married at Dexter, Illinois, to Miss Virginia Baker, who was born in Effingham county, that state, daughter of Amos W. and Olive (Rippeten) Baker, the former a native of Illinois and the latter of Indiana. Mrs. Wilson's parents now reside at Dexter, where Mr. Baker is a successful merchant and holds the position of postmaster. Mrs. Wilson is the eldest of her parents' five children, of whom four are living. Two daughters have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, namely: Winnifred and Gladys.

ARTHUR J. WILSON is a descendant of John Wilson, of Scotch-Irish descent who came to America just after the close of the Revolutionary war.

He settled in Ohio which was at that time a portion of the great western reserve. His son, E. L. Wilson was born on the land that his father had pre-empted and spent his entire life in cultivating and improving the homestead. Here, in 1881, on the fifth of October, Arthur J. Wilson, the subject of this sketch was born.

His mother, whose maiden name was Elsie Lee, was also a native of Ohio, her people having been among the early colonial settlers of America. Her married life was passed serenely on the Portage county farm that had for so long a time belonged to her people. Her material efforts ended on the third day of March, 1894.

Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Wilson were the parents of three sons and two daughters, Arthur J. being the second of the boys. His early life was spent upon the farm of his ancestors. He helped with the outside work in the summer and attended the district schools in the winter. After completing the school work of the district, he persuaded his parents to permit him to go to Palmyra that he might have the advantage of a high school education. In the class of 1898, he was, therefore graduated from the Palmyra high school. His people felt that they had now done all that was within their means to do for him as the younger children had not yet completed their educations. This did not discourage Arthur Wilson who had determined to obtain an education that should assist him in earning a good living independent of the ancestral farm. By diligent work in the summers and some outside effort during the school year, he was able to complete a course in pharmacy at the Ohio Northern University at Ada, Ohio. He was graduated from this institution with the class of 1901.

In the autumn of that same year he left Ohio for Butte, Montana, where he found employment, without difficulty, in the Finlen and Medlen Drug Company. For five years he served this firm at a very flattering salary. A young man, industrious, devoted to the interests of the house and at the same time a graduate pharmacist was not easily picked up in that western country—nor for the matter of that, in any country. In 1906, the company changed hands and Mr. Wilson accepted a position as manager of the Montana Drug Company. After two years of loyal service to this corporation he decided to establish a business of his own. He had been married since the eighth of January, 1906, his bride being Miss Cecilia O'Brien, daughter of Timothy O'Brien, of Pennsylvania. At this time they were the proud parents of a daughter, Elsie, who had come to them on the January following their marriage. Mr. Wilson was thus extremely anxious to enter into business in his own right that he might give his wife and infant daughter some of the luxuries as well as the comforts of life. He felt, however, that to establish a rival drug company in Butte, after the courtesies he had received at the hands of his employers, might be straining his high ideal of honor.

He moved his little family, then, to Meaderville, where he opened up a small drug store at 37 Main street. His business has been a success from the beginning. Not a month but has brought in a generous return. His honesty and perseverance, united with his untiring efforts seem to have met with their true reward. He owns, now, as well as his drug company and other property in Meaderville, some profitable fruit lands in Washington. His daughter will receive freely those advantages of education which cost her father so dearly in his own youth.

Mr. Wilson is a popular member of the Retail Drug Association but has found no time to devote to other organizations.

GEORGE GORDON MACPHERSON. The phenomenal development of the northwest section of the United States during the past fifteen or twenty years is a circumstance over which the whole country has continuously marveled. Cities modern, up-to-date, progressive have been built where a few years since there was apparently but desert waste, and where not long ago wild buffalo and cattle roamed in immense herds at will are now cultivated farms and thriving villages and communities. A great part of the stimulus which created this almost unbelievable change in so short a time has come from the discovery and development of immensely rich mines of gold, silver and copper, and it is the latter for which the city of Butte is most famous the world over. Mining is still the richest resource of this section of which Butte is the metropolis, but the inrush of population both to the city and the entire surrounding country has made necessary the expansion of business, wholesale and retail, in every avenue of trade, and the opportunities for profitable commerce which this city affords have attracted to it some of the most talented and progressive trade and manufacturing experts of this and other countries.

Ten years ago occurred the advent into Butte of a man whose superior business talents and experience of wide scope made him a valuable addition to the commercial circles of the city. Mr. George Gordon MacPherson, of Toronto, Canada, in which important center he was a leading wholesale and retail shoe dealer. After disposing of his store at Toronto Mr. MacPherson came directly to Butte, arriving here on July 14, 1901. Not wishing to invest immediately in a business of his own here he first entered the employ of Hennessy Company in a responsible position, remaining with that firm for three years, when he resigned to accept an offer to act as traveling representative for a large eastern shoe house, his territory to embrace Montana and Idaho. This gave him an opportunity to become thoroughly familiar with the possibilities of the shoe trade in this part of the country, and with keen perception he saw that Butte offered a splendid opportunity to make it a profitable shoe manufacturing and distributing center for this part of the Northwest. Mr. MacPherson accordingly resigned his position with the eastern house and in 1908 established the Montana Shoe Company, which firm is now a most important factor in the wholesale shoe and leather trade of the state. Under the energetic management of Mr. MacPherson the trade has grown to very large proportions and is rated as one of the most substantial enterprises of its kind in the country. In electing to make the shoe trade his life business Mr. MacPherson did a most natural thing, his father having been a well-known shoe manufacturer and wholesaler for years in Canada, the plant which he established and bears the family name being now in operation under the management of one of the sons, James A. MacPherson, it being the largest factory of the kind in the province of Ontario.

George Gordon MacPherson was born at London, Ontario, March 2, 1867, a son of John and Catherine (Lynch) MacPherson, the former a native of Glenlivet, Scotland, and the latter of Chatham, England. The father left his native land and immigrated to Canada when he was in his twenty-first year. The lady who became his wife had come to Canada with her parents, her father having been a member of one of the first English regiments that were sent to western Canada. After their marriage they settled at London, Ontario, the elder MacPherson being engaged in the wholesale manufacture of shoes in partnership with a Mr. Hyman, the firm operating under the name of Hyman & MacPherson. When the son, George Gordon, was a small child, the family removed to Hamilton, Ontario, where his father's firm had purchased another shoe factory. At a later date the firm was dissolved and Mr. MacPherson became sole owner and operator of the Hamilton plant. The father died January, 1877, at the age of forty-six years, and the mother's demise occurred in 1882, she being fifty-one years old at the time of her death. Of their family of five children, George Gordon was the youngest. He was the fortunate recipient of an unusually fine education. His rudimentary knowledge was secured in the private schools of Hamilton, but he later became a student at St. Lawrence College, Montreal, and was then sent to St. Benedict's College at Fort Augustus, Scotland, for a finishing course. Upon his return to Hamilton, he immediately became associated with his brother in business and remained with the firm of John MacPherson & Company for a number of years. He finally went to Toronto, Canada, to engage in the wholesale and retail shoe business on his own account, and conducted his establishment there with great success for ten years, when he came to Butte.

The marriage of Mr. MacPherson to Miss Elsa Higgins occurred at Toronto, Canada, October 11, 1889. Mrs. MacPherson's family is also of high birth. Her mother, whose maiden name was Emma Keller, was born at Park Hill, Ontario, the daughter of Sir Charles Miller Keller. Her father, William Henry Higgins, was a pioneer journalist of Ontario and for a quarter of a century published the Whitby Chronicle. He was also a celebrated Canadian writer on various subjects and the author of a number of books. Upon his retirement from active work as a journalist he accepted the appointment of inspector of division courts of Ontario. He died in Toronto, Canada, aged seventy-seven years. His wife preceded him to the better land several years, her death occurring when she was fifty-one years old.

Mr. and Mrs. MacPherson have an interesting and talented family of five children, every one of whom gives promise of having brilliant careers. The oldest son, John, was born August 22, 1890, possesses pronounced business abilities and is now associated with his father in trade. Louise, born July 31, 1892, from earliest childhood displayed a liking and talent for music that amounts to genius and is now in Berlin, Germany, completing her musical education there, making a specialty of the piano. The people of Butte are pardonably proud of Miss Louise and gave a practical turn to their admiration and enthusiasm over her talent in this line by raising over $2,000 in testimonial concerts to assist her in securing the best musical education it is possible to procure anywhere in the world. The second son, George, born June, 1893, is taking a college preparatory course at the present time and will later attend law school in furtherance of his ambition to become a legal light. Bruce Alexander, born August, 1895, is a high school student and James Kenneth, the youngest of the family, born March, 1898, attends the public schools of Butte.

The musical talent of the daughter, Louise, is a direct inheritance from her mother, Mrs. MacPherson being one of the most talented pianists of the Northwest. Her gift was developed under the best teachers of the world. She is a gold medal pupil of Dr. Edward Fisher, director of the Toronto Conservatory, famous as the third largest musical conservatory in America. She graduated with high honors from a three years' musical course in Leipzig, enjoying while there instruction under such distinguished teachers as Reinecke, Zwintscher and Teichmueller. Later she took a virtuoso course with Bloomfield-Zeisler, recognized as America's greatest pianist. Mrs. MacPherson makes generous use of her talent and is without peer as a musical educator in Butte, where she has many pupils under her instruction.

The social standing of the MacPherson family in Butte is of the highest and they are active leaders in all affairs bearing the stamp of culture and refinement. They are devout members of the St. Patrick Roman Catholic church and leading factors in the good work of that institution, as well as liberal contributors to the support of its various benefactions.

Mr. MacPherson's citizenship is of the highest character and he is a prime mover in whatever matters are presented that have for their object the best development of the city and state in which he resides. He is a gentleman of broad gauge, liberal and progressive in his ideas and methods and is held in the highest esteem by all.

MACCORMICK SMETTERS, M. D. Actively and successfully engaged in the practice of a profession that is widely and rightfully recognized as one of the more important of the various professions and pursuits to which men may devote their time and energies, MacCormick Smetters, M. D., has attained a position of note among the leading physicians and surgeons of Butte, and stands prominent in the social and fraternal organizations of the city and the county. A native of Illinois, he was born, February 23, 1877, in Morgan county, where he grew to manhood.

His father, the late Michael Smetters, was born in Lancaster, Ohio, March 18, 1827. Subsequently moving to Illinois, he bought land, and on the farm which he improved, in Morgan county, spent the remainder of his life, passing away February 13, 1883. His wife, whose maiden name was Nancy MacCormick, was born at Bowling Green, Kentucky, but when a year old was taken to Illinois by her parents, who settled on a farm near Waverly, Morgan county. Acquiring his elementary education in Waverly, Illinois, MacCormick Smetters was graduated from its high school with the class of 1894, and two years following he took partial course at the University of Illinois. Having by that time formulated plans for his future career, he subsequently entered the Rush Medical College, in Chicago, and having completed the course of study in that institution received the degree of M. D. in 1900. Dr. Smetters then spent a short time as house physician and surgeon in the Cook County Hospital, where he gained both knowledge and experience. Deciding to begin practice for himself in the west, the Doctor came from Chicago to Montana in 1901, locating at the Hunters Hot Springs, Montana, where he remained a year. In the autumn of 1902 the Doctor came to Butte, and through his professional skill has gained the confidence of the people to a successful degree, and in addition to having built up a large and lucrative practice in this city has gained an enviable reputation as one of the most skilful and faithful physicians of this section of Silver Bow county.

SAMUEL MOTT SOUDERS, M. D. The physician of today must be a man of education, carefully trained, experienced in all branches and many times skilled in certain lines. His is a profession that admits of no stand-still methods, but he must always push onward and upward, constantly studying and keeping abreast of latest discoveries in scientific matters. Dr. Samuel Mott Souders of Red Lodge, is one of the most efficient and popular physicians in Carbon county, and his position in his profession has been honestly earned by efficiency and careful training. He was born in Dayton, Ohio, May 5, 1873, and is a son of Samuel and Jennie (O'Neil) Souders.

Samuel Souders was born near Zanesville, Ohio, in September, 1826, graduated from Bellevue Hospital College, New York, and first located in medical practice in Dayton, Ohio, where he was one of the pioneer members of his profession. CHESTER M. HARRIS and JOHN H. HARRIS. Active, enterprising, and wide-awake business men of Great Falls, Montana, Chester M. Harris and John H. Harris are among the leading plumbers of the city, and are carrying on a prosperous business under the firm name of Harris Brothers, Plumbing and Heating Company.

Their father, the late Henry Harris, a life-long resident of Ontario, Canada, was an extensive and successful agriculturist, at the time of his death, in 1893, when but forty-eight years of age, having been one of the wealthy agriculturists of his community. He married Miriam Stark, who was born in England, came to America with her parents when a child, locating in Ontario. She survived her husband, and is now living in Great Falls, with her sons.

J. M. Souders.

Chester M. Harris was born on the home farm, in Ontario, Canada, October 15, 1883, and was there educated in the public schools. He then spent three years as an apprentice at the plumber's trade, which he followed in Canada until 1901. Coming in that year to Montana, he worked for a year in Great Falls, and was afterwards employed at the Western Iron Works, in Butte, until 1907. Returning to Great Falls, he started in business for himself as a plumber, continuing alone until 1910, when he admitted to partnership his brother John, with whom he is now associated under the firm name of Harris Brothers. This firm has acquired a good reputation for satisfactory and durable work, its plumbing and heating establishment being one of the best in the city, and one of the most liberally patronized by those needing the services of an expert plumber. Mr. Harris has been successful in his career, and has accumulated considerable property, owning much valuable real estate in Great Falls, a city in whose future he has great faith.

Harris married, September 29, 1903, Edith Branston, and they are the parents of two children, namely: Chester Marcus, born in Butte, Montana, December 29, 1906; and Karl William, born at Great Falls, February 11, 1908. Politically Mr. Harris is independent, voting for the best men and measures. Fraternally he belongs to the Woodmen of the World and to the Elks of Great Falls. Religiously both he and his wife are members of the Episcopal church.

Born in Ontario, Canada, April 11, 1876, John H. Harris was educated in the public schools of London, Ontario. After completing his studies, he learned the trade of a plumber, and subsequently served an apprenticeship of three years at the plumber's trade, after which he continued with his employers for nine years. Leaving Canada in 1898, he came to Montana, and the ensuing three years followed his trade at Butte. Locating at Great Falls in 1901, he continued here as a plumber until 1907, when he returned to Butte, where he remained for three years. Coming back in 1910, he took stock in the business which his brother had previously established, and has since been a member of the firm of Harris Brothers, which is carrying on a highly satisfactory plumbing and heating business, as mentioned above.

Mr. John H. Harris married, September 21, 1901, Margaret Murphy, their union being solemnized at Great Falls, and they have two children, namely: John Henry, born March 10, 1905; and Margaret Genevieve, born June 10, 1911. Both children were born at Great Falls. Mr. Harris is also independent in politics, invariably casting his vote for the men he deems best fitted for the office, regardless of party restrictions. Fraternally he is a member of the Knights of Pythias and the Elks, and of the Woodmen of the World. Religiously he is a member of the Episcopal church.

W. FREDERICK PATERSON, M. D. Montana is well favored in the number of vigorous and energetic young men enlisted in the professional ranks of the state and the personnel of the medical branch shows a marked strength in ability and character. Dr. W. Frederick Paterson is a progressive representative of this profession in a progressive state and by his success has established himself as one of the leading physicians in the thriving city of Belt.

Dr. Paterson was born in the city of Montreal, Canada, on December 22, 1875, a direct descendant of sturdy Scotch ancestry, being of the first generation of the family born on Canadian soil. Robert M. Paterson, the father of Dr. Paterson, was a native of Scotland and at the age of nine years immigrated to America with his parents, William Waddell Paterson and wife, who became early settlers at Windsor Mills, Quebec, Canada. There Robert M. Paterson grew to manhood and mastered his father's trade, that of a stone mason, later making practical use of his knowledge of that occupation as inspector of stone masonry for the Canadian Pacific Railway Company. It was while engaged in that service that he met an accidental death on July 4, 1896 by falling from a bridge. His wife was Margaret Mackie, through whom Dr. Paterson inherits another strain of staunch Scotch blood, she, like her husband, having owed her nativity to Scotland. At the age of seven she came to this country with her parents who settled at Hardwood Hill, near Windsor Mills, Quebec, Canada, where her father took up his former occupation as an agriculturist. She too has passed to life eternal, her death having occurred at the age of sixty-three years. Robert M. and Margaret (Mackie) Paterson were the parents of five children, of whom Dr. Paterson is the eldest.

Educated first in the public schools of Ontario, he subsequently became a student at St. Francis College, Richmond, Quebec and later matriculated at McGill University where he was graduated from the liberal arts department as a Bachelor of Arts. Following that he took up the study of medicine in the same university and was graduated from the medical department in 1900 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. For further practical experience he then became an interne in the Montreal General Hospital where he remained six months. In 1901 he came to Belt, Montana, to begin the practice of his profession, becoming associated first with Dr. C. E. K. Vidal, with whom he practiced seven years. Since 1908 his associate has been Dr. A. M. Macauley. Engaging in a general practice, he was successful from the first and now enjoys a representative clientele, his offices being in the State Bank building. During 1910 and 1911 he was city health officer of Belt and in a business way is connected with the New Drug Company of that city as a member of the firm. In line with his professional interests he sustains membership in the Canadian Medical Association.

On August 26, 1908 at Owatonna, Minnesota, was solemnized the marriage of Dr. Paterson and Miss Eva H. L. Malmo. Mrs. Paterson is the daughter of Ludwig, Malmo, a native of St. Peter, Minnesota, but of German descent. Dr. and Mrs. Paterson have two children: Jean Margaret Paterson, born December 28, 1909 at Belt, Montana, and Robert Malmo Paterson, born at the same place on the 6th of August, 1911.

The fraternal associations of Dr. Paterson are with the Masonic Order at Great Falls and with Cascade Lodge No. 34, Knights of Pythias at Belt, and he officiates as physician for the latter order. He is a communicant of the Episcopal church at Belt, in the work of which he takes an active part, being treasurer of the church and a member of the vestry committee. As a citizen he is public-spirited and progressive and evinces an active interest in promoting the development of his city and state through his membership in the Belt Commercial Club. Dr. Paterson is a man of courteous deportment and correct habits whose character and acquirements have elevated him to a high standing among the citizens of Belt and make him well worthy of recognition as one of the representative men of Montana.

JAMES H. IRWIN, M. D. In choosing among the professions for one to follow as their life work, many young men decide upon that of medicine as the most promising. In this, the one among all the learned professions that makes the greatest demands upon its followers, not all have the necessary qualifications, without which even the most thorough technical training cannot insure success. Others there are, however, who are eminently fitted for the great work of alleviating the ills of mankind, both by nature and schooling, and Montana has its full quota of successful physicians and surgeons. One who has chosen the city of Great Falls as his field of practice, and who has met with pleasing success in his vocation, is Dr. James H. Irwin, maintaining offices in the Conrad Bank building. He is a native of Donovan, Illinois, where he was born July 11, 1876, a son of Dr. Oliver H. and Laura (Ayers) Irwin, natives of Indiana. The founders of the Irwin family in America came to this country at an early day from Scotland, and from them Dr. Oliver H. Irwin inherited traits of honesty, integrity and sobriety that enabled him to become successful in his profession and to gain and retain the esteem and respect of his fellow men. In about the year 1875 he moved from Indiana to Illinois, and in later life went to Elk City, Oklahoma, where his death occurred. His wife, who died in 1907, while on a train near Silverton, Colorado, was buried by her husband's side in Elk City.

James H. Irwin received his early education in the public schools of Donovan, Illinois, and having inherited ability and disposition from his father decided to become a physician. He was accordingly given excellent educational advantages by his parents, who sent him first to the high school at Sheldon, Illinois, and after his graduation there to Eureka College. After a preparatory course of study he then entered Rush Medical College, Chicago, and was graduated from that noted institution in 1899 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, subsequently serving an internship of two years in the Presbyterian Hospital in that city. Dr. Irwin commenced practice at Havre, Montana, in June, 1901, and continued there until May 23, 1903, when he came to Great Falls. Forming a professional partnership with F. J. Adams, he has continued to devote himself to the practice of medicine and surgery, and has become recognized as one of the able and efficient professional men of his adopted city. He is one of the physicians for the Boston & Montana Smelter Company, for the Chicago Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad, as well as for a number of the leading insurance companies, and is connected with the Cascade County Medical Society, the Montana State Medical Society and the American Medical Association; is a valued member of the Eagles, the Odd Fellows, the Woodmen of the World, the Elks and the Foresters, and holds membership also in the Electric City Club. The family attends the Congregational church. In political matters Dr. Irwin is a Republican, but has taken no active part in public affairs. The pleasant family residence is situated at No. 1416 Third avenue, North.

On February 17, 1903, Dr. Irwin was married to Miss Anna Barrett, and two children have been born to this union: Elizabeth Ann, born May 30, 1906; and James Barrett, born February 19, 1908, both in Great Falls.

HOWARD G. BENNET. Few laymen realize what strain of mind and body, what toil, what wealth of experience, zeal, watchfulness, knowledge and supremacy of skill and talent are necessary for the successful practice of law. In these modern days of specializing, many of the leading practitioners are giving their entire attention to one branch of the profession, finding that they thus achieve greater prestige and secure better results than if their energies were devoted to a general practice. In this connection may be mentioned Howard G. Bennet, of the firm of Berry & Bennet, of Great Falls, specialists in probate and mining law. Mr. Bennet has been a resident of this city for something more than ten years, and during this time has been identified with professional, business and social matters, attaining a reputation as an advocate of good citizenship and public morality. He was born at Port Jervis, Orange county, New York, February 23, 1875, and is a son of Galen and Elizabeth (Conklin) Bennet, and comes of a family that has been prominent in various walks of life. The Bennet family is traced back in this country to the year 1668, when one James Bennet came from England and settled in the American colonies, where he had been given a land grant by the king. Later members of the family participated in the Revolution and the War of 1812, and a grand-uncle of Howard G. Bennet, Ben Bennet, was killed during the struggle for independence. His grandfather, James Bennet, was at one time a member of the United States legislature from New York state. On the maternal side, Mr. Bennet's ancestors came from England and settled in New York about the early part of the seventeenth century, and members thereof also fought with the American troops during the Wars of the Revolution and 1812. His grandfather, Dr. John Conkling, was during his day a large holder of real estate, and was prominent in professional and public affairs. During the Civil war several of Mr. Bennet's uncles served in the Union army, and his father was drafted but was not compelled to go to the front. Mr. Bennet's first cousin, William S. Bennet, late candidate for governor of New York, is now representing the twenty-first congressional district of New York.

Galen Bennet, father of Howard G., was born at Port Jervis, New York, in March, 1838, and died there in June, 1911. He had various large interests of a business nature, being a successful merchant and manufacturer, and well known in Port Jervis. His wife was born at Port Jervis, February 14, 1837, and died March 3, 1890, in that city, having been the mother of five children, of whom Howard G. was the fourth in order of birth.

Howard G. Bennet attended the public and high schools of Port Jervis, being graduated from the latter with the class of 1893, and next entered the University of New York, where he received the degrees of LL. B. and B. A., and graduated in 1896. At that time he began practice at Port Jervis, where he continued to reside until 1901, which year saw his advent in Montana. He took up his residence in Great Falls in August, 1901, and for three years was connected with the Boston & Montana Smelting Company, subsequently becoming deputy assessor of Cascade county, a position which he held for two years. A partnership was then formed with Judge R. W. Berry, the firm being known as Berry & Bennet and has gained a wide reputation as specialist in probate law, Mr. Berry making a specialty of mining law. An active and influential Republican, Mr. Bennet has taken an active interest in national, state and local politics. He is secretary of the Reid Mining and Smelting Company, Great Falls, and a director in the Tenderfoot Copper Mining Company. Fraternally he is connected with the Odd Fellows, the Elks and the Eagles, is past president of the latter order. He is also ex-president of the Great Falls Athletic Association, a member of the University Club and the County Bar Association, and an attendant of the Congregational church. He maintains a handsome residence at 313 Third avenue, north, on Park drive.

On November 22, 1905, Mr. Bennet was married at Collins, Montana, to Miss Bessie Balstad, daughter of Ole and Betsy Balstad, natives of Norway, and they have one daughter: Elizabeth, born February 19, 1909.

GEORGE R. MARSH. The manager of the Lewistown Furniture Company, owned by Mr. Geo. M. Stone and Mr. Marsh, was born on September 25, 1881, in the town of Verdon, Nebraska. There were four children in the family to which he belongs and he is the youngest. The father, William S. Marsh, is a native of the Badger state, where he was born February 11,

August E. Jansen

1845. He entered the Union army during the Civil war and became an officer in the Fifth Missouri Cavalry. At the close of the war he resumed his farming and now resides at Verdon, Nebraska, with his wife, Lillian Calvert Marsh.

George Marsh attended the public schools and devoted himself first to securing an education. The first money he earned was spent for books. This was when he was but ten years old and was working, for seventy-five cents a day riding a lead team on a binder in the wheat fields of Nebraska. When he completed the work in the public school Mr. Marsh studied at the State Normal of Nebraska, in Peru, and then for a year pursued a business course in a commercial school in Lincoln. He gave three years to the profession of teaching in Nebraska, but decided that it did not offer sufficient field for initiative nor rewards for executive ability so he turned his attention to commercial lines. In June, 1901, Mr. Marsh came to Montana and settled in Billings, where he worked in a furniture store. He next accepted a position with the Northern Pacific Railroad, beginning in their machine shops at Livingston. He was transferred to the storekeeper's department and then to the general offices, as his organizing ability won him rapid promotion. From the general offices, he was sent to Lombard as chief clerk in the superintendent's office, from where he came to the city of Lewistown, the end of the branch railroad. A short time after his arrival in the city the Lewistown Furniture Company was organized and Mr. Marsh became one of the company. The concern started in a modest way, but has gradually added new departments until now it is one of the large establishments of the Basin. For the past five years, Mr. Marsh has been the manager and has directed the policy of the house. The enlargement of the business and its flourishing condition are due in no small part to Mr. Marsh's acumen and sagacity.

Mr. Marsh's genius for organization is recognized by the Progressive party and turned to the furthering of the party's influence. He was a delegate to the national convention of the Progressive party at Chicago in 1912. Though active in its councils, Mr. Marsh is not an office seeker. He has never been persuaded to accept any position within the gift of the faction and has no ambition for such a post. He is merely interested in politics for its own sake. Of the fraternal orders, he belongs to only one, the Masonic lodge. He is a member of the Judith club and of the National Guard of Montana. Walking is one of his favorite methods of exercise, and he is good for a long cross-country jaunt at a business-like gait. He is a member of the Methodist church, as is Mrs. Marsh too, and he is an active member, as he is prone to be in anything to which he belongs.

Mrs. Marsh was born in Montana in the Powder river country. Here her father, Andrew J. Collins, has extensive interests in the stock industry. The marriage of George Marsh and Emma Collins took place at Grand Island, Nebraska, on June, 1903. Their two sons, Andrew and Wilford Marsh, are now in school in Lewistown. Though not long a resident of Lewistown, Mr. Marsh has made a place for himself in the commercial life of the town and he is one of the younger men whom the veterans in the business world of Lewistown count upon to maintain the high standing of the district as a region of great and substantial prosperity.

HON. J. FRANK ALSAUGH. It has been frequently demonstrated that the ability which is developed in an active business life, in large commercial transactions, and the rapid changes of trade and finance, have proved extremely valuable in the management of the affairs of a community. The accomplished merchant, with years of experience behind him, and having learned to take a plain, commonsense view of matters of municipal importance, is able to render signal service to his city in official capacities, and there has been no exception to this rule in the career of J. Frank Alspaugh, prominent business man and mayor of Livingston, Montana. He was born at Greencastle, Putnam county, Indiana, September 15, 1877, and is a son of Christian I. and Ellen (Woodfield) Alspaugh.

Christian I. Alspaugh was born in Putnam county, Indiana, August 31, 1852, and was there given a good common school education and graduated from the high school. Subsequently he learned the trade of harness maker, and after working at the trade for some years, in 1880 established himself in business on his own account at Waveland, where he continued to carry on operations until 1907. In that year he removed to Livingston, Montana, where he still follows the same line of business. Politically a Republican, he has stanchly supported that party's candidates since casting his first vote for U. S. Grant for president. Fraternally he is a thirty-second degree Mason, and he and his wife are earnest members of the Order of the Eastern Star. Mrs. Alspaugh was born on August 28, 1853, and they were married on April 18, 1876, there being three children born to them, namely: J. Frank, Joseph and Jessica.

J. Frank Alspaugh received his education in the public schools of Greencastle and Waveland, Indiana, and his first business venture was in the latter place, where he was proprietor of a clothing establishment until 1901. In that year he came to Livingston, and engaged in the same line under the firm name of Alspaugh & Fraser. He took over Mr. Fraser's part in 1907 and became the proprietor of the Progress Clothing Store, a successful enterprise that is steadily growing and has well-appointed quarters at No. 107 North Main street. The eminently practical and sensible constitution of his mind, and the thoroughness of his training aided Mr. Alspaugh materially in gaining a foothold in the business world of Livingston, and the success which attended his efforts established him firmly in the confidence of his fellow citizens. When he was but twenty-one years of age, he had served as city clerk of Waveland, Indiana, and in April, 1911, he became the candidate of the Republican party for the office of mayor, and was elected by a handsome majority. He is giving the city a clean, effective and businesslike administration, his accomplishments marking him as a man of much more than ordinary executive ability. He has been active in the councils of his party, and has influence with its leaders. Fraternally, Mayor Alspaugh is connected with Livingston Lodge No. 246, B. P. O. E.; Zephyr Camp No. 151, W. O. W.; and Silver Tip Camp No. 5765, M. W. A.

On June 23, 1905, Mr. Alspaugh was married to Miss Shirley Hatfield, who was born at Savanna, Carroll county, Illinois, daughter of Edward and Clementine Hatfield, both of whom are deceased, and sister of Myrtle F., who is married and residing in Oklahoma. Mr. and Mrs. Alspaugh have had one daughter: Ellen Alice.

AUGUST EDHAM JENSEN. This enterprising, progressive and popular druggist, of Norwegian ancestry but American birth and rearing, who conducts one of the best neighborhood drug stores in Butte at 333 South Montana street, and is one of the most popular merchants in the city, is a fine representative of the vigorous and hardy race from which he sprang, and of the aggressive and determined industrial and mercantile energy and sweep of vision of the American people, among whom his whole life to the present time has been passed.

Mr. Jensen was born in the village of Baldwin, St. Croix county, Wisconsin, on August 5, 1879, and is a son of Paul and Katharine (Anderson) natives of Norway, but residents of Wisconsin from their early married life. The father was born in 1846, married at the age of nineteen, and came to the United States immediately after his marriage. He is now living at Baldwin, Wisconsin, where he located on his arrival in this country in 1865, and is enjoying the comfortable estate of a retired country merchant. The mother was born about 1848 and died at Baldwin in March, 1883. Six children were born in the family, of whom August was the fourth in numerical order.

He attended the public school in Baldwin until he reached the age of sixteen years. When he was eighteen he pursued a course of preparatory study at the Wisconsin Academy in Madison, the capital of the state, and at the same time entered the department of pharmacy and chemistry in the Wisconsin University. While in the latter institution, in addition to the full course in pharmacy and chemistry, he studied languages, and acquired a good working knowledge in those he studied. He was graduated from the university in pharmacy and chemistry with the degree of Graduate in Pharmacy, in 1901, then came to Montana and located in Great Falls.

In that city he found employment for several months in the service of J. W. Roberts, a gentleman of prominence in local, state and national politics, but soon learned that conditions were more favorable for his profession in Butte than in Great Falls. He therefore came to Butte and soon after his arrival in the city became connected with the Newbro Drug Company, the leading drug house in Butte. He remained with this company five years, then went into the employ of the Fosselman Drug Company, with which he remained one year.

At the end of the last period mentioned he returned to the employ of the Newbro Drug Company and worked for it one year longer. By this time Mr. Jensen found himself in a position to open a drug store of his own, and in 1908 he founded the business he is now conducting at 333 South Montana street, where he began it. The venture has been a success from the beginning and the store has won a high reputation as one of the best in the city. It serves the neighborhood in which it is located with great satisfaction to the residents and enjoys a large and active trade.

When he entered the university Mr. Jensen borrowed the money necessary for the completion of his education. He repaid this in full out of his first earnings after coming to Montana, and he started his business with savings accumulated during his clerkships in the employ of others. His home training and influences were of the best character, and he has never deviated from the straight and narrow path marked out for him by the teachings and examples of his parents. His adherence to it has been one of the large elements of his success in business and a potent factor in winning the high regard and full confidence of the people around him which he enjoys.

The training which he received at his home also embodied the cultivation of filial affection and loyal devotion among all the members of the household. In obedience to this spirit Mr. Jensen is aiding his younger brother, Carroll, in completing his professional education. The young man was born at Baldwin, Wisconsin, on May 13, 1891, and is now a student in the department of pharmacy and chemistry in the University of Valparaiso, Indiana. He has exemplified the teachings of the family fireside, too, in the help he has given his brother August, in building up his business in the drug store.

From early in 1909 until he went to the University, Carroll Jensen was a clerk in the store, and as he is of a genial and companionable nature, he gathered around him a host of young friends who have become permanent patrons of the store and helped to spread its good name throughout the city and bring it additional patronage. The brothers have thus worked and are still working together for their mutual benefit and are reaping the reward of their pleasing exhibition of family loyalty by business advantages extensive in both volume and value.

August Jensen is earnestly interested in the good of his community and helps in every way he can to promote its advancement. He votes with the Republican party in national elections, but takes no part in local political contests except to cast his ballot for the men whom he considers the most acceptable candidates no matter what ticket they are on. He is a member of the Lutheran church. His residence is in the same building as his store at 333 South Montana street, but he is unmarried. He is young yet in his profession, but full of promise. His advance in prosperity, in business expansion and in public esteem as a business man, an accomplished pharmacist and an excellent citizen is steady and rapid, and if life and health are spared to him he is looked upon as sure to attain eminence in the city and state of his adoption, to which he is already a great credit and altogether worthy of the good repute he enjoys.

ALFRED B. GUTHRIE. Since 1907 Alfred B. Guthrie has been identified with newspaper work in Choteau, although previous to that time he had devoted his energies to the pedagogic art, and had experienced unusual success as an educator, and for six years was principal of the high school of Choteau. A native of Indiana, Mr. Guthrie was born in Lawrence county, that state, on June 20, 1872, and is the son of Marshall and Mary (Payne) Guthrie, both native born Indianans. Marshall Guthrie was a farmer and a veteran of the Civil war, in which he served for one year, at the end of that time being discharged for illness. He died in 1904 at his home, aged sixty-four years. The mother was born and reared in Bedford county, Indiana, of which county her family were pioneer settlers. Seven children were born to them, Alfred, of this review, being the first born.

Alfred B. Guthrie was educated in the schools of his county and later attended the University of Indiana, from which he was graduated with the class of 1895, receiving at that time his degree of A. B. He taught school in Indiana for a time and for six years was principal of the schools of Bedford. He moved to Montana in August, 1901, locating at once in Choteau, where he again engaged in the teaching profession and became principal of the Choteau high school, a position which he retained for six years, resigning to assume the ownership of the Acantha, which he had purchased in January, 1907. The paper was originally established at Dupuyer, in Teton county, in 1892. He has since the time of purchase conducted the paper, which under his management has become a strong Republican power in the county. Mr. Guthrie has, since entering the newspaper field, taken an active part in the Republican politics of the county, and his influence is felt in manifold ways, both in civic affairs and throughout the district.

On December 29, 1896, Mr. Guthrie married Miss June Thomas, a daughter of C. P. Thomas of Muncie, Indiana, where the marriage occurred. The Thomas family is an old and highly respected pioneer family of that section of Indiana. Four children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Guthrie: Nana, Bertram, Charles and John. The two eldest children were born in Bedford, Indiana, while the younger two are of Montana origin, born at Choteau. The family are members of the Methodist church.

HON. CHARLES SIDNEY BELL. During the ten years in which he was a resident of the city of Billings, the Hon. Charles Sidney Bell was identified with movements that tended to develop the city's resources, was well and favorably known in fraternal circles, and represented his district ably and well as a member of the Montana state legislature. Although he is now residing in Florida, where he is engaged in fruit raising and the real estate business, his activities in Billings were of a nature to leave an impression upon the community and entitle him to a place among the city's representative men. Charles Sidney Bell was born December 3, 1874, at Ellsworth, Kansas, and is a son of Charles E. and Harriet (Hutton) Bell.

Charles E. Bell was born at Spencerport, Monroe county, New York, March 7, 1850, his father being for many years the railroad agent at that point and the first to hold that position. His early education was secured there, but as a mere boy he started for the west, and located first at Leavenworth, Kansas, where he first worked for a freighting company for several years. Subsequently he moved on to Ellsworth, where until about 1886 he was engaged in the cattle business, and then became identified with the Kansas Pacific Railroad, now a part of the Union Pacific, being special agent in the settlement of claims until 1889. In that year Mr. Bell moved with his family to Bismarck, Dakota Territory, and entered the employ of the Northern Pacific Railroad, with which he has been connected to the present time, his home now being located in Glendive, Montana. He is a member of Ellsworth Lodge of Masons, and in his political belief is a Republican. During the Civil war he served as a soldier in the Union army, and he has ever borne the reputation of a patriotic and public-spirited citizen. He was married at Ellsworth, Kansas, to Miss Harriet Hutton, who was born July 9, 1855, at Lowden, Iowa, and three children were born to this union: Charles Sidney, Earl Clark and Walter Claire.

Charles Sidney Bell received a public and high school education in Ellsworth, and subsequently graduated from the Metropolitan Business College of St. Paul, Minnesota. He then entered the employ of the Northern Express Company as messenger, but one year later, in 1893, entered the city office in St. Paul, where he worked in various capacities. He first became night clerk and was later made assistant cashier, a position he held until December 6, 1901, when he came to Billings as joint agent for the Northern and Adams Express Companies. On May 26, 1906, he resigned his position to become bookkeeper for the Suburban Homes Company, was later salesman, and on July 1, 1911, became manager and agent. On November 9, 1911, Mr. Bell left Billings for Florida, where at Fort McCoy he established himself in the real estate business, and also has engaged in fruit raising. On November 8, 1910, the Republicans of Yellowstone county elected Mr. Bell a member of the state legislature, where he represented more people than any other representative in the state. In 1906 he was elected secretary of the Masonic Temple Association of Billings. He belongs to Ashlar Lodge No. 29, A. F. & A. M., of which he is past master, having represented it in the Grand Lodge of the state; Billings Chapter No. 6, R. A. M., of which he is past high priest; Aldemar Commandery No. 5, K. T., of which he is past eminent commander; and Algeria Temple, Helena. He also belongs to Edna Chapter No. 14, O. E. S., of which he is past worthy patron and has represented this lodge in the Grand Lodge of Montana, and his wife also belongs to this order, being past worthy matron.

In March, 1895, Mr. Bell was married to Miss Jennie A. Hillman, who was born at Paris, Maine, April 27, 1874. Mr. Bell was highly respected by his numerous acquaintances and business associates and was a man in whom the people of the county had a great deal of confidence. His leaving Billings is a distinct loss to that city, but he takes with him the best wishes of a wide circle of friends.

WILLIAM DAVIS. A self-educated, self-made man, who since his eleventh year has depended solely upon his own resources, William Davis, of Bozeman, has gained a foremost position among the business men of his adopted city through close application, ceaseless industry and honorable methods. Mr. Davis was born in Washington, Pennsylvania, August 3, 1863, and is a son of John T. and Elizabeth (Amon) Davis. His father, born in England, in 1837, came to the United States when a mere lad with his parents, securing his education in the public schools of Pennsylvania, where he later entered the ministry. Subsequently he became connected with the West Virginia Methodist Episcopal Conference, and after filling many charges in West Virginia, died at Morgantown, that state, October 5, 1910. His wife, a native of Germany died in 1869.

William Davis was only six years of age when his mother died, and when he was fourteen years old he ran away from home with the boyish intention of seeing the great West. His first stop was in Sioux City, Iowa, whence he worked his way to St. Paul, Minnesota, and secured employment in the St. Paul Furniture and Undertaking Company. For some length of time he continued to work for that firm, learning the business and receiving his board and lodging as wages, but subsequently became associated with McCarthy & Donnelly, and in the meantime supplemented his rather meagre early education by attendance at a night school in Minneapolis. He continued to work assiduously, and during the winter of 1886-7 attended Clark's Embalming School, in Cincinnati, Ohio, graduating with the class of June 16, 1887, when he returned to Minneapolis and was employed as an embalmer by Mr. Conley until 1901. In that year he first came to Montana, locating in the city of Helena, where he was employed by Hermann & Company, undertakers and embalmers, and in 1903 came to Bozeman and formed a co-partnership, under the name of Kay & Davis. This association continued until March 2, 1912, when Mr. Davis assumed sole charge of the business, which he has conducted to the present time. He now has a modern establishment at No. 330 West Main street, fitted with all modern equipment known to the business and including every convenience for the bereaved. He also has a branch establishment at Belgrade. Perhaps no line of work requires more tact or consideration for the feeling of others than that of funeral directing, and Mr. Davis has succeeded in business because he possesses these qualities, as well as those of good judgment, business ability and a high sense of honor. He is a member of the Montana Undertakers Association and the National Association of Undertakers, and has been prominent in fraternal work, and especially so in Odd Fellowship, being past noble grand of his lodge, a member of the encampment, and having held in the past a number of important offices. He is the Past Chief Patriarch of the encampment.

Mr. Davis was married April 20, 1899, to Miss Mamie A. Blood, who was born in Watertown, Minnesota, and they have three interesting children: Weinah, Wilbur B., and William Elwyn.

ALFRED TENNYSON LEES, M. D. Since 1905 Dr. Lees has attended a large and growing practice at Whitefish, and has been identified with his profession in this state for more than ten years. A well equipped and skillful physician and surgeon, he has found in this state a large field for his ability, and is one of the prominent citizens of northwest Montana.

The doctor was born in Gilmanton, Wisconsin, June 26, 1875. His father, Alexander Lees, a native of Scotland, was brought to America when two years old, and is now a retired resident of Mondovi, Wisconsin. The mother's maiden name was Dorothea Baertsch, and her father, Christoph Baertsch, founded the family in America, he becoming a substantial farmer near Kenosha, Wisconsin.

Dr. Lees, the fourth in a family of six children, attended the public schools of his native Gilmanton, then took a two years' course in the River Fall Normal. For his profession he prepared in some of the best schools of America, taking two years in the University of Minnesota medical department and two years in the Rush Medical College of Chicago, the oldest institution of the kind in the West. Graduating M. D. in 1901, in December, following, he located at Gateway, Montana, where he practiced a year and a half, then removing to Hayden, where he was physician for a construction camp of the Great Northern. Since November, 1905, Whitefish has been his place of residence, and he has an extensive general practice in this locality. For the past four years he has been city health officer. He is a member of the county, state and national medical societies, is affiliated with the Whitefish Masonic Lodge No. 64, is treasurer of the Masonic association, and is examining surgeon and member of the Woodmen of the World. In politics the doctor is a Democrat, and he is affiliated with the Presbyterian church. For a number of years he has been devoted to his work, and about the only diversion which he has allowed himself has been the game of tennis, which he plays as occasion presents. His office is at 140 Central avenue, and his attractive home is 118 O'Brien avenue.

Dr. Lees was married at Gateway, this state, September 27, 1906, to Miss Theresa Maude McCannon, who was born in Peterboro, Ontario, a daughter of John McCannon. Her great-grandfather was an officer in the English army.

FRANK O. WILLIAMS. The intimate association of Mr. Williams with Montana began in 1901 and has continued since that time without a break. With the passing years he has been engaged in various lines of business. For six years he was auditor of the Kalispell Flour Mill Company, which he gave up to assume the duties of under-sheriff to W. H. O'Connell, sheriff of Flathead county, and he continued in that office until in March, 1909. In that month he purchased the abstract business of C. E. Shoemaker & Co., since known as the Flathead Title Company, Incorporated, Mr. Williams being president of the concern, as well as the manager. The business was originally established in 1902, but it remained to Mr. Williams to build the first abstract plant in the county. The organization of which he is the head is admittedly the most complete and extensive concern of its kind in the district, and a thriving business is conducted through its offices.

Mr. Williams was born in Washington, Iowa, on March 1, 1869. He is the son of Thomas Young and Mary J. (Kinnear) Williams, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of Iowa. Thomas Young Williams was born September 30, 1840, near Mansfield, Ohio, and his marriage to Mary Jane Kinnear occurred on August 22, 1862. She was born on April 1, 1844. The parents of Thomas Y. Williams were William and Rachel (Cantwell) Williams. The father was born on January 7, 1800, in Brook county, Virginia (now West Virginia), and he died in January, 1874, and is buried in Washington, Iowa. He was a Presbyterian and for many years filled the office of ruling elder in his church. His wife, Rachael Cantwell, the mother of Thomas Young Williams and grandmother of the subject, was born August 6, 1806, in Jefferson county, Ohio, her death occurring on August 22, 1858. She lies buried in the old cemetery at Crawfordsville, Iowa. In her youth she was a member of the Methodist church, but in 1833 united with the Presbyterian church. Her father, William Cantwell, was a Virginia pioneer who migrated to Iowa in 1850, various other members of his immediate family at that time moving to Missouri and Iowa. The Cantwell family is one of the oldest in the United States today, tracing its ancestry back to early colonial days, when the family was founded in Baltimore, Maryland, by the first American William of the name Cantwell. Thus we have Frank O. Williams, the son of Thomas Young and Mary Jane (Kinnear) Williams, the grandson of William and Rachael (Cantwell) Williams and the great-grandson of William and Nancy Ann Williams, whose lives cover a period ranging from 1776 to the present day.

Thomas Young Williams migrated from Ohio, the state of his birth, into Iowa in about 1848, entering the commonwealth in all its newness, and later, in the spring of 1871, went to Washington, thus winning claim to the title of pioneer in no uncertain way. He is a veteran of the Civil war, having fought through his enlistment period with his Iowa regiment, in General Sherman's command, and passing through a number of the vital conflicts of the war. He has in late years retired from all business activities and is a resident of Spokane, Washington, where he has made his home for some years past. To him and his wife were born ten children, here named in the order of their birth. William Irving Williams, a prominent merchant of Julietta, Idaho, was born in Washington, Iowa, on August 18, 1866. He married Harriet Gormley Wheatly, born November 16, 1876, at Altoona, Pennsylvania, and they have children as follows: Frances Harriet, born on Christmas day, 1899, at Coeur d'Alene, Idaho; Harland Wheatley, June 14, 1902, his birth occurring in Spokane, Washington; Mary, born December 26, 1905; Rachael, February 2, 1908.

Frank Orlan Williams of this review was one of a pair of twins, born March 1, 1869.

James Harlan Williams, a well-known merchant of Coeur d'Alene was born March 1, 1869, at Washington, Iowa.

Laura Margaret Williams is now Mrs. A. E. House of Spokane, Washington, born July 15, 1871; George Maurice Williams and John Ellis Williams were born on August 19, 1873. George is at Burke, Idaho, while John is a merchant of Baker City, Oregon. Jennie Mary Williams, now Mrs. Newton Green, born May 25, 1875, is a resident of Spokane, Washington. Van Eaton Williams, born February 11, 1877, resides in Tacoma, Washington, where he is connected with the N. P. land office.

Naomi Williams, born June 16, 1883, died April 19, 1907; married to Frank Anderson, a druggist of Rosalia, Wash., May 31, 1904.

T. Clair Williams, born January 14, 1887, is an abstractor with his brother and one of the coming young men of Kalispell, Montana.

The family is one of considerable numerical length and breadth, living members from Thomas Young and Mary J. (Kinnear) Williams down to the youngest representative of the family today numbering one hundred and twenty-four, with twenty-four deceased, making a total of one hundred and forty-eight, as follows: Parents, two. Children, ten. Grandchildren, twenty-seven. Great-grandchildren, sixty-four. Great-great-grandchildren, ten. Members coming into the family by marriage, thirty-five, making a total of one hundred and forty-eight.

Frank Orlan Williams was educated in the public schools of Whitman county, Washington, and later attended Waitsburg Academy at Waitsburg, Washington, and followed his course there with a business course in a business college at Burlington, Iowa, finishing there when he was twenty-one years of age. He was first employed as a bookkeeper in the store of the Bonner Mercantile Company, at Bonners Ferry, Idaho, where he continued for a year and a half, after which he returned to Whitman county, Washington, and engaged in the grain business. He also served in the courthouse as deputy county auditor through two terms. Following that experience, Mr. Williams came to Montana, locating directly in Kalispell in 1901, where he took a position as auditor of the Kalispell Flour Mill Company, with whom he remained until 1907. In that year he became under sheriff to County Sheriff W. H.

Halvor Halvorson.

O'Connell of Flathead county, and he continued to serve in that capacity until March 1, 1909, when he purchased the business of C. E. Shoemaker & Co., as mentioned in a previous paragraph, and proceeded to establish such a business as the county had never before boasted, and which has filled a long realized want in the affairs of the county.

Mr. Williams is a Bryan Democrat and an active worker in the affairs of the party. He has been a member of every Democratic convention held in the county since 1902, but has never sought political office or honors and has declined all overtures along that line. He is a dominant force for good in all civic matters, in which he takes a more than ordinary interest, and is known to be a citizen of sterling worth to the community in which he makes his home. He is a member of the First Presbyterian church and chairman of its board of trustees.

On July 16, 1902, Mr. Williams was united in marriage at Spokane, Washington, with Miss Georgia Viola Gay, the daughter of Robert and Marian (Clark) Gay, of Illinois. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Williams: Orlan Gay, born at Kalispell, on May 19, 1906, and Jessie Alsea, born October 14, 1907, also at Kalispell. The family home is maintained at No. 636 Third avenue West, a pleasant place which is the center of much social activity, both Mr. and Mrs. Williams being popular and prominent in social circles in the city, where they have a host of warm friends and well wishing acquaintances.

HON. HALVOR HALVORSON. Noteworthy among the leading business men of Cut Bank is Hon. Halvor Halvorson, a prosperous general merchant, who is actively interested in promoting the welfare of the city. Mayor of Cut Bank the past two years, he has performed his every duty, no matter how trying, to the satisfaction of every fair-minded citizen, being a firm believer that nothing is too good for the little city over which he has official charge. A native of Iowa, he was born, May 8, 1865, in Clayton county, where he was bred and educated.

Born in Norway, John Halvorson, father of Halvor Halvorson, immigrated to America when young, and made his way across the country to Iowa, settling in that state in 1840. Taking up the free and independent occupation of a farmer, he was there engaged in tilling the soil until his death, in 1900, at the age of sixty-eight years. To him and his wife, whose maiden name was Julia Halvorson, several children were born, the second in order of birth having been Halvor. She, too, came to the United States when young, having been but a child when her parents located in Iowa, where she died, in 1877, at the early age of thirty-three years.

Obtaining his preliminary education in the district schools, Halvor Halvorson began wage earning in a general store in Iowa, serving as a clerk four years. Going then to Minnesota, he was identified with the railway service for a number of seasons, after which he lived for awhile in North Dakota. Locating at Cut Bank, Montana, in 1901, Mr. Halvorson opened a general store, starting in on a small scale, and has since developed a very large and successful trade, being now one of the foremost general merchants of Teton county, and a splendid representative of its self-made men, his present prosperity being entirely due to his own energetic efforts.

An earnest supporter of the Republican party, Mr. Halvorson is prominent and influential in public matters, and is now serving as a member of the local school board, and as mayor of the city, a position to which he was elected by his fellow associates in March, 1910. Fraternally he is a member and the master of Cut Bank Lodge No. 82, Ancient Free and Accepted Order of Masons; of Great Falls Chapter No. 9, R. A. M.;

Black Eagle Commandery No. 8, K. T.; Butte Consistory No. 2, A. & A. S. Rite of Freemasonry; Algeria Temple, A. A. O. Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, Helena, Montana. He is also a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, in which he is noble grand, and secretary of his lodge; and of the Modern Woodmen of America. Religiously he is a member of the Presbyterian church.

Mr. Halvorson married, March —, 1896, Miss Katie Rich, of Crookston, Minnesota, and they are the parents of four children, namely: Arthur, born in Brownsville, Minnesota, in March, 1897; Dorothy, born at Browns Valley, Minnesota, in November, 1899; Harvey, whose birth occurred at Cut Bank, Montana, in 1902; and Walter, born in Cut Bank, in 1905.

HUGH E. HOUSTON, M. D. Since 1901 Doctor Houston has been one of the Great Northern's division surgeons, located first at Kalispell and now at Whitefish, where besides his work in connection with the railway he has a large general practice. He is one of Montana's leading physicians and surgeons. Hugh E. Houston was born at Echo, in Yellow Medicine county, Minnesota, January 1, 1874, the oldest of four sons and three daughters born to Robert and Mary S. (Brown) Houston. His father, a native of Buffalo, New York, was one of Minnesota's pioneers, having settled there in 1862. He was a prosperous farmer, served as county commissioner, justice of the peace and in other local offices, and was a citizen of high standing in his community. He died at the age of fifty-five. The mother, who was born on Prince Edward Island, died at the age of fifty-four.

Doctor Houston received his early education in the public schools. He was fourteen years old when his father died, and from that time was dependent on his own efforts for his education and advancement in life. His varied accomplishments and successful career are the fruit of his own industrious endeavor. He earned the means by which he put himself through school and college. After graduation from the Woodlake high school of Minnesota in 1893, he was employed as a drug clerk two years, and then received the appointment of postmaster at Woodlake, an office which he filled with credit for four years. During the last two years in that office he was studying medicine in the medical department of Hamline University, which later affiliated with the Minnesota State University. He graduated in medicine June, 1900, after which he served as interne in St. Joseph's Hospital. Doctor Houston has been very progressive in his professional career, and besides his regular study in connection with his practice has taken considerable post-graduate work. He spent some time in the Post Graduate School of New York and also in the Mayo Hospital at Rochester, New York.

During his internship, he received appointment as surgeon for the Great Northern Railway, and on the 1st of July, 1901, located at Kalispell, the division headquarters of the company. In November, 1905, the railroad's division point was moved to Whitefish, where he has since practiced as the regular division surgeon and also in general practice of medicine and surgery. Doctor Houston is register of vital statistics for the state of Montana, is a member of the American Medical Association and the state and county medical societies, and in 1910 was delegate to the international tuberculosis congress at Washington, D. C. He represents eighteen of the old-line insurance companies as examiner, and also a number of the fraternal insurance orders. His politics is Republican. The Doctor is prominent in Masonry, affiliating with the Whitefish Lodge No. 64, the Knight Templar commandery at Kalispell, and the Algeria Temple of the Mystic Shrine at Helena. He is also a member of the Eastern Star and the Elks Club at Kalispell. He is an active member and trustee of the Whitefish Methodist church.

In material prosperity as well as professional honors the doctor has been very successful. He is owner of farm lands and an apple orchard on Whitefish lake, is vice-president of the First National Bank and president of the First National Bank Building Company at Whitefish. His residence is at 424 Central avenue.

Doctor Houston was married at Chicago, August 12, 1903, to Miss J. Edna Van Goulder. She is a native of Minnesota and her father was Milton Van Goulder. Doctor and Mrs. Houston are the parents of two children: Gretchen was born August 26, 1907; and Irma, on May 8, 1909.

JOHN C. FRIEND. As treasurer of Lincoln county since 1910 and assistant treasurer since the county was created until his election to the office of treasurer, John C. Friend has for some time held a position of importance in the official life of Lincoln county, and as such has won to himself a secure place in the confidence and esteem of his fellowmen in this section of the country.

Mr. Friend was born in Jewell county, Kansas, in December, 1874, and is the son of Joseph and Lois (Stephenson) Friend. The former was born in Pennsylvania, and as a young man came to Kansas, later removing to Nebraska. In still later years he removed to Montana, settling at Gateway, Montana, and there, at the age of sixty-four years, still hale and hearty, he is engaged in dairy farming and fruit raising, enjoying to the full the delightful climate of the great western state, and prospering most agreeably. His wife, who was born in Iowa, still lives, and shares his fortunes, now in her sixtieth year. They became the parents of two children: E. C. Friend, who lives in Flathead county, and John C. of this review.

The public schools of Kansas and Nebraska gave to John Friend his book learning, and at the age of fifteen years he left school and was employed as a clerk in various mercantile establishments in and about his home town. He advanced in his work, and had held managerial positions for some time when he accepted a similar position with a firm which had a branch in Lincoln county, and he was established at Eureka, Lincoln county for six years after coming to Montana in 1901. When Lincoln county was created Mr. Friend was appointed to the office of assistant county treasurer under Mr. Brandenburg, and he continued in that position until 1910, when he was elected to the office, a position which he has since filled with all acceptability to the county and in a manner wholly creditable to his already secure reputation in the district.

In 1898 Mr. Friend married Miss Laura Evans in Nebraska, and they have become the parents of six children: Gladys, Merlin Leroy, Florence Verna and Mabel Ella are students in the Libby schools, the latter named being the first child born in the town of Eureka, Montana, her birth occurring in October, 1905. The two younger members of the family, Vernon and Frances Willard, were born in Eureka in 1907 and 1908, respectively.

In addition to his services as assistant treasurer and treasurer of Lincoln county, Mr. Friend served as deputy assessor under Michael Therrault for Flathead county, his services there being of the same high order as in Lincoln county. Mr. Friend is a member of the Court of Honor, Springfield Lodge, and in his political affiliations is a Democrat. He is one of the leaders in the public life of his community, and is distinctively of the progressive type of men who have done so much for the growth and upbuilding of the newer sections of the state.

WILLIAM W. TAYLOR, M. D., has been a resident of Kalispell since 1903, in which year he first established his practice in this district, and where he has come to have a prominence and popularity equalling that of any of his confreres. His ability is of a high order and has been recognized wherever his services have been called forth, and he has served in the capacity of local physician and surgeon for the Great Northern Railway at this point in 1907 and 1908. He has been president of the Montana State Medical Association and also of the Flathead County Medical Society in 1910, in both of which organizations he is active and prominent.

Born in Dodge county, Minnesota, Dr. Taylor is the son of Robert and Pamela (Lord) Taylor, both natives of Pennsylvania. The father was born in 1838 in that state, and he came west after the Civil war period. During the war he served as chaplain of the Second Michigan Cavalry, and when he was dismissed from the service he came to Minnesota, where he engaged in the practice of law, a profession which he followed from then until his retirement from active business life. He is still a resident of Dodge county, and enjoying life at the age of seventy-four years. The mother of Dr. Taylor died in 1904 when she was in her sixty-fourth year. She was a sister of Judge Lord of the supreme bench of Minnesota, who became famous as a result of his connection with the never-to-be-forgotten Younger and James outlaw cases in Minnesota a quarter of a century ago.

Three children were born to Robert Taylor and his wife. They are: George, now the county auditor of Dodge county, Minnesota, Robert D., a prominent attorney of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Dr. William W., the youngest of the family and the subject of this review.

William W. Taylor was born on October 18, 1872, and as a boy at home he attended the schools of his native town, and was graduated from the high school in Kasson, Minnesota, in 1890. Leaving the high school he immediately thereafter entered the University of Michigan, and was graduated therefrom with the class of 1896, receiving his degree of B. S. Continuing his studies in the medical department of the University of Minnesota, he was graduated in 1900, receiving his M. D. degree at that time, after which he became house surgeon or interne in Asbury Hospital in Minneapolis, where he remained for the space of one year. Leaving Minneapolis, Dr. Taylor came to Butte, Montana, where he engaged in general practice for two years, at the same time holding the post of assistant surgeon for the Heinze Mining Company. In 1903 Dr. Taylor severed his connections with Butte and removed to Kalispell, where he established a general practice, and where he has since continued, busily engaged in the wide and ever growing practice which has come to him with the passing years. In addition to the prominence Dr. Taylor gained in his profession as outlined in an opening paragraph, he has won further distinction in Kalispell as the incumbent of the office of coroner of Flathead county in 1905 and 1906, a position which he fills creditably and whose duties he discharged with the utmost fidelity and wisdom.

Dr. Taylor is a member of the Kalispell Club, and in his churchly relations, he affiliates with the Presbyterian church.

On July 27, 1903, Dr. Taylor was united in marriage with Miss Mary Wickes of Boulder, Montana. She is the daughter of Rev. T. A. Wickes and his wife, Mrs. Elizabeth Woodbridge Wickes both well-known native residents of the state. Rev. Wickes, who is now retired from active ministerial duties, is at present a resident of Missoula, Montana. The town of Wickes was named after an uncle of Rev. Wickes, the family having been long identified with this section of the state, and being active in its development and advancement in many ways. Dr. and Mrs. Taylor have one child, William Woodbridge Taylor, born in Missoula on April 16, 1907. The family enjoys the most unequivocal popularity in Kalispell, where both are appreciated for their many genuine traits of character and pleasing personalities. Dr. Taylor is a man who is devoted to his home and home life, and deserves much quiet enjoyment from his books in whatever leisure time he is privileged to claim from his professional cares and duties.

WILLIS C. WELLS doubtless comes naturally by his talent for the dairy business, for in view of his many accomplishments in the business, it seems permissible to speak of his ability as a talent. His father has been for years one of the prominent dairy men of the great agricultural state of Wisconsin, and the son, reared amid those environments, partook generously of the spirit of the work, and when the time came for him to choose his work in life, the dairy business seemed to offer a better opportunity than any other field of endeavor. Thoroughly educated in the work by his years of training in the University of Wisconsin, and amply fortified by later experience of a broad and varied character, he came to Montana and established a business which has come to be one of the big enterprises of Kalispell, and which is a reflection of the many splendid qualities of the man who controls and operates it.

Mr. Wells was born in southern Dodge county, Wisconsin, on November 11, 1879, and is the son of Mathias and Alberta (Cuttingill) Wells, both natives of the state of Vermont. Mathias Wells, who was born in Yalesville, Vermont, in 1841, enlisted in the Union army at the age of twenty, and served two and a half years in the Seventh Wisconsin Regiment, having come to Wisconsin as a boy in his teens. He met and married his wife in Wisconsin, and they both live on the Wisconsin farm where Mr. Wells has been engaged successfully for many years in the dairy business.

As a boy, Willis Wells attended the district schools of the town wherein he was reared, and he became vastly interested in the dairy business, through his knowledge of it as a lad on the home place. When he was ready for the university, he entered the agricultural department in the University of Wisconsin, and there, under Professor Henry and other men of note in that branch of study, young Wells was trained in the dairy business. He was graduated from the university in the spring of 1895, and thereupon engaged in business in the north central part of the state of Wisconsin. He continued there for a year and a half, when he received an appointment as instructor in the butter making department of the university. In 1897 he severed his connection with the university and took charge of a dairy in Edmond, Wisconsin, there remaining for a year and a half, whence he went to Arcadia, Wisconsin, and engaged in similar work. He then went to Carona, South Dakota, and after a stay of nine months in the dairy business there he came to Montana, locating immediately in Kalispell, in December, 1901. He worked in various capacities in Kalispell for five years, then went to the Hazelwood Dairy Company where he remained for some time, after which, in 1910, he came to Kalispell to work for the Kalispell Dairy Company. After nine months in the service of the company, he, with Mr. McGee, leased the property for a six months' period. Later, Mr. Wells bought out the interest of Mr. McGee, and he has since renewed the lease and has conducted the business independently. He is now the sole proprietor of the business, and has a large force of men in his employ. The business has extended in many directions since Mr. Wells assumed control, and is now one of the most prosperous and thriving dairy businesses in the state. The establishment is conducted on thoroughly modern and sanitary lines, and the most complete and up-to-date equipment is in use in the plant. In the short time of his association with the business, Mr. Wells has, by his progressive spirit and ready initiative, assumed a place of prominence in the business world of the city, and is regarded as one of the leading men of the community.

Mr. Wells is a Republican, but has never given more than ordinary attention to affairs of a political nature. He is a member of the Methodist church, as is his wife, and both enjoy a high social standing in the city which they have made their own. A man of quiet and homelike inclinations and disposition, Mr. Wells is partial to the charms of home life, rather than other forms of amusement, and in his fine home in Kalispell is to be found enjoying the society of his family, when the cares of business no longer claim him.

On April 8, 1896, Mr. Wells was married to Miss Theoline H. Solond, at Blair, Wisconsin. They have become the parents of two children,—Mabel, born in Wisconsin in December, 1899, and Lawrence, born in Carona, South Dakota, in March, 1900. Both are in attendance at the grade schools of Kalispell at present.

HERBERT V. ALWARD. Since 1908 Herbert V. Alward has been incumbent of the highly responsible position of cashier of the First National Bank of Kalispell, Montana. His entire active career has been devoted to the banking business and he is known throughout this city as a substantial, reliable citizen whose word is as good as his bond.

Mr. Alward was born in the province of New Brunswick, Canada, in the year 1880, and he is a son of Freeman and Sarah (Keith) Alward, both of whom were born and reared in Canada, where the former died in August, 1910, at the age of sixty years, and where the latter is still living, in 1912. The father was a farmer during the greater portion of his active career and he and his wife became the parents of five children, of whom the subject of this sketch was the first in order of birth.

To the public schools of his native place H. V. Alward is indebted for his rudimentary educational training. From 1899 to 1901 he was in the employ of the Bank of Nova Scotia, at Sussex, New Brunswick, and in the latter year he came to Montana, locating in Missoula, where he secured a position in the First National Bank as paying teller. In 1906 he was one of the first twelve to graduate in the American Institute of Banking, and soon thereafter he entered the employ of the Sea Board National Bank, where he worked in the collection department until January, 1908, when he came to Kalispell as cashier of the First National Bank, which position he has since filled with the utmost efficiency.

In the city of Kalispell, in September, 1910, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Alward to Miss Kate Montelius, whose birth occurred in Montana, and she was reared and educated in Kalispell. Mr. and Mrs. Alward are popular in connection with the best social affairs of their home community and their home is recognized as a center of refinement and generous hospitality.

In a fraternal way Mr. Alward is an Elk and he is exalted ruler of that organization and he is likewise affiliated with the Masonic order, in which he is senior warden. In politics he is a Progressive Republican and in religious matters he and his wife are devout communicants of the Protestant Episcopal church, in the various departments of whose work they are most zealous factors. Mr. Alward is well known throughout this section of Montana and it may be said concerning him that the circle of his friends is coincident with that of his acquaintances.

ALEX BENSON. The state of Montana has inevitably attracted to itself a great many men of power and ability in all walks of life. Missoula, one of her prominent cities, claims her share of these men, and among those who have added much to the advancement of the city and to the enlarging of her enterprises, Alex Benson ranks foremost. Veteran of the Spanish-American war, in which he served with all credit and honor, a mail carrier in the service of "Uncle Sam" and finally identified with the wholesale bakery business, Mr. Benson, still in the flower of his youth, has had a diversity of experiences calculated to nicely round out the splendid character which nature endowed him with.

Mr. Benson was born in Sweden on March 26, 1877. He is the son of Isaac Benson, a sailor and farmer who lived and died in his native land. He was seventy-two years old when he died, and his wife, who immigrated to America after his death, died in Minneapolis at the age of fifty-nine years. Ten children were born to Isaac Benson and his wife. Alex was the youngest of that number. Two brothers are in Montana. Swan is in the employ of his brother Alex, and Otto, who is married, is the owner of a fine ranch and orchard near Missoula. Alex Benson was about fifteen years of age when he came to America with his mother. They first settled in Illinois, remaining there about four years, during which time he worked on a farm. He then went to St. Paul and for two years he was employed there in various capacities during the summer months, and attending business college in the winter. When the Spanish-American trouble came up Mr. Benson enlisted in the Third United States Infantry at Fort Snelling, and he served three years in the Philippines, going out via New York and Suez canal and returning via Japan and San Francisco. The young soldier participated in many engagements, good fortune remaining with him through the entire period of his service, and he escaped without injury and but little illness. The term of his enlistment at an end, Mr. Benson was honorably discharged, and he spent several months thereafter in travelling about the country. He was in California, Illinois, Michigan, and finally came to Montana, locating in Missoula. The first year of his residence in the city he was engaged in various occupations, including railroad constructing, mill work, etc. The young man, however, had an ambition to rise above mere manual labor, and he took the first opportunity available and went through the civil service examination for mail carrier. He passed successfully, thanks to his winter studies in St. Paul some years previous, and he was the first man to carry mail on a rural route in western Montana, also the first man in that section to successfully pass the test of the government. For two years he continued in the mail service, and then resigned to engage in the bakery business. His first establishment was the little retail shop on west Main street, where the Royal cafe now is, and from the beginning his success was phenomenal. The business increased so rapidly and assumed such proportions that he was soon forced into larger quarters, and in 1908 Mr. Benson bought a site on Blaine street where he erected his present factory,—a two story brick 30 x 56 feet. He now conducts a wholesale bakery, and the plant is known as the Garden City Wholesale Bakery. Machinery, ovens and all equipment is strictly modern and complete in all its details. The business, which is the outcome of the small retail shop established a few years ago, is regarded as one of the solid and representative enterprises of Missoula, and the success of the business is the direct result of the energy and splendid business ability of its owner and proprietor. Mr. Benson is a man who has never been afraid of work, and this attribute of character is one which has been an important factor in his most unequivocal success. The fine, up-standing quality of the man is evidenced by the fact that when he came to this country as a boy of fifteen with his mother,—his father died when he was seven years old,—he borrowed passage money from a brother, which he paid back out of his first earnings in America. The life and work of Mr. Benson has been characterized by a similar independence, wherever he has found himself. His schooling was not of the most complete order, but he seized many an opportunity for learning that a less ambitious youth might have passed by unnoticed. He received some training in the public schools of his homeland before coming to America, and also attended school some when in Illinois, which elementary training he supplemented by attending a business college in St. Paul during the winter months of the years he lived there before enlisting in the army.

Mr. Benson is an Independent in politics, and while he believes that it is every citizen's duty to vote, he goes no further in a political way. He is connected with a number of fraternal organizations, among which is the Odd Fellows, the Rebekahs, the Modern Woodmen of America, in which latter society he has been clerk of the order and holds certificate of merit from the grand knight; he is the only clerk holding such a certificate in Missoula, as the practice was suspended after he received his; he is a member of the Royal Highlanders and a member of the Scandinavian Brotherhood. He has filled all the chairs in this latter named order and has attended three grand lodge conventions. He is a member of the chamber of commerce and takes a strong interest in any movement tending to promote the civic welfare. Mr. Benson is particularly attached to Montana and regards it as the finest country in the world for a man without greater capital than ambition and grit, and feels that it offers quite as many attractions to those who are better situated with regard to this world's goods.

SHARPLESS WALKER. Taking rank among the foremost citizens of Miles City, Montana, and a leading member of the bar of Custer county, Sharpless Walker in his personal life and professional achievements reflects credit on the state in which he lives, also on an old and honorable family of Delaware. He was born at Hockessin, New Castle county, Delaware, May 26, 1875, and is a son of William H. and Anna P. (Shortlidge) Walker, and a grandson of John Walker.

Grandfather John Walker was born in England and when he came to the United States he settled on what has remained the old family homestead in New Castle county, Delaware. He was both farmer and merchant. On the old homestead his son, Wm. H. Walker, was born in 1828 and still resides there, having passed all his active life as an agriculturist. He is a Republican in his political sentiments. He married Anna P. Shortlidge, who was born in 1834, in Chester county, Pennsylvania, and eight of their family of nine children survive, namely: Eugene, Phoebe, John, Julian, William H., Jr., Swithin, Elizabeth and Sharpless. William H. Walker and wife and family are members of the Society of Friends.

Sharpless Walker was carefully reared in a home where an old Quaker atmosphere of steadiness and sobriety prevailed. Until twenty-one years of age he remained upon his father's farm, where he was born, attending school in winter. After acquiring an education, including a commercial course, he was associated for a year with one of his older brothers in the farm machinery, hardware, coal and lumber business and then went to Philadelphia and studied law in the offices of Jno. Houston Merrill, a noted attorney and son of General Merrill, who was once stationed in Montana and had property interests therein. This connection procured for Mr. Walker the acquaintance of Judge Strevell, attorney for General Merrill, and in 1901 he came to Miles City and entered the employ of Strevell & Porter, then the leading law firm of eastern Montana. In 1902 he was admitted to the bar, and in 1904 began the practice of the law for himself. In the following year he was appointed city attorney of Miles City, and in 1906 he was elected county attorney of Custer county, and twice re-elected. As a prosecuting officer Mr. Walker was notably successful, and his legal opinions affecting county affairs acknowledged to be accurate and reliable. Aside from the recognition of his professional ability by political preferment, he has built up a lucrative civil practice, and his future is one of promise.

On August 15, 1906, Mr. Walker was married to Miss Gladys James, who was born at Marshall, Michigan, and is a daughter of David and Jane (Hasbrouck) James. They had two children: Mrs. Walker and Muriel. Mr. and Mrs. Walker have a son and daughter: James Eugene and Ruth Ada.

Mr. Walker is identified with Miles City Lodge No. 537, B. P. O. E.; Aerie No. 885, F. O. E., and Crusader Lodge No. 7, K. of P. His political sentiments and convictions make him a Progressive Republican, he having been for a number of years an ardent supporter of the political principles advocated by Robert M. LaFollette.

PERLEY N. BERNARD. A man of important place and reputation in both educational and political circles is the Hon. Perley N. Bernard, who is a prominent figure in Kalispell and throughout Lucas county, and is furthermore well known in his former capacity as a member of the Montana state legislature as well as that of his present office of secretary of the Chamber of Commerce.

Of a Maryland family in his paternal line, Mr. Bernard is of Ohio descent by maternal lineage. His father, John A. Bernard, had come to Ohio at a very early age, had lived there until the time of his marriage to Miss Alice Brower and had, in 1863, become a pioneer agriculturist of Iowa.

The family settled in Mahaska county of the last-named state; and in that rural home was born, on May 11, 1859, the son who was named Perley N., the youngest of ten children, as well as last in the line of five boys. In the country schools he received his early education, later pursuing a course of study in Amity College at College Springs, Iowa. His educational efficiency was further increased by a professional teacher's course at Fort Scott, Kansas. His first pedagogical service was given in the schools of La Bette county, Kansas. After one year of teaching he had made so evident his comprehension of educational problems and his ability to deal with them, besides having made himself personally and politically acceptable to such an extent, that he was elected superintendent of public instruction for the schools of Hodgman county, Kansas.

In 1901 Mr. Bernard became a resident of Montana, settling first at old De Morrisville, but a year later removing to Kalispell. Here for the two ensuing years he acted as editor and manager of the Inter Lake newspaper, but in 1902 he was again called upon to supervise educational affairs. In 1903 he was made a candidate for a two years' term of service in the same office and was elected by a larger vote than any man in the county had received. It is a rather interesting commentary on political ironies to record that when in 1896 Mr. Bernard was a candidate for the office of county treasurer, he announced his determination to support William McKinley, with the result that his vote this time was the smallest in the county. Such was the fatal effect, in that locality, of acquiring a "gold-bug" reputation.

Other political honor has come to Mr. Bernard in his being appointed as postmaster for Kalispell. This office he held from 1896 to 1902 inclusive. He has moreover been a true westerner in that he has had farming interests and has enjoyed an interval of farm residence. In November of 1909 he removed to Lincoln county, Montana, and again resumed journalistic enterprise, for which his education and his political experience had rendered him so capable. The Tobacco Plains Journal in his hands became the Eureka Journal and a very strong local organ it was. As its editor, Mr. Bernard conducted a very strong fight for the assignment of the county seat to Eureka, in opposition to the energetic claims of Libby for the same advantageous appointment. It is needless to say that Eureka was successful. At the same election Bernard was a candidate for the office of state representative and was elected by a majority of one hundred and seventy. After serving one term and also after disposing of his editorial responsibilities, he returned, in 1911, to Kalispell. Here he was appointed secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, which office he has continued to hold.

Not only has P. N. Bernard's greatest public service been performed in Montana, the state of his adoption, but in this state he has also chosen his life's companion and founded his family. In 1894 he was united in marriage to Miss Grace B. Herrick, at Great Falls, Montana. Mrs. Bernard is a daughter of W. H. Herrick, and a native of Minnesota. The second generation of the family consists of one son, Wallace H., who was born in Kalispell, on March 10, 1897. The Bernard residence is at 519 Fourth avenue East.

Mr. Bernard's political interest is as keen as ever and his judgment of civic affairs is highly valued by those who know him. It is needless to say that he has always been a Republican of the staunchest sort. He is fraternally affiliated with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and is also a popular member of the Kalispell Club. His office is at the Chamber of Commerce, Kalispell.

JOHN G. SCHWARDER was connected with the mercantile interests of Valier and adjacent towns for some years in one capacity or another before he was appointed to the position of United States commissioner at Valier, Teton county, Montana, on July 26, 1911, which was followed by his further appointment on October 28, 1911, as Carey Land Act commissioner for the Valier project. He is eminently qualified to discharge the duties of both positions in a capable manner, and his services thus far have been of an eminently satisfactory nature.

Mr. Schwarder was born on December 9, 1879, and he is the son of William and Elizabeth (Gilmore) Schwarder. The father is a native of New York state, who removed to Michigan in the early seventies, where he was occupied as a stock drover. He located in Cass City, where the subject was born, and there made his home for many years. The wife and mother was a native of Newbury, Ontario, Canada, and she died at the early age of thirty-seven years, her death occurring in 1892. She left six children. She was of Scotch-Irish parentage, while the father was of German ancestry. The education of John Schwarder was better than that of the average youth, as after receiving a high school education at Cass City, he entered Alma College at Alma, Michigan, where he remained for two years. On leaving school his first position was as a clerk in a general merchandise store. In 1901 he determined to come west, and that determination was not affected in the least by the fact that his means were especially limited; so limited, indeed, that he found it expedient to walk the distance of one hundred and twenty-five miles from the Tobacco plains country to Kalispell, where he secured employment in the lumber woods. He found the work hard and it was a new experience to him, as he had never done work of that variety before. It was his expectation to get work as a bookkeeper when he went there, but failing that, took whatever he could find to do. He took up a homestead in the district immediately northwest of Kalispell, which he commuted, and remained in the vicinity for five years, and during the time he was employed as manager in the store of R. E. Leonard and Western Mercantile Company in the town of Eureka. From there he moved to Stockett and worked as supply man and timekeeper for the Cotton Wood Coal Company, remaining four years in Stockett, after which he came to Valier in October, 1909. On coming to this place he became interested in the business of Hawthorne &

Sproat, and he continued to be associated with them until March, 1911. He then entered the real-estate and insurance business, and it was in the same year that he received the two United States appointments which have since then engaged his attention.

Mr. Schwarder is a member of the Valier city council. He was appointed to the first council and elected to the second. He is one of the principal stockholders of the Valier Meat Company and president of the company as well. He is the owner of two hundred and twenty acres of land three miles from the town and he also has large holdings in the Tobacco plains country.

Mr. Schwarder is an Independent in his political views, and while he is a dutiful citizen and assumes his full share of the civic burden, is not politically ambitious and does not give overdue attention to affairs of that nature. He is a member of the Knights of Pythias of Stockett, Montana, and of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Valier. He is a member of the Presbyterian church.

WILLIAM B. RHODES, lawyer, and prominent in the public life of Kalispell since his earliest identification with the country, was born in Saline county, Missouri, on April 5, 1878. He is the son of John T. and Belle (Norrew) Rhodes, both natives of Marshall, Missouri, in which town they were reared, wedded, and passed their lives. Mr. Rhodes was a farmer and stock raiser of prominence who is now retired from business activities. His wife passed away in 1907 at the age of fifty-three years. They were the parents of eight children, of which number William B. of this sketch was the second born.

In his boyhood days William Rhodes attended the grade schools of his native town, and later he attended the high school of Slater, Missouri, from which he was graduated with the class of 1895. Following his graduation he entered William Jewell College at Liberty, Missouri, and was graduated from that reliable old institution in 1899, receiving his degree of B. A. at that time. He then entered the Kansas City (Mo.) Law School, where he spent one year, after which he entered the law offices of R. B. Ruff, under whose able preceptorship he completed his studies and was admitted to practice in all courts in the state of Missouri, in 1901. In the autumn of that year Mr. Rhodes removed to Deer Lodge, Montana, where he remained until January, 1903, when he removed to Kalispell. He has been engaged in general practice continuously since that time, with the exception of a three year period during which he filled the office of secretary of the chamber of commerce. In 1906-7-8 Mr. Rhodes was the incumbent of the office of city attorney, an office which he handled with characteristic ability, and in which he demonstrated to the public his fitness for a high position in his profession. Mr. Rhodes is at present a member of the Kalispell school board. Fraternally, Mr. Rhodes is a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, and he is a member of the Kalispell Club, the Chamber of Commerce and of the county and state bar associations. In his political convictions he is a Democrat, and is an active participant in all affairs affecting the interests of his party.

On December 14, 1911, Mr. Rhodes took a partner, one Mr. P. Murphy, and the firm is now known as Rhodes & Murphy. They conduct a general practice of an ever growing and lucrative nature, and are classed among the younger and more progressive business men of the city.

Mr. Rhodes was united in marriage with Miss Josephine Forse on July 18, 1895. Mrs. Rhodes is a daughter of W. H. Forse, a native of Nebraska. The marriage took place at Everett, Washington. They have become the parents of three children,—Jane, born in 1907; Robert, born in 1910 and Ruth, born in 1911. The family residence is maintained at 519 Third avenue East.

JOSEPH A. McDONOUGH. Born at Hinsdale, Massachusetts, on June 27, 1878, Joseph A. McDonough grew up in that state, and after completing the course of the public schools, entered Boston University and graduated from its law department in 1899, receiving the first prize for excellence in scholarship, he having attained the highest average of any student in his class during the entire course. For a year after receiving his diploma he practiced in Boston, but in 1901 came to Great Falls, and opened up an office here. The legal profession is one which tries out its followers with certainty and it is almost as difficult for an able attorney to remain unnoticed as it is for a poor one to secure or maintain a place of influence in the ranks. Mr. McDonough's training and natural adroitness received prompt recognition in the city. In 1903, he formed a partnership with Geo. H. Stanton, which continued until January 1, 1911. The practice of the firm was of a general nature and Mr. McDonough continues in the same lines now. He has practiced in all the courts and there are not many attorneys in the state who have a larger clientele. His reputation has extended far beyond the city of Great Falls, and he is retained in important cases throughout this section of the state.

Something of his energy and ambition may be inferred from the list of important enterprises in which he is financially interested, in addition to his chief occupation as a busy and successful lawyer. He is a director of the Conrad Banking Co., Union Securities Company, also Metropolitan Furniture Company and The Bee Hive, as well as several other corporations and is also managing director of Merrimac Cattle Company.

His affiliations politically are with the Republican party; socially he is a member of the Elks lodge, also the Masonic fraternity, in which he is a Shriner. He is also one of the University Club. Unlike many successful lawyers, he does not figure prominently in politics, but though a Republican in general policy, is yet an independent voter.

Mr. McDonough's parents were both of Irish birth, and were married before coming to America. P. J. McDonough was but twenty at the time, and his wife, Mary McCormack McDonough, still younger. They settled in Rhode Island upon first arriving here, but later moved to Massachusetts. Mr. McDonough became interested in a manufacturing business, which he conducted successfully for a number of years, and then retired from active commercial work. He and his wife are now living at Hyde Park, Massachusetts, in which state two of their children also reside. Charles A., the eldest of the family, lives in Boston, where he has a large law practice. One sister, Lillian J. McDonough, also makes her home in that city. The other two daughters both live in Great Falls. These are Miss May C. McDonough, and Mrs. Anna McDonough Coy. Joseph is the fourth in point of age.

It has been declared that the legal profession engages the most brilliant intellects of our generation, perhaps because it is the one in which originality and talent have the freest play. Certainly it numbers in its ranks many of the citizens who represent the flower of our civilization, and who are the powers in the development of our country. In this class is Mr. McDonough, who has made so enviable a record in so brief a time. His is destined to be one of the names long remembered in the history of Montana jurisprudence, for, at thirty-four, he has established a reputation which is statewide, and the opportunities are unlimited for those who are "sufficient for these things."

ALVIN B. LIGHTNER. The father of Alvin B. Lightner, the subject of this sketch, was Henry E. Lightner, a builder of history as well as of mills and railroads, for the progress in building marks the true advance of a civilization much more surely than does its struggles in politics and in wars. The senior Mr. Lightner was born in the famous little Pennsylvania city of Gettysburg, where great Americans died for a principle, and the greatest American made of that principle a maxim "The world will long remember" both what they did and what he said there.

It was there in this atmosphere of liberty for the people that Henry E. Lightner first saw the light, on the eleventh of February, 1833. In 1857, he moved to the then new state of Iowa, settling in Keokuk county, where he purchased a large saw mill and supplied lumber and ties to the railroad that were building through the young state. A builder and miller by profession he erected some of the important buildings of Keokuk, Iowa, and owned flour mills, coal mines and farming properties in Lee county, Iowa. In 1882, as Iowa became thickly settled, he pushed on to Missouri and is now living in Kansas City, a life of peace and plenty in his declining years. His wife, now seventy-four years of age, is still at his side. She was, before her marriage, Miss Henrietta McEveny. They became the parents of eight children, two of whom have preceded them to the life beyond. The sons are Ralph, Harry and Alvin. Of the three daughters who are now living, Amy, the oldest is Mrs. Norman Smith of Salt Lake City, Utah; Jessie married Mr. Miles Barrett of Kansas City, Missouri; while Ina, the youngest, still brightens the home of her parents.

Alvin B. Lightner born at Keokuk, Iowa, February 11, 1863, obtained his early education in the district schools of that state. In Kansas City he secured his first employment as office boy for the Eureka Show Case Company, remaining with them for one year. He next served an apprenticeship of two years and a half with the W. A. Mount Candy Company of the same city. At the end of that time, he had thoroughly learned the business and was ready to start out for himself. Before settling down, however, he very much desired to see something of the country in which he lived and, knowing that his trade would more than pay his way anywhere, he first went to San Francisco where he obtained employment as foreman for the Rotger Candy Company. After two years' residence in Frisco he went to Sacramento, remaining there for about six months as an employee of a retail candy company. In 1888 he went to Seattle with the intention of establishing a candy factory at that point. When he arrived in the city, no empty rooms of any description were to be had, so nothing daunted, he opened his factory in a tent. After six months he decided that even Seattle, with all her noise and bustle, was not the city of his dreams. Next he tried Tacoma under circumstances similar. Tired of the coast, with its wet winters and insufficient quarters, he retraced his steps as far as Pueblo, Colorado, where he paused by the way to accept a position as foreman with the Connelly Rood Candy Company. After another year, he returned to his Kansas City home and started to work for Loos Brothers, then the largest candy manufacturers of the west. With this firm he remained for two years—a long time for Mr. Lightner in those days. It then appealed to him to open a business of his own in the suburb of Argentine. Selling out three years later, he decided to see the south and became foreman of the National Biscuit Company in Memphis, Tennessee. Within two years that company cut the candy-making department from their Memphis branch and sent Mr. Lightner to Nashville to assume control of the confectionary section there. In about the same length of time the department was closed in the Nashville branch also, and he was again transferred. This was Mr. Lightner's last move, as he was sent to Helena in 1902. Here he found, at last, the city that he hoped to make his home. For eight years he managed the candy business for this branch of the National Biscuit Company and closed up affairs for them when they discontinued, selling the fixtures and machinery. So much did Helena appeal to him that he decided to here invest his earnings in a factory of his own, rather than go for the company to some other location. Hence he built in 1910 both a home and factory in the city of his choice. Already the business is steadily growing. He has cut out the retail department entirely, selling only to dealers many of whom send from distant parts of the state to purchase from him. In addition to his property in Helena, Mr. Lightner is the owner of considerable real estate in Salt Lake City, Utah.

Mrs. Lightner was Miss Zena M. Jordan of Butte county, California. She assumed the former name in March of 1888. They became the parents of one child, who was not permitted to remain with them in the earthly home.

In his political views, Mr. Lightner is a Progressive Republican. He is also, like the true sons of Montana in his love for the line and the rod.

JAMES P. AND JOHN J. GRAINEY. The city of Helena, Montana, does not number among her citizenship any more valuable young business men than James P. and John J. Grainey, proprietors of the Helena Stamp Works. This thriving and progressive business concern was organized by James P. and John J. Grainey as the Helena Stamp Works in 1907, following their purchase of the stamp business of Gordon Card. Since their acquiring the new business it has made phenomenal progress, although the first year of its life was marked by many harassing difficulties which might have been sufficient to discourage less valiant and determined men than these. The present time, however, finds them in a most happy condition, due principally to the wise management on the part of the brothers, and the careful executive ability brought to bear by each in his particular branch of the business.

James P. Grainey was born in Toronto, Canada, on March 16, 1878. He is the son of John and Mary Ann (McGuire) Grainey, the father being born in Cook, Ireland, in 1851 and the mother in Woodchurch, Ontario, on August 14, 1852. The father came to Canada as a young man and settled in Toronto where he engaged in the express and coal business, and there died in 1912. The mother is now a resident of Helena, making her home with her sons. Five children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Grainey, as follows: Dennis J., who came to Montana in 1897 and was associated with his brothers in the restaurant business in Helena at the time of his death; James P.; John J.; Thomas, who died young; and Francis Grainey, a Christian Brother of the La-Salle order, now professor at Blantyre Industrial School at Toronto, Canada, and known as Brother Oswald. The parents of Mrs. Grainey, Owen and Katherine (O'Boyle) McGuire, were early residents of Ontario, where they passed their lives and died and were buried.

James P. Grainey was educated in the public schools of Toronto and following his graduation from the high school or academy, established himself in a picture-frame business. The business did not appeal to his inclinations on closer acquaintance, and in 1902 he sold out and came to Montana, where he opened up a restaurant three days after his arrival in Helena at 60 South Main street. For six years the Grainey brothers continued successfully to conduct that business. In the meantime they bought out the stock of Gordon Card who had conducted a rubber stamp and seal business, which later developed into the Helena Stamp Works, one of the exclusive businesses of the state. The rapid increase of the business necessitated the entire attention of the brothers and as a result, they sold the restaurant business to devote their entire attention to the Helena Stamp Works. In 1912 they added a full line of stationery and supplies, as well as a line of leather goods and novelties, and the present thriving business is the tangible result of their combined energy and executive ability, judiciously applied in the management of their affairs.

When John Grainey left school he was apprenticed to the printer's trade, on the Catholic Register at Toronto, which he thoroughly mastered in the course of his apprenticeship and at its close was identified for four years with the Bryant Press Company of Toronto. It was after the close of his experience with the latter named firm that he came to Montana, and he and his brother have been connected with various enterprises in Helena since that time. John Grainey is one of the most popular and well known young men in Helena today. He is at present the treasurer of the local lodge of the Knights of Columbus of which he is an ardent member, and a director in the Carrol Club.

James P. Grainey, like his brother, is a member of the Knights of Columbus, and has served that order as treasurer of its local lodge. He is secretary and treasurer of the Ancient Order of Hibernians and is a member of the Carrol Club of Helena.

On October 11, 1911, James Grainey was married to Miss Rose A. Kelly at Walkerville, Montana; she is a daughter of Jeremiah and Ann (Sullivan) Kelly, pioneer residents of Butte, who are still residents of that city. Mr. and Mrs. Grainey have one son, John Jeremiah Grainey, born August 3, 1912.

FRANK W. DRAKE. Frank W. Drake was born in Hennepin, Illinois, on the fifteenth day of July, 1871. His father, William Drake, a native of Putnam county, that state, a Civil war veteran and an Illinois farmer, lived on the old homestead until his death in 1904. He rushed to his country's service at the first call for volunteers and saw three years' service in the Eagle Brigade, Company H, of the Forty-seventh Illinois Regiment. Mrs. Drake, who before her marriage was Elizabeth Thomas, became the mother of nine children, of whom Frank W. is the second in age. Her useful life came to an end in her Illinois home in 1890.

Her son Frank left the Hennepin schools at the age of fifteen that he might be of assistance to his father in the work on the farm. Some years later he procured a piece of land which he cultivated for himself until 1896. Becoming interested in the talk of ore in Montana he left for Clinton, of that state, where he met with some little success in the mines of the vicinity. In July of 1902 he took up his residence in Helena. The third day after his arrival in the capital city, he purchased the Grand Pacific Hotel, acquiring the property on which it was located sometime during the ensuing year. The Grand Pacific was even in these days the "Big" hotel of Helena, having been established there in 1889. Mr. Drake proved himself an excellent landlord, conducting a thriving business even in the old building. In the summer of 1911 he caused the old structure to be entirely torn away and replaced by a fifty room house modern in every particular, well furnished and equipped. At this time the name was changed to "Hotel Drake." Its location, just opposite the Union Railway Station, is most convenient for the traveling public and Mr. Drake is known as one of the popular hosts of the west. He is a Republican, but one of those rare ones who is content to listen to the discussions of others—of those who are able to devote more time and thought to the subject than he.

Much of the success which Mr. Drake has attained in his business is due not more to his own ability than to the clever management and excellent judgment of his good wife, Maude Bacon Drake. Mr. and Mrs. Drake were married in Missoula, Montana, on the ninth day of March 1901. Mrs. Drake is the daughter of Ambrose and Susan Bacon, prosperous farmers of Illinois. She was born on a farm three miles from Putnam, in January of 1870. Her father, Mr. Bacon, died in April of her ninth year. Three little daughters and one son have come into the home of Mr. and Mrs. Drake. Elizabeth, the oldest of the girls was born in 1902, on the seventeenth of August, while her sister, Mary, was born the third day of June, 1904. Frances Dorothy, the baby girl, was born November 2, 1905, and the only son, Frank B., January 6, 1908. All of the children were born in their Helena home.

Mr. Drake is decidedly of domestic nature, enjoying, above all things, his little family. Their early education is one of his chief interests. Few evenings find him away from his fireside, the Eagles being the only fraternal order with which he affiliates.

MERLE D. CHATFIELD. Though still in the ranks of the younger business men of Helena, Merle D. Chatfield has a place in the list of the city's old and well-established commercial establishments in the position of secretary and general manager of one of the large drug concerns of the capital, which has both a prosperous history and a promising future. Mr. Chatfield is an Ohioan by birth and his native town in the Buckeye state is Bloomville. He was born on the second of October, 1881, and lived in the city of his birth until he was twenty-one years of age. Until he was eighteen, Mr. Chatfield attended school and immediately after his graduation went into his father's store to study pharmacy. This was a most desirable arrangement from several points of view, for Mr. Chatfield, Sr., was not only one of the leading pharmacists of the district in which he lives, but is also a man of marked talents in a number of lines. Frank Albert Chatfield was born at Painted Post, New York, from which state he moved to Ohio. He received his education in Oberlin College, perhaps the most famous of the western colleges for its scholarship and high standards. It was the intention of Mr. Chatfield to enter the ministry, and after his graduation from Oberlin he went to Germany, and spent three years in the University of Bonn. Previous to going abroad, Mr. Chatfield was for two years principal of one of the schools in Brooklyn, New York, and it was to take further training that he gave up this work and went to Germany. He was never ordained to the ministry, but when he returned to Ohio he went into the drug business at Bloomville and was thus engaged for a number of years. A man of scholarly attainments and an excellent linguist, he was also a power in public affairs, and few men are better known throughout eastern Ohio in the affairs of the Republican party. More than one candidate has been assisted into office by Mr. Chatfield, whose reputation as a stump speaker is of the highest, not only in Ohio but in the eastern states. Among the men for whom Mr. Chatfield has taken the stump is Senator Dick, for whom he has a warm personal regard aside from political considerations. Mr. Chatfield retired from his drug business some years ago, and at present is postmaster of Bloomville. Five of the six boys in the Chatfield family, as well as the mother and father are still living. Francis Chatfield died in infancy; the others are located in Montana and in Ohio in various lines of work. Grier Paul is an electrician at Galion, Ohio. Carl Ernest is in Helena, where he, too, is a druggist. Merrick is a merchant in Orwell, Ohio, and R. W. Chatfield is in the postal service in Tiffin, Ohio. The mother is a native of Bloomville, where she still resides with her husband. Her maiden name was Emma Watson.

When Merle Chatfield had completed his preparation under the excellent training of his father, he went west, locating first in Great Falls, Montana, where he was employed by the Great Falls Drug Company. This was in the year 1902, and he continued in their employ until he came to Helena, something like a year later. Here he became manager of the Western Drug Company, a wholesale and jobbing concern. His connection with them lasted for three years, and then he again entered the retail business in the establishment of R. E. Harris. At the end of another three years, Mr. Harris sold out his interests to E. H. Campbell. Mr. Chatfield remained with the business and in 1912, on January 10th, he purchased the store, forming a stock company (the Chatfield Drug Store) in which he is secretary and manager. The house is one of the oldest in Helena and it has a large and permanent trade among a most desirable class of patrons. Under Mr. Chatfield's management, even the former high standard has been raised and he has improved the store in a number of ways, ensuring a continuation of its past success on a greater scale than ever before.

Like his father, Mr. Chatfield has the tastes of a student. His favorite line of reading is in the realm of history, which he regards as the most stimulating and broadening of studies. He has made an exhaustive study of the history of his native state from which he has derived much pleasure and profit. Though a student, Mr. Chatfield has nothing of the recluse in his makeup, but on the contrary maintains his association with a large circle of friends, being one "who shows himself friendly." His fraternal affiliations include the Eagles, Moose and Modern Woodmen.

Mrs. Chatfield is also an Ohioan. She was formerly Miss Luella C. Geiger of Sycamore, Ohio. On June 22, 1905, she became the wife of M. D. Chatfield, and came as a bride to Helena. Their only child, Emma, was born in this city July 3, 1906, and is now just beginning school. Mr. and Mrs. Chatfield are members of the Presbyterian church, and are known among those interested in the advancement of the community along all lines, commercial, civic, educational and religious.

THOMAS PETTIGREW STEWART. Well known throughout the state of Montana as a forceful speaker on political questions as well as a clever and brilliant lawyer, Thomas Pettigrew Stewart, of Anaconda, is rapidly becoming one of the most influential of the younger men of the state. As a lawyer his arguments are noted for their clever, yet by no means shallow thought. He has much personal magnetism which is nothing more than a sympathetic understanding of other men, and this characteristic has been invaluable to him in his professional life. He has already held more than one public office, to which he has been elected on his merits alone, for he came to Montana as a stranger and practically unknown and everything that has come to him he has had to work for. In his upward fight for recognition he has won hosts of friends and these have been a more valuable asset to him than money.

Thomas P. Stewart was born on the 30th of October, 1872, in Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, the son of Gilbert Stewart. His father was born in Scotland, and was a member of the famous clan whose name he bears. His mother was Jessie Pettigrew, also of Scotch birth. Gilbert Stewart moved to Kansas in 1878 and there he now lives at Maple Hill. He spent his life as a farmer, but is now retired, his wife having died in Maple Hill, in 1908. Nine children were born to Gilbert Stewart and his wife, of whom five are living. David is a merchant in Maple Hill, Kansas; Thomas P.; Robert lives in Beardsley, Kansas, where he owns a ranch; George and William are deceased; John is a stockman of Kansas City, Missouri, and Jessie makes her home with her father in Maple Hill, Kansas.

Thomas Stewart was only a lad of six when his parents moved to Kansas. He grew up on his father's farm, going to the country schools in the winter months and during the remainder of the time helping his father and elder brother with the work of the farm, for money was scarce and good help was scarcer, and even his little strength was very useful. Unlike many farmers' boys he did not stop school as soon as he was big and strong enough to earn good wages in farm work, but continued to attend the country schools until he was eighteen years of age, when he was graduated. He then entered a business college at Topeka, Kansas, and thence went to Baker University, at Baldwin, that state. He was graduated from the latter institution with the degree of B. A. in 1899. He then entered the University of Kansas at Lawrence, where he took up the study of law. He remained for just about a year when he received an appointment to the census bureau at Washington, District of Columbia. He remained in the government service for two years but during all of this time never lost sight of his ambition to become a member of the bar. To this end he attended night lectures in the law department of the Columbian University, which is now George Washington University. The work which he was doing in the day was of that kind which leaves the brain feeling like a sponge out of which everything, even ambition, had been squeezed, and yet each evening he went doggedly to the lectures or to his law books, until finally he attained his goal and was graduated from the university with the degree of LL. B. Returning to his home state he was admitted to the bar of the state of Kansas in 1902. Deciding that the west offered a better field for a new and untried lawyer, he determined to go out to Montana. He therefore came to Anaconda, arriving on the 12th of October, 1902. He had no easy time of it, for Montana was not as it had been a decade or so before, a comparatively fresh field for any of the professions, but the determination which he showed in making his way through school came to his aid now, and it was not long before people were talking of the clever young lawyer. In 1907 he received his first public recognition, when he was appointed deputy county attorney. In the fall of 1910 he was elected to the position of county attorney on the Republican ticket, and this position he now fills.

As a member of the Republican party, Mr. Stewart has made himself a valuable aid during the various campaigns in which he has participated. A convincing and sincere speaker, his talks from the political platform have had a widespread influence. Like most men who have any insight into the future at all, he has great faith in the state of his adoption, and has invested considerable money in real estate. He is the owner of an attractive home and of the property where he has his office. In the fraternal world he is a member of the Elks, of the Scottish Clans and of the Modern Woodmen of America.

On the 19th of May, 1907, Mr. Stewart was married to Miss Celia L. Barteau, a native of Minnesota. They have one son, Sidney Gilbert Stewart.

Starting out in his first year at school with only a small amount of money, yet with his mind made up that somehow he was going to get the education he desired, Mr. Stewart accomplished it, paying his bills through his own efforts alone. Beginning life in an untried country, inexperienced in his profession, yet with his mind made up that he would win recognition and success, he realized his aim. With this record we have the keynote of Mr. Stewart's character and in a way of his success. He does not know how to surrender, but will fight to the last gasp, and often persistence will win a case where brilliant arguments might fall short. But Mr. Stewart has none of the hardness which is often associated with men of this type and he is ever willing and glad to give of his time and money toward the upbuilding of the city and the improvement of the state of his adoption.

DANIEL MATTHEW KELLY. A brilliant and able young lawyer of Boulder, Montana, is Daniel Matthew Kelly, who has been located in this city since 1908, and whose splendid standing as a lawyer when in Whitehall, Montana, was stamped with highest approval by his elevation to the office of county attorney of Jefferson county. He is now associated in the practice of the law with his brother, James Edward Kelly, their partnership constituting a combination of strong legal talent.

Mr. Kelly is one of the good citizens given to Montana by the Hawkeye state, his birth having occurred on August 19, 1880, in Blackhawk county, near Waterloo, Iowa. He received his early education in the country school and subsequently entered Telford College at Vinton, from which institution of learning he has graduated at the age of twenty-one years. Having come to the conclusion to adopt the law as his profession, he attacked his Blackstone at the University of Iowa in Iowa City. He first came to Montana in 1902 and for two years taught school in Madison and Beaverhead counties. He subsequently returned to the University of Iowa, where he finished his professional studies and in 1905 received the well-earned degree of LL. B. In the fall of the year mentioned he returned to Whitehall, Montana, and there first hung up his professional shingle. In the fall of the following year, in evidence of the high regard in which he was held, he was elected county attorney and served two terms in this office with satisfaction to all concerned. He removed to Boulder, at the beginning of his first term, with whose opportunities and future prospects he was much impressed, and here he is now located, secure in the possession of a large and growing clientele. He and his brother, James Edward Kelly, are in partnership.

Mr. Kelly, immediate subject of this brief record, is a man of strong character, and believes in doing his duty regardless of conditions, surroundings or influences, as was demonstrated during his first term in office. In May, 1907, the North Coast Limited, on the Northern Pacific Railway, was held up by masked men and Engineer Claw was killed. Towers, Hastings and Gruber were arrested for the crime, and in the hardest fought criminal case in the history of Montana, Mr. Kelly carried matters to a successful issue and secured convictions in each case. While he has no official connection with the county at present, he is occasionally called in as special prosecutor. Recently, in November, 1911, he convicted the two Pipestone Springs murderers. He has a fine legal mind, is of much promise, and stands for the success of good government.

Mr. Kelly was married June 3, 1908, to Lillian Wade, daughter of Samuel and Martha Wade, of Whitehall, Montana. Mr. and Mrs. Kelly maintain a charming and hospitable home and are held in high esteem. Mr. Kelly is Catholic in religious conviction and is affiliated with the Catholic order, the Knights of Columbus. He is an out-of-door man and very fond of fishing and camping. He has always taken a loyal interest in Democratic politics and has ever been ready to go anywhere, to do anything for the success of the cause. He had no legal residence prior to settling in Whitehall, and it is somewhat remarkable that he had been there but one year when he received the nomination to the county attorneyship.

Mr. Kelly's father, Patrick Daniel Kelly, was seventy-four years of age on November 1, 1911. He was born in Ireland, County Cork, came to America as a young man and he and his worthy wife still live on the farm which was the birthplace of their twelve children. The family consisted of nine boys and three girls, Mr. Kelly being the fifth boy. The mother, whose maiden name was Catherine Barry, was born in London, England, and is about sixty-four years of age at the present time. They are prominent and highly respected citizens and very proud of their children, who though early thrown upon their own resources were only made the stronger by it.

VICTOR E. LANSTYAK has for a number of years been a leading and influential citizen of Deer Lodge, Montana, and his activity in business affairs, his co-operation in public interests and his zealous support of all objects that he believes will contribute to the material, social and moral improvement of the community keeps him in the foremost rank of those to whom the city owes its development and present position as one of the most prosperous towns of Montana. His entire life has been characterized by upright, honorable principles and his admirable success in a business way is the direct outcome of his own well applied energy. He conducts the leading merchant-tailoring establishment in the city of Deer Lodge and owns a vast amount of valuable city realty.

A native of Austria-Hungary, Victor Emanuel Lanstyk was born February 1, 1879, and he is a son of Joseph and Barbara (Shidelszky) Lanstyk, both of whom were likewise born in Austria-Hungary. Mr. Lanstyk, of this notice, attended school in his native land until he had reached his twelfth year, when he entered upon an apprenticeship to learn the trade of merchant tailoring. At the age of sixteen years he had completed his apprenticeship and he then went to Kasav, in the state of Abavj, Austria-Hungary, where he worked for one year, at the expiration of which he went to Lipto, in the same country, remaining there for another year. Subsequently he went to the city of Vienna, where he worked for a year and he then went to Budapest, where he remained for two years. In 1900 he returned home for a brief visit and then came to the United States, settling in Cleveland, Ohio, where he was engaged in the work of his trade for six months, at the end of which he went to Alliance, Ohio. He remained in the latter place for one year and in 1902 came to Montana, locating in Hamilton, where he became manager of a tailoring business which he established for Ed. Doran. Nine months later he purchased the business and after continuing the same for two years at Hamilton removed his stock of goods to Deer Lodge, establishing a place on Main street. With the passage of time he has managed to build up a splendid patronage and he now holds distinctive prestige as the leading merchant tailor in Deer Lodge.

Inasmuch as Mr. Lanstyk came to the United States a poor boy, unfamiliar with the English language and without influential friends of any sort, his admirable success in life is remarkable. He is the owner of seventeen thousand dollars worth of realty in Deer Lodge, all of which has been accumulated through persistency and thrift. In politics he is a staunch supporter of Republican principles and in religious matters he and his family are devout members of the Catholic church, to whose charities and benevolences they are most liberal contributors.

On August 7, 1901, in the city of Cleveland, Ohio, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Lanstyk to Miss Mary Smith, a native of Austria-Hungary, whence she came to the United States in 1900. Mr. and Mrs. Lanstyk have one daughter, Mary Helen, whose birth occurred on the 14th of February, 1909.

ROBERT ERNEST RUNDELL is the second of eleven children born to Robert and Elizabeth Ann Rundell, natives of Cornwall, England. Mr. Rundell, senior, has held the same clerical position for more than twenty years and is trusted and honored by his employers. Both he and his wife are devout church workers. Mr. Rundell himself filling the pulpit on occasions. Of his eleven children all but the son who bears his name live within easy distance of their parents in Cornwall.

The son Robert was born in the Cornish home on the seventeenth day of September, 1880. He received his only education in the elementary schools of England. When thirteen years of age he was apprenticed to a smithy. He worked at the trade during the morning hours and attended school in the afternoons. For his services he received thirteen cents a day compensation.

As soon as he became of age he left his native home that he might join his uncle, James Bate, who had preceded him to America by some fifteen years. Mr. Rundell was loyal to his home in the British Isles and devoted to his family and childhood friends, but work was scarce and wages low. It seemed to him that little or no opportunity was offered there for the advancement of an ambitious young man.

Early in 1902 he reached Butte, Montana, and formed a partnership with the uncle before mentioned. They are now the proprietors of a large blacksmith establishment situated at 230 South Wyoming street. America has not disappointed him in the prospects she held out, and Mr. Rundell has never failed to make the best of every opportunity.

Almost all of the time spent away from his place of business is devoted to some order of the Masonic lodge. He realizes the truth of the statement that a man who lives up to the beliefs of blue lodge Masonry will be a Christian without the help of the Bible. With Mr. Rundell, himself, his masonry is almost his religion. Not only has he taken the first degrees, he wears also the double eagle and is an active member of the Shrine, which has been well called "The Good-fellowship Club" of the order.

He affiliates with the Methodist church and belongs to Mountain View Methodist church of that denomination. Almost his only relaxation from business aside from his Masonic association and an occasional evening at the theater is the rare day that he spends fishing in the nearby mountain streams. Mr. Rundell makes his home with his uncle and business partner at 517 South Wyoming street.

Mr. Bate came to this country in 1886, having been born in England on the eighth of March, 1868. For two years after his arrival in America, he lived in Champion, Michigan. Hearing much talk of the gold and silver found in Montana, he came west in 1888 and leasing some property worked diligently for four years. His efforts in mining, however, were never rewarded with marked success and on the coming of his nephew to Butte he was glad to join him in organizing their now lucrative business, under the firm name of Rundell and Bate.

Mr. Bate, like his nephew, is very active in Masonic life. He is a member of the blue lodge, the consistory and the Shrine, and is at present the master of the Rose Croix chapter of Butte, number two. There are few offices in these orders that he has not filled. Both he and his wife are members of the Eastern Star, Mrs. Bate being also interested in the work.

He was married in Butte to Miss Clara Stanaway, a young English girl who had come to this country with two of her sisters. After the death of their parents the girls set out alone to join a brother who was making good in Butte. In a short time after her arrival she had consented to become Mrs. John James Bate. Mr. and Mrs. Bate have but one child, a daughter, Claressa, born October 7, 1892. Miss Claressa has now completed the work of the Butte public schools and is attending the business college of the same city. Her father attended the English public schools but was apprenticed at the age of thirteen to a ship builder. On coming to Butte he realized his lack of education and himself took a brief course at this same business college. Mr. Bate and his family are members of the Church of England, but are not among those who devote much of their time to church affairs. As a family they are fond of books, Mr. Bate spending his leisure in reading or joining his nephew in his hunting and fishing expeditions in the mountains. He is also a lover of horse flesh, fond of both riding and driving. Perhaps his greatest indulgence is the fine horses he continually keeps for these purposes.

Mr. Bate is the son of Henry Bate, a ship builder who spent his entire life on British soil. He died on the twenty-fifth of May, 1909, at the good old age of seventy-eight. Susan Jane Bate, the mother, was born in England on September the twentieth, 1842. She is still living in Cornwall, where her son visited her in 1911. It was a pleasure to Mr. Bate to visit his mother and his boyhood home in company with the wife, who herself had also many friends in the mother country. Mrs. Henry Bate, well and hardy at the age of seventy-nine, is the mother of eleven children, eight boys and three girls, the son James being the eighth child.

Mr. Rundell and his uncle have built up in Butte a business that is a source of income to themselves and a credit to the city of their adoption.

JOHN N. GREDEN. The metropolis of Montana is favored in having as one of its efficient and popular executive officers John N. Greden, who is serving as city auditor, a position to which he was called not through political influence but by reason of his special eligibility. His administration of the important affairs entrusted to him has been such as to justify fully the confidence thus reposed in him and is a valued factor in the directing of the municipal activities of the city of Butte.

Mr. Greden claims the fine old Hawkeye state as the place of his nativity. He was born at Sioux City, Iowa, on the 24th of October, 1870, and is a son of John P. and Margaret (Tholl) Greden, both of whom were born in Belgium. John P. Greden came to the United States with his parents when he was fourteen years old. They were pioneers in Ozaukee county, Wisconsin, John P. Greden following agricultural pursuits there and mining in the Lake Superior region. In 1869 he removed to Sioux City, Iowa, and resided there until 1903, being engaged all of that time as a stationary engineer. In 1903 he located at Wilburton, Oklahoma, and died there soon after his arrival. To the excellent public schools of his native city Mr. Greden is indebted for his preliminary educational discipline, which was there effectively supplemented by a thorough course in the Sioux City Business College. After leaving this institution he was engaged in various lines of clerical work in Sioux City until 1896, when he went to British Columbia, at the time of the great inrush of settlers and prospectors in that section of the country. There he was concerned with prospecting and mining operations until 1902, and he met with excellent success in his various efforts. His establishing of his home in Montana was not a matter of premeditation. He came to Butte to attend the wedding of one of his sisters, in 1902, and as his mining experiences in British Columbia caused him to be specially interested in this line of industry and in the smelting enterprises, he naturally wished to view the operations of the largest smelter in the world, the same being located at Anaconda, this state. Incidentally he found lucrative employment at Anaconda, and there he held an executive office position for five years in the employ of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company. When the purchasing department of the company's business was removed to Butte he was transferred to this city, in the capacity of cashier of the department. This responsible office he retained until May, 1911, when the new city administration of Butte made overtures to secure his services in the office of city auditor, as his record and his ability as an accountant and executive had marked him as the most eligible and available candidate for the exacting municipal office, which was tendered him, as already stated, without reference to political affiliations or influence. He accepted the appointment and has since given a most careful, discriminating and effective service, which has proved of marked value to the city. Of genial and courteous nature, his service in public office has gained to him in the interim a wide acquaintanceship in his home city, and here his circle of friends is coextensive with that of his acquaintances. He is a Democrat in his political allegiance but has never had any desire to enter the turmoil of practical politics. Mr. and Mrs. Greden are members of the Catholic church.

The year 1908 bore record of the marriage, on the 3rd of June, of Mr. Greden to Miss Norah O'Keefe, who was born in the state of Massachusetts but reared in the west. She is a daughter of Timothy and Ellen (O'Brien) O'Keefe, who were pioneers of Nevada and who have been honored residents of Butte, Montana, for many years. Mr. and Mrs. Greden are popular factors in the social activities of their home city and their family circle is brightened by their fine little son, John J. who was born on the 6th of April, 1909.

ALBERT H. LILLEY, M. D. Admirably fortified in the learning of his chosen profession and known for marked ability in the application of his knowledge, Dr. Lilley is recognized as one of the representative physicians and surgeons of Montana and is established in a substantial and important practice in the city of Butte, where he is popular alike as a loyal and progressive citizen and as a physician of marked ability.

Dr. Albert Henry Lilley claims the old Bay state as the place of his nativity and is a scion of families early founded in America. He was born at New Bedford, Bristol county, Massachusetts, on the 8th of December, 1878, and is a son of Dr. William A. and Mary (Robnolt) Lilley, the former of whom was born in England and the latter in Pennsylvania. The father was for forty years engaged in the practice of medicine at New Bedford, Massachusetts, was known as an able and devoted representative of his profession and was a citizen of prominence and influence in the community, where he ever commanded the fullest measure of popular confidence and esteem. He was summoned to the life eternal in 1909 and his widow still resides at New Bedford.

The public schools of his native town afforded Dr. Albert H. Lilley his early educational advantages, which included the curriculum of the high schools and that of the Mosher preparatory school, an excellent institution in which he completed his academic training. A perhaps inherent predilection led him to adopt as his vocation in life that profession which has been signally dignified and honored by the long and faithful services of his father, and he was afforded the best of advantages in the prosecution of his professional studies, which were initiated under the effective preceptorship of his father. He finally entered the medical department of historic old Harvard University, and in the same he was graduated as a member of the class of 1902, with the well-earned degree of Doctor of Medicine. After his graduation Dr. Lilley passed a few months in active professional work in association with his honored father, and in this connection he gained varied and effective clinical experience. In the meanwhile he took unto himself a wife, and on the 14th of October, 1902, he arrived with his bride in Butte, Montana, where he has since been actively and successfully engaged in the general practice of his profession, though he gives special attention to the surgical branch of the same, in which his skill has been attested in manifold operations, both major and minor. His graduation, marriage and initiation of practice all occurred in the same year and indicated his command of exigencies and his well-ordered plans for the future. In the Montana metropolis he has gained the high regard of his professional confreres and also of the general public, and he is essentially broad-minded and public-spirited in his civic attitude. He is identified with the American Medical Association, the Montana State Medical Society and the Silver Bow County Medical Society, and he keeps in close touch with the advances made in both departments of the profession to which he gives unfaltering allegiance and in which his success offers the best voucher for his ability. In politics he gives his support to the Republican party. He is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity and holds membership in the Silver Bow Club, one of the representative civic organizations of Butte.

On the 23d of August, 1902, was solemnized the marriage of Dr. Lilley to Miss Emma T. Coffin, who was born on beautiful Prince Edward Island, Canada, and she is a popular factor in the social activities of her home city. Dr. and Mrs. Lilley have a winsome little daughter, Mary Elizabeth.

IKE EUGENE ODELL PACE is a young Montana attorney of no small ability. As a Democratic politician of the progressive school he is in much demand as a public speaker. His growing practice, however, precludes his giving much personal attention to the political game.

He was born in Hamilton, Caldwell county, Missouri, in 1873. When two years of age his parents with their four children moved to Lincoln, Nebraska, where the older children, two boys and a girl, immediately entered the public schools. The youngest son, Ike Eugene Odell, after completing his elementary education entered the department of liberal arts in the University of Nebraska. After completing this course the degree of Master of Arts was conferred upon him. The following autumn he was admitted to the law school of the same university, from which he was graduated two years later.

While in college Mr. Pace was one of Nebraska's star athletes, wearing an "N" through almost his entire university career. He was captain of the university football team in one of its record years. He was at one time also the captain and manager of the base ball nine. It was during his college days that he first became interested in military affairs. Brigadier General Pershing was in command of the military department of the university, and according to Mr. Pace and his comrades, few better soldiers ever honored a country with their services. It was largely through his influence that so many of the young men of the Nebraska University discontinued their studies and sacrificed their ambitions at the first call from Washington in 1898.

During the Spanish-American war, which followed, he was appointed drill master of the regiment of which Mr. William Jennings Bryan was colonel. At one time during his service, when the adjutant was ill of a fever, Mr. Pace was given charge of the adjutant's headquarters. It was in the evenings of these months when Mr. Bryan spent his leisure in Pace's tent that the warm friendship sprung up between them. This friendship has weathered all of the intervening years, and still remains as genuine as in 1898. Mr. Bryan resigned before the close of the struggle, and the regiment went to Cuba under General Vifquain, Mr. Pace remaining until it was finally mustered out, being at that time a lieutenant.

Mr. Pace doubtless inherited his taste for military affairs from his father, Lewis Clarke Pace, who was a distinguished colonel during the Civil war. Mr. Pace, Senior, was a West Virginia, having been born in that state in 1837. Following the desires of his parents, he graduated from a theological seminary and served as pastor of several Methodist parishes. In after years he engaged in the wholesale paper business in Lincoln, Nebraska. During the war of the Rebellion he was colonel of the Thirteenth Missouri Cavalry. In the battle of Shiloh he was severely wounded and finally captured. Once, later on in the war, he was captured, but released when an exchange of prisoners was effected.

After locating in Lincoln, Nebraska, he became much interested in politics, being an enthusiastic silver Republican. It was Mr. Pace who made the speech which seconded the nomination of William J. Bryan for president in the convention of Silver Republicans held at St.

Louis in 1900. He is still active in the political affairs of both Nebraska and Montana, being much in demand as a public speaker. Although he has never changed his legal residence from Lincoln, his business interests are largely in Montana. Each summer he spends in the latter state on business connected with the Pace Woods Improvement Company, of which he is one of the originators. He is almost as well known throughout Montana as in Lincoln.

His wife, who before her marriage was Vashti Jane Odell, was born in Evansville, Indiana, in 1844. Her parents moved to Carmi, Illinois, when she was yet a child, and it was there that she met her future husband. She is domestic in her tastes and devoted to her Lincoln home. It is perhaps her loyalty that has held Mr. Pace a resident of Nebraska. They are the parents of three sons and one daughter, of whom Ike Eugene Odell is the youngest of the family.

After his return from Cuba young Mr. Pace began the practice of his profession. So soon as this was well established he turned his attention to the yet more important affairs of life. On the twenty-fourth day of September, 1902, he was joined in marriage to Miss Flora Roberts, a girl prominent in Lincoln, the daughter of Mrs. Isabel Roberts. The father died during the infancy of his daughter. Mrs. Roberts, however, being competent and efficient, was able to educate the family through her own efforts. She now resides in Chicago.

Ever since their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Pace have been counted among the popular residents of Whitehall, Mr. Pace having practiced here for two years before bringing his bride to the west. Although a good lawyer and, like his father, a ready speaker, he has many outside interests. Since his boyhood he has shown great business acumen, his first money was earned in Lincoln, when at the age of seven he started raising chickens for the local market. At the present time there is not in the entire valley a man so well informed as to the land condition and values. It is, perhaps, largely owing to his training in the athletic sports and his soldier life in the open that Mr. Pace still finds ranch development as attractive as the routine work of the law office. Though known to be one of the most able attorneys of Montana, he also holds the record of having developed more ranches than any other one man in this section of the country, having brought under cultivation some twenty large tracts of land.

He has never lost his fondness for out-door sports, time and the grind of the law alone preventing his still taking some part in them. His interest in politics is active, but he might almost be called an independent in his views. He, however, affiliates with the Democratic party. He was the prime mover in the organization of the Jefferson County Fair at Whitehall, which held its first exhibition in 1912. He became the first manager of the organization.

Although not excessively orthodox, he has never completely severed his relation with the Methodist church, to which his father and his grandfather were so devoted. He is a member of the Ancient Free and Accepted Order of Masons, but aside from this is a member of no other secret order, his extensive law practice consuming many of his evenings as well as his days.

Mr. and Mrs. Pace are active in the social as well as the commercial life of Whitehall. They have recently completed one of the most attractive residences of the city, where with their young son, Clarke Roberts Pace, aged eight, they are at home to their friends.

RICHARD C. MONAHAN, M. D. A skilful, active, and highly esteemed physician and surgeon of Butte, Richard C. Monahan, M. D., has built up an extensive and lucrative practice in this thriving city, and is fast winning for himself a prominent and honorable name in the medical profession of Silver Bow county. A son of the late John Monahan, he was born, July 6, 1876, in Clinton county, Iowa, of Irish ancestry. The founder of the branch of the Monahan family from which he is descended immigrated to this country from Ireland in colonial days, and having offered his services as a soldier during the Revolutionary war was killed at the Battle of Bunker Hill, June 16, 1775. The doctor's paternal grandfather migrated from the States to Canada, being among the first trail-blazers and lumber merchants of Ottawa, Canada, where he lived for three years, during the first two years of his life in that region seeing no white man.

John Monahan was born in Canada, but spent a large part of his life in Iowa, where his death occurred, July 4, 1906, aged sixty-eight years. During the progress of the Civil war, he enlisted in Company K, Twenty-sixth Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and saw much service under two famous commanders, General Logan and General Grant. He was at the front in several engagements of note, including those at Vicksburg, Cold Harbor, Missionary Ridge, Arkansas Post, and the Wilderness, serving three years, and being five times wounded, but never taken prisoner. At the battle in Arkansas Post, one hundred and fifteen men belonging to his regiment were killed, and many wounded. At the siege of Vicksburg, he received wounds from which he never fully recovered. He was subsequently promoted to commander of Baker Post, in Clinton, Iowa, and also had national honors conferred upon him. After the war he engaged in mercantile pursuits as a dealer in heavy hardware in Iowa and as a merchant met with much success. He married Ann Powers, who was born in Rockford, Illinois, December 25, 1856, and to them eleven children were born, of whom ten are living, five sons and five daughters, the doctor being the third child in succession of birth.

Acquiring his rudimentary education in the public schools of Charlotte, Iowa, Richard C. Monahan continued his studies for three years in the University of Notre Dame, Indiana, and in 1900, after a four years course, was graduated from the medical department of the University of Illinois with the degree of M. D. The following two years Dr. Monahan remained in Chicago, Illinois, being an interne at Mercy Hospital, the Chicago Eye and Ear Infirmary, and in the State Charitable institutions, his experience in that city having been of great value to him. Coming to Montana in 1902, he has since been active and successfully engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery at Butte.

In 1898, during the Spanish-American war, the doctor enlisted in the Second Illinois Volunteer Infantry and served at Chickamauga under Major Frank G. Lydston, seeing, however, no active service, and was subsequently commissioned as captain in the medical corps of the Second Montana Regiment. In 1907 Dr. Monahan was first commissioned surgeon general, becoming a member of Governor Toole's staff, and he is now surgeon general of the state of Montana, and has annual service in the medical and surgical departments of the government schools. He is likewise local surgeon for the Oregon Short Line Railway, and chief examiner for the North Western Mutual Life Insurance Company, of Milwaukee, Wisconsin. In 1910 the doctor was the Republican nominee for representative to the state legislature, but was defeated by twenty-nine votes, and was also a candidate for the mayoralty nomination in 1911.

Dr. Monahan belongs to the Silver Bow Medical Society, of which he was president in 1908; and to the State Medical Society, which he served as second vice-president in 1908 and as first vice president in 1911. He is a member of the University Club, and of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks.

The doctor married, in Salt Lake City, Utah, on May 4, 1908, Marie M. Maguire, who was born in Utah, a daughter of John and Mary Maguire. Two children have blessed the union of Dr. and Mrs. Monahan, namely: Dorothy, born May 5, 1909, who died June 21, 1909, and Evelyn, Mary, born April 11, 1910.

GEORGE H. BELCHER, manager of the Slayton Mercantile Company, of Lavina, Montana, stands in the front rank of the many self-made men of this section, and in enterprise, energy and progressiveness is second to none. Starting his business career at the age of fifteen years, he has been the architect of his own fortunes in a marked degree, and is now recognized as one of his community's substantial business citizens. Mr. Belcher's birth occurred in Gallia county, Ohio, May 9, 1880. His father, Dr. John W. Belcher, was a native of Virginia, and for many years was a well-known professional man in Ohio, where he had his last home, although his death occurred in Montana, in his sixty-seventh year, while visiting his sons. He was married in Ohio to Mary A. Stewart, who survives him and makes her home in her native Buckeye state, and they had a family of seven children, George H. being the sixth in order of birth and the youngest son. Three other sons now live in Montana: John F., who is married and lives at Irene; William P., married and a resident of Foster; and Ralph H., who is single and a citizen of Billings.

The education of George H. Belcher was limited to attendance at the public schools in Ohio, after leaving which, at the age of fifteen years, he began working in a store as clerk, and so continued for four years. He then engaged in agricultural pursuits, but after two years went to West Virginia, where for a short time he was identified with mercantile pursuits. In 1902 he came from West Virginia to Montana, first settling at Billings, and during the next year drove a merchandise wagon all over the surrounding country, meeting with a fair measure of success. Subsequently he located in Roundup, there forming a partnership with his brother, under the firm name of Belcher Brothers. One year later a branch store was opened in Lavina, both establishments being conducted for a year, when the business was moved to Lavina and conducted for four years and then sold to D. W. Slayton, the new firm of Slayton Mercantile Company being established and incorporated. Mr. Belcher then bought an interest in the concern and became its general manager, a position which he holds at the present time. This venture has proved an unqualified success, the credit for which must be given to Mr. Belcher's tireless industry, financial integrity and personal attention to details, in connection with his long experience in mercantile pursuits. He is treasurer of the Lavina Commercial Club, a position which he has held since its organization, and has manifested a deep interest in educational matters, being a member of the school board, of which he was at one time chairman. In political matters he is a staunch Democrat, but takes none other than a good citizen's interest in public affairs. That he believes fully in Montana land as an investment has been shown by his purchase of a fine ranch, located near Lavina, which he devotes to the raising of stock. Although not a member of any religious body, he leans towards Methodism, and Mrs. Belcher is president of the Ladies' Aid Society.

On July 3, 1901, Mr. Belcher was married to Miss Bessie M. Mossman, the estimable daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Mossman, of Waterloo, Ohio, and three children have been born to this union: Rollin M., who is deceased; and Robert M. and Mabel E.

JOHN B. AMOS was born in Gainesville, Texas, on the 24th day of December, 1879. His father, Charles B. Amos, of Bowling Green, Kentucky, is at present a resident of Princedale, Arkansas, where he is managing a large estate. The Amos family came to America from England and settled originally in West Virginia. Samuel Murrell, maternal great-grandfather, fought in the War of 1812.

Mr. Charles Amos married Miss Huntly Murrell of Warren county, Kentucky. Miss Murrell's people were of Scotch English descent. They settled in Kentucky in an early day, her grandfather preempting on a thousand acres of land. Most of this land is still in the possession of the Murrell family. Mr. and Mrs. Amos were married in a little country church at Mount Olive, ten miles north of Bowling Green. Both being born and bred in the Blue Grass State, it was always to them the dearest, and here most of their seven children grew to manhood and womanhood although business concerns caused them to reside for a time in both Texas and Arkansas. They were a closely united and devoted family until the death of the mother in 1892.

The oldest daughter, Alma, is now teaching in the schools of Oakland, Kentucky. Katherine, now Mrs. William Rowland, is a resident of Woodburn, Kentucky. George M. is the treasurer of the Mutch & Young Company of Butte, Montana. He is as yet unmarried. The next brother, Charles, associated with the same company in the capacity of secretary, was married on the 12th of December, 1911, to Miss Lucy Vivian, a daughter of Morton Vivian, who came west from Missouri. Joseph C. B. Amos, a bookkeeper by profession, is with the C. & A. Mining Company in the capacity of bookkeeper. His headquarters, at the present, are at Bisbee, Arizona. Henry S., the youngest member of the family, is employed as clerk in the large mercantile business of Butte, Montana, of which his brothers now own a controlling interest.

John B. Amos was the third born of the seven children. Although born in Texas, he spent his early life in Woodbury, Kentucky, where he completed the course in the local high school. After teaching a term in one of the district schools of the county, he went to Bowling Green and took a course in the business college there. In July, 1902, he followed the advice of the great Greeley, "Go west, young man, and grow up with the country!" This he literally did and since 1902 both Mr. Amos and "the country" where he located have made an astonishing growth. The particular part of the country is Butte, Montana. Immediately upon arriving, he obtained employment in the mercantile firm of Mutch & Young, a firm that had been in operation in the same location for something like ten years. So intelligently did he grasp the business and so thoroughly had he won the confidence of his employers that when, before the close of the year, the firm incorporated, he was permitted to invest his savings and to become an active member of the company. He now doubled his efforts and devoted his entire time and ability to the betterment of the firm. Nor did his efforts go unrewarded. So great was the confidence of his fellow stockholders that upon the death of Mr. Alfred K. Young, in November, 1903, Mr. Amos was in the following June chosen president and general manager of the establishment. Mr. Young had held that position for many years and had built up the business to its large proportion. He thoroughly participated, however, in the confidence shown by the directors in choosing for his successor young Mr. Amos, who had been with them but twenty-three months and whose financial interests in the company were, naturally, not of the largest.

John B. Amos did not for a moment permit those associated with him to doubt the wisdom of their judgment. Since the time of his election, now nine years ago, the business has been rapidly increasing in volume. The firm is doing an annual retail business in grain, hay, feed, furnishing goods, groceries, etc., that amounts to over one hundred thousand dollars. They are now one of the largest retail establishments in the city of Butte and do decidedly the biggest business in the neighboring district.

When Mr. Amos was given the direct management of this company, his first thought, as it had always been, was of the old home back in Kentucky. As soon as it was possible he sent for his three younger brothers and gave them an opportunity to "make good" with this big house. Following the example of the brother who had blazed the trail, they needed little or no urging along this line and are now, as has been elsewhere stated, treasurer and secretary of the firm, respectively.

The Amos brothers are, like most good Kentuckians of their blood, Jeffersonian Democrats in their political affiliations though none of them have taken an active interest in the politics of their adopted state. Mr. John B. Amos still retains his membership in the Presbyterian church. He has never taken upon himself the responsibilities of marriage.

By dint of his untiring effort and his southern diplomacy and optimism, he has created, not only for himself but for those nearest to him, a position enviable in the western business world. To those who have followed it as diligently as has Mr. Amos, the advice of the great eastern journalist has not been in vain.

Mr. Amos resides at 744 E. Mercury street while the business house of Mutch, Young & Company is situated at 930 Talbot avenue.

LEWIS J. DUNCAN, mayor of Butte, was born in the city of St. Louis, Missouri, on the 4th of May, 1857, and is the son of Edwin and Emma S. (Francis) Duncan, the former of whom was born in the state of New York, of staunch Scotch lineage, and the latter of whom was born in England, whence she came with her parents to America when she was ten years of age, the family home being established at Quincy, Illinois in which state she was reared to maturity. Edwin Duncan removed to Missouri when a young man and there held various positions of trust. His marriage was solemnized in St. Louis, that state, where he continued to maintain his home until his death, in 1860, at the age of thirty-two years. Of this union were born two children, of whom both are now living. Mrs. Emma S. (Francis) Duncan was born in 1832 and lived to a venerable age. She passed the closing years of her life in Salt Lake City, Utah, where she died in August, 1909. In 1867 she contracted a second marriage, becoming the wife of Samuel Wood, and of this union two children were born.

The early educational discipline of Lewis J. Duncan was received in the public schools of Quincy, Illinois, to which place his widowed mother returned after the untimely death of the husband and father. At the age of seventeen years Mr. Duncan entered Hanover College, a Presbyterian institution at Hanover, Indiana, where he was a student in the year 1874-1875. He then returned to Quincy, Illinois, where he took up the study of law. He was admitted to the bar in 1878, at the age of twenty-one years, and for the ensuing two years he continued in the practice of his profession at Quincy. He found the dry intricacies and prosaic work of the law not to his liking, and accordingly retired from practice to accept a position in the employ of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Company in the freight department at East St. Louis, Illinois, where he remained for some time. Returning later to Quincy, after a few months he assumed the position of bookkeeper for a hardware firm, and later with the extensive wholesale dry-goods house of Isaac Lessem & Company, with which concern he continued to be identified for seven years. In the meantime and after working hours, he pursued extensive studies in science, philosophy, belles-lettres etc., for self-culture, devoting at least one hour every night to this purpose, and at the end of five years had qualified himself for the Unitarian ministry. On the 1st of March, 1899, Mr. Duncan accepted the pastorate of the Unitarian church at Sheffield, Illinois, and this incumbency he retained for two years. He forthwith became an influential factor in connection with more generic work of his church and resigned his pastoral charge to assume the duties of field secretary for the Unitarian conference of Illinois. This important office he held for two years, within which time he accomplished admirable work, including the organization of several churches in various sections of the state. Among the most notable of these was the Church of Good Will at Streator, and of this church he accepted the formal pastorate in the autumn of 1893. He retained this pastorate five years. From Streator he removed to Milwaukee, Wisconsin, where he remained for two years as lecturer of the Milwaukee Ethical Society. After resigning this office he followed commercial pursuits for about two years, and at the same time conducted a number of study-classes in literature for adults—an avocation in which he has always delighted and in which he has been unusually successful.

In 1902 Mr. Duncan was called to Montana to take charge of the organization of the Unitarian church in the city of Butte, and his constructive ability and fine oratorical powers proved potent in the upbuilding of a representative religious organization. He served as pastor of this church until March 1, 1910, when he gave up his charge and withdrew from the ministerial profession, for the reason that his views were more ethical and theological and he believed that his powers for usefulness could be exercised more effectually outside of the church. He had become deeply interested in the welfare of the laboring classes and identified himself closely with the Socialist party, with which he had been identified since 1902, and the principles and policies of which most clearly represented his personal ideals and views as touching matters of public weal. He became secretary of the Socialist party in Montana and admirably maneuvered the political forces at his command. He threw into the contest the full force of his splendid powers and well showed his capacity for leadership in thought and action. In 1911 he was made the candidate of his party for the office of mayor of Butte, and on the 11th of March of that year he was elected to this office by a most gratifying majority, this being a signal victory for the party in the state. Mr. Duncan, while secretary of the Socialist party in the state, took an active part in bringing about complete organization of the Socialist forces, and the new policies thus introduced have been pursued ever since and have increased the membership fully three hundred per cent. Mayor Duncan is affiliated with the Masonic fraternity, with Federal Labor Union No. 12,985, of Butte, and holds membership in the University Club in his home city.

At Quincy, Illinois, on the 26th of October, 1882, was solemnized the marriage of Mayor Duncan to Miss Kate Keath, daughter of Uriah H. Keath, who has long been one of the representative members of the bar of that city, where he still maintains his home, his wife, whose maiden name was Carrie Turner, having been summoned to eternal rest in 1889. Mr. and Mrs. Duncan became the parents of two children, Edith, who was born at Quincy, Illinois, in 1886, died in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, in 1904; Edwin, who was born at Sheffield, Illinois, in 1890, is now one of the electricians for the Great Falls power station, at Butte, Montana.

OLIVE P. BARBER has spent his life in the pursuits which we think of as being typically "western," as he has been familiar with frontier conditions ever since his boyhood. His grandfather, Isaac Barber, was one of the early settlers of Texas, moving to the Lone Star State from Missouri by wagon. He is still a resident of Texas and is now seventy-eight years old. A. C. Barber, the son of Isaac, was born in Texas in 1859, and, as he grew up, he continued in the cattle business, in which his father had started upon coming to the state. He had a large ranch near Florence, Texas, and was one of the leading stockmen of that section of the country. It was at Florence that Olive Barber, the subject of this sketch, was born, on March 12, 1883.

Until he finished the eighth grade, Mr. Barber attended the public schools at Florence, and then he gave up school to work on the ranch of a large cattle owner of that district. Riding the range was an occupation which had possibilities of adventure which appealed to the young man. Thrilling experiences were not denied him, while he followed the life of a cowboy. There were lively skirmishes with cattle rustlers and with wild beasts to secure him against monotony, and by the time he was eighteen, he had a pretty thorough acquaintance with the vicissitudes of ranch life. It was at this age that he left Texas and, with his father, went to Wilsons Creek, Washington. His father conducted a hotel there for some time, and then moved to central Oregon, where he now owns and operates a large ranch, being both a stock raiser and a general farmer.

Olive Barber did not remain long in Washington, but went to Idaho, and in 1902 came to Montana. He first located at Great Falls, where he secured a position as driver for the Northern Express Company. After a year and a half in this position, he came to Butte and did clerical work for the Pacific Express Company until it was bought up by the American Express Company. When these two corporations were merged Mr. Barber was made manager of the American company in Butte, and he still holds that responsible position, and fills it to the satisfaction of his employers and their patrons.

On October 10, 1911, Mr. Barber was united in marriage to Miss Clara Lombard of Tulsa, Oklahoma. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Lombard, are well-known citizens of Tulsa, where they still reside. Mr. Barber's maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Stapp, were born in Texas and still live there. His mother, whose maiden name was Ida Stapp, is living and presides over her husband's home in central Oregon.

Like all good Texans, and many good Montanians, Mr. Barber is a Democrat in political policy. He belongs to the Masons, and to the Silver Bow Club. He has the genial manner which characterizes the westerner, and particularly the southwesterner. As is to be expected of one of his training, he is devoted to out-door life. Popular, cordial and capable, he is one of the younger business men of Butte whose future is full of promise, and whose work will be sure to find recognition.

SAMUEL D. GOZA has been connected with the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company in Montana for the past twenty-two years, and in that time has established a reputation that is more than state-wide. His accomplishments in the insurance field have been of a most pleasurable degree and have won high encomiums from his company, as well as secured to him a valuable position as general agent for Montana and northern Wyoming. The nature of his work has brought him a far reaching acquaintance among men of affairs and his genial and always pleasing personality have won to him a circle of friends that is seldom the lot of any man.

Born in Bolivar county, Mississippi, October 21, 1866, Samuel D. Goza is the son of Samuel D. and Mary (Pickett) Goza, the former a native of Louisville, Kentucky, and the latter of Mississippi. The father was a planter of considerable wealth, and he served in the Confederacy throughout the war, in which he lost the major part of his possessions, and died in 1867. The mother died shortly after her husband, leaving their son to the care of an aunt and uncle who cared for him until he was able to make his own way in the world. He was educated in the common schools of Leadville, Colorado, to which place the family removed in 1879, although his schooling was of a limited order at the best, his principal education coming to him in the school of experience. In 1888, when he was twenty-two years old, Mr. Goza went to Aspen, Colorado, where he conducted a newspaper in the interests of the Harrison campaign until 1890. In that year he became associated with the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance Company at Aspen and Leadville, later removing to Denver as district manager for western Colorado, and in that work he was more than ordinarily successful. So satisfactory were his efforts that in May, 1902, the company offered him the position of manager for the state of Montana, a position which he accepted and which he has since then filled successfully and satisfactorily. Since that time the company has increased his territory by adding the northern part of Wyoming, and he is capably handling the extended territory and bringing up the standing of the company in the west in a most agreeable manner. Between January, 1902, and January, 1912, Mr. Goza increased the business in effect in his territory from $3,900,000 to $10,000,000, a most phenomenal increase in one decade.

The political persuasions of Mr. Goza inclined him toward the Republican party, and he has always supported its interests in every campaign, until June, 1912, when he became a supporter of the Progressive party. He is well versed in political lore and is in close touch with the leaders of the Republican party, from the greatest down to the least, although he has never used his power in that respect as an aid to office-getting, a thing for which he has had no desire or inclination, being well content to conduct the affairs entrusted to him by his company and let politics be left to the politicians, albeit he has always been true to his duties and responsibilities as a citizen, even to the uttermost. Mr. Goza has himself to thank for much of the prosperity which has come to him. Orphaned in infancy, he received but little schooling after he was thirteen years old until in his young manhood when he attended Denver University two terms, working in summer and paying his own way through. He has always been a student and has accomplished more in the way of book learning than many a college bred man with greater privileges but less ambition than Mr. Goza.

On February 9, 1890, at Leadville, Colorado, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Goza to Miss Etta Newby, the daughter of J. L. Newby, and Martha Williams Newby, native of Indiana, having moved to Colorado in 1876. Mrs. Goza was born February 9, 1872, in Iowa. Four children have been born to them, two of whom are deceased. Those living are: Ned S. Goza and Samuel D. Goza, Jr.

MAX VITT. One of Butte's most substantial, progressive and prosperous business men and one of the best known and most highly esteemed citizens of the community, Max Vitt has achieved success in life to the present time and is entitled to high credit for the excellent record he has made in business and in connection with the promotion of the general welfare of the several localities in which he has lived. But his success has come as the result of his own capacity, industry and good management, and is not due in any degree to favoring circumstances or outside help in any way.

Mr. Vitt is not a native of Montana, or even of the United States, but he is as deeply interested in the progress and advancement of his adopted state and country as if he were, and as loyal to their institutions as any of our citizens who were to the manner born. His life began in Baden, Germany, on May 8, 1864, and he obtained all the schooling he ever got in that country. When he reached the age of eighteen he came to the United States and located in Brooklyn, New York, where he went to work for one of the leading bakers of the city, and continued to work for him until he mastered the trade. He then moved to Hartford, Connecticut, and during the next sixteen years was in the bakery business for himself in that city.

During all these years, however, the West wore a winning smile for him, and at length the time came when he was unable to longer resist its persuasions. Accordingly, at the end of the period last mentioned he sold his interests in Hartford, and journeyed westward as far as St. Paul, Minnesota, where he remained a short time, then came on to Butte, and here he has ever since resided, having arrived in the city in 1902. For six months after his arrival he worked at the Vienna bakery on East Park street, and then went into the employ of Horst's cafe, in whose service he was engaged three years, making a good record and winning hosts of friends.

By this time he deemed it advisable to try another venture in the bakery business on his own account, and he left the cafe and started, on Utah avenue, a union bakery, which he operated for one year. At the end of that time he saw a better opening and established the Manhattan bakery at 205 West Park, which he has conducted continuously and with success and profit ever since. He knows his business thoroughly and omits no effort necessary on his part to make its products worthy of the highest praise and altogether satisfactory to his patrons. His shop has an excellent name in all parts of the city and enjoys a very large trade.

Mr. Vitt is a son of Pantuleon and Paulina (Maier) Vitt, natives of Baden, Germany, also. The father was an educator of considerable local renown, and for many years was principal of one of the important schools of his locality in the Fatherland. He died in 1905, at the age of seventy-eight years. The mother died in the same place in 1903, aged sixty-eight. They both stood well in their community and rendered it continued and appreciated service for a great many years, and when "life's fitful fever" was over with them, their remains were laid to rest with every manifestation of popular esteem and cordial approval.

Max Vitt was married in Hartford, Connecticut, on October 26, 1886, to Miss Anna Cliff of that city. They have five children: Joseph, who was born at Rockville, Connecticut, on May 30, 1887, completed his education at the Butte Business College; Karl, whose birthplace was the same as Joseph's, and whose life began on December 25, 1890; Emil, who is also a native of Rockville, and was born on December 13, 1891; Alice, who came into being in Hartford on August 2, 1894, and was graduated from the high school there after a full course of instruction; and Herbert, who was born in Hartford on January 2, 1898, and who is now a student in Butte's high school. Joseph, Karl, Emil and Alice assist their father in conducting his business, and are valuable aids to him, not only in the work they do, but also in the extensive trade they bring to the bakery by reason of their popularity in the city.

Mr. Vitt is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows in fraternal relations and a Socialist in political faith and allegiance. In his native land he passed through a thorough high school course of instruction and then pursued a special course in surveying, intending to make that his profession in life. He has, however, found mercantile life profitable and satisfying to him, and by his industry, capacity and good management in it he has accumulated a comfortable competency. His store is one of the finest in that particular line of business and his bakery is equipped with the latest improved machinery.

J. V. OWENS. Scholarly in his attainments, and of superior business aptitude and qualifications, J. V. Owens, of Missoula, is well known throughout Montana as state manager of the business here associated with the Central Life Insurance Company of Des Moines, Iowa. He was born, January 19, 1865, in Kentucky, the birthplace of his parents, John Yates and Eleanor (Cunningham) Owens, who moved from that state to Kansas, where they spent their later years.

Brought up in Kansas, J. V. Owens acquired the rudiments of his education in the rural schools, and in 1895 was graduated from Creighton University, in Omaha, Nebraska, where, two years later, he was honored with the degree of Master of Arts. Going then to Massachusetts, he took a special course in the Harvard Law School. The ensuing four years Mr. Owens spent in Nebraska, having charge of the public schools of O'Neil, a position that he filled ably and acceptably. Coming from there to Hamilton, Montana, he there served as superintendent of schools until 1908, meeting with characteristic success in that capacity. Retiring from his profession as an educator in 1908, Mr. Owens sought more lucrative employment as an insurance agent, and having been appointed by the Central Life Insurance Company of Des Moines as their state manager for Montana has since carried on an extensive and highly remunerative business, his work taking him into all parts of the state, although he maintains headquarters at Missoula, where he has an attractive home.

Mr. Owens married, July 6, 1896, Marie Louise Burkhard, of Buffalo, New York, and to them three bright and interesting children have been born, namely: Marie, Frank and Harry. Fraternally Mr. Owens is a member of the Knights of Columbus.

DR. ASHER C. BIDDLE was born at Athens, Ohio, on the 31st day of March, 1873, of West Virginian parents. For twenty-six years he lived at Athens before trying his fortune in the glowing northwest. He attended the schools of his native town and the Ohio University which is, itself, situated at Athens. Mr. Biddle was most anxious to become a professional man and from an early age had chosen the medical calling for his own. As he was one of a large family of children, however, his father found it impossible to further aid him in his ambitions. Without difficulty, he obtained a teacher's certificate and taught in the Ohio schools until he was able to save enough to meet the tuition and other necessary expenses in one of the finest medical colleges the country affords. In 1900, he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore, Maryland, receiving from that institution the degree of Doctor of Medicine. The next two years he spent in the city hospital in Baltimore and then set out for the west, arriving in Montana in June when that state was in the full glory of her spring. Before leaving the east he had accepted a position as assistant physician at the state asylum situated at Warm Springs, Montana. After making a study of nervous diseases in this institution, he left Warm Springs for Butte where he formed a partnership with Dr. George Wells. For two years, these young physicians worked together when Dr. Biddle decided that Lewistown offered greater advantages as the permanent home of a progressive professional man.

Dr. Biddle although so late an arrival in Lewistown has won by assiduous industry and devotion to the interests of his patients, a remunerative practice with the most desirable clientele. He is a member of the Silver Bow Medical Association, the Montana State Medical Association and the American Medical Association. He is also a member and one of the board of governors of the Judith Club. He takes little personal interests in political matters not of local importance although he is claimed as a member of the Republican camp.

Until within the last years, Dr. Biddle has permitted the love of his medical science to wholly absorb him. There came into his life, however, even a greater interest in the person of Mary B. Allen, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George B. Allen of Athens, Ohio. Miss Allen became Mrs. Biddle on the 25th day of January, 1911. Dr. and Mrs. Biddle had been friends, perhaps more than friends, back in Ohio in the home town of Athens. They were married in Omaha, Nebraska, where Miss Allen had been spending some months. They are now the delighted parents of a baby girl who came to them on January 14, 1912, Margaret.

Dr. Biddle, despite the many calls on his time, is now acting as health officer in Lewistown.

Dr. Biddle is the son of John F. Biddle who was born in West Virginia on the 27th day of February, 1841. For four years he saw active service in the Union army, his loyalty to his nation exceeding even his great love for his state of West Virginia. At the close of the period of tumult, he left the torn south for Ohio where he has since made his home. Until recent years he has farmed a large section of land near Athens but now is practically retired. Mrs. John Biddle the mother of the Montana physician, was, before her marriage, Mary Kester of West Virginia, born on the 7th of April, 1843. Both Mr. and Mrs. Biddle still live on their Ohio farm. They are the parents of fourteen children of which the doctor is the sixth in line.

EDWARD A. SWEET, M. D., in his professional service has been prompted by a laudable ambition for advancement as well as by deep sympathy and humanitarian principles that urge him to put forth his best efforts in the alleviation of pain and suffering. He has gained recognition from the profession as one of its able representatives and the trust reposed in him by the public is indicated by the liberal patronage awarded him. Since 1902 Dr. Sweet has been engaged in the practice of medicine in Montana and since 1911 he has been a resident of Dixon, where he is rapidly gaining prestige as one of the best physicians and surgeons in Missoula county.

At St. Joseph, Michigan, December 23, 1877, occurred the birth of Dr. Edward A. Sweet, who is a son of Oliver M. and Mary E. (Crane) Sweet, the former of whom was born and reared in the state of New York and the latter of whom is a native of Illinois. Oliver M. Sweet was a pioneer in Montana and was one of the first merchants in this state. He settled at Bannack in 1861 and there conducted a general store for one year, at the end of which he removed to Virginia City, the famous strike at Alder Gulch having been made about that time. He was a merchant at Virginia City until 1874 when he sold out and established a store at Sheridan, Montana, remaining in the latter place for the ensuing two years. In 1876 his health began to fail and he returned east, going to St. Joseph, Michigan, where he resided until his demise, in 1884, at the age of forty-six years. His remains were interred at Centerville, Michigan. While in Montana he was a valued member of the Vigilantes and was a very prominent Mason. He was married at Virginia City, about 1864, and he and his wife became the parents of six children, of whom the subject of this review was the fifth child and youngest son. Dr. Sweet has one sister in Montana, Olive May, who is the wife of Charles M. Parr, a prominent attorney in the city of Butte. Mrs. Sweet survives her honored husband and is now a resident of St. Joseph, Michigan.

Dr. Sweet received his primary educational training in the district schools of the famous Ruby valley, seven miles from Virginia City, Montana. At the age of fourteen years he went to St. Joseph, Michigan, where he was graduated in the high school in 1897. He then returned to Montana and settled in the city of Butte, where he was employed in a drug store for a period of two years, at the expiration of which he went to Chicago, Illinois, there entering the Hahnemann Medical College, in which excellent institution he was graduated as a member of the class of 1902, duly receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine. He was interne in a Chicago hospital for six months and has since pursued a post-graduate course in medicine in that city. Dr. Sweet initiated the active practice of his profession at Townsend, Montana, where he remained for two years and whence he removed to Red Lodge, where he was a practicing physician for one year. In 1907 he went to Ruby and after residing in that place for two years went to Wisdom, where he remained for four years. In 1911 he came to Dixon, where he is rapidly achieving distinction as a particularly efficient physician and surgeon. He controls a large and lucrative practice in this place and in the surrounding territory and has accomplished some wonderful cures during the period of his residence here.

In connection with the work of his profession Dr. Sweet is a valued and appreciative member of the Missoula County Medical Society and in a fraternal way he is affiliated with the time-honored Masonic order and with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He is likewise connected with the Dixon Commercial Club and in politics is a stalwart and active Democrat. He was elected representative in 1912 from Sanders county. He is fond of hunting, fishing, football and baseball and devotes considerable time to reading and study. He is very enthusiastic about Montana and advises all who are looking for homes and a future to come hither. He says Montana is good to the honest hustler and worker and that the water power alone will make Dixon an attractive and important town.

At Townsend, Montana, July 20, 1904, Dr. Sweet married Miss Nannie K. Watt, a daughter of Gordon and Martha Watt, of Townsend. Their attractive home is recognized as a center of refinement and most generous hospitality.

CHARLES D. KICHER. A banker of successful experience and a progressive business man, Mr. Kicher has identified himself closely with the development of northwestern Montana, and while gaining the substantial rewards of effort for himself is also an important factor in making this new country a land of homes and permanent business and industry.

Charles D. Kicher was born in Mankato, Minnesota, March 22, 1883, and was educated in the grade and high schools of Minneapolis. On leaving school at the age of eighteen, he turned toward a business career, and was first employed by the Minneapolis Street Railway Company. For a time he also worked for a grain company in that city, after which he entered the First National Bank at Lake Mills in a minor clerical capacity and began learning the business in all its details. From Minnesota he came out to Montana and for a time was connected with the Havre Security State Bank. He then organized at Shelby the First Bank of Shelby. The first officers of this institution were Simon Pepin, president; C. F. Morris, vice-president; and Mr. Kicher, cashier. On October 15, 1911, a reorganization was effected, at which time Joseph Berthelote became president, and A. J. Moltz, vice-president. Mr. Kicher has had the executive management of the bank from the beginning, and its prosperity has been largely the result of his seasoned experience in banking and the confidence of the citizens of this locality in his ability and integrity.

Mr. Kicher's father, Charles D. Kicher, a native of Germany, came to America when young and was one of the early settlers of Minnesota. During the Civil war he lived in Iowa and entered the Seventh Iowa Regiment, and was wounded during his service. He was a farmer throughout his active career, and his death occurred in 1887 when about forty years of age. The mother was Anna E. (Schori) Kicher, who was born in Switzerland and at the age of eight years came to America with her parents, who settled in Fayette county, Iowa. She is still living at the age of sixty-five, a resident of Minneapolis. Of their five children the Montana banker was the youngest.

Mr. Kicher was married at Lake Mills, Iowa, February 10, 1907, to Miss Maude Bangs. They are the parents of two children. Donna, was born at Lake Mills April 5, 1908; Mark Earl was born in Shelby, Montana, March 10, 1911.

Mr. Kicher is a rancher as well as banker and has some valuable real estate holdings in this state. He is a member of the American Bankers Association, and fraternally is a Yeoman. On April 1, 1912, he was appointed to the office of town treasurer of Shelby. His politics is Progressive Republican. Mrs. Kicher is a member of the Methodist church. Mr. Kicher's recreation from a very busy career is found chiefly in hunting and fishing, but he is fond of all athletic sports.

JAMES H. STEWART. The gentleman, to a brief review of whose life and characteristics the reader's attention is herewith directed, is among Meagher county's foremost citizens and one of the most capable and public-spirited of those to whom its public affairs have been entrusted. James H. Stewart has held, since 1906, the office of county assessor with great credit. He has the distinction of being a veteran of the Spanish-American war and is a product of the state noted for its fine natural products—the Blue Grass state and the state which produced Abraham Lincoln.

Mr. Stewart's eyes first opened to the light of day in the town of Grayson, February 18, 1874. There he resided until about the age of ten years, when his family made their adieux to the old associations and came to Kansas. They remained in Kansas for four years and then went to Missouri, where the subject lived for fourteen years. On coming to Montana he located in Meagher county where he worked on a ranch and had a taste of real western life. He also taught school part of the time for about three years and between school seasons served as deputy assessor. He proved so proficient in the work and was so well liked by the people that in 1906 they invited him in very definite fashion—by electing him to the office—to be assessor and he has filled the office ever since, making his headquarters at White Sulphur Springs.

Mr. Stewart's school boy days for the most part were passed in Missouri and he also received his higher education in that state, as a student at Central College in Fayette. Previous to that he had taught school for several years and it was shortly after leaving college that he enlisted for service in the Spanish-American war. He was a member of Company K, Sixth Missouri Volunteer Infantry, which regiment, unlike so many of the American troops, saw actual service in Cuba. He entered as a private and was mustered out as first sergeant of his company. His enlistment was significant of his character, for he is patriotic and the cause of assisting the oppressed was one which appealed deeply to him.

The subject's father, Jasper N. Stewart, was born in Kentucky, but now resides in Montana, living on his son's ranch and directing its affairs. This ranch is an excellent property and is eligibly situated but a few miles out of White Sulphur Springs, cattle raising being carried on. The maiden name of the mother was Belle Strother, a Kentuckian, whose untimely demise occurred in 1882 at the age of thirty-three years. Mr.

Stewart is the eldest of the four children born to the union, and all of them reside in this state. Jap is located on his brother's ranch in Meagher county; Luther P. is in the government service in connection with the United States army and travels over the entire country; and the sister, Belle, one of the county's admirable young women, is deputy assessor in her brother's office. Both the brothers are married.

When Mr. Stewart was a boy of ten years he first knew the breath-catching emotions of an actual wage-earner. This was as a helper in a store at a princely salary of ten dollars per month. He is also familiar, through actual experience, with farm work; he has been rural mail carrier and hotel clerk and has had his fling at several other occupations, aside from teaching school. He is a gifted instructor, by education and natural ability being well fitted for pedagogical duties. In political conviction he is a staunch Democrat and takes an active and influential part in politics. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and leans toward the teachings of the Methodist Episcopal church. He is keen about a number of outdoor sports, but those which particularly take his fancy are hunting and fishing. He is fond of music, plays and good reading—and Montana. He is quite positive that no state in the Union offers better opportunities for success. Like the average Montanian, he is exceedingly enthusiastic over the state, but perhaps the average Montanian has reason to be. Mr. Stewart has been hustling for himself since a boy, which may account in part for his staunch and independent character.

HERMAN GEORGE ROBINSON, president of the First State Bank of Malta, ranchman and heavy land owner of Valley county, is a native of the Empire state, born in Delaware county on February 25, 1866. He is the son of George W. and Sarah (Gray) Robinson, both natives of Delaware county, New York, where the father was a prominent and prosperous farmer all his life and is now living retired. He was a county official for years and was one of the leading Republicans of his district. They are the parents of six children, one of the number being deceased. The others are: James Robinson, a retired farmer of Delaware county, New York; Charles R., a contractor and builder of Lincoln, Nebraska; Ira, deceased; Addie R., now Mrs. George Robinson of Delaware county; Elizabeth R., the wife of William Cable of Delaware county; and Herman George, of this review.

The educational advantages which Mr. Robinson received were of the usual order, including a high school education, and after his graduation he came to Montana, locating at first in Meagher county. He took a homestead and became a rancher and cattle raiser. In 1902 he sold out and came to Malta, Valley county, at that time known as Dawson county, where he secured large land holdings and began ranching on a large scale. In 1906 he disposed of his cattle and thereafter gave his attention to sheep and horse raising, in which he was particularly successful.

Mr. Robinson has found time to display an interest in matters outside his ranching business, and has been president of the First State Bank of Malta since 1910, a position in which he has exercised his splendid business ability along financial lines, and the bank has responded most pleasingly to his added influence, bearing a most excellent reputation in the county and holding the confidence of the public. Mr. Robinson has served one term as county assessor and has been a member of the school board. He is an enthusiastic hunter and each year devotes a season to hunting in the Rocky mountains. He has brought down many a deer and antelope on his various excursions and has some handsomely mounted specimens in his possession.

On January 5, 1897, Mr. Robinson was united in marriage with Miss Eliza Garland of Canada, and four children have been born to them: Gladys, George, Edna and Dorothy. They are all attending the public school at Malta.

JAMES FRANKLIN BLAIR, M. D. Possessing great natural ability, which has been developed to its highest degree by a long and careful training, Dr. James Franklin Blair has attained an eminent position among the physicians and surgeons of Montana, and in his adopted city of Bozeman, which has been his field of practice for the past ten years, he is recognized as a practitioner of skill and one who has achieved success in his chosen vocation. Dr. Blair was born in Mercersburg, Pennsylvania, May 4, 1869, and is a son of Dr. John L. and Sarah M. (Anderson) Blair, natives of the same city.

Dr. John L. Blair was born in 1846, and secured his medical training in the medical department of the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, which he attended for a year, and he was graduated from the University of Maryland in 1867. His death occurred January 31, 1911, while his widow, who survives him, is now in her sixty-sixth year. They had two children: Dr. James Franklin and John E., a prominent attorney of Spokane, Washington. Dr. John L. Blair was a valued member of the Pennsylvania State Medical Society and the American Medical Association.

James Franklin Blair attended the public schools of his native place, supplemented his attendance by a course in Mercersburg Academy, and then became a student at the University of Vermont, where he received his degree and was graduated in 1892. At that time he became resident physician at the State Farm Institution, at Bridgewater, Massachusetts, continuing to act in that capacity for eight years. In 1900 he took a post-graduate course in surgery at Harvard, and subsequently went to Dublin, Ireland, where he furthered his studies in the Rotunda Hospital. Returning to the United States, for a short time he was engaged in a general practice at Butte, Montana, but in the fall of 1902 came to Bozeman and purchased the Bozeman Sanitarium, of which he continued to be proprietor until 1910. Since that time he has devoted himself to a general practice, although he specializes to some extent in surgery. He maintains offices in the Michigan block, where he has all the latest appliances and inventions known to the profession. He is a deep student and takes great interest in the work of the Gallatin County Medical Society, the Montana State Medical Society and the American Medical Association, being a member of all these organizations. He is serving as local surgeon for the Northern Pacific Railroad, and is a member of the executive board of the Montana State College of Agriculture and Mechanic Arts. In political matters Dr. Blair is a Democrat, but the duties of his profession have claimed all his time and attention, and he has never entered the public arena. Fraternally he is connected with Fellowship Lodge, A. F. & A. M., Bridgewater, Massachusetts, and Bozeman Lodge No. 463, B. P. O. E.

On May 2, 1902, Dr. Blair was married to Miss Elizabeth P. Healy, in Bridgewater, Massachusetts, she being a native of New Orleans, Louisiana. Dr. and Mrs. Blair have two bright and interesting children: Dorothy and Elizabeth.

JARVIS M. FLINT. A prominent and active figure in the business life of Bozeman has been, and still is, Jarvis M. Flint, president and manager of the Flint-Lynn Lumber Company, who is looked to by his associates as a clear-headed, well balanced man whose advice is always sound, and a man of the highest integrity in business matters, whose great ability has been demonstrated by the rapid growth and development of the various enterprises of which he has been the head. Mr. Flint was born at Brookline, Vermont, March 2, 1859, and is a son of Horatio N. and Abbie Jane (Miller) Flint, natives of Mass.

During his earlier years Horatio N. Flint was engaged in farming and the horse business in Vermont, but in the fall of 1870 removed to Thayer, Neosho county, Kansas, where he was engaged in the lumber, grain and grocery business, and also owned a fine farm. In 1904 he retired from active life and removed to Bozeman, in which city he is still living, enjoying a hearty old age in his seventy-eighth year. He is a member of the Ancient Order of United Workmen and an ardent Republican in his political views. He married (first) Abbie Jane Miller, who died in 1865, and they had two children: Jarvis M.; and C. Fred, a passenger conductor on the Mexican Central Railroad, who lost his life in a wreck. Mr. Flint's second wife was Mary S. Miller, who died in 1900, having been the mother of one son: Leon N., professor in the State University of Kansas.

Jarvis M. Flint received his education in the public schools of Thayer, Neosho county, Kansas, and his first employment was at the trade of carpenter. After a short period, however, he secured employment in the lumber business of S. A. Brown & Company, and with others, he bought one of their lumber yards in 1890 and formed the Wellsville Lumber Company, of which he was manager. Later he took a prominent part in the organization of the Wellsville Grain Company, and with him as president this firm established a long line of elevators and lumber yards, but subsequently was reorganized as the Coffee County Lumber Company, Mr. Flint being president and manager. His next venture was with the Star Grain and Lumber Company, a merger of Wellsville Grain and Lumber Company and the Coffee County Lumber Company, which had a long line of yards and elevators in Kansas, and he served as president and manager of this concern until October, 1902, at which time he disposed of his interests in Kansas and came to Bozeman, Montana. In this city, February 1, 1903, he began operating as a lumber dealer, and in 1906 the firm adopted its present style, the Flint-Lynn Lumber Company, Mr. Flint being president and manager, while Orman A. Lynn is vice-president and treasurer. The firm maintains offices and yards at 201 East Main street. It has prospered financially, the business having shown a healthy and continued growth, and bears an excellent reputation in industrial and commercial circles of the city. Fraternally, Mr. Flint is connected with Western Star Lodge No. 4, I. O. O. F., and Rising Sun Encampment No. 8, having first identified himself with Odd Fellowship in Kansas, and of A. O. U. W. at Wellsville, Kansas. He and Mrs. Flint are both connected with Naomi Chapter, D. of R. He is a Republican in politics.

On October 5, 1881, Mr. Flint was married to Miss Ida A. Wood, who was born in Cornwall, Orange county, New York, on the Hudson river, daughter of John L. and Sarah (Wood) Wood. Mr. Wood was one of the pioneer summer resort keepers on the Hudson, and died at Viroqua, Wisconsin, where his widow still survives him. Mrs. Flint was the fifth of their eight children, of whom four are now living. To Mr. and Mrs. Flint there have been born three children: Jennie Antoinette, who married C. H. Isbell; Mabel, who died in infancy; and Nelson Jarvis. The family home, at No. 420 Third avenue, South, is a center of culture and refinement, and breathes of true western hospitality.

WILLIAM L. CARTER. In every community there are men who through their superior ability, force, judgment and intelligence rise above their fellows and not only attain prominence in their line of endeavor but at the same time become large factors in the advancement of their community along all lines of progress. One of the foremost business men of Kalispell, Montana, is William L. Carter, a young man of energy and education whose identification with the business interests of that city has covered but a decade but has established him as one of the most substantial and influential men of that section. As president and manager of the Carter Mercantile Company, Incorporated, he has charge of one of the most prosperous business enterprises of Flathead county, a concern that does an annual business of $200,000, and he is further identified with the business life of his city as a director in the Kalispell National Bank and as a member and director of the Kalispell Chamber of Commerce. He is alert, aggressive and progressive, and by the force of his own ability, energy and perseverance has builded his success.

Mr. Carter was born at Kingston, Caldwell county, Missouri, on November 28, 1876, a son of William H. B. Carter. The elder Mr. Carter was the first white child born at Shawnee Mission, Kansas, the mission building having been one that his father, a Methodist minister, built. As early as 1858 he came to Montana and located at Fort Benton, where he followed mining and for a time was engaged in freighting between Fort Benton and Salt Lake City, Utah. Returning to Missouri, he became one of the first two merchants that opened up establishments in Kansas City. Since 1905 he has been a retired resident of Polson, Montana. The mother of our subject was Miss Mattie E. Russel prior to her marriage, a native of Lexington, Kentucky, who passed to the life eternal in September, 1903, at Breckenridge, Missouri. William H. B. and Mattie E. (Russel) Carter became the parents of six children, of whom but two are now living: Mrs. John B. Ribelin, of Polson, Montana, and William L. Carter, the subject of this sketch and the youngest of the family.

After pursuing the usual preliminary educational studies Mr. Carter entered William Jewell College at Liberty, Missouri, and was graduated from the liberal arts department of that institution in 1896 with a Bachelor's degree. He entered business activity as a clerk for the firm of Russel & Trosper, engaged in the general merchandise business at Breckenridge, Missouri, and from 1896 until 1902 continued largely in that line of employment, being associated with his father during a major portion of that time. In August, 1902, he came to Montana and established the Carter Mercantile Company, Incorporated, of which he is president and manager. Under his capable direction the business has grown rapidly and has proved a profitable venture, the volume of business now aggregating about $200,000 annually and requiring a force of eighteen sales people. He is also a director of the Kalispell National Bank and is a member and a director in the Chamber of Commerce of that city. Keen business discernment and that integrity of character which has won him the confidence of his business associates and patrons have been the foundation of his prestige and financial success.

Mr. Carter is a Democrat but takes no active part in political affairs. Fraternally he affiliates with the Woodmen of the World, the Modern Woodmen of America, the Knights of Pythias and the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and served as chairman of the state convention of last named order held in Kalispell, July, 1912. He is also a member of the Kalispell Club and has served on its board of directors for a number of years.

At Spokane, on January 23, 1903, Mr. Carter was united in marriage to Miss Edith Butterfield, a daughter of James Butterfield, who also claims Missouri as the state of her birth. Mr. and Mrs. Carter have two sons: William Howard, born October 31, 1903, at Kalispell, and Wayne E., born in the same city on August 8, 1906.

JOHN H. SALING. One of the first merchants at Eureka, and one who in after years will be accounted among the pioneer business men, Mr. Saling began his business experience without capital and through his own efforts has gained substantial prosperity and is one of the esteemed citizens of a flourishing town in northwest Montana.

John H. Saling was born in Scotland county, Missouri, October 20, 1879. Henry H. Saling, his father, a native of Kentucky, belonged to one of the pioneer families of Scotland county, Missouri, the date of their settlement having been in the early forties. He was a butcher by trade and followed merchandising for a number of years. He was also honored with the office of sheriff of Scotland county for eight years. In politics he was a Democrat. He is now a resident of Idaho. The mother's maiden name was Maude Hammond, a native of Missouri.

Of their eight children, John H. was the fourth. Most of his early education was obtained in the public schools of St. Louis, and he graduated from the high school with the class of 1899. He then became a clerk in Raines & Campbell's drug business at Memphis, Missouri, where he learned the apothecary's art, and followed pharmacy as a clerk for a period of eight years before he was prepared to establish a business of his own. Mr. Saling has been identified by residence with the state of Montana since 1902, in which year he located at Havre, and also spent some time in Kalispell. In the spring of 1907 he established the second drug business in the town of Eureka, where he has won a fine patronage and conducts a first-class store.

In citizenship he is public spirited as in business he is enterprising. In 1911 he was a member of the city council and is an influential member of the Chamber of Commerce. In politics he is a Democrat. His fraternal affiliation is with the Elks at Kalispell. Mr. Saling was married in Kalispell, June 20, 1904, to Miss Marie Inglis, daughter of John Inglis, a native of Illinois. One son, Jay Inglis, was born to them in Kalispell, April 17, 1906.

HARRY P. WALTERS. Conspicuous among the business men of Kalispell, who have done much toward its development and who are closely identified with many of its leading interests, is the subject of this review. Harry P. Walters conducts the Flathead Engineering & Contracting Company, which well-known concern has offices in the Buffalo Block at Kalispell, and since 1910 he has been the efficient incumbent of the office of county surveyor for Flathead county.

Harry P. Walters was born at Kings Creek, Ohio, the date of his nativity being the 23d of March, 1880. He is a son of James D. and Sarah (Taylor) Walters, the former of whom was born in West Virginia and the latter of whom is a native of Ohio. The father was engaged in farming enterprises during the greater portion of his active career and he is now living in virtual retirement, at the age of sixty-eight years, at Kings Creek, Ohio. Mrs. Walters is sixty-four years of age and both she and her husband are still robust and active. They became the parents of five children, four boys and one girl, and of the number all are living, (1912) Harry P. having been the third in order of birth.

After graduating in the high school at Urbana, Ohio, as a member of the class of 1900, Mr. Walters, of this notice, began to work for the United States government, in the engineering department, in South Dakota. In 1902 he was transferred to Montana and for eight years prior to 1910 he was employed in the surveying department of the federal government. With the passage of time he became an expert civil engineer and in 1908 he organized the Flathead Engineering & Contracting Company, a prominent business concern with offices in the Buffalo Block at Kalispell. Mr. Walters became president of this company; A. L. Jaqueth, consulting engineer; and W. S. Craven, general manager.

In 1910 Mr. Walters bought out the other members of the firm and since that time has conducted the business individually. His attention is given to hydraulic, municipal and sanitary engineering work and to land surveying, in all of which lines he has met with unqualified success.

In the fall of 1910 Mr. Walters was elected surveyor of Flathead county and as the incumbent of that office he has accomplished a great deal for this section of the country. In 1910 he assumed charge of surveying the Belton Road, which ranks as one of the finest drives in the Glacier National Park. It was not thought possible to construct this road on account of the unusually rough country but as the result of Mr. Walters' ingenuity it is now in existence and is renowned as one of the most picturesque drives in the country. In 1909 Mr. Walters was surveyor in charge of eastern Montana and surveyed twenty-two townships in Custer county. This work proved eminently satisfactory to the people inhabiting that section.

August 19, 1911, Mr. Walters received the following letter from Edwin L. Norris, governor of Montana:

"DEAR SIR: I have this day appointed you a delegate to represent the State of Montana at the meetings of the National Good Roads Congress, and also the International Municipal Congress, to be held at Chicago, September 18 to October 1, inclusive. I trust that you may find it convenient to accept the appointment. Yours truly, EDWIN L. NORRIS, Governor."

Mr. Walters did accept the above appointment and while in Chicago made an address before the National Good Roads Congress. This address was printed in the proceedings of that meeting.

At Urbana, Ohio, March 10, 1904, Mr. Walters married Miss Desse Madden, a native of Ohio and a daughter of B. M. Madden. To this union has been born one child, Derrel M., whose birth occurred December 31, 1908, in Kalispell.

In politics Mr. Walters is a Progressive Republican and, fraternally, he is affiliated with Kalispell Lodge, No. 725, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. In religious matters Mr. Walters is independent and his wife is a devout member of the Baptist church.

ADELBERT HOWE, an eye specialist, has been established in Kalispell since 1902, and has here gained a prominence and position that is in every way consistent with his skill and ability in his profession. He is well known in and about the city and county, and is a citizen highly esteemed for his many excellent qualities. He is identified with many of the commercial enterprises of Kalispell, and is president of the Kalispell Drug Company, which is the leading establishment of its kind in the city. He is active and prominent in politics, and has done his full share in the interests of the party since his locating here.

Doctor Howe was born on September 19, 1876, in Clayton county, Iowa, and is the son of Frank and Mary E. (Wiley) Howe. The father, a native of Ohio, moved to Iowa in about 1865. He became a resident of Oskaloosa in later years, having given up his farming interests, which he made his life work. The mother was a native of Illinois, and she died in Clayton county, that state, in 1891, aged forty-five years. Seven children were born of their union,—four sons and three daughters, Adelbert of this review being the fifth born.

As a boy, Adelbert Howe attended the district schools of Clayton county and later attended Oskaloosa College, where he completed a course of study which prepared him for admittance to the American College of Ophthalmology. He was graduated from that institution in 1899, and thereafter followed his profession at various points in the West. It was not until 1902 that he discovered what seemed to him an ideal location, and in that year he came to Kalispell, where he immediately became engaged in practice, and where he has continued from that time to the present.

In the autumn of 1906 the Kalispell Drug Company, the principal drug house in the city, was organized, with Doctor Howe as president. It was incorporated under the laws of the state. J. W. Broadwater is secretary and treasurer of the concern and Mrs. Howe is one of the members. Doctor Howe was always a staunch Republican, serving as chairman county central committee in 1910, a post which he held for two years. He is now chairman of the Progressive county central committee and carried county for president and every state official. He is a member of the Kalispell Club and the Chamber of Commerce, his religious affiliations being with the Christian church.

On December 7, 1906, Doctor Howe was united in marriage with Miss Nellie R. Bussey, daughter of Isaac M. Bussey, a native of Missouri. They have no children.

The family residence is maintained at 106 Fifth avenue West and the Kalispell Drug Company is situated at 138 Main street.

FRED S. PERRY, who is county clerk and recorder of Flathead county since 1910, and deputy in the same offices from 1906 to 1910, has been a resident of Kalispell since 1902. He was born in Hennepin county, Minnesota, on June 9, 1881, and is the son of William and Margaret (Lee) Perry. The father was a native of Austro-Hungary born there in 1829, and he came to America in 1837, when he was eighteen years of age. He located in Hennepin county, Wayzata, Minnesota, where he has since passed many years devoted to farming interests. He served throughout the Civil war. Margaret (Lee) Perry was a native of Ireland who came to America with her parents as a young girl. They settled in New York state, and she was married in that state. She died in the spring of 1892. They were the parents of twelve children, Fred S. being the eighth in order of birth. He was educated in the public schools of Wayzata up to the age of thirteen, and in that year he entered a telegraph office in his native town to learn telegraphy. He mastered the key and thereafter followed telegraphy and clerical work until the year 1905, being connected with the Great Northern in Minneapolis. In 1902 he was sent from Minneapolis to Kalispell in which place he was employed in the freight service. Later he was employed in the telegraphy and ticket-selling departments for the Great Northern. In 1906 he was appointed deputy county clerk and recorder, a position which he retained and filled with all accuracy and efficiency, his careful service being rewarded in 1910 by his election to fill the offices, of which he is still the incumbent. Mr. Perry is a Democrat, but has never been more than casually interested in the activities of the party, his election coming more as a mark of public confidence and esteem than as a result of any political preferment or favor.

Mr. Perry is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, and the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. He is Venerable Council in the Woodmen and holds the office of Noble Grand in the Odd Fellows. He is also a member of the Kalispell Club. In his church relations, he is a member of the Roman Catholic church.

On January 9, 1911, Mr. Perry was united in marriage at Pine City, Minnesota, with Miss Elinor Daley, the daughter of H. W. Daley, a native citizen of Minnesota. Their Kalispell home is located at 546 Third avenue West.

THOMAS D. LONG has conducted a general law practice in Kalispell since 1895, and has gained prominence and popularity in his profession with each succeeding year. He has taken a leading place in the politics of the county and has served his district in various capacities, being elected to the state senate in 1906 for a four-year term. Mr. Long was born in Columbus, Indiana, on October 10, 1867, and is the son of David and Mary E. (Downs) Long. The father was a native of Maryland who settled in Indiana in the early forties, and was one of the pioneer merchants of the district. He was a popular man in his community and always a leader among his fellows. He was of Irish extraction. In 1902 Mr. Long came to Montana and there spent the remainder of his life, his death occurring on the 13th of February, 1910, when he was seventy-five years old. The mother was a woman of English ancestry, her American forbears having been prominent in Revolutionary times in the Continental army, and were early New Jersey settlers. She was born in Missouri and was married in Jeffersonville, Indiana, in 1865. She died on April 17, 1911, in Kalispell, at the age of sixty-six years. Seven children were born to David and Mary Long, Thomas being the second born. He was educated in the schools of Columbus, and after his graduation from the high school in 1884 entered the state university of Indiana where he remained for three years. He then entered Cornell University in New York, and in 1888 was graduated with the degree of Ph. B., after which he entered the law department of the University of Michigan and in 1891 was graduated with the degree of LL. B. In 1895 Mr. Long moved to Kalispell, Montana, and there entered upon general practice. He early established a growing practice and came to be recognized as one of the leading attorneys of the county. In 1896 he was elected county attorney for a two-year term, and in 1901 was appointed by Governor Toole state land register. He held that important post for three years, then resigned and returned to his practice, his election to the senate from Flathead county following in 1906. Mr. Long has always been active in Democratic politics, and has done good work for the party in his district.

On August 21, 1890, Mr. Long was married in Des Moines, Iowa, to Miss Vesta Hobbs, daughter of A. I. Hobbs, of Kentucky. They have two children,—Rachael and Thomas H. Long. The daughter was born August 23, 1891, and is now the wife of John Evans, a resident of Kalispell. Thomas H. was born October 10, 1902, and is living in Kalispell.

Mr. Long is a member of the Elks of Helena lodge, and of the county and state bar associations, as well as the Kalispell Club.

ORVILLE W. PERRY, president of the Diamond Ice Company, one of the thriving business concerns of Missoula, has been identified with the state of Montana for the past ten years. Five years of that time has been spent in Missoula, where for two years he was engaged in the coal business, but for the past three years he has conducted with exceptional success the business of the Diamond Ice Company, which concern, though still young, is one of the strong business firms of the city. Mr. Perry confines his entire time and attention to the affairs of the company, and under his guiding hand its progress is fast and sure.

Mr. Perry is a native of Kansas, born in Fort Scott, that state, on July 17, 1878. He is the son of Wallace W. and Martilia (Roy) Perry. The father was born in Michigan and settled in Kansas in early life, where he followed farming and the mercantile business up to the time of his retirement. He and his wife now live in Missoula, and are resting after the labors of a lifetime. Six children were born to them: Orville W. of this review being the first born. Three brothers are located in Montana. They are: Chester C. Perry, engaged in the coal business in Missoula. He is married. Charles R. Perry also is married and lives in Missoula. He is connected with a prominent mercantile establishment of the city. Willard W. Perry is unmarried, and lives with his parents. All are prominent and popular in Missoula and are possessed of high standing socially.

Orville W. Perry as a boy in Fort Scott attended the district schools of his locality, after which he was graduated from the Fort Scott Normal College and later took a complete course in the Central Business College at Sedalia, Missouri. He went to Joplin when he was about twenty years of age, and was there associated with his father in the mercantile business for about three years. He then came to Montana, stopping at Livingston, where he secured employment in the store of the Thompson Mercantile Company of that place. After a short time, however, Mr. Perry decided that he would do better in business for himself in some staple line than he could by working for others, and he set about to look for a suitable location. After visiting various places he decided that Missoula offered more attractions than any of the others,—a decision which he has never had cause to regret since that time, and in 1907 he engaged in the coal business at this point. After two years of successful operation he sold out his interests in the business and organized the Diamond Ice Company, which has proved a most fortunate move from the standpoint of financial advancement.

Mr. Perry is a Republican, although politically inactive, and he is a member of the Masonic fraternity and of the Order of Elks. While not a member of any particular church, he attends the Methodist church as a rule.

On November 28, 1905, Mr. Perry was united in marriage at Spokane, Washington, with Miss Nellie Gurrell, daughter of James and Margaret Gurrell of Spokane. Three children have been born of their union. They are: Chester William, commonly called "Jack;" Richard George and Ondre Winnifred.

The business office of the Diamond Ice Company is at 110 East Cedar street, while the family residence is maintained a distance of two miles from the city, in the vicinity of the ice plant.

HARRY H. PARSONS. The bar of Montana numbers in its membership some of the most distinguished judicial minds of the country and Missoula furnishes its full quota of able expounders of the law. Among the leaders in the legal profession of this city and state Harry H. Parsons ranks in the forefront and has since his college days been an influential factor in the life of the communities in which he has resided. Mr. Parsons was born in Brownsville (now Sweet Springs), Missouri, June 25, 1872, the son of W. Buchanan and Lydia J. (Mockbee) Parsons. His father was for many years a leading surgeon at Missoula, and although retired from active practice, still lives there as one of the city's most respected citizens. Mr. Parsons' ancestors came to this country from England about the year of 1720. Many of them, on both sides, were Revolutionary heroes, the McCarty's and Parsons reaching the rank of lieutenant-general in General Washington's army. The immediate grandfather on the mother's side, Cuthbert Mockbee, was a colonel in the Mexican war. Both Mr. Parsons and his wife are entitled to membership in the Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution, respectively, though neither has affiliated.

Harry H. Parsons received his early education in the public schools of his native city and attended both the high school and Doyle's Academy at Sweet Springs. When it came to the choice of a college he decided to avail himself of the advantages that can only be found in the largest institutions of the country whose faculties include the most talented and renowned teachers and accordingly entered the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor. He first took up the work of the literary course and after completing that entered the law department of the institution from which he graduated in 1895. Constant application to his studies undermined the health of Mr. Parsons and immediately after receiving his law degree he went west to recuperate. Two years' rest accomplished much for him in restoring his strength and in 1897 he went to Marshall, Missouri, and began active practice of his profession there as a partner of Col. Samuel Boyd, a well known member of the bar of that state. This partnership continued, the business being conducted under the firm name of Boyd & Parsons, until Colonel Boyd was unfortunately stricken with heart disease a year later. Mr. Parsons continued to serve the firm's clients until 1902, however, when he disposed of his practice there and located in Missoula and has ever since that date identified himself prominently with the legal fraternity here. During these years he has built up a very large practice and gained a reputation second to none as a brilliant lawyer and has handled some of the most difficult cases that have reached the courts in this section of the country. Mr. Parsons has one of the best and most complete law libraries to be found in the state of Montana.

Since coming to Missoula Mr. Parsons has filled numerous positions which have kept him in the eye of the public and his ability, tact and diplomacy have repeatedly been tried and found true. He has always evinced great interest and activity in political affairs and been a leader in the councils of the Republican party. In 1898 he was nominated for member of congress from the seventh judicial district of Missouri and gave his opponent a lively race for that honorable office. As census supervisor for the Missoula district in 1900 he made a good record as an efficient executive officer.

Mr. Parsons has from early manhood displayed talents for leadership and initiative and he has been the originator of many ideas the worth of which has been recognized by universal adoption in the circles interested. As an instance of this insight and originality it may be mentioned that while in college at Ann Arbor Mr. Parsons, who was very active in college politics, and early recognized the importance of training along the lines of methods in use in government practice, was an influential factor in the organization there of the American College of Republican Leagues, which now has become an important part of the activity of students in every leading college of the country. Another idea that originated with Mr. Parsons while at Ann Arbor, and that is now generally adopted by all large colleges and universities, was the formation of a miniature model of our national houses of congress, at which one of the university professors acts as president and the student members transact the business of the country in exactly the same manner as it is done at Washington, D. C. The value of such work as this as training for actual work in that line, or for intelligent understanding of the processes of law making and government business methods is obvious and it is doubtful if the idea as developed by Mr. Parsons could be improved upon. At the request of President Duniway of the University of Montana (Law School), he spent some time lecturing before the law students of the above said law school in the year of 1910.

While devoting the major part of his time and energy to the prosecution of his regular law practice and participation in public affairs, Mr. Parsons does not neglect those social and fraternal amenities that belong to the well rounded man and character. He is affable in manner and popular among his associates and among the lodges in which he holds membership the most prominent are the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks and the Masonic order in which he has attained the degree of Shriner.

Mr. Parsons was married in 1900 to Miss Ethlyne Jackson, one of the flowers of the South. She too descended from the first families. She is related to Gov. Breathett of Kentucky, a niece of Gov. M. M. Marmaduke and a cousin of Gen. John S. Marmaduke, both of Missouri, and a granddaughter of Missouri's famous and distinguished war governor, Claiborne Fox Jackson. She is the daughter of Col. William S. Jackson. She herself has represented the state of Missouri by special appointment, as sponsor for Missouri, with a maid of honor from each congressional district, at the Confederate reunions held throughout the South, and is a Daughter of the Confederacy.

As a man and a citizen of the highest type Mr. Parsons is greatly esteemed by all with whom he comes in contact and this part of the Northwest is proud to name him as among its leaders both as an individual and as a member of the profession which he distinguishes.

FREDERICK B. LINFIELD. To develop agriculture from a pioneer art into a civilized science is the aim and object of great bodies of learned and experienced men who are devoting their lives to the scientific study of soils, moisture, seeds, plants and animals and conditions that must inevitably bring about a wonderful change within the next fifty years. In fact we speak now of the farmer of yesterday, the one whose haphazard methods and ignorant handling of his land only brought a plenteous crop because his acres had not yet become exhausted, but it is with enthusiasm that the farmers of today are adopting the suggestions of real students of agriculture and are reaping many fold advantages. Montana, ever at the forefront in progress, has recognized the importance of this scientific investigation and one of the modern and interesting developments of the Montana State College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts is the experimental station maintained at Bozeman, its able director being Frederick B. Linfield. Mr. Linfield was born July 18, 1866, at Twillingate, New Foundland, and is a son of Samuel and Rachel (Petten) Linfield.

The Linfield family was established in New Foundland in 1793, by the great-grandfather, Robert Linfield, who was then sixteen years of age and an apprentice with an English mercantile company. Samuel Linfield, father of Frederick B., was born at Twillingate, September 8, 1839, and is a resident of the province of Ontario, Canada. In his younger years he was a sea-faring man and became the commander of a vessel and was known as Captain Linfield. He removed to Huron county, Ontario, Dominion of Canada, and engaged there in farm pursuits. He married Rachel Petten, who was born at Harbor Grace, New Foundland, in May, 1840, and died in Canada, in 1901. Of the eight children born to this union, Frederick B. was the eldest and six are yet living.

Frederick B. Linfield was educated in the public schools of Huron county, the Goderich high school and the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, from which institution he was graduated in the class of 1891. His studies had been particularly directed with the idea of his becoming an instructor and after graduation he was engaged to travel through the province in the dairying interest, holding schools for dairy farmers and explaining and instructing those who desired to apply science to this industry. He came to the United States in 1893 and from September 1, 1893, until October 1, 1902, was connected with the Utah Agricultural College, as professor of Animal Industry and Dairying. On October 20, 1902, Prof. Linfield took up work at the Montana Agricultural College as professor of agriculture and as agriculturist of the experiment station. Eight months later he was made acting director of the experiment station and in the spring of 1904 was elected to the position of director of the experiment station. He continued meanwhile to retain his connection with the college as professor of agriculture. His election as director of the experiment station also made Professor Linfield superintendent of Farmers' Institute. This position he held for some years at the beginning of this work in Montana. Later, upon the reorganization of the board of Farmers' Institute, he was made secretary, and continues to give a portion of his time to this work.

On December 26, 1892, Frederick B. Linfield and Mary A. Mahoney were united in marriage. She was born at Hamilton, Ontario, and is the second in a family of nine children born to her parents, Richard and Rachel (Sweetman) Mahoney. Her parents were born in Ireland and the mother is now deceased.

Mr. and Mrs. Linfield have three children: F. Bertil, Rachel Azalea and Lelia Mary. Fraternally Mr. Linfield is identified with Bozeman Lodge No. 18, A. F. & A. M.

FRANK A. LONG, M. D. Dr. Long represents the type of man who will succeed in any place and under any given circumstances, and the facts of his life thus far will bear out most fully this statement. Beginning at the age of thirteen to make his way alone in the world, he has risen from one post to another, educated himself, or rather, through his own labors provided the financial means to permit him to secure an education in his chosen profession, and is now and has been for a number of years, established in that profession, and winning to himself honors and local standing of a high order in the community to which he has devoted himself.

Born in Waukon, Iowa, on February 25, 1873, he is the son of Elijah W. and Anna (Gordon) Long. The father was a native of Virginia and the mother of Illinois. Elijah Long was a pioneer settler of this section of Iowa, locating here before there was a railroad within many miles of the place. He was a farmer and devoted his life to that business, his death occurring in Republic county, Kansas, in 1881, when he was sixty-three years of age. The wife and mother is still living in Republic county, Kansas, where the family moved in 1878. Thirteen children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Long, the Doctor being the youngest member of the family. He received his first educational training in the district schools of Republic county, which was necessarily brief, owing to the fact that he left home when he was thirteen years of age and made his way to Oregon. When he was but fourteen years of age he gave further evidence of his daring spirit and also of his ability as a scholar, by teaching a school located at the head waters of the Willamette river, then the most remote school in Oregon. He taught there and in other district schools of Oregon for a period of four years, after which he returned to Republic county, Kansas, and there again took up school work. When he was twenty years old he was elected superintendent of the schools of that county, and he was the youngest superintendent of schools in the state at that time. He continued to be identified with educational interests until he was twenty-three years of age. During his residence in Oregon, Dr. Long had managed to spend a year in study in the state university, and while he was identified with school work in Kansas he entered the state normal and took a preparatory course in medicine, his plans being formed to make that his profession as rapidly as opportunity would permit him. He was graduated from the medical department of the University of Kansas in 1902, and immediately thereafter removed to Montana, locating in Choteau, in which place he continued in practice until 1910. In that year he came to Valier; and he has been since then engaged in the practice of his profession in this place. He has a large general practice, and is very successful in all his undertakings. He has gained prominence as a citizen as well as a physician, and is chairman of the county high school board of Teton county, a position which he has held for six years. He was instrumental in bringing about the building of the high school at Choteau, and has been active and prominent in educational matters since his locating in this state. He is a Republican of strength and is chairman of the county central committee. He has been health officer and county physician during all the years of his residence here. He is a member of the Masonic order and of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, affiliating with Valier lodge. He is a member of the Presbyterian church. In addition to his many other talents, Dr. Long is a musician of considerable ability. He is self trained, and plays almost any instrument, but is most devoted to the clarinet. He was director of the state band at Emporia, Kansas, while attending the normal school, and all through his college career he earned the money necessary for his expenses through his work with various musical organizations.

Dr. Long was married at Atchison, Kansas, on November 25, 1905, to Miss Ethel Beck, who was a pupil of his when he was engaged in teaching in Kansas. She is a daughter of George Beck, a native of Atchison county, Kansas, and prominent in that section of the state. Two children have been born to Dr. and Mrs. Long. Callie was born at Choteau, Montana, on September 13, 1907, and Franklin was born at Great Falls on July 28, 1910.

SAMUEL D. MCNEELY, clerk of court at Kalispell, is a representative business man of this city, and is a man who not only has achieved his individual success but has also public-spiritedly devoted himself to the general welfare of his fellow citizens and has been foremost in advancing enterprises and improvements which will prove of lasting benefit to the city and state. He is a self-made man. From the first he was possessed of ambition and determination and his energy, courage and honorable methods have brought him to a position of esteem and influence among the citizens of this state, where he is a man of mark in all the relations of life.

A native of the fine old Wolverine State of the Union, Samuel D. McNeely was born in Port Huron, Michigan, August 31, 1866. His father, Richard D. McNeely, was born in Canada, whence he removed to Michigan as a young man, there engaging in the lumber business. He is now living in retirement, at the age of sixty-five years, at Everett, Washington. His wife, whose maiden name was Clara Batey, was born and reared in Michigan and she was summoned to the life eternal at Kalispell in 1901, at the age of fifty-three years. Mr. and Mrs. McNeely became the parents of four children, of whom Samuel D. was the oldest in order of birth.

After completing the curriculum of the public schools of Michigan, Mr. McNeely, of this sketch, began to work along mercantile lines. In April, 1902, he came to Kalispell, where he accepted a position with the Sommers Lumber Company. In the same year he entered the employ of J. W. Walker and was under him in the county clerk's office for the ensuing four years, at the expiration of which he engaged in the abstract business, working for Shoemaker & Roberts until 1907, when he became bookkeeper for the Missouri Mercantile Company at Kalispell. In 1908 he was honored by his fellow citizens with election to the office of clerk of court of Flathead county and he is the popular and efficient incumbent of that position at the present time.

JEAN EWEN. Among the professions the one offering the most prolific field in a growing community like Great Falls is that of architecture, and many of the most beautiful buildings in the city have been designed by the younger devotees of this calling. Youthful enthusiasm, fertility of ideas, natural talent inherited from a long line of artisans, and unbounded technical knowledge have served to make the work of Jean Ewen some of the best that the city has known, and have resulted in his services being constantly in demand. Mr. Ewen was born at Meintz, Germany, January 27, 1885, and is a son of Mathias and Margaret (Groven) Ewen.

Mathias Ewen was born in Meintz, Germany, in 1855, and in his early years was prominent in German military circles, holding the rank of lieutenant. He still survives and is engaged in the manufacture of Venetian blinds at Meintz. His wife, born at that place in 1860, also resides there, and they have had four children, as follows: Kathryn; Jean; Mathias, who now lives at Evansville, Indiana; and William, who still resides in the Fatherland.

Jean Ewen received his education in the common schools of his native country, which he attended until he was fifteen years old, and then took a course in architecture. At this time he left Germany alone for the United States and came directly to Kalispell, Flathead county, Montana, securing a position with the architectural firm of Gibson & Chanley, and under the guidance of these gentlemen devoted himself to the study of his chosen vocation for two years. Subsequently he went to St. Louis, Missouri, where he became assistant to Charles S. Holloway, a prominent architect of that city, and was also with A. W. Ebey, remaining in St. Louis in all for two and one-half years. During the three years that followed he was in the employ of F. J. Schlowter, of Evansville, Indiana, and he then returned to Montana and located in Great Falls, opening offices in 1910. Mr. Ewen has been successful from the start, and a number of the city's most beautiful residences and stateliest business structures have been built after plans of his making. He is enterprising and energetic and is possessed of ability and capacity for work. In his leisure moments he devotes his time to hunting and fishing, being very fond of out-door life, and is a director of the Great Falls Athletic Club. In political matters he is independent, and the only interest he shows in matters of a civic nature is that taken by a good and public-spirited citizen. His religious faith is that of the Roman Catholic church.

MME. CLARA L. (KIMBALL) MCCARROLL. One of the most energetic and enterprising women of Montana, Mme. McCarroll is widely known, her Beauty Parlors, at 113 West Park street, Butte, being liberally patronized, not only by the elite of the city, but by all desiring special treatment of scalp, hair or skin. She was born February 25, 1867, in Salt Lake City, Utah. Her father, Hiram Kimball, a native of Nauvoo, Illinois, where his birth occurred in 1841, became a pioneer settler of Salt Lake City, Utah, and in 1903 he became a resident of Butte, Montana. He married Clara Whitehead, who was born in England, in 1843, and as a child of eight years came with her parents to the United States, with them journeying to their new home in Salt Lake City. She died in Butte, Montana, in 1907. Clara L. Kimball was reared and educated in Salt Lake City and there she was united in marriage with Robert McCarroll, a prominent contractor of that place. Three children were born of their union, namely: Austin, whose birth occurred in Salt Lake City; Etoile, deceased, born in the same city; and Lydia, born in Butte, Montana.

In 1891 Mme McCarroll came to Butte with her husband. Born with a love for beauty, she had always longed to study the art of beautifying the hair, face and figure. In 1901 she took up the study and in 1902 went to New York City and graduated with high honors from the New York School of Chiropody and Dermatology. Returning to Butte, she opened parlors in the Pennsylvania block, but finding it too small, moved to a larger place on Broadway. In 1907 she moved to her present location, which is finely equipped, being considered by those in authority as the finest and best in every respect of any similar establishment west of Chicago. Mme. McCarroll is a specialist in regard to facial massage, shampooing, scalp treatment, manicuring, chiropody and dermatology, and also employs several expert assistants, and she likewise gives special attention to hair dressing, bleaching, dyeing and the manufacturing hair goods, and gives electric treatment of all kinds. She has also made a great success of the removal of birth-marks and blemishes. She has her own laboratory where all her toilet preparations are made and in addition to all this store, maintains a regular doll's hospital. Successful from the start, Mme. McCarroll has built up a large and highly remunerative patronage among the social set of Butte and the surrounding cities, her fame as a professional expert along the lines above mentioned having extended throughout the western states.

ROBERT H. CLAFLIN is another of the honorable company who may justly lay claim to the term self-made. He owes his prosperity not to any lucky speculation, but to the development of a useful field of occupation. Men who organize and maintain such enterprises confer a double service upon society, in that they both perform a needed service and afford the opportunity of making a livelihood to others.

New York was the state of Mr. Claflin's birth, but he did not grow up in it, for when he was five his parents moved to Kansas. The occasion of this change was the impaired health of the father, Lafayette Claflin. At the opening of the Civil war he had entered the company which went from Niagara county, New York, and served for four years in the Union army. This had been too great a strain upon his constitution, and so in 1878 he went overland with his family to Ellsworth county, Kansas. There he settled on a farm and devoted himself to live stock and general farming. The climate of the Sunflower state agreed with him and he resided there, managing his farm, until his death, in April, 1912. His wife, Kate Delaney Claflin, was born in Ireland in 1844. When she was a child some of her relatives came to America and she accompanied them. She settled first in Niagara county, New York, and it was there that she was married in 1870. She died in Kansas in 1908.

Robert Claflin was born on December 21, 1873, in Niagara county, of which his father was also a native. His sixth birthday found him in Kansas, and in her district schools he received his formal educational training. Until he was twenty-seven he worked on his father's farm, but in 1903 came to Helena, attracted by the high wages paid in that city. Mr. Claflin arrived at Helena in October and for several months thereafter worked in the mines. Next he went into the department store of Joseph Wienstein, but his stay there was limited to half a year, as he became ill and had to give up his position. When he recovered, he went to work for Milo Brooks in the moving business, and remained in his employ for nearly two years.

Before the end of the second year, Mr. Claflin had saved over a hundred dollars, and this he decided to invest in a business of his own. Purchasing a team, he started into the moving business for himself. The day on which he began was June 21, 1905. Since that time his equipment has increased from one team to five double teams and one single one. In 1907 he added to his transfer business a storage department locating at No. 845 Rodney street. In April, 1910, Mr. Claflin established a business of dealing in second hand household furniture, the outgrowth of which is the present furniture establishment at No. 335 North Main street where he deals both in new and second hand furniture. The capital of $150 with which he began has increased more than a hundred-fold, for now he values his plant and outfit at $25,000.

Before coming to Montana, Mr. Claflin was united in marriage to Miss Harriet B. Hughes, of Ellsworth county, Kansas, the daughter of Joseph and Hannah Hughes. Their marriage took place in 1900. Their only child, Bernice Estelle Claflin, was born in Helena on December 2, 1903, and is now attending school in the city. Mr. Claflin's religious preference is for the Baptist church, of which both he and Mrs. Claflin are attendants and members. He is a Democrat in political matters and, fraternally, a member of the Highlanders.

FRANK BECHTOLD. It is distinctively within the province of this historical compilation to enter record concerning those staunch and important industrial concerns which have conserved the commercial progress of Dillon and Beaverhead county, and prominent on the list is the Beaverhead Brewing Company, of which the gentleman whose name inaugurates this paragraph is the proprietor. It is one of the most modern and best equipped brewing plants in the west and Mr. Bechtold has achieved fame as the producer of his product, which in wholesome and exquisite quality is the equal of the celebrated German beers. He has been identified with Dillon since 1908 and although German by nativity, has developed into one of the most enthusiastic of Americans.

The birth of Mr. Bechtold occurred in the Fatherland April 29, 1864. When about twenty-four years of age he crossed the Atlantic in quest of the greater opportunity promised by the New World. He located first in Evansville, Indiana, where he remained two years and then went to Louisville, Kentucky, his residence there being of nine years' duration. From that point he went to Milwaukee, where he took a course in the Brewers' School and was graduated as a first class brew and malt master. He had been a competent brewer before coming to America and his object in studying in Milwaukee was to acquaint himself with American methods. After completing his course in Milwaukee he went to Johnstown, Pennsylvania, where he assumed the position of superintendent in the city brewery and remained in such capacity for five years. Through the solicitations of the late Mr. Henry Mueller, head of the Anaconda Brewing Company, Mr. Bechtold was induced to come to Anaconda, where for five years he held the position of inside superintendent of the Anaconda Brewing Company. On February 1, 1908, he came to Dillon, and here purchased the plant of the Dillon Brewing Company. He has resided here since that time and has enjoyed the greatest success, the company having grown steadily under his management. He has installed the most up-to-date machinery, run by electricity, and the plant is outfitted with carbonators and ice-making plant. The United States health office in Washington, D. C., passed upon the product as sanitary and of highest nutriment and free from all drugs and bacteria. In fact, it was one of the first mentioned in point of excellence. This progressive company has installed a cold storage depot in Lemhi county for malt liquors and soft drinks and have recently introduced a new brand brewed exactly in the style of the Export Pilsner and the great Bohemian beer. His son Frank is a great addition to the concern, having a diploma as superintendent, or foreman of a modern bottling plant, the same being acquired through his training as a practitioner in the Blatz and Fred Miller Brewing Company of Milwaukee. He has complete charge of the bottling department and is a graduate of the Milwaukee Industrial Brewer Academy. The senior Mr. Bechtold is a man of splendid executive capacity and any concern with which he has been connected has been pretty sure of success. The work he has accomplished here has been wonderful.

Mr. Bechtold was married in Germany, October 27, 1887, Mary Bitzenhofer, of Freiberg, Baden, becoming his wife. Their union has been blessed with eight children, equally divided as to sons and daughters. The eldest, Josephine, was born in Evansville, Indiana. John was born in Dillon, being associated with his father in business. Josephine M., born in Louisville, Kentucky, August 14, 1890, is a graduate of the high school and resides in Dillon with her parents. Frank X., born in Louisville, Kentucky, August 11, 1892, went through the public schools and was graduated from the Milwaukee Brewers' Academy as foreman of the Bottling Plant and is now filling that position with his father. Joseph M., born in Louisville, December 19, 1895, is in school in Dillon, as are the three youngest children: Fred K., born in New Albany, Indiana, November 17, 1898; Mary K., born in Johnstown, Pennsylvania, March 7, 1901; and Matilda S., born in Anaconda, Montana, July 17, 1904.

The Bechtold family are communicants of the Catholic faith. The head of the house belongs to the Eagles and is Republican in his political conviction, but takes no active part in politics, having in the direction of public affairs only the interest of the intelligent voter. He finds great recreation in the king of American sports—baseball; is fond of reading and, like all good Germans, delights in the better kind of music, particularly vocal.

Mr. Bechtold is a son of John B. and Mary Katherina (Linsemeyer) Bechtold. The former, who passed away in 1873, at the age of fifty-three years, engaged in mercantile business in Freiberg, where he lived all his life. The mother still resides in that beautiful and historic city. There were nine children in the elder Bechtold family, the subject being the sixth in order of birth. He has one brother in America, Dr. Gregory Bechtold, who is director in the theological seminary at Saint Meinrad, Indiana.

Mr. Bechtold has the prosperity of Dillon close at heart and is a typically alert and energetic citizen of the great west.

SAMUEL HAYES CLINTON was a gift from St. Valentine himself—and not a comic valentine, either, since he was the ninth of twelve children born to parents with a limited amount of this world's goods. At the time of his birth, February the fourteenth, 1876, the family was living in Crawford county, Missouri, not far distant from St. Louis. His father, Jenkins Clinton, spent his entire life at or near his own birthplace, Steelville, Missouri. He began life as a miller, tried his hand at ranching and finally became a merchant in Steelville where he died in 1906, at the age of eighty-eight. His wife whose maiden name was Ava Charlotte Williams, was like himself a Missourian by birth and training. She passed away at the age of sixty-six, leaving seven sons and five daughters. Naturally, these twelve children could expect little or no financial aid from their parents.

Samuel H. Clinton earned his first money as a newsboy in St. Louis. When seventeen years of age, he had the timidity to start a small mercantile establishment on his own responsibility. For two years he managed his little store in Wilsonmail, Missouri, not without some degree of success. When the opportunity to dispose of it came to him, however, he sold out and returned to St. Louis to accept a position with the Simmons Hardware Company. From order filler he became bill distributor and finally was made department manager of their large retail house on Broadway. This position did not altogether satisfy him, as he felt the only road to success lay in managing a business of his own. He therefore left St. Louis for Owensville, Missouri, and there, with the aid of borrowed capital, started a business in his own name. The business was well underway and the outlook good when a fire burned the building to the ground, destroying the entire stock.

This left Mr. Clinton not only penniless but with a large debt hanging over him. He asked for no bankruptcy proceedings. On the other hand, when his creditors offered to settle for fifty cents on the dollar he refused to make terms and ultimately paid every debt in full. Discouraged and sick at heart but determined to make good, despite the difficulties, he left Missouri for Texas. For four years he worked on a salary in Texas, going from one town to another whenever he saw an opportunity to better himself. During most of his time, he was with the Southern Contracting Company, first as paymaster and later as chief clerk. It was during these years in Texas, that he was able to greatly diminish the financial load which he was carrying. When twenty-seven years of age, he set out for Montana, stopping first at Helena. After a few months in this city he purchased a hotel in Harlowton.

This time his patron saint seemed to be with him for scarcely had he sold the Harlow House until it, too, burned to the ground. With the money from this sale in his pocket he went to Whitehall and for the third time, ventured into the mercantile world. As the children say "The third time is the charm," at least, so it seemed to prove for Mr. Clinton. He has built up one of the large and well known business houses of Madison county.

Mr. Clinton received his early education at Clinton school, Crawford county, Missouri, the school having been named for the senior Mr. Clinton. When the district school could offer him no more, he took a brief course in the business department of the Normal School at Steelville, Missouri. The balance of his education and all his advancement of whatever nature he has acquired by his own efforts. The road has been neither smooth nor level, and only his unfailing courage and his faith in the future have led him to where he is today.

Samuel Clinton is a prominent member of the Modern Woodmen of America, and was head guide in the Maccabees when that lodge was first organized in Whitehall. Politically, his sympathies are with the Republican party.

While in Dallas, Texas, in 1902, he was married to Miss Nellie Jane Green. Miss Green was the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. P. Green of Hutchinson, Kansas. At the time of her marriage she was twenty years of age. She is now the mother of a son of eight years, Lawrence Thomas Clinton, and a daughter, Catherine Blanch, aged three.

Thomas P. Green, Mrs. Clinton's father, was born in Terre Haute, Indiana, but moved to Kansas while still a young man. While there he was roadmaster for the Union Pacific Railroad, coming to Montana to accept a similar position with the new road that ran into Livingston. His wife was Ellen Holland, daughter of Cornelius and Ellen Holland of Boston, Massachusetts. Both Mr. and Mrs. Green are now residents of Whitehall, where Mr. Green has become associated in the business of his son-in-law. Mr. Clinton is known and honored as one of the most capable and trustworthy merchants of the city, whose success, because hard won, is conceded to be most justly deserved.

S. J. Clinton and his family are active members of the Roman Catholic church, in which both husband and wife were reared.

JOHN J. O'NEILL, manager for the Montana and northern Idaho business of the Continental Oil Company, with headquarters at Butte, is not only one of the representative business men of the Treasure state, but one of Butte's valued citizens as well. For more than a quarter of a century Mr. O'Neill has been connected with the Continental Oil Company and has become one of the best known men identified with the oil trade in the west.

Born on August 11, 1860, at Clifton Springs, Ontario county, New York, he is a son of James and Sarah (O'Brien) O'Neill, both natives of Ireland. They were the parents of fourteen children. The mother is now deceased, while the father is living retired and makes his home with his son Felix O'Neill, chief of police of Denver, Colorado.

John J. O'Neill passed the first twenty years of his life in his native town, Clifton Springs, New York. As one of a large family of children whose parents were in only moderate circumstances, his public school training was interrupted at frequent intervals when a boy, so that he early began life's battle for himself none too well equipped in the matter of education. He was not yet in his teens when he first secured employment at the Clifton Springs Sanitarium, and his first work as an errand boy was followed by more important duties, and it mattered not what they were; he undertook their discharge with considerably more zeal and interest than the average boy of his years may be induced to exercise. Naturally polite, courteous and willing, he made himself valuable, and rapidly grew in favor with both the management and guests, so that for about ten years he was in the employ of this institution, leaving it only when a better opportunity for advancement was offered. While there he had formed the acquaintance of Mr. C. S. Mooney, of Denver, who offered him a position with the C. S. Mooney Mercantile Company in that city, and in 1881 Mr. O'Neill went west to accept it. Beginning as general utility man, he rapidly familiarized himself with the business, being advanced from one post to another until he became foreman. He remained about six years with this house, and when he left it, it was to go in business for himself. He formed a partnership with W. P. Horan, under the firm name of Horan & O'Neill, and engaged in the retail oil business in Denver. This venture was a success and after about two years he disposed of his interests to his partner. It was in the latter part of 1887 when he first became connected with the Continental Oil Company, first as city salesman in Denver, and after a few months he was made manager of the Company's business at Colorado Springs, Colorado, where he continued for about six years, and was then transferred to Leadville, Colorado, remaining there for nine years in a like capacity. In 1903 he came to Butte and has ever since been in charge of the company's business at this place, which is one of its most important distributing stations in the northwest.

Mr. O'Neill married in Denver Miss Alice Kendrick, of Ottawa, Illinois. She died in Denver, in December, 1898, leaving a son and a daughter. John R., born July, 1890, in Colorado Springs, attended the public schools and completed his literary training at Gonzaga University, Spokane, Washington. He is now a student at the Art Institute in New York City. Alice M. was born in Colorado Springs, and is now attending the Colorado State Normal School, as a member of the class of 1913.

Since locating in Butte, Mr. O'Neill has maintained his residence in that city, previous to which time the family home had been at Denver. He is a prominent member of the Knights of Columbus, being present grand knight of the order at Butte. He is a member of Leadville Lodge, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and of the Silver Bow Club. He is a member of the Catholic church. Politically Mr. O'Neill is a Democrat, but takes only a business man's interest in affairs of a political nature, although favoring honest government and all those movements calculated to be of benefit to the community. His business interests have never extended outside the branch with which he is regularly identified, all his time and energy being expended in the interests of his company.

EDWARD J. BERRY. As Glendive has become, year by year, a more important commercial and industrial center, business has naturally increased and the transient population of the city has become of a magnitude which is a constantly growing tax upon the capacity of its hotels. Probably no other caravansary in the state of Montana so nearly approaches the standard of perfection in their appointments as does the New Checkla, at Glendive, the proprietor of which, Edward J. Berry, has spared no expense in making this hostelry capable of accommodating a vast throng of visitors within the city's gates and catering to their needs. Mr. Berry is one whose faith in the future of the city has been evidenced in numerous ways, not the least of which are his large investments in real estate, and he is also widely known as a breeder of fine cattle and horses and as the owner of the famous Riverside Farm, located two and one-half miles south of the city.

Edward J. Berry was born in Waushara county, Wisconsin, June 16, 1861, and is a son of James and Mary (Whalon) Berry. His father, a native of County Cork,

John D. Davis

Ireland, came to the United States when about eighteen years old with his parents, locating in Bangor, Maine, where James Berry became associated with his father in the lumber business. Later he removed to Wau-shara county, Wisconsin, settled on a farm in the wilderness, and while clearing a home engaged in black-smithing. In 1862 he enlisted in the Eighteenth Regiment, Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, under Colonel Buell, and participated in numerous battles, including Shiloh, and was at one time captured by the enemy and confined in the prison at Andersonville. After the war he returned to Wisconsin, resumed farming, and became a prominent citizen of his section, being active in the ranks of the Republican party, and serving for a number of years as school trustee. His death occurred January 1, 1893, when he was seventy-four years of age. His wife, who was a native of Bangor, Maine, is now seventy-one years of age and lives in North Dakota, Stark county. They had five daughters and four sons, and Edward J. was the third in order of birth.

Edward J. Berry attended school in his native county, and when fourteen years of age came west as far as Rochester, Minnesota, where he received his introduction to the hotel business as bell boy in the Cook House. In 1879 he went to Dakota, where he was employed on the Dalrymple farm, but subsequently returned to his home and for some five or six years was engaged in the livery business at Wausau. He then turned his attention to the lumber and real estate business in Rhineland, Wisconsin, but in 1892 removed to Bismarck, North Dakota, where he spent two years. His next location was in Dickinson, that state, where he dealt in horses, cattle and real estate, being the first man to ship corn-fed cattle from west of the Mississippi river to Chicago. He also built the Berry Block in that city, and became widely and favorably known in business circles. On January 1, 1903, Mr. Berry located at Glendive, where he entered the hotel business as proprietor of the Jordan Hotel, and in 1909 built an annex to this hostelry which he named the New Theckla, after his wife. This house contains fifty-four rooms, furnished in mahogany, walnut and bird's-eye maple, and its equipments are upon a scale of sumptuousness befitting a private mansion whose owner recognizes no limit of expense. Conceived to be one of the finest hotels in the west, it has lost none of its pristine excellence, and occupies today a foremost position among the leading hosteleries of Montana. The founding of such a handsome enterprise would alone have established Mr. Berry's right to prestige among the business men of Dawson county, but he also is well known as the owner of Riverside Farm, two and one-half miles south of Glendive, where he keeps the standard-bred cows that furnish the milk and butter for his hotel table. A lover of fine horses, he is a prominent figure at every race meeting of any importance held in the northwest, and owns at present two standard-bred stallions: Slumber Boy, 4171, and Bishop Cox, the largest standard-bred horse in the world. In regard to the latter we are allowed to quote from the Horse Review, of July 5, 1911, which stated in part as follows: "What is claimed to be the largest standard-bred horse in the world is owned by E. J. Berry, Glendive, Montana. His name is Bishop Cox. The Bishop stands seventeen hands, one and one-half inches high, and weighs 1,730 pounds. He is now seven years old, and for a horse of his size shows quite a lot of speed, having paced a mile in 2:51, with a quarter in :38. Bishop Cox is standard registered, and is by Potosi 23731 (son of Pistachio, p. 2:213-4, own brother of Nutwood 2:183-4); dam Peperomia (great broodmare), by Alcantara 2:23; third dam Jessie Pepper. Bishop Cox's dam is Vina Wills, by W. A. Sanborn 16654; grandam Rinda, by Harry Faulkner 1544; third dam Tillie Beck (dam of Jane Eyre 2:293-4), by Intruder; fourth dam Flora Belle 2:29 1-4, by Young Mambrino Chief; fifth dam Bird, by Camden." In addition Mr. Berry has Poland-China registered hogs. He has large real estate holdings in the city, and is the heaviest tax-payer in Glendive. In political matters Mr. Berry supports the principles and candidates of the Republican party, and his fraternal connection is with the Miles City Lodge, B. P. O. E.

On January 14, 1883, Mr. Berry was married to Miss Theckla Drewsen, who was born at Two Rivers, Manitowoc county, Wisconsin, daughter of Henry and Dora Drewsen, natives of Germany who were married in Milwaukee. They had a family of three sons and five daughters, Mrs. Berry being the fourth child in order of birth. Henry Drewsen came to the United States as a young man, and was in the hotel business for many years at Two Rivers, Wisconsin, and later in Manitowoc. A leading Republican politician of his day and locality, he served as county treasurer of Manitowoc county, Wisconsin, and was known as one of the influential citizens of his district. On January 14, 1908, Mr. and Mrs. Berry celebrated their silver wedding anniversary in Glendive, and numerous friends from all over this part of the state came to pay their respects and best wishes at the Jordan Hotel. Both Mr. and Mrs. Berry are popular in social circles, and their home is a center of true western hospitality.

JOHN G. BROWN. It is speaking with all due conservatism to say that John Griest Brown is one of the leading young attorneys of the state of Montana. Although little past thirty, he has a fine record of well-won success and is one of the best posted corporation lawyers at the Helena bar and the youngest corporation attorney in the state. He is also among those citizens who enjoy the distinction of having been educated at Yale. He is now engaged in general practice in association with William Wallace, Jr., and T. B. Weir.

Mr. Brown, who is the scion of one of the oldest and most patriotic of American families, is himself a native of Missouri, his birth having occurred in that state October 29, 1879. His father, Edward J. Brown, was a native of Pennsylvania, a doctor and druggist by profession. He was a veteran of the Civil war, having served for a short time with an Iowa regiment, but was discharged on account of ill-health, not, however, before he had participated in several notable engagements, one being in northwestern Missouri. This excellent citizen went on to the "Undiscovered Country" in 1890, while a resident at Edina, the birthplace of the immediate subject. The mother is a native of Missouri and now resides in Edina, Missouri. Mr. Brown's paternal ancestors were of English Quaker stock, and his father's mother's ancestor, John Griest came from England with William Penn and settled in Pennsylvania. The maternal ancestors were Scotch-Irish and came to America at an early date in its history.

John Griest Brown was next to the youngest in a family of seven sons. He was educated in the public schools of Edina, Knox county, in a preliminary sense, and subsequently pursued higher studies in the normal school of Kirksville and in the Missouri State University at Columbia. He then entered Yale University, from which celebrated institution of learning he was graduated with the degree of L.L. B. in 1903 and he was a member of the following fraternities at Yale: Phi Lambda Epsilon, Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Yale Professional Book and Gavel. From the Missouri State University he received the degree of B. A. Upon finishing his legal preparation Mr. Brown came at once to Montana and at first located at Butte, where he was associated with John J. McHatton in the legal department of F. A. Heinze & Company, and later was associated in general practice with Mr. John F. Davies. In 1907 he removed to Helena and was appointed assistant attorney general, under Albert J. Galen and served in such capacity for a short period, having charge of Railroad Commission Work. Following this he became assistant division counsel in the legal department of the Montana division of the Northern Pacific Railroad, William Wallace, Jr., being chief counsel. He is now engaged in general practice with Mr. Wallace, their offices being located in the Holter Block. They are connected with much important litigation and enjoy high professional prestige. Mr. Brown is also director and general counsel of the Montana Fire Insurance Company.

Mr. Brown has ever been interested in things of a military nature and is a member of the Missouri National Guard. He stands high in Masonry, belonging to Helena Lodge No. 3, and Helena Chapter and Commandery. He is prominent in club life and is affiliated with the University Club at Butte and with the Montana Club at Helena. His religious conviction is that of the Presbyterian church. He is a keen out-of-door man and finds his favorite diversion with rod and gun. He and his charming wife hold an assured position in Helena society and possess more than their share of friends.

On May 3, 1904, Mr. Brown was married at Kirksville, Missouri, to Miss Cordelia Ashlock, a daughter of W. J. Ashlock, a native of Missouri. They share their home with two young sons—John G. Brown, Jr., born in Butte, May 28, 1906; and William A. Brown, born at Helena, on May 24, 1911. Their residence is at 545 North Rodney street.

JOHN E. DEEGAN. Even in an age which recognizes young men and places responsibilities upon them which in the past have been laid only upon the shoulders of those of more mature years we seldom find one of twenty-eight years entrusted with the finances and complex details of the business end of so large a section as Carbon county. Such, however, is the confidence placed in John E. Deegan by the people of this community, that they elected him county treasurer when he had barely passed his twenty-sixth milestone, and that by a comfortable majority. Events have shown that the trust was well merited. Mr. Deegan was born in Platte county, Nebraska, October 23, 1884, and is a son of John and Rosa (Duffey) Deegan, natives of the Emerald Isle. His father came to the United States when about twenty years of age, and after landing at New York City traveled extensively, visiting various sections of the north and south and finally locating at Plattsville, Grant county, Wisconsin, where until 1875 he was engaged in mining. In that year he removed to Platte county, Nebraska, and engaged in farming and stock raising, which he carried on until his retirement in 1900. Removing to Columbus, Nebraska, he lived there quietly for several years, but his death occurred at the home of his children, in Red Lodge, while on a visit, in his seventy-second year. In Wisconsin he was married to Rosa Duffey, a native of Ireland, and she died when fifty-two years of age, having been the mother of seven children, of whom six are living: Elizabeth, the wife of M. H. Maher; and William J., Margaret, George W., Ida M. and John E. In his earlier years John Deegan was a Democrat, but later embraced the principles of the Republican party.

The education of John E. Deegan was secured in the public schools of Platte county, Nebraska, where as a youth he worked on his father's farm. He first came to Montana in the fall of 1903, securing employment in the law and abstract office of L. O. Caswell, where he was engaged until his election, in November, 1910, to the office of treasurer of Carbon county. In this office he has displayed marked ability, and he has been esteemed for his integrity, his progressiveness and alertness, and for his generous and genial disposition. His political views are those of the Republican party, and he is known as an indefatigable worker in its ranks. Fraternally he holds membership in Bear Tooth Lodge No. 534, B. P. O. E.; the Knights of Columbus;

Red Lodge Aerie No. 471, F. O. E.; and Summit Camp No. 328, W. O. W.

On March 17, 1907, occurred the marriage of Mr. Deegan to Miss Margaret D. Flynn, who was born in Pennsylvania, daughter of Michael D. and Catherine Flynn, natives of the Keystone state who are both now deceased. Mr. and Mrs. Deegan have two bright children: Evelyn L. and Octavia Margaret. Conscientious in the discharge of his official duties, public-spirited in his support of all measures calculated to be of benefit to his community, with a high sense of honor and the strength of his convictions, Mr. Deegan has earned the confidence of his fellow townsmen in a marked degree, and holds a prominent place among those who are assisting in advancing the development of the great commonwealth of Montana.

WILLOUGHBY DYE, M. D. With the scientific knowledge that years of close medical study have given him, and the surgical skill that has come through experience, Dr. Willoughby Dye, a leading practitioner of Deer Lodge, Montana, has also the advantage of possessing a natural bent in the direction of his profession, and this combination has brought him close to eminence, although he is yet a young man. He was born at Macedonia, Iowa, August 15, 1873, and is a son of Sylvester and Mary (Linville) Dye.

Sylvester Dye was born at Fort Madison, Iowa, and now lives retired at Council Bluffs. He is one of the comparatively few remaining veterans of the great Civil war, in which he served with honor as a member of Company E, in an Iowa volunteer regiment. He survived injuries on the battle-field and capture by the enemy at the battle of Pea Ridge. After the war closed he located at Council Bluffs and there engaged in the mercantile business for a number of years, finally retiring with an ample fortune. He married Mary Linville, who was born in Tennessee and died at Council Bluffs, Iowa, in 1889. They became the parents of three children: Willoughby; Emma L., who died at the age of sixteen years; and Henry C., who is a business man of Denver, Colorado.

Willoughby Dye attended the schools of Macedonia and when he graduated from the high school entered Simpson College, where he remained through his junior year, when he became a clerk in a bank at Macedonia, Iowa and later went to Dubuque, where for three years he was bookkeeper in a business house. In 1897 he found himself ready to enter upon the serious study of medical science and entered the Northwestern University, at Chicago, Illinois, from which institution he was graduated with the class of 1901. After graduation he was with Dr. Murphy at Mercy Hospital as a member of the house staff for two years, and in 1903 came to Deer Lodge, Montana. He has modern offices thoroughly equipped with apparatus and conveniences that enable him to care for any surgical case, and it is particularly in the line of surgery that he is prominent, his success having carried his name all over the state and patients beseech his attention to the limit of his endurance.

Dr. Dye was united in marriage with Miss Helen G. Mills, who was born at Deer Lodge, Montana, and is a daughter of Captain James H. and Ella M. (Hammond) Mills. The father of Mrs. Dye was born at New Lisbon, Ohio, in 1837, a son of George S. and Susan (Davis) Mills. Until the opening of the Civil war, James H. Mills was engaged in mercantile and mechanical pursuits. On April 27, 1861, he enlisted as a private soldier in Company G, Eleventh Pennsylvania Reserves, which became the Fortieth Pennsylvania Infantry, and with his regiment he participated in twenty-seven general engagements, and for gallantry was many times promoted until he was finally, after the battle of the Wilderness, made brevet-lieutenant-colonel, and was honorably discharged and mustered out of the service in 1864. In the spring of 1866 he came to Montana and was one of a company that opened a hydraulic claim at Emigrant Gulch. After many harrowing experiences, incident to the times and conditions, he became editor of the Montana Post, which he ably conducted until 1909, when he founded the New Northwest, at Deer Lodge, and was the first president of the Montana Press Association. He was a member of the first constitutional convention of Montana, later served four years as secretary of the territory under appointment by President Hayes, and after declining other proffered honors became collector of internal revenue for Montana, Idaho and Utah. In 1893 he was appointed commissioner of the state bureau of agriculture, labor and industry, and in 1895 he was appointed receiver for the Northern Pacific Railroad.

To Dr. and Mrs. Dye two children have been born: Willoughby, Jr., and Barbara Mills. They are members of the Presbyterian church. In addition to his extensive practice, Dr. Dye has mining and ranch interests. He is a Knight Templar Mason and Shriner and retains membership in his college fraternities, his favorite recreation being fishing and motoring. In his views on public questions he is Progressive.

DR. LOUIS H. FLIGMAN. Among the men of large ability and splendid professional and intellectual attainments who have selected Montana as the field of their activities, a prominent place is held by Dr. Louis H. Fligman, of Helena, who has made the most careful and extensive preparation as a specialist in internal and nervous diseases, in which particular branch of medicine he is one of the best qualified and most skilled practitioners in this state. In Dr. Fligman are combined the American spirit of energy and progressiveness and the old world spirit of thoroughness.

He was born at Berlad, Roumania, May 20, 1878, and received his earlier education in his native land. While still a youth he came to America in company with his parents, who first settled in Minneapolis, Minnesota, but later came to Helena, Montana, and are still residents of that city. Dr. Fligman continued his education in the public schools of Minneapolis and was graduated from the high school there in 1894. He then entered the academic department of the University of Minnesota where he took a special course in chemistry. Following this he took a position as instructor in the physiological chemistry department of the university and while attending to those duties also studied medicine, graduating from the medical department in 1901. He began as a practitioner in 1902 and was appointed on the staff of the city physicians in Minneapolis, on which he served until February, 1903, when he located at Helena, Montana. The following year he returned to Europe and took a post graduate course at the University of Vienna, where he remained one year studying internal and nervous diseases. He returned to Helena in 1904 and was engaged in active practice until 1907, when he returned again to the University of Vienna where he continued research work along special lines, and while there extended his studies to the University of Paris. Not content to let his preparation rest with the knowledge gained in these two old and famed institutions, he has also taken up special studies on internal and nervous diseases at London, the University of Padua, Italy, and the University of Berne, Switzerland. Dr. Fligman seeks every avenue for securing greater powers of efficiency in his special line of professional work and is one of the leading authorities of the state on internal and nervous diseases. Dr. Fligman is a proficient linguist, speaking fluently the German, French, English, Roumanian and Italian languages.

This talented and successful physician has been a practitioner but ten years, but in that short period has built up an enviable and state-wide reputation as a skilled specialist. With the true professional spirit, Dr. Fligman devotes himself to his work more for the good he may do and for the purpose of advancing the science of medicine than for remunerative returns. His professional interest is further indicated by his membership in medical fraternities, being a member of the Lewis and Clark County Medical Society, the Montana State Medical Society, the American Medical Association, and the medical associations of Vienna, Berlin and Paris. He was president of the Helena board of health from 1905 to 1907.

Dr. Fligman springs from an old Roumanian family, his ancestors back for a thousand years on both the paternal and maternal sides all having lived in that country. He is a son of John and Fanny (Pink) Fligman, both natives of Roumania but now retired residents of Helena. They immigrated to America along in the '80s, and for a number of years John Fligman was prominently engaged in the mercantile business both at Helena and at Butte. Dr. Fligman resides at the corner of Hemlock and Dearborn. He has one brother, Joseph B. Fligman, a high school student at Helena, and one sister, Mrs. Julia S. Holtsman, whose husband is a prominent merchant of Helena. He is a member of the Montana Club of Helena, and in politics is a Republican.

Dr. Fligman was married at Helena to Helen E. Trowbridge. In 1912 he spent seven months abroad studying at the Universities of Vienna, University of London and University of Berlin.

STEPHEN TERCZEWSKI. A fellow countryman of Thaddeus of Warsaw, Konyetspolski, whose iron legions broke the talons of Gustavus Adolphus, the great eagle of Scandinavia, whom no other force could withstand in his day, and also of Kosciuszko, who flashed his maiden sword in the struggle for American independence; heir of all the glory and grandeur that was Poland when she was free, and proud of his great heritage in this respect; yet for more than a quarter of a century a resident of this country and devotedly attached to its institutions, Stephen Terczewski of Butte, Montana, is by birth and training, by inheritance and adoption, in theory and practice, a lover of mankind and a great believer in human freedom and the largest individual liberty consistent with the general well-being of the race.

Mr. Terczewski was born in Poland on December 15, 1859, and is a son of George and Rosa (Schuster) Terczewski, also natives of Poland and residents of Posen in that country, where the father died in 1882, at the age of fifty-two. He was a cabinet-maker, and both he and his wife passed the whole of their lives in their native land. They were the parents of four sons and one daughter, all of whom are living in the old country but Stephen.

He obtained his education in his native land, attending school there until he was twelve years old. He was then apprenticed to a tailor to learn the trade, and after his apprenticeship of three years worked at the craft in Europe ten years, five of which were passed in Berlin. He also spent three years in the army and one in Munich. In 1886 he came to the United States and located in St. Louis, where he worked at his trade three years. At the end of that period he moved to Chicago, and during the next twelve years was busy with his needle in that great city, working in the leading merchant tailoring establishments and making a good record for skill and excellent work in every particular.

In February, 1903, he came to Butte, and here he has resided ever since. During the first five years of his residence in this city he was in the employ of the Palmer Tailoring Company, and he then purchased the business of this company, and it has been continuously under his sole control and management from the time when he made the purchase. The establishment is located at 50 East Granite street, and is universally acknowledged to be one of the best and most progressive, up-to-date and satisfactory in this part of the country. Mr. Terczewski is its whole inspiration and directing force, and the excellence of its work, the breadth and height of its reputation and its widespread popularity are all due to his skill as a craftsman and his fine business ability.

Mr. Terczewski takes a very active interest in public affairs, local and general. He trains and votes with the Republican party, and is one of its most faithful and effective workers in all its campaigns. Socially he is a member of the Polish National Alliance, and the organization of American Patriots, and fraternally he belongs to the Fraternal Order of Moose. His religious connection is with St. Patrick's Catholic church, of which he is a devout and consistent member, and in whose welfare he is always warmly interested.

On August 14, 1888, Mr. Terczewski was united in marriage with Miss Mary Jasinski, born in Poland. The marriage took place in Chicago and has resulted in one child, Frank Terczewski, who was born in that city on October 4, 1894. The father owns the fine family residence at 530-532 West Mercury street, and has other property in the city, as well as a very flourishing business. He was a poor boy and started in life for himself with nothing in the way of money capital, and all his success is the result of his own ability.

AUGUSTUS H. GRAY. The citizens of Indiana have made their voices heard in political matters both in their own state and to the west and the east of it, and Montana is indebted to the state for some of her best legal lights, and ablest public officials, among whom is A. H. Gray. Clark county was the place of his birth, and 1872, the year, July the month. His father, John A. Gray, was born in Louisville, Kentucky, and reared in Cincinnati. In those days the "back to the farm" movement had not begun, but Mr. Gray was ahead of his time, and realized the advantages of the agricultural occupation. Accordingly, he emigrated to Indiana and settled upon a farm in Clark county, which he worked profitably until his death in 1908, at the age of eighty-three. He was known throughout Clark county, not only as a successful farmer, but as a citizen who was a friend of progress, and all that makes for advancement of the general welfare. His wife was also born in Louisville in 1846. She is still living in Indiana where the most of her married life was spent and where her nine children were born.

Augustus Gray was the fourth child in point of age, and his early life was the usual one of the busy farmer's son. He early decided upon the profession he would follow in life, and set about preparing for it. He graduated from the Southern Indiana Normal College first, and then spent some time in teaching, after the time-honored custom of those who plan to enter the legal profession. While teaching, Mr. Gray devoted his leisure to the reading of law, and in 1900, he went to the State University of Indiana and enrolled in the law school. While in college, he displayed unusual ability in debate, and was a member of the Indiana University debating team, when Indiana tried conclusions with the debaters of the neighboring states. In 1902, he received his diploma and came west to begin his practice. For six months, he was in Oregon, but on January 1, 1903, he came to Great Falls, and put out his shingle here. He was successful from the very first and each year has seen him further advanced in the ranks of the men who give prestige to the profession in Montana.

A Republican in political convictions, he early became a factor in the local organization, in which his abilities as an orator, as well as his skill as a leader made him a valuable exponent. For four years he was a member of the state legislature, serving in the tenth and eleventh assemblies. When this service was finished, he was elected assistant county attorney of Cascade county, filling this office during the year 1908-

09 with characteristic efficiency. In May, 1911, he was elected city attorney, and in this office, has vigorously upheld the ordinances of the city, and pursued the violators of her laws determinedly. His work as city solicitor has commended him to the entire body of public-spirited citizens, who desire an efficient administration of municipal business. In 1910 Judge William Hunt appointed him as United States referee in bankruptcy for northern Montana—which appointment was renewed by United States Judge Borquin in 1912.

Mr. Gray is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and a trustee of the same. He belongs to the Modern Brotherhood of America, and to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, of which he is a past grand master.

Mrs. Augustus Gray, formerly Ida Wacasack, is the daughter of Frank and Emily Wacasack, of Great Falls. They were among the early comers to this section, and are among the best known families of Great Falls. Mrs. Gray was born in Milwaukee, Wisconsin and was married at Great Falls on September 12, 1907. Two children comprise the family of Mr. and Mrs. Gray: a daughter, Geraldine Ida Gray, born July 5, 1909, and a son, Carl Augustus Gray, born in June, 1911, both in the city of Great Falls. Mr. Gray is one of the popular citizens of this district, socially, as well as politically and Mrs. Gray shares in the social prominence of her husband, not only as the mistress of his home, but for her own many qualities which fit her for her place in society.

THOMAS NELSON MARLOWE. Prominent among the successful and most highly esteemed members of the Montana bar is Thomas Nelson Marlowe, of Missoula, who has acquired a well defined knowledge of law, its technicalities and its application, and now holds high rank among the foremost attorneys of this section of the state, his talents and ability being widely recognized. He was born, August 24, 1880, in Carroll county, Missouri, where his parents, John T. and Sarah A. (Roselle) Marlowe, settled in 1852. His father was a Kentuckian by birth, while his mother was a native of Maryland, and are now residents of Missoula, Montana.

Growing to manhood in Missouri, Thomas Nelson Marlowe obtained the rudiments of his education in the public schools of Carroll county, being graduated from the high school in 1899. A year later, in the fall of 1900, he entered the law department of the University of Missouri, where he was graduated in 1902, with a good record for scholarship. Going then to New Haven, Connecticut, he was graduated from the law school of Yale University with the class of 1903. A short time later, Mr. Marlowe began the practice of his chosen profession in Missoula, and has since built up an extensive patronage, his talents and ability easily placing him among the leading lawyers of Missoula county.

A staunch adherent of the Democratic party, Mr. Marlowe has taken a prominent part in public affairs, being especially active and efficient in campaign work, and in 1907 and 1908 serving as county attorney. He is identified with various beneficial and fraternal organizations, including the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and Masons.

Mr. Marlowe married, at Hamilton, Montana, June 12, 1907, Nellie B. McMurray, who was born in Palmyra, Missouri, and they are the parents of two children, Thomas Nelson, Jr., and Elinor.

THOMAS W. ROBINSON. It is a matter of gratification to the biographer and student of human nature to make a study of the career of a man who, in the face of almost insurmountable obstacles, has plodded persistently on and eventually, through his determination and energy, made of success not an accident but a logical result. Thomas W. Robinson, who maintains his home at Conrad, Montana, is strictly a self-made man and as such a perusal of his career offers both lesson and incentive. He has been eminently successful as an attorney of recognized ability, has resided in Conrad since 1907, and has ever manifested a deep and sincere interest in all matters affecting the good of the general welfare.

Reg. E. Myers,

Thomas W. Robinson was born in Taylor county, Kentucky, May 12, 1868, and he is a son of John Milton and Lucy (Williams) Robinson, both of whom were born and reared in Kentucky, where their marriage was likewise solemnized. The paternal grandfather of the subject of this review was a native of Virginia, whence he removed to Kentucky in the pioneer days. John Milton Robinson was a planter and slave owner in the old Bluegrass state in the ante-bellum days. He passed to eternal rest, at the comparatively early age of forty-two years. Mrs. Robinson died at Conrad, Montana, in 1911, at the age of sixty-one years. The Robinson family consisted of six children—five sons and one daughter—and of the number five are living, in 1912, the subject of this review having been the first born.

To the public schools of Campbellsville, Kentucky, Thomas W. Robinson is indebted for his preliminary educational training and later he attended school in Bowling Green and Parkville, Missouri. For four years he was a student in Park College at Parkville, Missouri, and in 1903 he came to Montana, locating in the city of Great Falls, where he entered the law office of E. H. Hildreth, under whose able preceptorship he studied law, being admitted to the bar of the state of Montana in 1905. He initiated the active practice of his profession in Great Falls and in the fall of 1907 came to Conrad, where he has since resided and where he controls an extensive and lucrative law practice. He is attorney for a number of prominent business concerns here and has figured in many important litigations in the state and federal courts. In politics he is an unswerving Republican and he takes an active part in the local councils of that organization.

In 1898, at the time of the inception of the Spanish-American war, Mr. Robinson enlisted for service as a private in Troop B, Second Missouri Cavalry. He went to the front with his regiment, participated in a couple of engagements and received his honorable discharge September 8, 1898, on account of disability. Mr. Robinson had one dollar in his possession when he left home, at the age of nineteen years. He worked his way through school and managed to obtain a good legal education as the result of his own unaided efforts. In addition to his professional work at Conrad he is now farming an estate of one hundred and sixty acres, eligibly located two and a half miles west of Conrad.

In the city of St. Louis, Missouri, in September, 1895, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Robinson to Miss Allie P. Thomas, who was born and reared in Missouri. Mr. and Mrs. Robinson are the parents of two children—Herbert C., born July 25, 1897, at Farmington, Missouri; and Lucille Mary, whose birth occurred in Great Falls, Montana, October 4, 1907. In their religious faith the Robinson family are devout Presbyterians.

ROY E. AYERS. On August 27, 1912, Roy E. Ayers was nominated on the Democratic ticket for judge of the tenth district, and his election to the office duly followed on November 5th, winning the place with largest majority accorded to any man on the ticket in his district. Thus at the early age of thirty years, we find the subject of this necessarily brief review assuming the duties of judge of his district, in which he has been prominent as a lawyer since he was admitted to the bar in 1903.

Born in Fergus county, on November 9, 1882, Mr.

Ayers is the son of George W. and Etta (Sullenger) Ayers. The father was born in Iowa, crossing the plains, by wagon, to Oregon in 1868, and came to Fergus county soon after his marriage, which took place in 1880. Both are still residents of this district, and Mr. Ayers has large interests in sheep and cattle. Seven children were born to George W. and Etta Ayers, of which number Roy is the eldest. Mabel died at Forest Grove, in 1898. The others are: Thomas, engaged in the stock business in Fergus county; Olla married Louis Griffith, a well-to-do rancher of the county; the other children, Robert, Russell, and Lucille, still are sheltered by the parental roof.

The early education of Roy Ayers was secured in the public schools of his native community, but he early left school and began to work on the round-up. In 1898, when he was sixteen years old, his employer, Tom Shaw, was elected sheriff, and the boy came on to Lewistown to fill the position of night jailor or turn-key. While filling that post he took advantage of an opportunity to attend school in the city, and he was graduated from the Lewistown high school in 1900. In that same autumn he went to Valparaiso, Indiana, there entering the law department of that university, supplementing his legal studies with a thorough course in oratory, and duly receiving his degree from the institution. On the 7th of October, 1903, he was admitted to the bar in Montana, since which time he has been engaged in practice in Lewistown.

The Democratic party found in Mr. Ayers a powerful ally, and after he had been practicing for thirteen months he was elected to an office never before held by one of that party—the office of county attorney. He was re-elected to succeed himself in a second term, sufficient commentary upon his service being included in the simple statement of the fact. He was chairman of the county central committee of his party, and has served on the state committee for one term. He has served as a member of the state board of education, and has ably discharged his duties in that connection.

In speaking of the official career of Roy E. Ayers thus far in life, a Fergus county publication, prior to the recent election, said of him in part: "In 1904 the voters of Fergus county elected him county attorney by a handsome majority, and as an evidence of his efficient service as a public official, they re-elected him in 1906 by a still larger majority. As county attorney he made an enviable record, not only the best that Fergus county ever had, but his record stands today unchallenged in the state of Montana. He performed his duty as he saw it, impartially and fearlessly, always hewing to the line and letting the chips fall where they would. He was the first prosecuting officer in Montana to enforce the anti-gambling law, and his efforts in that respect were highly commendable.

"Mr. Ayers possesses an excellent legal mind, and has had abundance of experience, and this, together with his fairness, level-headedness, and absolute honesty in dealing with his fellowmen, makes him excellent judicial timber.

"It must be admitted that his aspiration to become judge of this district is a laudable one. To be judge of the district of his nativity and to be supported for that high office by the people who have known him from his cradle, is an ambition worthy of honest effort. And one of the best things that can be said in his favor is that so many people who have known him all his life are so ardently supporting him. They have tried him: he has made good. It is an American principle to advance such men, and it is conceded that the next judge of the tenth district will be Roy E. Ayers." How well this prediction was fulfilled has already been indicated in an opening paragraph.

On June 7, 1904, Mr. Ayers was married to Miss Ellen Simpson, of Lewistown. Her father, John Simpson, is a pioneer of the state, and was an intimate friend of Colonel Sanders. Mr. Simpson was one of the first men to make a business of transporting freight in this state, and both he and his wife are well known to all the old residents of the city.

Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Ayers. Eleanor, the eldest, is attending school in Lewistown, but Arthur and Roy D. are still too young to have commenced their formal school training. Mrs. Ayers is a member of the Methodist church and takes a prominent part in the work of the various departments of the church. Mr. Ayers is very fond of hunting, and admits that he forces his business to offer him an opportunity each fall for a hunt in the mountains. He is a good shot and always brings home an ample quantity of choice game.

In addition to his membership in the Judith Club, Mr. Ayers is a member of the Elks, the Odd Fellows, and the Woodmen of the World. In the lodge of the Elks he has filled all the chairs and is now Past Exalted Ruler, in addition to which he is a member of the grand lodge of the order.

ROBERT IFF. Sanders county, Montana, figures as one of the most attractive, progressive and prosperous divisions of the state, justly claiming a high order of citizenship and a spirit of enterprise which is certain to conserve consecutive development and marked advancement in the material upbuilding of this section. The county has been and is signally favored in the class of men who have contributed to its development along commercial and agricultural lines and in the latter connection the subject of this review demands recognition as he has been actively engaged in farming operations during the entire period of his residence in Montana. He is the owner of a fine ranch of 160 acres, eligibly located 28 miles distant from Thompson Falls, and he is an enterprising agriculturist whose business methods demonstrate the power of activity and honesty in the business world. In the fall of 1910 Mr. Iff was elected treasurer of Sanders county and he is still incumbent of that important office, in 1912, acquitting himself with all of honor and distinction in discharging the duties connected therewith.

Robert Iff was born in Switzerland, January 1, 1873, and he is a son of John and Rosa (Trachsel) Iff, both of whom were born and reared in Switzerland and the former of whom died in 1878. John Iff was a very learned man and was a professor in the Government Seminary in his native land. Mrs. Iff is still living, at the age of sixty-seven, and she resides at Berne, Switzerland.

The first in order of birth in a family of five children, Robert Iff was reared to maturity in Switzerland, where he received his preliminary educational training in the public schools of Berne. He finished the equivalent of a high-school course and for two years was a student in the Government Seminary. At the age of eighteen years, in 1891, he immigrated to America, settling first in Canton, Ohio, where he remained for a period of one year, working on a farm. In 1892 he went to Chicago and there followed rail-roading for the ensuing ten years, at the expiration of which he came to Montana, reaching this state in 1903. He immediately took up a homestead in Sanders county, near Trout creek, and with the passage of time he has improved the same until it is now recognized as one of the most attractive estates in this section. Mr. Iff is particularly fond of cattle and he loves the dairying feature of his ranch.

A stalwart Republican in his political proclivities, Mr. Iff takes an active part in the local councils of that organization. He has been a member of the school board in Sanders county for some years past and from 1908 to 1911 he was justice of the peace. In 1910 he was further honored by his fellow men with election to the office of county treasurer, a position he is incumbent of, in 1912. He is a valued and appreciative member of the Thompson Falls Development League and is ever on the alert to forward all measures and enterprises projected for the good of the community and state at large. In a fraternal way he is affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America and in his religious faith he leans toward the Zwingli Reform church of Switzerland.

At Wilmet, Ohio, March 29, 1904, Mr. Iff was united in marriage to Miss Elsie R. Schwartz, a daughter of John Schwartz, of Wilmet. Mr. and Mrs. Iff are the parents of four children, whose names are here entered in respective order of birth: Hilton, Robert, Jr., George, and Eddie. Hilton Iff is attending school at Thompson Falls.

Mr. Iff is an extremely well-educated man and is fond of good theatricals, music, singing and reading. He is very enthusiastic about Montana and cannot say enough about its opportunities and advantages. He says: "I have been in Montana over ten years and have found health, happiness and prosperity; why should I not be enthusiastic over the state? This part is especially fine for hay, grain and fruit and always a first-class market for dairy products. It would take a whole lot to induce me to surrender my ranch and leave Montana."

CHRISTIAN H. RATCHYE. Identified with Montana and other sections of the northwest throughout most of his business career, Mr. Ratchye is one of the leading business men of Whitefish. When he came to America a youth of about eighteen, he had little money, and has relied on his own ability and industry to advance him to prosperity and influence. His has been a successful career.

Christian H. Ratchye is a native of Norway, born September 22, 1871, a son of Frederick C. and Anna (Johnson) Ratchye. His father, who died in Norway in 1889 aged fifty-four, was a farmer and seafaring man. The mother came to America after her husband's death and is now a resident of Union county, South Dakota.

At the age of eighteen Christian H. came to America alone. His education had been obtained in the common schools of his native land and also in an academy, from which he graduated in 1889. He first located at Sioux City, Iowa, where he got employment as bookkeeper for James Sundry, an ice dealer, with whom he remained eighteen months. This experience gave him considerable knowledge of business and prepared him for subsequent ventures. He next moved to Beadle county, South Dakota, where he homesteaded a claim, but after farming it awhile relinquished it. Seattle, Washington, was his next location in the northwest, and there he entered the service of the Great Northern Express Company, with which he was connected for eleven years, up to 1910. During this time he was messenger in the train service, and in 1903 his headquarters were moved to Kalispell. In 1905, when the division point was moved from Kalispell to Whitefish, his residence was again moved to the latter place, which has since been his permanent home. In the fall of 1910, after leaving the express service, Mr. Ratchye established in Whitefish a hand laundry on a small scale. This was the beginning of a business which he has developed to be one of the best of the kind in northwest Montana, known as the Whitefish Steam Laundry, the first and only establishment in this line at Whitefish. His plant has complete modern equipment, and by reason of high-class work and service he has gained an extensive trade both in the immediate locality and in outside towns and counties.

Mr. Ratchye is a Republican and at times has taken an active part in politics. He is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and the Woodmen of the World. His place of business is at 128 Baker avenue, and he owns a comfortable home at 318 Kalispell avenue. Mr. Ratchye was married at Whitefish on November 5, 1905, to Miss Gay H. Colvin, daughter of John Colvin of Urbana, Illinois. Two children have been born to them—John Frederick on January 30, 1907; and Clarence Homer on January 19, 1912.

DAVID ROSS. What is one man's loss is often only too truly another man's gain, and this is so in the case of David Ross of Kalispell, Montana, for on account of the ill health of his wife he removed from Illinois to Montana, and thus the Montana county to which he came, gained an enthusiastic and loyal citizen, and its citizens a warm friend. Mr. Ross is one of the most successful attorneys in the county. He is a man with wide experience, gifted with a naturally brilliant mind and the powers of clear and logical reasoning. He worked in the fields to earn money enough to take his law course, and this foreshadowed the propensity for hard work that was to remain with him in his later life. Some of his best work is done in his own study in the thorough preparation which he gives to all of his cases. He is interested in other things beside his profession, and is active in all the public affairs of the town, civic or social.

The great-great-grandfather of the present head of the family was Alexander Ross, who migrated from Ireland early in the eighteenth century and settled in what was known as the Chester Monthly Meeting (a Quaker Settlement) in Pennsylvania. In 1706 he married Catherine Chambers, of Chichester, Chester county, now known as Delaware county, Pennsylvania, and in 1713 he removed to Haverford in said Chester county, Pennsylvania. He lived there for two years and then returned to the Chester Meeting, and removed from thence to New Garden, said Chester county, Pennsylvania. Upon the division of this Meeting, in 1730, his residence was within the limits of what was called Nottingham Monthly Meeting, Chester county (now Cecil county), Maryland, where he remained until 1732, when, he and a number of friends having obtained a grant of one hundred thousand acres of land from the governor and council of the state of Virginia, on the Opequon creek, in the Shenandoah valley, in what is now Frederick county, Virginia, Alexander Ross and his friends removed to this place and formed a settlement and established Hopewell Monthly Meeting. The children of Alexander Ross and his wife were: Mary, Lydia, John, George, Catherine and Albernia. John Ross, son of said Alexander Ross, was the direct ancestor of David Ross, said John Ross being married to Miss Lydia Hollingsworth on October 11, 1735. To them was born a son named David Ross, who married Miss Catherine Thomas on December 20, 1770. To this couple was born a son named David Ross who, on December 7, 1808, was married to Mary Janney at Fairfax, Loudon county, Virginia. To this couple, on January 20, 1819, at Alexandria, Virginia, was born a son named John C. Ross, the father of the subject of this sketch. The house in which said John C. Ross was born is still standing in the city of Alexandria, Virginia, and is one of the substantial, old-time houses of said city. His education was received at the private school of Benjamin Hallowell, in Alexandria, Virginia. When about fifteen years of age, his father having died when he was quite young, he went to live with his aunt, the mother of Johns Hopkins, who founded the universities and hospital bearing his name, in Baltimore, Maryland, and entered the employment of Johns Hopkins, who was engaged in the mercantile business in Baltimore. In 1838 John C. Ross went to Cooper county, Missouri, where he taught school until the following fall of 1840, when he removed to Fulton county, Illinois. He was married at Table Grove, Illinois, on the 3d day of April, 1852, to Sarah A. Bartholomew, who was a native of this town. She was a daughter of John Bartholomew, who was the first postmaster of Table Grove, taking office in 1822. He was also one of the California forty-niners. Mrs. Ross was born on the 8th day of May, 1835, and died on the 24th day of December, 1870. Several children were born to John C. Ross and his wife, five of whom are living. Catherine P. is the eldest and is now the wife of John Ralston, and lives in Red Wood City, California. David, born June 16, 1861, at Table Grove, Illinois; John C., who lives in Hoopston, Illinois, having moved from East Lynn to that place. Hattie N. is the wife of William Abernathy and lives at Table Grove, Illinois, as does also Charles P. Ross, the youngest.

David Ross received his elementary education at the country schools of Fulton county, Illinois, and later entered Lombard University at Galesburg, Illinois. For one year he attended the Gem City Business College at Quincy, Illinois, graduating from the same in 1879. Having determined that he would become a lawyer, he farmed and plowed corn in order to secure the money to pay the necessary expense of taking a course of law at the Northwestern University, Chicago, Illinois. He graduated from this institution in 1892, with the degree of LL. B. and was admitted to the bar of the state of Illinois in that year. In 1893 he began to practice law at Peoria, Illinois, where he became associated with the firm of Page & Puterbaugh, the latter being Judge Leslie D. Puterbaugh of Illinois, whose father was the author of Puterbaugh's Common Law Pleadings and Practice. He had originally been associated with Robert G. Ingersoll, the brilliant orator and atheist. Later the firm became Page, Wead & Puterbaugh and upon the election of Judge Puterbaugh to the bench of the circuit court of Illinois and his retirement from the firm, the firm name was changed to Page, Wead & Ross. While in Peoria Mr. Ross was on the legal staff of the Vandalia Railway Company, the Iowa Central Railway and the St. Louis, Peoria and Northern Railway Company. In 1903 his wife's health having failed, he determined to move to a better climate, severing his connections with the above firm, came to Montana, settling in Kalispell. He was admitted to the bar of Montana and practiced law for two years, at the end of this time removing to New York City, where he was in active practice after his admission to the bar of New York for two and one-half years. This climate not agreeing with Mrs. Ross's health, in October, 1907, he returned to Kalispell, and since that time has been actively engaged in the practice of law, where he built up a large and lucrative business. He is referred to by all as one of the leading attorneys in the city and the size of his clientele is the best proof of his success, which has been won by his own hard work. In 1898 Mr. Ross crossed the continent of Europe on a bicycle, that being his only method of transportation, and in 1900 navigated the Yukon river in a small sail and row boat.

Politically Mr. Ross is a Democrat and his professional associations are with the Illinois State Bar Association and with the American Bar Association. In religious matters he is a communicant of the Protestant Episcopal church, and during his residence in Peoria was a member of the vestry of St. Paul's Episcopal church. His fraternal affiliations are with the Elks, the Odd Fellows and the Masons, and he also still holds his membership in the Country Club and the Penstemon Club of Peoria.

Mr. Ross was married on March 8, 1885, to Mary E. Throckmorton at Macomb, Illinois, his wife being a member of a prominent family of that name who lived near Columbus, Ohio, and a relative of former Governor Throckmorton of Texas. He lost Mrs. Ross in March, 1897, and was married to Miss Anna Leslie Lucas at Peoria, Illinois, on November 14, 1900. Miss Lucas was the daughter of Fannie P. Lucas who was the daughter of Sabin D. Puterbaugh of Peoria, Illinois, the author of Puterbaugh's Common Law Pleadings and Practice and the Illinois and Michigan Chancery Practice. Mrs. Ross was born in Indiana, in the city of Indianapolis, Aug 16, 1880. Mr. Ross has five children: Hattie N., born January 20, 1886, who is the wife of Lamont Lockwood, a prominent banker in Chattanooga, Tennessee; John C. Ross, born February 2, 1888, and is a prominent young civil engineer at Asheville, North Carolina; Mary Ross, born July 3, 1893, who is attending the State Normal school at Macomb, Illinois.

To Mr. Ross and Anna Leslie Lucas Ross were born two children: Francis Leslie Ross, born in New York City, September 6, 1901, and Anna Eva Sabina Ross, born in New York City on August 17, 1905.

Mr. Ross is the president and manager of the Kalispell Title Guarantee & Abstract Company, and is the owner of a fine fruit farm and other land in Montana, as well as being the owner of valuable city property. He owns the beautiful residence where he makes his home, at 520 Sixth avenue, east, and his offices are in the Alicia D. Conrad building.

GIRARD B. ROSENBLATT. The town of the great northwest has proved too strong for many former residents of the east, and these men, now eminent in their respective spheres of activity, are now solid and substantial factors in the citizenship of this country. One of the ablest electrical engineers of the state of Montana is Girard B. Rosenblatt. Mr. Rosenblatt came to Montana first in 1903 on some special engineering work. He returned to Pittsburg and New York, but could not resist the influences calling him back into the northwest and on December 23, 1905, came to Montana to stay.

Girard B. Rosenblatt was born in New York City in 1881. He belongs to a family which originally had its seat at Frankfort-a-Main, in Germany. From that locality Gottlieb Rosenblatt immigrated to New York about 1830. Gottlieb Rosenblatt was a merchant and importer and was also prominent as one of the founders of the New York Society for Ethical Culture. His wife's name was Katrina Rosenblatt. The father of the Montana engineer was M. G. Rosenblatt, who married Frances Bernhard. The father, who for many years was a silk manufacturer, was born in New York in 1848, while his wife was born in the same city in 1854.

Girard B. Rosenblatt was reared and educated in New York City, and graduated from Columbia University in 1902. Having attained technical equipment he began active work as electrical engineer, and some time later, as already mentioned, was sent west upon a mission, the result of which was that for the past eight years he has been a permanent resident of Montana. Mr. Rosenblatt is in charge of the mining division for the Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Company, and formerly was in charge of the Butte branch office for this company. Earlier in his career he was a transformer designer, and also engaged in private work. In politics he is a Democrat, and has numerous fraternal social and professional relations. Mr. Rosenblatt is affiliated with Butte Lodge No. 22, A. F. & A. M.; with the American Institute of Electrical Engineers; with a number of the Alumni Associations of the Columbia University and vice-president for 1913 of the Utah Chapter; a member and in 1904 a director of the Sylvan Canoe Club at Pittsburg; has membership in the Silver Bow Club and the Butte Country Club at Butte; belongs to the University Club and the Country Club of Salt Lake City; and is a member of the American Canoe Association and an honorary member of the Electrical Society M. A. C.

Mr. Rosenblatt was married at Cleveland, Ohio, in 1909 to Miss Elsie Margaret Klein, who was born in Cleveland and was a daughter of Samuel H. and Nettie (Goodhart) Klein, her father a well known merchant and for many years a resident of Cleveland. Mrs. Rosenblatt is a native of the city of Cleveland, and was graduated from Smith College in 1906.

ARTHUR A. FERNS, founder of the Ferns Coal Company, vice-president of the Montana Orchard Company and a successful business man of Butte, was born in Montreal, Canada, on the 25th of March, 1876, and is the son of Arthur Ferns and his wife, nee Armitage.

The father of the subject was born in England, on the 28th of July, 1846. He came to Canada as a young man and was married at Montreal on July 5, 1875. He was in the employ of the Grand Trunk Railway Company as an expert accountant, and he held that position until he came to Butte in 1906 to go into business with his son. He is still actively engaged in the enterprise which was set on foot at that time. Mrs. Ferns is also a native of England, born there in 1852. They became the parents of seven children: Arthur, George, Francis, Egerton and May were all born in Liverpool, England; Mary, now Mrs. Garoll, was born at Richland, Indiana, and is now a resident of Miles City, Montana.

Arthur A. Ferns was sent to Liverpool, England, at an early age, and there he was instructed by private tutors in the elementary branches. He returned to America while still a boy and attended school in Dayton, Ohio, and in Cincinnati completed his high school course. Afterward, he secured employment with the Standard Oil Company as a shipping clerk in Cincinnati, and was engaged in this occupation for a year and a half. He left the Standard people to engage in the wholesale millinery business at Indianapolis, and from this line he went into similar work in the hardware and drygoods business. While thus engaged, he travelled over a large section of the western country, and was particularly attracted by the possibilities of Montana. In 1904 he was sent to this state to take charge of a wholesale paper concern, and after he had been here for a short time decided to go into business for himself. Accordingly, he and his father started in the coal business at Helena and at Butte, under the firm name of the Ferns Coal Company.

Arthur Ferns was impressed with the great opportunities which Montana offered to one interested in the land and orchard business, and so he started in that as a side line to his other interests. Before many months had elapsed he had organized the Montana Orchard Company, a concern whose object is the development of the orchard lands located in Carbon county, Montana. The company is incorporated and its president is Nicholas H. Gramling, with Mr. Ferns as vice-president. The success of this venture thus far has been most gratifying, and not a little of it is due to the enterprise of Mr. Ferns. The fame of Montana fruits has gone abroad, and there is no question of the reward of one who can promote the development of a new territory for the cultivation of this crop. Such undertakings are most beneficial to the state, for they both increase its wealth and bring most desirable citizens into it as permanent settlers.

Mr. Ferns is a member of the Silver Bow and the Montana clubs; in Indianapolis, he maintains his affiliations with the Marion Stock and the Canoe clubs. In politics he is a Republican and has always loyally supported the principles for which that party stands. He is a member of the Episcopal church, as might be expected of one of his birth and training, and he has the characteristic English fondness for sports of all sorts, being an especial devotee of football.

Mr. Ferns is one of the clever and progressive business men of the younger set, who are already making their mark upon the development and advancement of the west, and whose future must inevitably have a great influence upon the fortunes of the great state in which their activities are centered.

WILLIAM PAXTON CARY, one of the junior barristers of Butte, represents one of the oldest families of this comparatively young republic. His earliest American progenitor was Wilson Myles Cary, an Englishman who in 1650 joined the Virginia settlers who gathered their living from the soil and courageously bore arms in time of need. Through all of the succeeding generations the family has been southern as to location and spirit. George Walton Cary, the father of William Paxton Cary of this review, was born in Alabama, in 1840. His vocation was that of a dry goods merchant, in a wholesale way. He bore arms in the Confederate army, in which he held the rank of lieutenant colonel of the Forty-fourth Alabama Regiment, and with which he served from the beginning to the end of the conflict. Lieutenant Cary married Miss Margaret Virginia Paxton, a daughter of William Hayes Paxton and a descendant of the Paxtons of the early days of Lexington, Virginia.

William Paxton Cary was born March 31, 1882, in New York City, and his general education closed with his course in Cornell University at Ithaca, New York, from which he was graduated in the year 1904, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. While at Cornell he spent one year in the study of law. In the fall of 1904 he came to Butte and for two years worked as a miner. At the same time he devoted his time and attention to the study of law until December 1, 1906, when he was admitted to the bar. Since that time he has been engaged in the practice of his profession. In January, 1911, Mr. Cary became associated with H. A. Frank, under the firm name of Frank & Cary, and that copartnership is yet in force.

Mr. Cary holds membership in the Greek letter fraternity of Sigma Chi, and is also a member of the Silver Bow Club of Butte. Politically he is a Republican, but is not bound by party ties and votes for what he regards as the best men and measures.

FRANK P. LEIPER, the efficient attorney of Dawson county, now serving his second term in this important official capacity, holds prestige as one of the leading members of the bar of Glendive. Although a comparatively young man, Mr. Leiper is recognized as one whose influence is a decided factor in the ranks of the Republican party in Dawson county, where he stands for the best type of western American citizenship. He was born in Beaver county, Pennsylvania, December 4, 1876, and is a son of Robert S. and Minnie (Dick) Leiper. Mr. Leiper's father followed farming all of his life, and died in his native Beaver county, Pennsylvania, January 12, 1893. Mrs. Leiper, a native of Indiana county, Pennsylvania, survives her husband and lives in Beaver Falls, Pennsylvania.

Frank P. Leiper was given the advantages of an excellent education, attending first the public schools of Beaver county, and later Pearsall's Academy and Greensburg Academy at Darlington, Pennsylvania. He was thus qualified for work as an educator, and for eight years taught school in Pennsylvania, in the meantime assiduously prosecuting his legal studies. He completed his preparation for the law by a course in the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, and on December 6, 1904, was admitted to the Montana bar, since which time he has successfully practiced at Glendive. When only twenty-eight years of age he was elected to the state legislature, and was known there as one of the active young members of the body. He has also served as alderman of his adopted city, from the Second ward, and in 1908 was elected county attorney. The efficient and conscientious service which characterized his first term made his reelection a matter of course, and he is now giving the citizens of Dawson county the benefit of his experience in the field of jurisprudence. He has been faithful in the discharge of his arduous duties and well merits the esteem in which he is universally held.

On August 24, 1905, Mr. Leiper was married to Miss Lillian Sartain, who was born in Dawson county, Montana, daughter of John and Annie Sartain, natives of Tennessee. Mrs. Leiper was the fourth in order of birth of her parents' seven children, and the first white child born in Dawson county. Her father came here at a very early date, and died on his ranch, located near Miles City, in 1898, when he was seventy years of age. His widow survives him. Mr. and Mrs. Leiper have had two daughters, Dorothy and Carol.

HOSPITAL OF THE SACRED HEART. The city of Havre, Montana, has been fortunate in gaining for itself the Hospital of the Sacred Heart, of which Mother Ludmilla of the Order of St. Francis, Motherhouse at Stella Niagara, New York, is in charge. The hospital was placed in course of construction in June, 1911, but did not reach completion before February, 1912, the dedication taking place on the 18th day of that month, with Bishop Lenihan of Great Falls in charge of the ceremonies. Though not large, the hospital is adequate in every way to meet the demands of the city, and with accommodations for forty patients is well prepared to minister to the needs of the sick in this place. Five physicians and surgeons are connected with the hospital, all capable and prominent in their profession, and they have united in making the Hospital of the Sacred Heart the best equipped and most complete establishment of its kind in this section of the state. The operating room is the pride of the hospital, being accoutred in the most modern and approved fashion, and all the appliances and appurtenances which have been installed in the hospital were chosen with a view to propriety and efficiency, from a standpoint of service. Four sisters and the Mother Superior conduct the work of the place, and constitute a most efficient nursing staff. The building is equipped with an elevator, which is the only one in Havre.

KARL HUGH KELLOGG, M. D. The physician occupies one of the most responsible, as well as confidential, relations in our social existence. To him are entrusted our innermost secrets, as well as the lives and welfare of our dearest friends. To worthily and acceptably fill such a position is one of the most difficult tasks ever imposed on man, and such a task we find is assumed by Karl Hugh Kellogg, who, though yet a young man, is the oldest resident physician at Stevensville. Dr. Kellogg came to this city well equipped to practice his chosen profession, having been given a long and thorough training, and since his advent here, in 1904, his clientele has grown to large proportions and he has come to be recognized as a leader in professional, public and social life. He was born November 27, 1881, in Battle Creek, Michigan, a son of Will Keith and Ella (Davis) Kellogg.

Will Keith Kellogg was born in Battle Creek, Michigan, where he established the great firm that is now known all over the civilized world as the manufacturer of Kellogg's Corn Flakes, a breakfast food that has brought renown to the Michigan city. With his wife he is spending the greater part of his time in travel in foreign countries. His wife was a native of Maine, and they have been the parents of five children, three of whom are living: John Leonard, superintendent of the great plant at Battle Creek; Dr. Karl Hugh, and Elizabeth K., now Mrs. Williamson, of Battle Creek.

Dr. Kellogg secured his education in the primary and high schools of Battle Creek, and after graduating from the latter chose the profession of medicine as his life work. After devoting some time to study, in the fall of 1899, he entered the Detroit College of Medicine, and was graduated therefrom in the spring of 1904, this being supplemented by a special course in the Hygienic Laboratory at Battle Creek. During the same year he came to Stevensville and established himself in practice, and since that time has risen steadily in public favor, his sterling integrity and gentlemanly bearing having drawn around him many warm friends, while his undoubted ability has given him high rank among the medical practitioners of Ravalli county. He devotes a part of his time to scientific research, is a close and assiduous student, keeping fully abreast of the various advancements in his profession, and takes an active interest in the work of the various medical societies. Fraternally, he is connected with the Lodge, Chapter and Knights Templar of Masonry, being past master of his lodge, and is also identified with Oddfellowship. A staunch Republican in politics, he has been an active worker in the ranks of his party, and in 1906 and again in 1908, was elected to the office of coroner of Ravalli county.

Dr. Kellogg was married June 28, 1905, to Miss Etta Landram, of Stevensville, daughter of John and Holly (Emmett) Landram, a pioneer couple of Montana, the latter being a native of Virginia. Two children have been born to this union: Karl, aged four years, and Will Lewis, age two. Dr. Kellogg is essentially an "out-of-door man," and whatever time he can conscientiously spare from his professional duties he spends in hunting and fishing in and around the Bitter-Root country, finding in these pastimes one of Montana's greatest charms.

EDWARD SHERMAN BAER, C. E. Not every educated young man succeeds, even in the special line to which his training has been directed, for much more is needed than book learning, excellent and necessary as it is. Good health is a necessity and persevering industry an absolute requisite, while energy and enthusiasm assist in establishing the self-confidence that is the real foundation stone of many a subsequent business success. Among the capable and worth-while citizens of Glendive, Montana, whose constructive work in every direction illustrates all that has been said above, is Edward S. Baer, civil engineer, senior member of the engineering and contracting firm of Baer Brothers, with offices in the First National Bank Building, and with a professional reputation that extends over and beyond the confines of the state. Mr. Baer was born on his father's farm in Outagamie county, Wisconsin, near the city of Appleton, and his parents are John Mason and Libbie C. (Riley) Baer.

John Mason Baer was born at Mansfield, Ohio, November 14, 1846. When a mere boy he decided to seek his fortune away from home and when the Civil war broke out was working in a woolen mill. Although only fifteen years of age at the time, he succeeded in entering an Ohio regiment and bore himself so well through his first enlistment of three months that he was accepted at the age of sixteen years as a member of the One Hundred and Twentieth Ohio Volunteer Infantry, in which he was commissioned second lieutenant of his company, being the youngest commissioned officer in Ohio. After participating in many battles, marches and skirmishes and being three times wounded, he was captured on the "Nancy Bell," which was subsequently burned. After a period of confinement at Andersonville, Georgia, he was paroled, on account of the dangerous condition of his wounds and he then went back home, his parents in the meanwhile having moved to Outagamie county, Wisconsin. Under home care he slowly recovered and then returned to his regiment and afterward took part in the Red River campaign and was also at Gettysburg. After the close of the war he went back to Ohio and thence rejoined the family in Outagamie county, Wisconsin, and followed farming there until 1888, when he moved to Appleton, where he went into the lumber business. On the Democratic ticket he was elected register of deeds for Outagamie county, served for eight years and then was appointed postmaster of Appleton and continued in that office for six years. He still has important business interests, being manager of the Green Bay and Wisconsin Canal Company, of which he is a director, and is manager and treasurer of the Independent Telephone Company. He is a member of the G. A. R. post at Appleton, and is identified fraternally with the Masons, the Odd Fellows and the Elks.

In Ohio Mr. Baer was united in marriage with Miss Libbie C. Riley, who was born at Bethel, Ohio, September 15, 1847. She is prominent in social life at Appleton, Wisconsin, is past state president of the Woman's Relief Corps and has served as vice president of the national organization. Like her distinguished cousin, James Whitcomb Riley, she has great literary talent, is a valued contributor to G. A. R. literature and is the authoress of a charming book, "The Land of Fancy." Four children were born to the above marriage, namely: Antis M., who is the wife of a Mr. Gault; Charles O., who died of fever while serving as a soldier in the Spanish-American war; Edward Sherman; and John M., who is a civil engineer and a member of the firm of Baer Brothers, his home being at Beach, North Dakota.

Edward Sherman Baer after being graduated from the Appleton high school, entered the University of Wisconsin in the civil engineering department. For about one year after leaving the University he was connected with the boiler works at Manitowoc, Wisconsin, afterward going with the firm of O'Keefe & Orbison, of Appleton, as superintendent of the construction of a pulp mill at the Combined locks, near Appleton, on the Fox river. In 1902 he was the contractor with the Green Bay and Mississippi Canal Company in building the waste weir on the canal, an important engineering enterprise. Mr. Baer then came farther west and at Dickerson, North Dakota, became civil engineer in charge of the maintenance-of-way on the Northern Pacific Railroad between Mandan, North Dakota, and Billings, Montana, serving in this position from November, 1902, until August, 1904, when he resigned in order to become county surveyor of Dawson county, Montana, and city engineer of Glendive, continuing in office until 1910. During this time the main public utilities were installed, the city now having a fine sewerage system and a complete water works plant.

In association with his brother, John M. Baer, Edward S. Baer founded the firm of Baer Brothers. They are engineers and contractors and their line of activity includes surveys, estimates, plans and reports for municipal work and irrigation, topographical, city, town and land surveys and plats, and municipal contracting. The firm motto "On the Square" is typical of the capacity of its members and the honesty of its work.

On June 18, 1902, Mr. Baer was married to Miss Julia V. Green, who was born at Appleton, Wisconsin, and is the sixth member of a family of seven children born to John and Evelyn (Peerenboom) Green. The parents of Mrs. Baer reside at Appleton. The mother was born in Holland and the father in Ohio. He formerly was a contractor in city work and in the lumber business, but is now retired. Mr. and Mrs. Baer have two sons and one daughter: John G., Charles O. and Elizabeth C. Mr. Baer follows his father's example in a political way and gives his support to the candidates of the Democratic party.

HARRY J. HUENE, M. D., practicing physician of Forsyth, Montana, has been located in this city and engaged in general practice since 1904, which year marked his graduation from the medical department of the Northwestern University at Evanston, Illinois. He is fast winning prominence and position in the professional ranks and is gaining the unqualified confidence of a large clientele in and about Forsyth as a result of his careful attention to his duties and his natural ability in the line of his chosen work.

Born in Manchester, Iowa, on June 11, 1880, Dr. Huene is the son of Otto E. Huene and his wife, Rebecca O'Brien, both natives of Ohio. The father has been for years engaged in the insurance and real estate business in Manchester. He is a veteran of the Civil war, having served in the Twenty-third Ohio with William McKinley and was active in many important engagements throughout the war. Seven children were born to them, Harry J. being the sixth child and the youngest son of the family. All are residents of Iowa with the exception of the subject.

Dr. Huene as a boy attended the schools of Manchester, Iowa, completing the high school course in that town, and at the age of twenty, entered Northwestern University, as mentioned above. His graduation followed in due course, and he has been actively engaged since then in building up a name and a practice for himself in his chosen profession. He is highly regarded in Forsyth, both professionally and socially, and is identified with numerous fraternal societies in this city, among them being the Masonic lodge, in which he is at present an officer, the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Elks and the Eagles. He is also a member of the Forsyth Club. The doctor is a Republican, but is not interested in the political affairs of the county beyond the demands of good citizenship.

Dr. Huene married Miss Bessie Dunning on October 3, 1906, at Strawberry Point, Iowa. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Dunning, of that place. Mrs. Huene is a member of the Methodist church of Forsyth, although the doctor, while generously disposed toward all denominations, is a member of no church. He is especially enthusiastic about the future of Montana, and speaks of the state in terms of highest praise.

CHARLES B. WITTER. From the career of a professional singer to that of a successful ranchman is a far cry, and it would seem that the talent and temperament necessary to the one career would be useless in the other, or might easily be expected to preclude the possession of those qualities which would make the rancher a successful one. Not so, however, in the case of Charles B. Witter, as he has so eloquently demonstrated by the events of his life thus far.

Charles B. Witter was born in Denver, Colorado, January 1, 1871, and is the son of Hiram and Catherine (Bowers) Witter, both of Holland parentage. The father was born in South Bend, Indiana, in 1840, and died in Denver in 1899, having passed his life in the real estate business. The mother was born in New Vienna, Ohio, in 1844, and passed away in Denver in the same year in which the death of her husband occurred. Charles was the only child of their union, and he was given every advantage which their comfortable means would afford in the way of education. He was graduated from the Denver high school in 1890 and followed that by a course in the Denver University, after which he entered the real estate and land office of his father and studied the business for one year. The young man had given unusual evidence of vocal ability, and it was his ambition to study voice in New York City. His parents accordingly sent him there to study under the best masters and after four years of careful study between 1896 and 1900 he returned to Denver. It was the plan of the family to send young Witter abroad to study under the foreign masters, a brilliant musical career being the prediction for him, and that plan would have been carried out but for the sudden decline in the health of the father, which made it seem impossible for the young man to leave him on an extended tour. With admirable self-sacrifice he gave up all thought of further study and settled down to assume charge of his father's business, the latter being thoroughly incapacitated for his usual duties, and from 1892 to 1894 he remained as the manager of his father's affairs, after which he was employed for a year in the office of the city treasurer in Denver. He later did field work for a time in the employ of the city engineer. From January, 1896, to February, 1900, he held a responsible position in the office of the county treasurer, following which he immediately entered the employ of the government in the office of the surveyor general at Denver, which position he held until March 1, 1904, when the office was transferred to Helena, Montana, and he continued to hold the same position in Helena until May, 1907. It was at that time that he became associated with Mr. Lewis Penwell in the land and live stock business, and they formed a partnership to operate a ranching business which now embraces the management of fifteen fine stock ranches in various parts of the state, and is known as the largest company of its kind in the state. The firm is in a thriving and prosperous condition, as a result of the concerted efforts of its members in a business for which Montana offers so many facilities. Although Mr. Witter abandoned his dream of a musical career, through stress of untoward circumstances, he continued to be known in Colorado as a man of exceptional ability, and between 1892 and 1904 was prominent in professional and semi-professional musical circles. In later years his connection with ranch life has made it less possible for him to keep up in that respect. He was assistant general manager of the land shows held under the auspices of the Northwest Development League in St. Paul, December 1911 and in Minneapolis in November, 1912. He is a Republican in his political allegiance, although he takes no active part in the political affairs of his state. He is a member of the Montana Club.

On January 26, 1911, Mr. Witter married Miss Lucy Vedder, the daughter of Richard Vedder, a native of Nebraska, and they have established a residence at the Electric Block Apartments in Helena.

FREDERICK HOSEA HATHHORN. Prominent among the old and honored families of the Yellowstone valley is that of Hathhorn, members of which have achieved places of eminence in the various walks of life, the founder of the family here coming via ox-team nearly fifty years ago. A worthy representative of this family is found in Frederick Hosea Hathhorn, senior member of the firm of Hathhorn & Brown, and one of the ablest attorneys in Billings. Mr. Hathhorn was born in what is now Broadwater county, Montana, August 12, 1873, and is a son of John R., and Nancy Elizabeth (Lilly) Hathhorn.

John R. Hathhorn, who is now living retired at Livingston, Montana, was for many years a prosperous stock grower of Paradise valley, Park county. He was born at Burlington, Iowa, October 22, 1841, and is a son of George W. and Mary Ann (Ripley) Hathhorn, natives of Clarke county, Virginia, his paternal grandfather being a soldier during the War of 1812 and dying from wounds received in that conflict. On the maternal side, his grandfather, John A. Ripley, also a native of Virginia, removed to Burlington, Iowa, in 1838, was one of the pioneers of that section and there passed the remainder of his life. George W. Hathhorn went to Burlington in 1836, was engaged in agriculture there until 1853, and then removed to southwestern Missouri, where he conducted a farm until his death in 1866. He and his wife had a family of five sons and four daughters.

Until he was twenty years of age, John R. Hathhorn attended the common schools and assisted his father in the work of the home farm, and in July, 1861, he enlisted in Company K, Missouri Mounted Infantry, Confederate service, Colonel Gordon commanding, and saw his first fight at Poole's Prairie, in the southwestern part of Missouri, and thence moved to Wilson creek and had an engagement with General Lyon's forces. Mr. Hathhorn was then transferred to the cavalry and his next engagement was at Morristown, with General Lane, and was in successive engagements at Butler, Bates county (which was burned), in the "Salt Raid," then engaging with Colonel Henderson's command at Neosho, and next moving to Altonia, where they attacked a fortified barn owned by Colonel Richie. Withdrawing from this point, they came into conflict with Colonel Warren at Pleasant Gap, followed him to Butler, from which place they drove him, and then participated in the action at Lone Jack, one of the most stubbornly contested battles of the war, both sides being composed mainly of Missourians. The Union troops had two pieces of artillery, for which Colonel Foster had given General Blunt $4,000 as security for their safe return. The guns were captured by the Confederates and Colonel Foster put forth every effort to recapture them, but without success. Mr. Hathhorn was also in the engagement at Newtonia, Missouri, Colonel Shelby being in command, and at Cain Hill and Prairie Grove. Then the command retreated southward along the Arkansas river to Louisburg, Dallas county, from whence 1,500 men under Colonel Shelby made a raid in the northern part of the state, meeting their first opposition at Ozark, Christian county, while the next was an all day's fight at Springfield, January 15, 1863, the Confederates taking two forts, failing to capture the third and retreating with large quantities of provisions, ammunition, etc. Proceeding to Marshfield, thence by forced march to Hartsville, they took part in the sanguinary battle at that place, the Federals finally retreating. The command was also at Chalk Bluffs, on the St. Francis river, where they lost 700 horses in crossing the stream. From Black River, Arkansas, the command went to Helena, Arkansas, where they had an engagement. Mr. Hathhorn was taken ill at this place and was unfit for duty for several months. After his recovery, and on receiving his honorable discharge, he started for Denver, Colorado, in 1864, and eight months later began to make his way to Montana by ox-teams, which were exchanged at North Platte river for mules, continuing his trip to Virginia City, where he arrived July 3, 1865. The Indians were a menace during the entire trip, and many emigrants fell victims to the wile of the hostiles. From Virginia City Mr. Hathhorn removed to Helena, where he purchased a ranch, and for a time was also engaged in teaming, but in 1867 turned his attention to mining and for some time met with fair success at Trinity Gulch, Thompson Gulch, Duck Creek, McCuen Bar, on the Missouri river, and in White Gulch. In April, 1877, he removed to Paradise valley, in Park county, where he was engaged in installing hydraulic plants for placer mining, but during the fall of the same year gave up that occupation to engage in ranching. He continued to add to his property from time to time until he had 440 acres, all under cultivation, and carried on stockraising successfully, keeping on an average of 200 head, principally Short Horns. In 1908 Mr. Hathhorn retired from business activities, and is now living quietly at Livingston. In political matters he is a Democrat, but takes only a good citizen's interest in public matters and prefers to leave office seeking to others. On March 7, 1872, he was married to Miss Nancy Elizabeth Lilly, who was born in Cooper county, Missouri, daughter of Judge John P. and Laminda (Allison) Lilly, the former of whom still survives, at the age of ninety-seven years, and lives in Livingston. He was one of the first settlers of the Yellowstone valley, whence he came as early as 1864 by ox-team. Mr. and Mrs. Hathhorn had five children, as follows: Frederick Hosea; Charles Clifford, who met his death in a railroad accident at Dehart, on the Northern Pacific, in 1898; Harry Homer; Montana Lilly; and Evaline May.

Fred H. Hathhorn received his early education in the schools of Livingston, and was graduated from the law department of the University of Michigan in the class of 1904. For about six months he was engaged in practice in Livingston, and he then came to Billings and became a partner of the firm of Hathhorn & Berry. Later he was identified with Hathhorn & Groves, and in 1908 he formed a partnership with ex-Judge Brown, the firm at that time becoming Hathhorn & Brown, and as such it has since continued. Mr. Hathhorn was admitted to practice before the United States supreme court, April 19, 1910. The firm is widely and favorably known, has a representative clientele, and has represented such well known characters as Colonel W. F. Cody and Paul McCormick. Fraternally Mr. Hathhorn is a member of Billings Lodge, No. 394, B. P. O. E., and of the Knights of Pythias. In political matters he is a Republican, but like his father has not sought office, although ready at all times to discharge the duties of citizenship and to assist in advancing the welfare of his community. He bears a high reputation among the members of his profession, in which he has a number of warm, personal friends.

On June 29, 1898, Mr. Hathhorn was married to Lillian Reynolds, who was born at Quincy, Michigan, daughter of Dennis Reynolds, of New York. They have one child, Elizabeth.

• WILLIAM H. BERRYMAN. The firm of Berryman Brothers, located at No. 3015 Montana avenue, is one of the well-established business houses of Billings, and has built up its present large patronage through the excellence of its work and the absolute confidence in which it has come to be held by those in need of its services. The firm is composed of Hannibal Berryman and his sons, John J. and William H. Berryman, with the last-named of whom it is the object of this article to deal. William H. Berryman was born August 31, 1874, at Scranton, Pennsylvania, and is a son of Hannibal and Mary Ann (Richardson) Berryman.

Hannibal Berryman is a native of Cornwall, England, and was born October 12, 1848, coming to the United States when he was seventeen years of age. After landing at New York City he gradually drifted to Scranton, Pennsylvania, in the vicinity of which city he was engaged in mining coal until 1876. He then removed to Boulder, Colorado, where for some time he carried on gold and silver mining, and in 1889 went to Butte, where he followed copper mining until 1899. In that year he retired from business activity, but in 1906 came to Billings and joined his sons in the plumbing business, which was organized the year before. On March 1, 1911, this firm was incorporated under the style Berryman Brothers, although the father still retains an interest in the business. He became a member of Capous Lodge, No. 170, I. O. O. F., at Hyde Park, Pennsylvania, in 1871, and is now a member of Fidelity Lodge at Butte. In political matters he is a Republican, but he has never cared for public office. Mr. Berryman was married in Pennsylvania to Miss Mary Ann Richardson, who was born at Pittston, Luzerne county, Pennsylvania, January 7, 1851, and they had a family of five children, of whom four survive: John J., in business with his brother and father; William H.; Estella, the wife of Thomas Barker, living in Butte; and Harold, also a resident of that city.

William H. Berryman received his education in the schools of Salina, Boulder county, Colorado, and when fifteen years of age engaged to learn the plumber's trade, serving an apprenticeship at Butte. He then worked at the trade in that city, and in Spokane, Washington, as a journeyman. In 1900 he went on a prospecting trip to Nome, Alaska, but after six or seven months returned to Spokane and remained in that city for some time following his trade. Subsequently he returned to Butte, but in 1904 he went to Missoula, Montana, and there was engaged in business on his own account until 1905. Selling out in that year, he came to Billings and formed a partnership with his brother, which, as before stated, has since been incorporated. The firm of Berryman Brothers has won an enviable reputation for living strictly up to the letter of its contracts. Only skilled mechanics are employed, and the quality of the work is consequently of a superior order. All branches of plumbing, heating and gasfitting are done, and conscientious attention is paid to every little detail of the work.

William H. Berryman has been prominent in fraternal work. He was first made a Mason in Monitor Lodge, No. 41, A. F. & A. M., at Walkerville, Montana, January 12, 1899, and subsequently rose to the thirty-second degree of Masonry, belonging to Butte Consistory and Algeria Temple, Helena. On coming to Billings he affiliated with Ashlar Lodge, No. 29, A. F. & A. M., and in 1911 served as master thereof. He was made a member of Washington Lodge, of Centerville, I. O. O. F., in 1899, and now belongs to Billings Star Lodge, No. 41, I. O. O. F. In political matters he is independent, reserving the right to vote for the man he decides is best fitted for the office, irrespective of party connections.

On September 17, 1902, Mr. Berryman was married to Miss Bertha Esselbach, who was born at Santa Fe, New Mexico, daughter of Jacob and Julia (Wallenwicher) Esselbach, the former of whom is deceased while the latter resides at Portland, Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Esselbach had four children: Arthur, who lives in Seattle, Washington; Rudolph, of Salt Lake City, Utah; Bertha; and Sophia, the wife of George Selfridge, of Portland, Oregon. Mr. and Mrs. Berryman have one daughter, Thelma.

JOHN L. SLATTERY, a well-known and prosperous attorney in Glasgow, has been a resident of this section of the state since 1905, having come to Montana in October, 1904. He is a native of New Jersey, born at Flemington, that state, on September 2, 1878, and is the son of Michael and Margaret (Purcell) Slattery. The father, who is a native son of Erin, came to the United States as a young man and settled in Flemington, where he has continuously resided since that time. He has been engaged for years in a clerical capacity with a prominent mercantile establishment in Flemington, there occupying a position of trust and responsibility, and they have reared a large family. Eleven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Slattery, but of that number three are deceased. Those remaining are: Ella, the wife of J. P. Corcoran, of New York City; Joseph A., an attorney of Glendive, Montana; Richard P., an accountant in Flemington, New Jersey; James L., a bookkeeper in the American National Bank of Helena, Montana; Robert Emmett, a student in Newark, New Jersey; Anna, a student at the State Normal in Trenton, New Jersey; Purcell, in the high school at Flemington, New Jersey, and John L. of Glasgow.

In common with other members of his family, John L. Slattery was given liberal educational advantages, and after finishing with his high-school course in Flemington, he took a preparatory course in Wahpeton, North Dakota, then entered Lafayette College at Easton, Pennsylvania. He was graduated with honors from that institution with the class of '01, receiving with his diploma the degree of Ph. B. He then entered the New York Law School, studying there for one year, after which he studied under the able tutelage of ex-Senator W. E. Purcell of Wahpeton, North Dakota. He was admitted to the bar of North Dakota in 1903 and began the practice of law at Forman, that state, where he remained for a year, after which he came to Helena, reaching that place in October, 1904. He there entered the law office of R. R. Purcell, with whom he remained until March, 1905, at which time he came to Glasgow, where he established himself in practice, and where he has since continued successfully in his profession. He has won the confidence of the people of Glasgow, and the voters of the county have evidenced their faith in him by electing him to the office of county attorney, a position which he held during the years of 1907-8, and discharging the duties of the office in a manner highly creditable to himself. Mr. Slattery is a staunch Progressive and is always ready and willing to perform his share in the activities of the party; and he stumped Valley county during the fall campaign of 1912 in the interests of the Progressive party.

In November, 1912, Mr. Slattery was again elected county attorney of Valley county, on the Progressive ticket, receiving the highest vote cast for any candidate. He is state central committeeman of the Progressive party for Valley county.

Mr. Slattery has a serene confidence in the future of the state, and of Glasgow and Valley county, and has demonstrated that faith by acquiring a considerable quantity of local realty, which he is holding against the day of advancing prices. Mr. Slattery is a member of the Roman Catholic church, in which faith he was carefully reared by his parents, and is also a member of the Knights of Columbus. He retains membership in his college fraternity, the Delta Kappa Epsilon.

In 1906 Mr. Slattery was married to Miss Lear E. Humphrey of Mound City, Kansas.

JAMES ALEXANDER MACKENZIE. For many years connected with the Northern Pacific Railway in its train service and now an active business man and citizen of Havre, James Alexander MacKenzie is at the head of the largest laundry establishment in northern Montana. His brother, Dr. MacKenzie, is the present mayor of the city of Havre.

James A. MacKenzie was born in Wabasha county, Minnesota, December 30, 1863. His father was Duncan MacKenzie, further details about him and the MacKenzie family being found in the sketch of Dr. MacKenzie. Up to the age of seventeen Mr. MacKenzie lived in his native county and attended the public schools. In 1904 he organized and established the Havre Steam Laundry, which is the largest and best equipped concern of the kind in northern Montana, and has a large custom in Canada and both east and west to the extremes of Montana. Modern machinery, fine service, and first-class work, are the factors which have made the business grow and continue its extensive patronage. From fifteen to twenty employees are on the pay roll of the business. Mr. MacKenzie is president of the incorporated company, his brother being vice president, and Darius H. Campbell secretary.

Mr. MacKenzie is a member of the Havre school board. His fraternities are the Masonic lodge at Havre and the order of Railway Conductors, and he is an active member of the Chamber of Commerce. His church is the Episcopal. He was married at Wabasha, Minnesota, January 1, 1895, to Miss Mary Louise Peck, daughter of Josiah Peck, a native of that portion of Minnesota. Two children have been born to the marriage: Clara Louise, at Glasgow, Montana, October 17, 1895 and Charles Alexander, at the same place, February 12, 1897.

ALOYS WUTZ. The secretary, treasurer and manager of the Havre Brewing & Malting Company is Aloys Wutz, who was one of the founders of this industry and has been identified with this line of manufacturing throughout his active career.

Mr. Wutz was born in Germany, July 13, 1879, and obtained a substantial education in the schools of that country. He also gave two years of military service to his Fatherland. At the age of about sixteen began his apprenticeship in the brewer's and maltster's trade. Two years later he was advanced to brewmaster, and worked in that capacity in Germany for two years. On the 27th of April, 1904, he arrived in America, coming direct to Montana, where for six years he was connected with the Butte Brewing Company. In 1910 he became one of the organizers of the Havre Brewing & Malting Company. Arriving in America a poor young man, he applied himself diligently to his chosen profession, and in less than ten years has gained a fair share of prosperity, position and influence as a citizen.

Mr. Wutz is affiliated with the Sons of Hermann and the Eagles at Havre, and is a member of the Catholic church. In politics he is independent. He was married in Butte, January 24, 1911, to Miss Mathilda Andrews, who came to America from Germany with her parents during her childhood, and lived with her parents in Canton, Ohio, until her marriage.

EDWARD D. PHELAN is the assistant county attorney of Lewis and Clark county, Montana, of which Helena is the county seat. He is also the junior partner of the legal firm of Heywood and Phelan, a firm of excellent standing with the Montana bar.

Mr. Phelan is of Irish parentage having been born in Sauk county, Wisconsin, on the eighteenth day of October, in 1879. He was the sixth in a family of thirteen children all but one of whom are living. His parents were well to do farmers who understood the value of education in the career of a young and ambitious man. After finishing the work of the rural schools of Sauk county, the son, Edward, was sent to the high school of Richland, Wisconsin, where he was graduated in the class of 1901. The following September he entered the legal department of the University of Wisconsin from which institution he received his LL. B. in 1904.

Prior to his setting out for Montana, he was admitted to the bar in Wisconsin. The bar of Montana was, therefore, so courteous as to admit him to practice in all the courts of that state "by motion" as it is called. His first experience in the practice was obtained in the office of Richard R. Pursell where he remained for six months before becoming law clerk for T. J. Welsh. While acting in this capacity in the autumn of 1906, he was appointed as deputy county attorney.

At the expiration of his term of office he was the Republican candidate for county attorney. Unfortunately, 1908 was the fall of the Democratic landslide and Mr. Phelan failed of election. This was, probably, a fortunate defeat for so young an attorney as he immediately formed a partnership for general practice with Mr. A. P. Heywood and the present successful firm of Heywood and Phelan was established. Again in the autumn of 1910, he was appointed assistant county attorney. This has not necessitated his severing the new formed partnership. It seems, indeed, to be increasing their already large practice.

Mr. Phelan is active in fraternal orders being grand knight in the Knights of Columbus, a member of the Lamb's Club and of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks. He finds much interest in the political game, working with the Republican party.

Although Mr. Phelan has lived almost a third of a century, he has resisted the charms of the fair sex and remains yet a bachelor. His people for generations have been devout members of the Roman Catholic church of which he himself is a loyal member.

Edward D. Phelan is the son of Dennis Phelan who was born on the Emerald Isle in 1842. Dennis Phelan's parents came to America when he was yet a child and without stopping to study the civilization of the east, made directly for Stoughton, Wisconsin. A few years later they moved to Sauk county of the same state and there cleared them a farm in the midst of the native forests. They were known among the pioneer farmers of their time who made good on the new rich soil. The son, Dennis, worked by the side of his father until the outbreak of the late War of the Rebellion when he enlisted with the Forty-ninth Regiment of Wisconsin. He fought with this and other regiments, seeing most of his active service in southwestern Missouri where his company followed the regular army, preserving peace and stamping out guerilla warfare. He served until the close of the war then returned to his Wisconsin home where he still lives superintending the work on the farm that he himself helped to hew out of the wilderness.

Dennis Phelan's wife, the mother of his thirteen children, was Elizabeth Quinn, the daughter of James Quinn. She was born on the Wisconsin soil but her father immigrated to Wisconsin from Ireland. Mrs. Phelan still remains at the side of her husband where she has labored so well for almost fifty years.

MORRIS RAFISH. The martial and romantic land of Kosciusko and Pulaski, which has often been the theme of song and story, which stayed the onward rush of the Saracen wave from Mecca, that once threatened to engulf all Europe, Poland, whose tragic overthrow made every lover of liberty throughout the civilized world grieve, has given to the United States a very sturdy, sterling and enterprising strain of their citizenship. Men of that noble race have dignified and adorned every walk of life in this country and won glowing triumphs in our every field of useful endeavor, and wherever they have located have vindicated the historic distinction of their country.

A good representative of its business enterprises and progressiveness is found in Morris Rafish, merchant tailor of Butte, Montana, and president of the Rafish Tailoring Company, whose establishment is located on East Broadway in that city. The company carries on a profitable business, the trade having been built up almost wholly by the enterprise and excellent management of its president, Mr. Rafish.

Morris Rafish was born in Russian Poland on May 10, 1876, and is a son of Meyer and Rifka (Frank) Rafish, the former also a native of Russian Poland and the latter of Russia. The father was born at Vassha in 1830 and died there in 1902. He was a prominent merchant tailor in the place of his nativity. The mother is now a resident of Butte, sixty-seven years of age, and makes her home with her son Morris, having come to this country after the death of her husband.

Morris Rafish attended the country schools in his native land and extended the opportunities they gave him for instruction by diligent study and judicious reading at home. After leaving school he worked at various occupations for a short time, then became apprenticed to a leading merchant tailor to learn the trade of making garments for men. At the age of twenty-one he emigrated to London, England, where he worked at his trade for eight years. In that city, which is in close and constant touch with this country, he heard more and more as time passed of "The States" as the land of promise and opportunity to realize the promise, and at length he could resist the temptation no longer and decided to come over.

In 1904 he landed in New York and came direct to Butte, where his older brother Samuel had been living several years and had established a fast growing business as a merchant tailor. Morris secured employment at his trade with his brother and worked for him one year. He then engaged in business for himself, and opened a merchant tailoring establishment of his own on Arizona street. This soon proved to be a successful venture and he was obliged to move to more commodious quarters on Park street.

The history of his business since his location on Park street is one of continuous and increasing progress. It soon outgrew the Park street accommodations, and he was compelled to seek more floor space and better facilities, and these he found in his present quarters on East Broadway.

Mr. Rafish was married in his native land in 1896, when he was but twenty years old, to Miss Lee Morris, who was born and reared where he was. They have three children: Samuel, who was born in Poland on January 1, 1897; Rhea, who was born in London, England, on October 6, 1899; and Sarah, whose life began on December 16, 1903, and whose birthplace was also London, England. All the children are attending school in Butte, and are making rapid progress and excellent records in their studies.

In politics Mr. Rafish is independent, looking only to the good of the community and the best interests of the people in bestowing his suffrage. His religious connection is with the Jewish Temple in Butte, and his fraternal relations are confined to membership in the organizations of his countrymen in the city of his home. He is prosperous, stands high in business circles in Butte, is well esteemed as a first rate citizen, and enjoys in a high degree the regard and good will of all classes.

WILLIAM DEWERKIN. In a city which has grown so rapidly as has Butte, Montana, the past decade or two there is unlimited opportunity for profitable business and industrial operations in all lines that are allied in any way to building and construction work. Among those who have been for the past several years actively engaged in a line of work of which the foregoing is conspicuously true is Mr. William Dewerkin, expert plumber who first came here to ply his trade in 1904. During the first two years of his residence in Butte he worked for Isador Krueger, then took contracts on an independent basis, and finally in May, 1911, in company with Mr. John B. Coppo, formed the Butte Plumbing Company, now recognized as one of the leading establishments of its kind in the city, employing a large force of skilled workmen, the number sometimes reaching as high as fourteen or more. All work undertaken by this firm is executed promptly and in a fine workmanlike manner and so universally satisfactory has the firm fulfilled its contracts that it is receiving a constantly increasing patronage with financial returns growing proportionately. The firm also install all kinds of modern heating apparatus.

William Dewerkin was born August 9, 1878, at Newark, New Jersey, the son of Hyman and Lea (Schovelzon) Dewerkin, his parents being natives of Russia who came to America in the early seventies, locating first in New York, and later removing to New Jersey. William was sent to the public schools at Newark, New Jersey, until twelve years of age. Finding it necessary to assist in his own support subsequent to that time he first sought and secured employment in a harness factory. The work proved to be distasteful to the boy, however, and he remained there but a short time. His father, who conducted a small store at that time, then permitted the son to assist him with the business and for five years subsequently he followed mercantile pursuits. Not feeling satisfied to continue permanently at that employment. Mr. Dewerkin then decided to learn a trade and accordingly became an apprentice to Burns & Tucker, plumbers, whose place of business was on Fourth avenue, New York City. After becoming master of the intricacies of that trade he spent the following five years working as a journeyman in various states of the Union, finally locating permanently at Butte in 1904, his career in this city having been briefly outlined at the beginning of this sketch.

Mr. Dewerkin understands his business thoroughly in all particulars, gives close personal attention to overseeing and managing it, and the success he has achieved is a direct result of the effort and talent he has put into the work.

On October 20, 1908, at Butte, occurred the marriage of Mr. Dewerkin to Miss Julia Levy, a daughter of Solomon Levy, and who was born in this city. The union has been blessed in the birth of one child, Henrietta, born October 30, 1909, and the family maintains an attractive home at 722 West Park street.

Mr. Dewerkin is a man of high moral principles and unquestioned personal integrity, is a citizen of the best type and is held in high esteem by a large number of friends and acquaintances in this and other communities where he has resided.

JESSE RAYMOND VILLARS. One of the most successful and prominent young professional men of northern Montana is Jesse Raymond Villars, a mining engineer of thorough training and exceptional qualifications who is also filling the position of United States mineral surveyor for the northwestern district of Montana. He is a university man, but one who struggled for his opportunities and is of that class who by that same energy and indomitable will with which they fought for an education enter as aggressive competitors for success in life and seldom fail.

He is of mingled French, German, Scotch and Irish blood, his surname indicating his French descent on the paternal side. James Villars, the great-grandfather of Jesse Raymond, was a French emigrant who established the American branch of the family in 1807 in Clinton county, Ohio. There Jesse Raymond Villars was born November 7, 1873, to Hiram J. and Lydia E. (Thatcher) Villars, both natives of that same county, where the birth of the former occurred February 12, 1845, and that of the latter on July 10, 1848. The father followed farming throughout his active career but is now retired and resides in Great Falls, Montana, in which city he took up his abode in 1910. He is a veteran of the Civil war, his service having been from 1863 to 1865 as a member of the Second Regiment Ohio Heavy Artillery. The Thatchers also were early settlers in Clinton county and were of mingled German, Scotch and Irish descent.

Mr. Villars is the third of eight children born to his parents, of whom four are living. His education begun in the country schools of his native county was continued in Wilmington College, the Friends' school at Wilmington, Ohio, where he remained two years. Following that he was a student for a short time in the academy at Arkansas City, Kansas, and later completed a course in liberal arts at Kansas City University, Kansas City, Kansas, graduating as a Bachelor of Arts in 1900. To earn his tuition and expenses at the latter institution he taught school in southern Kansas and while pursuing his studies also worked as a stockman in a Kansas City furniture house. From 1900 to 1902 and during a part of 1903 he was a bookkeeper and collector for an Arkansas City, Kansas, mercantile establishment. The remainder of 1903 and the earlier part of 1904 were spent as a gymnasium instructor in the Railroad Young Men's Christian Association at Topeka, Kansas. In June, 1904, he came to Butte, Montana, where he entered the Montana State School of Mines and spent four years in earnest and thorough professional study, graduating as a mining engineer in 1908. He came to Great Falls in February, 1909, and from that time until July, 1910, he followed his profession alone as a mining engineer.

Since coming to Great Falls, Mr. Villars has also been commissioned United States mineral surveyor for this state, which position he is still filling and to these duties he adds that of assaying and chemical and geological work. He has established a large clientele in his private practice, which includes irrigation and railroad work.

In politics he is a Republican but takes no active part in political affairs. He is a member of the University Club at Great Falls and is a member and an elder of the First Presbyterian church of that city. Young men of ability, energy and moral strength are always welcomed to citizenship in any community and Montana is proud to number such men as Mr. Villars among its representative men.

HENRY C. SCHULTZ. No profession develops, with so much of accuracy and masculine vigor, the native intellectual predomancies as that of the law. Whilst it opens a vast field for profound philosophic inquiry, it at the same time imperiously demands an acute and close observation of the daily workings of practical life. The materials for the foundation of society, which are scattered around broadcast and in profusion, often the most heterogeneous and crude, have to be molded into form and symmetry by the application of great principles. These crude materials and great principles have to be fused together in the crucible, and the melting down and refining the former is undergone by firm and unyielding contact with the latter. The very highest development of intellectual vigor, the most profound and comprehensive knowledge of principle, is often found inadequate to this task; for with these must be united a quick sagacity, and adaptation to the habits and modes of thought by those surrounding the legislator or judicial functionary, or all his well-meant labors will turn to naught. Among those who act conspicuously in thus molding and fashioning society in Montana stands eminently forward Henry C. Schultz, an eminent attorney of Sanders county, who also holds a foremost position in the field of literature and on the lecture platform.

Henry C. Schultz was born at Horicon, Wisconsin, February 16, 1861. His father, Carl Schultz, was born in Germany and came to the United States in 1847, settling in Chippewa county, Wisconsin, where he followed farming although his trade was that of a wagon maker. He was a highly educated man, having been a teacher in his native Berlin, a college professor, and a commissioned officer in the German army at Berlin for nine years. He died March 5, 1911, at the age of ninety-four years, and is buried in Chippewa county, Wisconsin. While in the Fatherland, he married Caroline Borchardt, who died November 17, 1899, at the age of seventy-eight years. They were the parents of six sons and six daughters, Henry C. being the tenth in order of birth, and his brothers and sisters being residents at this time of Illinois and Wisconsin.

The early education of Henry C. Schultz was secured in the public schools of Watertown, Wisconsin, and Chippewa Falls, and he subsequently attended Northwestern University, Evanston, Illinois, from which he was graduated and received his degree. He subsequently took post-graduate course in civil engineering at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor. As a lad of eleven years he had decided upon the law as his life work, and the first money he earned, received from his uncle for working at various employments on the farm, he put away to start a fund to take him through college. During the vacation months, while attending school, he accepted the opportunity of working at whatever occupation presented itself, teaching special night classes in German, and acting as tutor of the English class, and thus managed to finish his collegiate course. On leaving the law class with his degree, Mr. Schultz located first in Chippewa county and later in LaCrosse, Wisconsin, remaining there until coming to Montana in 1904. He first located at Plains, and when Sanders county was organized was appointed first county attorney. Subsequently removing to Thompson Falls, he served as county attorney for one year under appointment and four years by election, and was the first and only county attorney to secure a conviction for involuntary manslaughter against a railroad dispatcher on account of a wreck, in which five lives were lost. During his five years as county attorney, Mr. Schultz succeeded in convicting twenty-nine out of seventy-two felony cases tried, and was personally responsible for bringing to justice a notorious band of murderers and "bad men" which terrorized the county for a long time. A fearless prosecutor, he at all times discharged his duty, regardless of conditions or consequences.

Mr. Schultz has been widely known in the fields of literature and journalism, having had newspaper connections for twenty-three years, and at one time conducting a daily and weekly newspaper The Current, at Chippewa Falls, which he edited in connection with his law practice. As a speaker and lecturer he is equally well known and has had many flattering offers from lyceum bureaus. For sixteen years he was connected with the Speaker's Bureau of the Republican party, and has taken part in numerous campaigns in five different states. He takes an active interest in politics, being a progressive and persistent fighter in behalf of the principles of his party, served as county attorney at Chippewa Falls, assistant city attorney at LaCrosse and was county superintendent of schools at one time in Wisconsin. He is a member of the State Bar Association and has served on a number of important committees thereof, and is also connected with the Fourth Judicial District Bar Association, of which he was formerly vice-president. In fraternal matters he is connected with the Masons, having served in various chairs, and is also holding membership in the Thompson Falls Development League. In religious matters he is a German Lutheran, while his wife is identified with the Episcopal church, and very active in religious work, having been the first president of Trinity Guild here and at present its efficient vice-president and secretary. She was unanimously chosen as the women's candidate for member of the school board, being peculiarly qualified for the position, in that she had wide experience as a teacher, principal of schools in Wisconsin and member of the county board of examiners in Thompson Falls.

At Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin, October 26, 1886, Mr. Schultz was married to Miss Minerva G. Smith, daughter of Jonathan W. and Mary G. Smith, of that city, and have an adopted daughter, Marion Jessie, who married Burt Sinclair and resides at Thompson Falls, Mr. Sinclair being agent for the Northern Pacific Railroad.

Mr. Schultz enjoys a wide reputation for his legal ability and sagacity, and is also well known for characteristics that go to make personal popularity. He is fond of hunting and fishing, riding and driving, keeps a number of fine horses, for which he recently purchased a ranch, and is an ardent baseball rooter. The American poets, singing, violin playing and theatricals have all found a place in his favor, and he is also a great Shakespearean student and an active member of a Shakespeare Club. That Mr. Schultz has faith in his adopted community may be taken for granted from his reply to a question asking him his opinion of the future of Montana. "The fact that I am in Montana and always hope to be," he answered, "should be my verdict on the question as to whether Montana has more to offer in the soil and above and below it than any other state in the Union—and I have been in twenty-nine of them."

HARRY C. SMITH, M. D. Professional success results from merit. Frequently in commercial life one may come into possession of a lucrative business through inheritance or gift, but in what are known as the learned professions advancement is gained only through painstaking and long continued effort. Prestige in the healing art is the outcome of strong mentality, close application, thorough mastery of its great underlying principles and the ability to apply theory to practice in the treatment of diseases. Good intellectual training, thorough professional knowledge and the possession and utilization of the qualities and attributes essential to success, have made the subject of this review eminent in his chosen calling and he stands today among the scholarly and enterprising physicians in a locality noted for the high order of its medical talent.

Dr. Harry C. Smith was born in Hughsville, Missouri, February 4, 1872. He was educated in the public schools of Hughsville and Sedalia, Missouri. Having finished his high school course, to round out his general education, at the age of fifteen years he entered Westminster College and subsequent to that studied medicine under Dr. J. W. Trader, formerly head surgeon of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad hospital. During his vacation periods he attended Bellevue Hospital Medical College of New York City and having completed his medical education, he received a well-earned degree on March 26, 1894. Dr. Smith first hung out his professional shingle at Sweet Springs, Missouri, where he resided for six months and following that became second house surgeon of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railroad, in which capacity he continued for some two and a half years. He was then sent to Denison, Texas, in association with Dr. A. W. Acheson and at that place the two gentlemen took charge of the railway relief station. While located at Sedalia he was appointed local surgeon for the Missouri Pacific and Sedalia, Warsaw & Southern railroads. At Denison, in addition to his duties with the Missouri, Kansas & Texas hospital, he was appointed local surgeon for the Houston & Texas Central and Denison & Sherman railroads. In 1899 he severed his railroad connections and entered the government service as contract surgeon with the regular army, and from the year last mentioned until 1902 he spent his time in the Philippine Islands. The climate, however, proved trying to his health and in order to recover this he returned to the United States and located at Denison, where he was appointed special examiner for the Missouri, Kansas & Texas Railway. This time he assumed the duties of special examiner for the road, this position, it is needless to state, requiring one whose ability and discrimination was beyond question, as all cases of injuries, etc., were passed upon by the doctor and the reports made to the company accordingly. Believing that the climate of the northwest, with its lower temperature, would benefit him, he decided to come to Montana and arrived here August, 1904. He was gratified by the improvement in his physical condition far beyond his most sanguine expectations and as his health returned so completely, he decided to locate permanently in Missoula.

Upon first taking his place in professional life here, Dr. Smith entered into partnership with Dr. W. B. Parsons, an old resident physician of high standing, and this association continued until Dr. Parsons, owing to advanced age and failing health, retired in October, 1909, and since that time that subject has practiced independently. On April 24, 1911, he was honored by appointment to the position of first lieutenant of the Medical Reserve Corps of the United States army, his splendid record in the Philippines bringing about the bestowal of this signal honor.

Dr. Smith is a very prominent and popular lodge man. He stands high in Masonry and exemplifies in his own living the ideals of moral and social justice and brotherly love for which the order stands. He is a thirty-second degree Mason and a Knight Templar. He belongs also to the Modern Woodmen of America, the Moose lodge, the Eagles, and is a member of the Pension Board of the United States government. He holds the office of medical examiner for the New York Mutual Life Insurance Company and the Prudential Insurance Company.

He is of a peculiarly genial and interesting personality and enjoys high regard in Missoula.

The subject's father, Henry Clay Smith, was born in the year 1833 at Hughsville, Missouri, and he is one of the extensive agriculturists and land owners of that locality. He is a veteran of the Civil war and had an extremely interesting military record. He was a sutler and was captured at the battle of Shiloh and placed in Libby prison. After an incarceration of eighteen days he was paroled for sixty days. An interesting incident occurred in connection with his imprisonment. The Confederate soldiers who were following those who attempted to escape from the battlefield, were outdistanced by Mr. Smith, who made his escape on horseback and whereupon decided to return to the battlefield in order to locate his sutler's outfit, consisting of several six-mule teams and the wagons and their contents. While searching he was surprised by the rebels and taken prisoner, and while being passed into the stockade Mr. Smith's hat was snatched from his head by the guard, who threw him his own in return. Now, Mr. Smith could not see great humor in this frolicsome attention from the fact that in his hat band was secreted $2,000 in large bills. On being paroled the same guard was on duty, and on passing him Mr. Smith snatched his own hat from his head and threw the guard's hat to him. Upon examination he was delighted to find that the guard had not been of an investigative turn and the money was still there. At the time of his imprisonment Mr. Smith had secreted in various places in his garments about $20,000 in greenbacks and none of them were molested. While on parole he went to Baltimore in the hope of finding his brother and partner in his sutler enterprise. One afternoon while taking a walk in that city he noticed a negro cutting grass with a scythe and on coming closer he found him to be the driver of one of his sutler wagons. Very joyfully the negro explained how, after the battle, he had cut the harness, mounted a mule and dashed away and later had hidden the mules in a nearby cellar. He was cutting the grass to feed them with at the time Mr. Smith discovered him. The negro knew the location of the regiment and Mr. Smith found his brother there unharmed. This interesting old gentleman is now living in ease and plenty on the old homestead near Hughsville, Missouri. The mother, previous to her marriage, was Martha E. Mockabee, also a Missourian, and of Kentucky stock. This admirable lady passed to the life eternal in 1877.

Upon being asked his opinion of Montana's future prospects, Dr. Smith spoke as follows: "Montana has a great future. Although her agricultural lands are limited in extent, what there are are the equal of those in the Philippines—the richest in the world, and as for her mineral resources, they are yet in the very infancy of development."

Cecil E. Copeland. A man of distinctive energy, possessing good judgment and wise discrimination, Cecil E. Copeland, cashier of the Lewistown State Bank, at Lewistown, is amply qualified for the responsible position which he is so ably filling, not only through his native and acquired forces, but by training and experience. Coming from excellent New England ancestry, he was born, November 20, 1877, in Russell, Kansas.

His father, the late Charles P. Copeland, was born, bred and educated in Vermont, his birth having occurred at Middletown Springs, Rutland county, in 1853. Foreseeing the great possibilities of the then undeveloped western country, he migrated to Kansas in the seventies, locating in Russell, where he was successfully engaged in the mercantile and banking business until his death, in 1905, when but fifty-two years of age. His wife, whose maiden name was Josephine Ackerman, is now living in Pasadena, California, and is the mother of three children, of whom Cecil E. is the oldest.

Receiving his elementary education in Russell, Kansas, Cecil E. Copeland was graduated from the grammar and high schools, and afterwards took a two years' course at the Kansas State Agricultural College, and for four years attended the University of Kansas, in Lawrence, being there graduated with the degree of A. B. An industrious and ambitious lad, he began earning money when but seven years old, doing light jobs and running errands, and during his school life spent many of his vacations as clerk in mercantile establishments. After leaving college Mr. Copeland remained in Kansas for some time, for three and one half years being employed in a bank at Russell. Coming to Montana in 1904, he visited several parts of the state with a view to making a permanent location, and being especially pleased with the prospects in Lewistown accepted an offered position in the First National Bank, with which he was associated six years. Then, at the organization of the Lewistown State Bank, Mr. Copeland was made its cashier, and has since performed the duties devolving upon him in this capacity with marked ability and fidelity. He has a fine personality that spells determination and success, and is deservedly popular as a man and citizen, while his loyalty to the state of his adoption is unquestioned, his belief in a brilliant future for Montana being almost optimistic.

Fraternally Mr. Copeland is a member of Lewistown Lodge, No. 37, Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, which he served as master in 1911, and is now, in 1912, the treasurer; of Hiram Chapter, No. 15 R. A. M.; of Lewistown Commandery, No. 14 K. T.; of the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine; and of the Knights of Pythias, in which he has filled all the chairs. He likewise belongs to the Judith Club, a social organization. Literary in his tastes, he has a fine library of his own, and aside from reading, takes pleasure in tennis games, theatricals and music.

Mr. Copeland married, September 5, 1906, Jessie E. Kingsbury, a daughter of Allen M. and May Kingsbury, of Cassopolis, Michigan, and they have one child, Paul F. Copeland.

JAMES MCCLELLAN HAMILTON. With years of honorable achievement in the educational field behind him, James McClellan Hamilton, president of the Montana State College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts, at Bozeman, came to this institution in 1904 and for eight years has devoted himself to increasing its prestige and efficiency. He was born on his father's farm in Crawford county, Illinois, October 1, 1861, and is a son of James and Mary (Burner) Hamilton.

James Hamilton was born in Beaver county, Pennsylvania, March 25, 1808, and died in Crawford county, Illinois, November 4, 1875. When quite young his parents moved to Ohio, where he attended school and afterward assisted his father in his farm industries. In 1851 he moved to Crawford county, Illinois, an early settler there, and in his section was a pioneer farmer and stock raiser. He was a man of sterling character, one of the pillars of the Methodist Episcopal church. In politics he was a Douglas Democrat but voted for Abraham Lincoln in his second campaign. James Hamilton married Mary Burner, who was born in Licking county, Ohio, September 29, 1821, and died May 28, 1889. Ten children were born to that union, all of whom survived to maturity and seven of these are yet living, James McClellan being the ninth in order of birth.

James McClellan Hamilton received his early educational training in the schools of Crawford county, Illinois. As agriculture did not appeal to him, he worked hard to prepare himself for a professional career and as soon as qualified began to teach school in his native section. Five years later he took a course in Union Christian College, from which he was graduated in the class of 1887, after which he was elected superintendent of the schools of Sumner, Illinois. Travel, reading and association with many residents of the west served to arouse an interest that culminated in his accepting the position of superintendent of the public schools of Missoula, Montana, in August, 1889, and for the following twelve years he continued in this office and each year adding to the efficiency of the public school system. In the meanwhile, Professor Hamilton had never relaxed his own educational advancement and in 1898 took post-graduate work at Harvard University. After retiring from the Missoula schools in 1901 he accepted the chair of history in the Montana State University, which he continued to fill until 1904, when he came to Bozeman as president of the State College of Agriculture and Mechanical Arts. He spent the summer of 1912 in Europe in the study of agriculture. He is held in high regard in educational circles all over the state and frequently has been honored by appointment to office and recognition by educational bodies. In 1893 he was appointed a member of the state board of school examiners and served until 1901, and in 1902 became a member of the state tax book commission.

Never very active politically, Professor Hamilton has never shirked the responsibilities of good citizenship, on the other hand he has always given support and lent influence to the forces of law and order. Fraternally he belongs to Covenant Lodge No. 6, I. O. O. F., at Missoula, Montana; to Bozeman Lodge No. 18, A. F. & A. M.; to Zona Chapter No. 12, R. A. M.; and to St. Johns Commandery; and is also a member of Bozeman Lodge No. 463, B. P. O. E. He belongs to the Greek letter fraternity of his college, the Sigma Chi.

On June 6, 1888, Professor Hamilton was married to Miss Emma Shideler, who was born in Indiana, September 13, 1863, and died in Montana, August 12, 1909. She was a lady of lovely character and many accomplishments.

ROBERT M. SPROAT was born in Scotland of Scottish parents, and was there reared and educated. He passed his life there until 1904, in which year he came to America, coming direct to Montana and settling in Utica, Fergus county, where he worked as a cowboy for four years. From that humble position he has risen to the station of an independent merchant, and is now located in Valier, where he is engaged in the conduct of a general merchandise business.

Mr. Sproat was born in Scotland on February 12, 1863, and is the son of William and Elizabeth (Graham) Sproat. The father was a farmer in Scotland, where he was born, lived and died, his death occurring in 1872, when he had reached the age of fifty-eight years. His wife died there in 1907 at the age of eighty-four. They were the parents of six children, Robert being the fifth born. He was educated in the public schools of his native land and in Kirk Cudbright Academy, attending to the age of sixteen, after which he devoted himself to farm life. When he came to Montana in 1904, fresh from Scotland, he applied himself to the first duty at hand, which chanced to be that of a cowboy, and for four years he diligently took his part in the life of the West in that capacity, being employed on C. N. Beldon's ranch near Utica. From there he removed to Sand Coulee, Montana, and was soon engaged in the general merchandise business on his own responsibility, and was associated with Joseph Hawthorne as his partner in business. The firm was known as Hawthorne & Sproat, and he continued in that business until 1910. In that year he sold his interest in the establishment and removed to Valier which his shrewd Scotch judgment told him was the better place for such a business as they were conducting. Since that time he has been established alone in business in Valier and is making good with the project, and enjoys a gradually increasing trade, the while he has won the entire confidence and esteem of the community at large. He has already become active in civic affairs and served one term as chairman of the first school board in Valier. He has the further distinction of having purchased the first lot in Valier. Mr. Sproat is a Republican, and a staunch member of the Presbyterian church. He came to Montana on money which he borrowed, and in the few years of his residence here has made most worthy progress in a financial way. In addition to his thriving and ever extending business, Mr. Sproat has become the owner of a tract of one hundred and sixty acres of desert land, the same amount of homestead land, and his wife owns an additional tract of the same acreage, all near to the city of Valier.

On August 28, 1904, Mr. Sproat was united in marriage with Miss Eliza M. Naysmith, a native of the state of Illinois. Three children have been born to them: Robert, born at Sand Coulee, Montana, on September 29, 1905; William, born at Belt, Montana, April 15, 1907, and who died in October, the same year; and Agnes, born at Great Falls, on January 29, 1910.

JAMES P. SNIDOW. The banking interests of any community are so important and play such a prominent part in the financial life of the people that they cannot be too carefully conserved, and naturally the greatest care is taken in the selection of those in whose hands the affairs of these institutions are placed. Huntley, Montana, located as it is in the midst of a great commercial, industrial and agricultural section, handles large amounts of money, and its bank officials must be men of experience as well as of unblemished business records. The Huntley State Bank has been fortunate in securing for its vice-president and manager, James P. Snidow, who in every way has shown himself worthy the confidence of his associates and the general public. Mr. Snidow, like many of the successful business men in the Yellowstone valley, is a product of the farm, having been born in the country near Madison, Monroe county, Missouri, July 10, 1865, a son of James Martin and Martha (Ash) Snidow.

William and Chloe (Frely) Snidow, the paternal grandparents of James P. Snidow, natives of Virginia of German parentage, left that state for Missouri in 1837, traveling overland with an ox-team and settling in Monroe county at a time when wild game as well as wild savages were still to be found in large numbers in that then frontier state. Mr. Snidow took up 320 acres of land, 120 of which were in timber, while 200 were prairie land, and the latter he broke with ox-teams, developed and cultivated, and in time became one of the prominent and prosperous farmers of his locality. An earnest, upright, Christian man, he attended with his family the old Baptist church, and in his political proclivities was an ardent Democrat. He and his wife had a family of three sons and four daughters, and James Martin was the oldest. He was born September 21, 1825, in Cabell county, Virginia (now West Virginia), and was twelve years of age when he accompanied his parents to the new country, his education being secured in the early district schools when he could be spared from the work that was constantly going on at the homestead. On October 16, 1853, he was married in Monroe county, Missouri, to Miss Martha Ash, who was born in April, 1832, in Indiana, daughter of George and Naomi Ash, the former born in 1800 and the latter in 1803, in Kentucky, where they were married. The Ash family located in Indiana at an early day, and in 1831 traveled overland to Monroe county, Missouri, where they became pioneers, Mr. Ash becoming the owner of a vast amount of property. He died in 1863, his widow surviving until 1891, when her death occurred at the age of eighty-eight years. They had eleven children.

James M. Snidow remained under the parental roof for one year after his marriage, and in 1854 purchased a farm in Monroe county, Missouri, but subsequently purchased another and disposed of the original tract. The remainder of his life was spent in agricultural pursuits in that section, where he specialized in fruit growing and stock raising, and he also at various times was the owner of some very valuable horses. Progressive in all things, he invariably used the latest and most highly improved machinery in his operations, and as he was a skilled natural mechanic was able to repair any parts of his machinery which became broken. He was recognized as an able agriculturist and an excellent judge of land and crop conditions, was a faithful member of the Baptist church and a great Bible student, and like his father a zealous Democrat, although he never cared for public office, although he was often urged to allow his name to be used as a candidate for political honors. He died June 28, 1908, his wife having passed away August 2, 1895, and both were sincerely mourned in their community, where they had countless friends. To them there were born ten children, as follows: Laura E., who married Cyrus D. Lusk, a resident of Randolph county, Missouri; Naomi, whose death occurred at the age of twenty-two years; Martha J., who died when she was thirty-one years of age, the wife of W. D. Gerrard; William G., who makes his home in the West; Christian M., who met an accidental death by drowning when he was twenty-one years old; Thomas Ash, one of the leading business men and capitalists of Billings, near which city he is the owner of a ranch of 1,500 acres; James P.; Henry L., who died in infancy; Jasper, who also died as an infant; and Victor R., who died at the age of twenty-seven years.

James P. Snidow acquired an education which at that time was considered far above the average at the district schools of Monroe county, supplemented by the training which he received at Prof. Ripley's College, Shelbyville, Shelby county, Missouri, and the Missouri State Normal School, at Kirksville. He then started teaching school in the winters and working on the farm in summers, alternating between a pursuit which tended at once to fix his knowledge and inculcate habits of exactitude and self-restraint, and an occupation well calculated to develop his physical strength. After two years, however, he left the parental roof-tree, intent upon hewing out his own way to success, and until 1904 was engaged in farming and stock raising in Missouri. In the year mentioned, he came to the Yellowstone valley, located in Billings, and became interested in the sheep business with his brother, Thomas A. Snidow. In 1905 he became manager of their sheep ranch at Youngs Point, near Park City, in the Yellowstone valley, but in August, 1910, gave up ranching and turned his attention to finance, being vice-president and manager of the Huntley State Bank, positions which he is ably filling at the present time.

Among his associates, as in the community at large, Mr. Snidow is noted for his uncompromising integrity. His sympathies are keen and broad, leading him to co-operate in every scheme calculated to advance the general good or to ameliorate the condition of his fellowmen. While he is an ardent Democrat in his political views, he has thus far chosen to remain in the walks of private life, where he can more readily carry on his business enterprises. Mr. Snidow is unmarried.

CHARLES M. MANSURE. When Charles M. Mansure first came to Polson, it was a wild prairie, without human habitation or other signs of human life. He has seen it grow from a wilderness into the thriving and prosperous town it is today, and his fortunes have grown with the town. In 1909 he started the hardware business which has developed into a fine establishment with the months that have sped, and his place is one of the leading hardware stores in the northern part of the state at this time. He has also become interested in the ranch business and owns a fine ranch a few miles distant from the city.

Mr. Mansure was born in St. Louis, Missouri, on the 21st day of December, 1873, and is the son of William H. and Elizabeth (Hughes) Mansure. Both were natives of Missouri, the father being born in Millville, that state, in 1841, and the mother was born in 1848. At one time Mr. Mansure was a very prominent citizen in St. Louis. He was a banker, and was a member of the St. Louis Board of Trade for a number of years after the Civil war, through which he fought with General Price. At present he is living a retired life in Chillicothe, Missouri.

As a boy and youth, Charles Mansure attended the public schools of Chillicothe, and he finished his education at Mexico City, Missouri. Upon leaving school he became a clerk in a bank at Chillicothe, where he remained for four years. Soon thereafter he engaged in the immigration business in Oklahoma and Texas. He was thus engaged for nine years and enjoyed excellent success in that business. His next move brought him to Montana, where he chose the present site of Polson for his location. He homesteaded two lots on the town-site, and since that time his fortunes have been identical with those of the town of Polson, and he has ever been one of the leading citizens of the place. In September, 1909, he organized the Charles M. Mansure hardware business, then a small and limited concern, but one which has expanded with the flight of time until it is today one of the leading hardware establishments in this section of the state. Mr. Mansure has contributed his full share to the growth and development of the town, and has demonstrated his faith in the future of the place by acquiring a generous portion of town and ranch property, which he is confident will appreciate in value steadily. He is a Democrat in his political convictions and was the first mayor of the city of Polson, elected to the office in 1910. He is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church, and is a helpful and active adherent of that organization. Mr. Mansure is a sportsman of some note, hunting and fishing being among his chief diversions. He is unmarried.

EDWARD F. MAGINN, M. D. Every profession has its prominent men, some made such by long membership, others by proficiency in their calling. Dr. Edward F. Maginn, of Butte, is made conspicuous among the physicians of that city, not so much by the length of time he has devoted to the calling—for he is yet a young man—as by the eminent success he has already made in it. During the seven years that he has been located in Butte he has succeeded in building up a large and representative practice, and has gained a name for himself in the profession as an authority on diseases of the stomach and abdominal surgery. Like many of Montana's leading professional men, Dr. Maginn is a native of the east, having been born in the city of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, November 20, 1878, a son of Bernard B. and Elizabeth (Hunt) Maginn, the former a native of Poughkeepsie, New York, and the latter of Pennsylvania. Bernard B. Maginn was for many years a successful contractor and builder in Chicago, where his death occurred in 1903, when he was fifty-two years of age.

Edward F. Maginn received his preliminary educational training in the public schools, and later attended the University of Chicago. He then entered Rush Medical College, from which famous institution he was graduated with the class of 1903, receiving the degree of doctor of medicine. He was subsequently engaged in hospital work and practiced in Chicago for two years, where he also taught in the College of Physicians and Surgeons on diseases of the stomach. Dr. Maginn came to Butte during the latter part of 1905, and has here since been in the active practice of his profession, proving himself a useful, active citizen, and standing in the front rank of the men who have made the medical fraternity in this city what it is. The Doctor is a great reader and close student, keeping himself well abreast of the times and thoroughly posted on all advancements produced by scientific research in the prolific fields of medicine and surgery. He specializes in diseases of the stomach and abdominal surgery, and has at various times been called in consultation in important cases. Taking a great interest in the work of the various organizations of his profession, he is a valued member of the Silver Bow County Medical Society, the Montana State Medical Society, the American Medical Association, and the local organization. He is fraternally connected with the Knights of Columbus, and is well known socially as a popular member of the Silver Bow, Country and University Clubs. Dr. Maginn maintains a high regard for the ethics of his profession, and in every way has sought to advance its interests. He has, however, found time also to take an interest in the welfare of Butte, and all movements of a beneficial nature will find in him a hearty sympathizer and liberal supporter.

While in Chicago in 1906 the Doctor was united in marriage with Miss Estelle McCarthy, the daughter of Florence and Maria (Butler) McCarthy, and two children have been born to this union: Edward and Estelle.

HERBERT A. B. GOODALL is a member of the firm of Goodall Brothers, the leading assayers of Helena and vicinity. He was born on the twentieth day of May, 1883, at Bathgate, North Dakota. His father, Archibald J. Goodall, a Canadian from the province of Ontario, the city of Galt, is a farmer and owner of large tracts of land. Much of his estate is adjacent to Bathgate. Mr. Goodall celebrated his sixty-second anniversary of his birth on the thirtieth day of October, 1911. Together with his wife, Mary McLaughlin Goodall, he resides on one of his many farms near Bathgate. Of their five children, Agnes, the eldest born, died during her infancy and was buried at Galt, Ontario. Those remaining are Archibald J., the oldest boy, who bears his father's name; Herbert A. B., of whom more later; Muriel Ray the second daughter who spent most of her life at her father's side, and died in 1898, and one living daughter, Elsie Marion.

Herbert received the first of his schooling in Bathgate then went with the family to Riverside, California, where he finished the work of the grades, returning to Bathgate in time to enter the high school of that little city. In the ensuing year, after leaving the high school, he entered the University of North Dakota, where he took a seven years' course, receiving his degree of B. A. and specializing in mining and metallurgy. After completing these studies he was equipped for his life work of analytical chemistry and assaying. His first work for remuneration was with the geological survey of North Dakota. This occupied him from early in 1903 until the seventh of September, 1905. Later in this same year he accepted the position as assistant assayer in Montana and settled in Helena. This office he filled with great satisfaction for more than three years and a half, when, together with his brother, Archibald J., he established the now flourishing firm of Goodall Brothers, assayers, at No. 38 South Main street, Helena.

Mr. Herbert Goodall is a member of the Ancient Free and Accepted Order of Masons, belonging to the Morning Star Lodge, No. 5, Helena. On October 5, 1908, Mr. Goodall brought to Helena as his bride, Miss Sophia Woodward. They are the parents of one child, a son, whom they have called William Archibald for his two grandsires. Mrs. Goodall is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Woodward, now residents of Divide, Montana, Mrs. Woodward having been, before her marriage, Sophia Thomas.

E. F. Traggins

Archibald J. Goodall, the older brother and business partner of Mr. Herbert Goodall, was born at Galt, Ontario, on November 17, 1880. Like his brother, he attended the elementary schools of Bathgate before going to Riverside, California. He also attended the high school in Riverside previous to entering the University of North Dakota situated at Grand Forks, where he pursued his studies for two years. He studied for another two years in the Minnesota State Agricultural College, at St. Anthony's Park. Graduating into a scientific farmer with the class of 1904, he returned to his father's ranch and devoted the next four years of his life to improving this property, meantime residing with his parents. In December, of 1908, he arrived in Helena to join with his brother Herbert in the formation of the afore-mentioned business house. He is a member of the Bathgate Lodge No. 23, A. F. & A. M., belongs to the Ancient Order of United Workmen of St. Paul, Minnesota and to the Odd Fellows of Hamilton, North Dakota, and of Rocky Mountain Encampment No. 1, I. O. O. F. As yet he remains in the ranks of the bachelors.

Both of the Goodall brothers are Republicans of the Progressive wing, in their political affiliations; indeed, they are progressive in all else, as their position in the business world and social activities of their chosen city easily demonstrate. Their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Archibald J. Goodall, are of Scotch origin, the paternal grandfather having immigrated from Scotland in 1832. The grandsons seem to have inherited some of his foresight and caution.

FRED HILLEBRAND. The representatives of the commercial life of Butte have been recruited from all parts of the world and include thoroughly experienced experts in all lines of commerce and trade. Among those who have come to the city in more recent years to join forces with the progressive business element as a high class ladies' tailor is Mr. Fred Hillebrand, who is a leader in his line here and has a clientele that includes many of the best families of Butte.

Mr. Hillebrand is a native of Germany, in which country he was born September 26, 1865. His mother died when he was a child of four years and he was wholly orphaned six years later by the death of his father, after whom he was named. After completing his studies in the public schools of Germany he proceeded to learn a trade, as is the general requirement of all boys in that country. His choice fell upon that of tailoring, and he thoroughly mastered the intricacies of the art in the next few years, continuing to be employed in that line in Germany until he had attained his twenty-eighth year.

Mr. Hillebrand next decided to go to Paris and engage in high class ladies' tailoring in that supreme city of fashion. He succeeded in making business connection with the best firms of Paris and soon became known as an originator of many new and valuable ideas in tailored dress, his services being accordingly in wide demand. After pursuing his calling for five years in Paris he sought another change of location and in 1902 crossed the waters to America, and remained in New York, at which port he landed, for three years. During those years he acquainted himself with American ways of doing business and worked at tailoring in some of the best shops of the American metropolis. It was his desire, however, to establish himself in business independently, and with this idea in view he personally visited some of the largest cities of the country east and west, including Buffalo, Chicago, St. Louis, New Orleans, Seattle and Butte, and finally decided that the last named place offered the best opportunities of them all for one in his line. He accordingly opened a shop here about two years ago and has built up a profitable business that is steadily increasing, and his reputation for high class work has reached to all parts of the state, so that he receives many fine orders from numerous out-of-town customers.

Mr. Hillebrand is an enthusiastic Montanian and stands always ready to give his hearty support to any movement that has for its object the upbuilding of the city and state of which he is a citizen. He is a man of exemplary personal character, strict honesty, fearless and independent, and enjoys the confidence and respect of all with whom he comes in contact in business or social life.

LOUIS K. ADAMS. It is with pleasure that the biographer takes up the life record of one of Dillon's most enterprising and popular citizens,—Louis K. Adams, vice-president and general manager of the Union Electric Light Company, whose residence in this city dates from 1905 and although of comparatively recent date has been sufficient to "give a taste of his quality," as the Bard of Avon has put it, that has shown him to be of the material whereof the best sort of citizenship is made.

Mr. Adams was born in Richland Center, Wisconsin, December 1, 1866. There he resided for the greater part of the time until about twenty years of age, when he went to North Dakota. There he secured employment with the Soo Railroad as locomotive engineer, and continued thus engaged for four years, thence returning to Wisconsin, where he was manager of the light plant for seven years. In 1904 he came to Big Timber, Montana, where he remained for three years as manager of the electric light plant of that place, following which he removed to Rexberg, Idaho, where he held the same position. In 1905, as mentioned above, he came to Dillon and took charge of the Union Electric Company's business and has resided here ever since, achieving recognition as one of the public-spirited citizens. He now holds the position of general manager. When he took charge of the company's affairs the business was small, but under his guidance it has continually developed and expanded and is now thoroughly modern and up-to-date. It has handsome and commodious offices and its equipments are excellent in every detail. The company now carries a complete line of electrical appliances. Mr. Adams is exponent of the progressive spirit and strong initiative ability which have caused Dillon to forge so rapidly forward.

Mr. Adams has been hustling for himself ever since he was thirteen years of age and he early learned to be self-reliant. He first worked on a farm, at the age of fifteen began railroading, and, proving faithful and efficient, was soon given the responsible position of engineer, getting his first engine out of Minneapolis at the age of twenty-three. He received his elementary education in the public schools of Wisconsin and took one year's classical course in St. John's College, at Prairie du Chien, Wisconsin.

Politically Mr. Adams is a staunch adherent of the Democratic party, but he has never been lured to office-seeking by the honors and emoluments appertaining. He does, however, take a great interest in civic matters and is president of the Commercial Club. He is a most enthusiastic Mason, and belongs to everything from the blue lodge to the Shrine, and has filled various offices in the several bodies of the time-honored order. He is also affiliated with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and in the Knights of Pythias has filled all the chairs and is now a past chancellor. In truth, his lodge affairs play an important part in his life and he finds in them much of pleasure and profit. He is one of the most ardent of the disciples of Nimrod and confesses that if he could be deaf to the call of duty and the state game laws, he would hunt all the time. He finds much joy in the society of a good book; these, with his love of Montana, are his hobbies. Montana, he declares, is without doubt, the greatest state in the Union and the best place in the world to live.

On June 12, 1887, Mr. Adams was married in Mitchell, South Dakota, his chosen lady being Ruby M. Knox, daughter of John and Harriett Knox, of Mitchell. Their only child, Grace M., born December 26, 1889, is the wife of A. I. Cashmore and resides in Dillon. Mr. Cashmore is connected with the grocery department of the Mont Mere Company.

The father of the subject, J. M. Adams, was born on Prince Edwards Island, Nova Scotia, came to the United States when a boy, lived in various states of the Union, and finally located in South Dakota, where he died February 9, 1910, at the age of about seventy-two years. He followed the real estate and mercantile business and served throughout the Civil war in the Fifth Wisconsin Regiment, being wounded and taking part in several important engagements. He was a thorough patriot and was one of those who answered the first proclamation of President Lincoln. The mother, Amelia L. Adams, was born in Kenosha, Wisconsin, and their marriage occurred in that state. Her father was one of the pioneer ranchers of the Badger state. This admirable lady now resides in Sioux City, Iowa, with a married daughter. The elder Adams family consisted of two sons and a daughter, the subject being the second in order of birth. George H. Adams resides in Seattle, Washington, and Effie Adams, now the wife of Daniel Lemis, makes her home in Sioux City, Iowa.

SIMON P. WILSON, the present efficient and popular incumbent of the office of county attorney of Powell county, Montana, is a brilliant young lawyer at Deer Lodge, where he has been engaged in the practice of his profession since 1905. He has gained success and prestige through his own efforts and thus the more honor is due him for his earnest labors in his exacting profession and for the precedence he has gained in his chosen vocation.

A native of the fine old Badger state of the Union, Simon Patrick Wilson was born in Waupaca county, Wisconsin, the date of his nativity being the 27th of May, 1879. He is a son of John and Elizabeth (Lynch) Wilson, both of whom were born and reared in Ireland, whence they immigrated to the United States in 1865 and 1866, respectively. They were married in New York City in 1869 and soon thereafter went to Waupaca county, Wisconsin, where John Wilson engaged in the sawmill and lumber business. He is a man of prominence and influence in his home county and has held a number of important local offices, such as county commissioner and a member of the township board of supervisors. He is now residing on a fine farm in Waupaca county. He and his wife are the parents of seven children, concerning whom the following information is here inserted,—Mary is the wife of Bernard Schaller, of New London, Wisconsin; Morris John is a farmer in the vicinity of Northport, Wisconsin, as is also Philip; Katherine is a popular and successful teacher in the public schools of Waupaca county; Simon P. is the immediate subject of this review; Sylvester L. is a civil engineer in the employ of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company in Arkansas; and Viva E. is a student in the State Normal School at Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

To the public schools of Northport, Wisconsin, Simon P. Wilson is indebted for his preliminary educational training. He was graduated in the high school at New London in 1897 and then entered the University of Wisconsin, in the law department of which excellent institution he was graduated as a member of the class of 1903. Immediately after graduation he engaged in the practice of his profession at Astoria, Oregon, where he remained for a period of one year, at the expiration of which he returned to the home of his parents at New London, Wisconsin, there practicing law for the ensuing year. In June, 1905, he came to Montana, locating at Deer Lodge, where he gradually became acquainted and built up a good law practice. His success here has been very marked and he now controls an extensive and lucrative clientage.

In politics Mr. Wilson is aligned as a Progressive in the ranks of the Democratic party. In the fall of 1906 he was honored by his fellow citizens with election to the office of county attorney and he was re-elected to that office in 1908, without opposition, and again in 1910. He is a member of the board of directors and secretary of the Security Investment Company at Deer Lodge and is the owner of valuable mineral claims and considerable city realty. In a fraternal way he is affiliated with the Knights of Columbus and with the Modern Woodmen of America, being an officer in the latter organization. In religious matters he is a member of the Catholic church, in whose faith he was reared. Mr. Wilson is possessed of a genial, kindly disposition, is a good mixer and a fine conversationalist. A brilliant future is predicted for him in the state of Montana. He is unmarried.

A. E. ANDERSON, M. D. One of those whose devotion to the noble and humane work which his profession implies is proving him a faithful exemplar of the healing art, Dr. A. E. Anderson, of Butte, is not only earning the due reward of his efforts in a temporal way, but is demonstrating himself worthy to perform the functions of his calling through his ability, his abiding sympathy and his earnest zeal in behalf of his fellowmen. With a broad and comprehensive understanding of the science of medicine, the profession and public accord him an honored place among the medical practitioners of the city. Dr. Anderson is a native of Sweden, having been born at Elvestorp, November 7, 1876, and is a son of Andrew Peter and Christina (Greenland) Anderson. The parents of the doctor brought their family to the United States in 1886 and settled in northern Michigan, where the father, who had been a foundry foreman in his native country, became a successful contractor and builder. Both he and his wife still survive and are residents of Michigan.

A. E. Anderson secured his preliminary education in the common schools, after which he became a teacher. He then attended the Ferris Institute, at Grand Rapids, Michigan, a preparatory school, after which he entered the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, from which he was graduated in medicine in 1904. He commenced practice in Wausaukee, Wisconsin, where he remained for one year, then coming west and traveling extensively in search of a favorable location, finally deciding on Butte, where he has since been engaged in practice. He has received a representative support, controlling a large business in his profession, his skill and discrimination being not less popularly appreciated than his unfailing courtesy and sympathy. He is essentially a student and keeps fully abreast of the advances made in medicine and surgery, and devotes much of his time to research and investigation. Although carrying on a general practice, Dr. Anderson specializes in surgical cases, and is recognized as one of the able young practitioners of the city. He has taken a great interest in the work of the Silver Bow County Medical Society, of which he is at present serving as president, and also belongs to the Montana State Medical Society and the American Medical Association. Dr. Anderson also maintains an abiding interest in the affairs of the Masons and the Odd Fellows, and is socially popular as a member of the Silver Bow Club and the Butte Country Club. Although not a politician nor an office seeker, he has kept himself fully informed as to the various important movements of the day in public life, and as a public-spirited citizen of Butte has been at all times ready to aid in any movement for the public or civic welfare.

In 1907, while a resident of North Dakota, Dr. Anderson was married to Miss Bessie Trollope, a member of an old and honored English family, and a direct descendant of Anthony Trollope, and one son, Donald Engelbert, has been born to this union. Dr. and Mrs. Anderson are well and favorably known in social circles of Butte, where they have a wide circle of warm, personal friends.

MICHAEL J. WALSH, who conducts a splendid funeral and undertaking establishment in the city of Butte, Montana, is a representative business man of this place, and one who not only has achieved his individual success but has also public-spiritedly devoted himself to the general welfare of his fellow citizens and has been foremost in advancing enterprises and improvements which will be of lasting benefit to the city, county and state. He is, furthermore, a self-made man, having come to America at the early age of sixteen years, at which time he began his independent business career. From the first he was possessed of ambition and determination, and his energy, courage and business judgment have brought him to a position of esteem and influence among the citizens of Montana, where he is a man of mark in all the relations of life.

A native of the fair Emerald Isle, Michael J. Walsh was born in County Kerry, Ireland, on the 25th of February, 1875, and he is a son of James and Mary (Curtin) Walsh, both of whom were born and reared in Ireland and the latter of whom was summoned to the life eternal in August, 1885, at the early age of thirty-three years. James Walsh has been identified with agricultural pursuits during the greater part of his active career and he is now residing, at the age of seventy-two years, on his old homestead in Ireland. The Walsh family consists of five children, concerning whom the following brief data are here incorporated, Minnie is the wife of Patrick Shea, of Chicago, Illinois, and they have one daughter; Kate is Mrs. Michael Cullinan, and she resides with her husband and four children on the old homestead farm in Ireland; Miss Nora lives in Chicago; William J. is a resident of Spokane, Washington; and Michael J., of this review.

To the schools of his native place Michael J. Walsh is indebted for his preliminary educational training. After leaving school he worked for a time on his father's farm and when he had reached his sixteenth year he immigrated to the United States, settling in the city of Chicago, in 1891. He remained in the great western metropolis until 1900, and in that city thoroughly familiarized himself with the details of the undertaking business, having worked for a number of years in the establishment of his uncle, W. D. Curtin. In 1900 he decided to try his fortunes in the west and came directly to Butte, whence he later removed to Anaconda. In the latter city he became manager of the Ehret Funeral & Undertaking business, later purchasing the business. Remaining in Anaconda for the ensuing four years, he became a man of prominence in that city, serving for two terms as coroner of Deer Lodge county. In 1905 he came to Butte and opened an undertaking establishment at No. 125 East Park street, where he has since conducted a prosperous business.

While not active in local politics at the present time, Mr. Walsh accords a stalwart allegiance to the principles and policies for which the Democratic party stands sponsor. He is a man of broad mind and generous impulses and he does all in his power to advance the general welfare of Butte and of Silver Bow county. He is prominent and popular in a number of fraternal orders, holding membership in the Knights of Columbus, the Benevolent & Protective Order of Elks, the Royal Arcanum, the Fraternal Order of Eagles, the Woodmen of the World, the Modern Woodmen of America, and the Fraternal Brotherhood. He is also affiliated with the City Undertakers Association, of which he was vice-president in 1911; and with the State Undertakers Association. His religious faith is in harmony with the tenets of the Roman Catholic church and he is a liberal contributor to various charitable organizations. It may be said of Mr. Walsh that the circle of his friends is coincident with that of his acquaintances. He is a great baseball enthusiast and is fond of all out-of-door sports.

ELWOOD PAUL WILSON is one more argument for the superiority of the farm-bred youth over the one trained and reared in the city, and those who maintain that our great centers of population draw their strength from the men who come to them from the rural districts might well point to him as an example of the "fitness" of the farmer's son. His father, E. L. Wilson, is a prosperous farmer of eastern Ohio and Elwood Paul grew up in Palmyra, where he was born. He had two brothers and two sisters, he himself being the next to the youngest. His mother died when he was but eight years old, and is buried in Ohio, which was her native state as well as the birthplace of her husband and all her children.

Elwood Paul Wilson was born on October 3, 1884, and until he was eighteen, lived at Palmyra. When he left the place it was to enter the Northern University at Ada, Ohio. He took a complete course in pharmacy, graduating in 1902, two years after his entrance. As soon as he was out of college he secured employment in a drug store at Painesville, Ohio. From there he went to Ravenna, Ohio, and then to Butte. It was on September 18, 1905, that Mr. Wilson arrived in the city, and for a few months thereafter he worked for one of the drug stores. He very soon went into business for himself, and he is still conducting the establishment he opened, although it has grown far beyond its original proportions.

Mr. Wilson was married in Butte on June 16, 1909. His wife was formerly Miss Pearl Fernouth, the daughter of John and Dean Fernouth, of Meaderville. A daughter, Geraldine Audrey Wilson, was born on July 27, 1911. Mrs. Wilson is a member of the Marion White Arts and Crafts, and she is enthusiastic on the revival of the handicrafts, having no little skill in this sort of thing herself. Her husband has a hobby, too, but not of the same sort. He is known as a dog-fancier and is the owner of two fine collies, of which he is justly proud. The Wilsons are not members of any church, but they attend the Episcopal services and prefer that branch of the church universal. Mr. Wilson belongs to the Modern Woodmen of America.

There is probably no young business man in Butte whose rise in the mercantile world is more certain than is that of Mr. Wilson. Beginning an independent business at an age when many young men are still in school, he has in five years built up a lucrative and a permanent trade. This has all been done without assistance, and he has paid back the money which his father advanced for his education. His personal qualities are such as command the respect of all who know him, even though they do not agree with him. His ability can be described as wonderful, without hyperbole, and those experienced in the game of business declare that Wilson is one of the future big men of Montana in the mercantile field. Business is his first consideration, and he does not engage in politics, even as a side line. This does not prevent his being interested in public concerns, for he is a willing worker in enterprises of benefit to the city. It is simply that he is an independent voter and in no sense a politician.

Mr. Wilson is not so absorbed in his work that he can take no time to play. He never loses an opportunity to participate in a base ball game or to join a foot ball eleven. When this is out of the question he is just as enthusiastic as a spectator. Of course, being a good Montanian by adoption, he is a devotee of the rod and gun. Both he and Mrs. Wilson belong to the most progressive class of the progressive city.

RALPH M. HODGENS. Whether the elements of success in life are innate attributes of the individual, or whether they are quickened by a process of circumstantial development, it is impossible clearly to determine. Yet the study of a successful life is none the less profitable by reason of the existence of this uncertainty and in the majority of cases it is found that exceptional ability, amounting to genius, perhaps, was the real secret of the preeminence which many envied. So it appears to the student of human nature who seeks to trace the history of the rise of Ralph M. Hodgens, a typical American of the best class. He is yet a young man but has achieved a success that many an older resident of Butte might envy. Mr. Hodgens is president of the Hodgens-Greene Company, which is the active head of several land and development companies, as well as successful mining enterprises.

Ralph M. Hodgens was born at Taylorstown, Pennsylvania, on the 25th of March, 1880, and is a son of James and Mary E. (Farrar) Hodgens, both of whom were likewise born in the Keystone state. The father was engaged in civil engineering and farming during the greater part of his active career and was called to the Great Beyond in April, 1903. Mrs. Hodgens, who survives her honored husband, is now living in the old homestead at Taylorstown. The Hodgens family consisted of six children, all of whom are living (in 1911) and of whom the subject of this review was the last in order of birth.

After completing the curriculum of the public schools of Taylorstown, Pennsylvania, Ralph M. Hodgens was matriculated as a student in Washington & Jefferson College, at Washington, that state, a member of the class of 1901. He was variously engaged until 1905 when he came to Butte, where he was associated with his brother, Thomas M. Hodgens, in different business enterprises for a short time. In 1909 Mr. Hodgens became interested in the land business in Montana, and in 1911 formed a partnership with Fred T. Greene to incorporate the Hodgens-Greene Company, which concerns deals in mining and agricultural lands, the headquarters of the same being at Nos. 401-3 State Savings Bank building. The Hodgens-Greene Company was incorporated under the laws of the state of Montana in 1911. Mr. Hodgens is president of the company and Mr. Greene is secretary and treasurer. An extensive real estate business is controlled and the company is also interested in mines and mining properties in Montana and Idaho.

In politics Mr. Hodgens is an uncompromising supporter of the principles and policies for which the Democratic party stands sponsor, and in a social way is affiliated with the Silver Bow, Country Club and the University Club. His religious faith is in harmony with the teachings of the Presbyterian church, of which he is a devout and active member. Mr. Hodgens is unmarried.

At the time of the outbreak of the Spanish-American war, in 1898, Mr. Hodgens gave evidence of his intrinsic loyalty to the cause of justice by enlisting as a member of Company H, Tenth Pennsylvania Volunteer Infantry. He served throughout the entire period of hostilities, was in the Philippine Islands for nine months and there participated in a number of important engagements, including Maycauwan, in which he was wounded. He was mustered out of service at San Francisco in September, 1909. While on duty Mr. Hodgens was a member of the Eighth Army Corps and served under General McArthur. He is genial in his associations, affable in his address, generous in the judgment of his fellow men, and courteous to all. As a citizen and enthusiast of his town it is but just to say that communities will prosper and grow in proportion as they put a premium on men of his character.

EDWARD H. LAMBERT. The father of E. H. Lambert, of Helena, was Edward A. Lambert by name, and during his life he was one of the influential citizens of Brooklyn, New York. He was at one time a banker in the city, and later a stationer. In both of these pursuits he was successful and acquired quite a comfortable fortune. However, later in life, he lost most of his money through reverses and unfortunate investments, so that his children were thrown upon their own resources. He was born in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, on June 10, 1813, and he took an active part in the politics of Brooklyn, New York, to which city he removed after his marriage. He was at one time mayor of the city and was always one of the leaders in its civic affairs. He died in 1885, seven years before the death of his wife. This lady was born in New Hampshire, in 1830. Her maiden name was Hannah J. Hibbard. She was the mother of five children, Edward H. being the oldest.

Edward H. Lambert first opened his eyes upon this stage of action on August 20, 1860. He was sent to the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute after some elementary instruction in private schools. Leaving this institution at the age of fifteen, he went into the house of Mollison Brothers, wholesale wall-paper dealers of New York City, as a wage earner. His duties were to act as messenger and collector and to make himself generally useful, and the consideration for the services rendered was two dollars a week. Mr. Lambert spent a quarter of a year with this firm and then entered the employ of the Fulton Bank of Brooklyn. In the five years he spent with this concern he filled all the minor positions and established a reputation for an efficiency of no common order. His next position was with the Brooklyn Watch Case Company, the largest establishment of the kind in the world at that time. Mr. Lambert began here as a bookkeeper and in the four years which he was connected with the company, held various office positions leaving only to go west and engage in business on his own account. In 1884 he left Brooklyn and went to Fargo, North Dakota. In that city, he went into the real estate and land business and made a specialty of farm loans. He remained there twenty-one years before moving still further west, and this time his objective point was Helena. Here he formed a partnership with Mr. Palmer, and with him continued in the same line of work in which he had been engaged in Fargo. The association has lasted until the present time and the business has grown until it is now the largest brokerage and farm loan company in the county. It is incorporated, with Mr. H. B. Palmer, as president and Edwin H. Lambert, vice-president and treasurer.

Mr. Lambert is a Republican, but does not figure in the activities of the local organization. He belongs to the Elks and to the Masons, as well as to the Montana club. From 1880 until 1884 he was a member of the Brooklyn National Guards, the Twenty-third Regiment. His father had given fourteen years to the service of the New York National Guards, being a member of the Seventh Regiment.

Personally, though pre-eminently a man of business, Mr. Lambert is a man of easy and affable manner, which is a true index of an open-hearted and kindly nature. He is the fortunate possessor not only of one of the solid financial establishments of the city of Helena, but of many friends and well-wishers.

CHARLES A. TAYLOR. One of the younger members of the Montana legal profession who has attained prominence in his calling, and has been chosen to represent the people in positions of public trust, is Charles A. Taylor, county attorney of Yellowstone county. Mr. Taylor, whose field of practice is the city of Billings, is a native of Ross county, Ohio, and was born February 17, 1880, a son of Charles C. and Mary Ellen (Bates) Taylor.

The father died when Charles A. was but three years of age, and but little is known of his life save that he was an industrious and successful business man and an upright and patriotic citizen. He was born in Tennessee, in 1836, and removed to Ohio prior to the Civil war, in which he served for five years as a member of Company H, First Ohio Volunteer Cavalry. At the close of the war he returned to Chillicothe, Ohio, where he was connected with a railroad as superintendent up to the time of his death in 1883. He was a member of the Grand Army of the Republic, and in his political beliefs was a Republican. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Mary Ellen Bates, was born at Chillicothe, Ohio, in 1848, and her death occurred in 1904, she having been the mother of a family of eight children, of whom five still survive.

Charles A. Taylor was the sixth in order of birth of his parents' children, and his education was secured in the public schools of Hocking county, Ohio, whence his parents had removed not long before his father's demise. He was graduated from Antioch College, at Yellow Springs, Ohio, with the class of 1902, after which he attended the Law School of Harvard University, and received his degree with the class of 1905. Almost immediately thereafter he came to Billings, where he engaged as assistant to the Hon. O. F. Goddard, one of the leading attorneys of the state, but in 1906 entered practice on his own account. The character and ability of the young attorney soon attracted attention, and in 1907 he was appointed deputy county attorney under Harry L. Wilson, and subsequently, in 1910, he received the fall election to the office of county attorney of Yellowstone county. An able and conscientious public official, he has been fearless in championing the measures and principles which he has deemed to be right, and in the earnest performance of the duties of his office has gained and held the respect and confidence of his fellow townsmen. He is known as an influential worker in the ranks of the Republican party, and his fraternal connections are with Ashlar Lodge, No. 29, A. F. & A. M., and Billings Lodge, No. 394, B. P. O. E., in both of which he has a number of warm friends. He has been an industrious and tireless worker ever since his youth, when as a lad of fourteen years he acted as page in the Ohio state senate.

On June 30, 1908, Mr. Taylor was married at Five Mile, Ohio, to Miss Stella Shannon, who was born in Brown county, Ohio, daughter of Jacob D. and Belle (Myers) Shannon, natives of Ohio, where Mr. Shannon is engaged in mercantile and agricultural pursuits. Mr. and Mrs. Taylor have two children, namely: Mary Kathleen and Charles Richard.

NICHOLAS A. ROTERING. Although a comparatively recent acquisition to the bar of Silver Bow county, Nicholas A. Rotering is sufficiently far from shore to be under full sail in his profession, and has given abundant evidence of his ability to steer his barque to its desired haven. His life story is one like thousands of others among us everywhere, differing only in details, but in all essential features forcibly illustrating the wonderful possibilities of American life and the no less wonderful versatility of the American mind. Beginning the battle of life for himself at an early age in one responsible and oftentimes very trying capacity, and thereby earning the money required to prepare himself for a more ambitious calling and career, he is found, after a few years, engaged in work of a totally different kind, and making an excellent record in that as he did in his former vocation.

Vol. III—27

Mr. Rotering was born in Buffalo county, Wisconsin, on February 18, 1878. His parents, Nicholas and Rosa (Greenwald) Rotering, are farmers in that county, and he was reared to the age of seventeen years on the farm, attending the district school of the neighborhood, and the high school at Arcadia, Wisconsin, for the foundation of his academic education. The father is a native of Prussia, Germany, and came to the United States when he was but seventeen years old. He located in Buffalo county, Wisconsin, and at once engaged in farm work, to which he has ever since adhered, working for some time for other persons, but for many years owning and cultivating a farm of his own. He is now about sixty years of age, but still very active and energetic. The mother, also still living and now fifty-three years of age, was born and reared in Wisconsin, and has passed all her life to this time in that state.

Following the stimulating example of his father, Mr. Rotering took up for himself the struggle for advancement among men at the age of seventeen, teaching school for a number of years as his first independent occupation, but while doing this passed his vacations working on his father's farm. His professional preparation was finished at Madison, Wisconsin, College of Law, from which he was graduated in 1903. He then went back to the farm and remained at home with his parents until 1905, when he came to Butte to begin the practice of his profession. The first two years of his professional work in Butte were passed in the office of John A. Smith, Esq., and at the end of that period, in 1907, he opened an office of his own in the Silver Bow block, in which he is still located.

From the beginning of his independent legal career Mr. Rotering has been very successful. Early in his professional life in Butte he had so impressed the bench and bar of the city with his ability that Mayor Nevin, in 1909, appointed him assistant city attorney, and that office he is still filling with great acceptability to the officials of the city and to the general public as well. He is entirely fair and broad-minded in the performance of his official duties, impelled always by a high sense of responsibility in respect to the city, but, at the same time, always keen for preserving the rights and protecting the interests of the other side from unwarranted invasion and all forms of imposition.

Mr. Rotering is earning the success he is achieving at the bar. He is a diligent and thoughtful student of legal science, and is painstaking and conscientious in preparing and conducting his cases. He feels deeply his duty to his clients, and as he enjoys the intellectual contests inevitable to the trial of cases, he therefore omits nothing available on his part that may aid him in securing success. And yet, while realizing that the law is a jealous mistress, he does not allow his profession to engross the whole of his time and energy to the exclusion of everything else, but seeks alike, as he has opportunity, the pleasing recreations of social life, the exhilarating sports of the diamond and other fields of athletic competition, and the sterner conflicts of politics.

He is an ardent working member of the Democratic party politically, belongs to the Alumni Association of his law college and the Silver Bow Bar Association socially and fraternally, and is allied with the Catholic church in religious affiliation. On June 23, 1909, he was married in the city of his present home to Miss Anna Harrington, the daughter of John and Margaret (Harnett) Harrington. By this marriage he has become the father of one child, his daughter Rosa Jeanette, who was born in Butte, Montana, on May 3, 1910. He and his wife have hosts of friends, who make their pleasant home a favorite resort and always find it pervaded with an air of refinement and generous and genuine in its cordial but unobtrusive hospitality.

E. WILEY HILL. At this point attention is directed to a brief history of the career of E. Wiley Hill, one of Butte's most prominent merchants and business men. Mr. Hill was born at Milan, Texas, on the 6th of February, 1864, and he is a son of R. J. and Ellen Augusta (Kellogg) Hill, both of whom were born in Texas, the former at San Antonio, in 1844, and the latter in 1851. The father was a valiant soldier in the Civil war and during the greater portion of his active career was a prominent merchant. He was summoned to the life eternal in 1909, at the age of sixty-five years, and his cherished and devoted wife died in 1881, at the early age of thirty years. Concerning the three children born to Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Hill: Walter C. is a resident of San Antonio, Texas, where he is in the employ of the San Antonio Sewer, Pipe & Tile Company; Lulu is the wife of a merchant and influential business man at San Antonio and they have two children; and E. Wiley is the immediate subject of this review.

In early life E. Wiley Hill did not have the advantages of the higher branches of education, as he lived in one of the isolated sections of the Lone Star State. He was a regular attendant at the district school, however, and took advantage of every opportunity to broaden his mind and store up a fund of useful information. At an early age he was obliged to leave school and go to work and, living as he did in a stock-raising section of the state, he naturally became a cowboy. He was in the employ of the Banner Cattle Company for a period of ten years and during that time had many thrilling experiences, bravely meeting the hardships and privations which went to make up the lot of the cow-punchers in the early days of the cattle industry in the southwest. Mr. Hill came to Montana in the early days of Butte and on the 5th of September, 1897, opened the Montana Cash Grocery, being associated with David Davenport in that particular enterprise. That store is still doing a very thriving business, but it is not now conducted by Mr. Hill. In 1900 he disposed of his business interests in Butte and went to the Pacific coast, where he remained for the ensuing two years. In 1905 he returned to Butte, where he purchased the grocery concern of L. M. Brookes. That store was then a small struggling establishment, but under the able guidance of Mr. Hill it has prospered and expanded so that it is one of the leading retail groceries in the city. In addition to his grocery business Mr. Hill is also interested in the sale of auto trucks, being Butte agent for the McIntyre Auto Truck Company, a prominent eastern concern. Mr. Hill is a business man of keen judgment and good foresight. He has worked hard and persistently for the success which is now his, and it is gratifying to note that all his dealings have been characterized by fair and honorable methods.

Mr. Hill is independent in politics and, in a fraternal way, is affiliated with the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, the Eagles, Moose and Lions. He is fond of out-of-door sports and takes much pleasure in automobiling, hunting and fishing. As a citizen he is loyal and public spirited, and his generous attitude toward his fellow men makes him beloved amongst all classes of people.

J. N. HARVEY. The First National Bank of Chester was organized in 1909 as the First Bank of Chester, and in 1910 a national charter was secured and the present title adopted. H. E. Delaney was the first president and J. J. Dunnegan the first cashier, while the present officials are L. D. Prigsley, president, H. F. Smith, vice president, and J. N. Harvey, cashier. This bank, which does a general loan and banking business with the local citizenship and the farmers and stockmen of a large scope of country adjacent, has had a very successful career. Its home is a substantial brick building, which was the first structure of the kind erected in Chester. The bank has been a very important factor in the growth and prosperity of the town, which is now a community of excellent stores and many comfortable residences, the city's population being now about one thousand.

Mr. J. N. Harvey, who has been identified with this institution practically from the beginning, is one of the rising young business men of northwest Montana. He is a native of the Northwest, having been born in Benson, Minnesota, December 8, 1882, and received his education first in the public schools and then in the business college of Wilmar, Minnesota. His business career began in 1902 as clerk in a general store at Benson, and then in a similar capacity at Starbuck, that state, where he remained three years. From Starbuck Mr. Harvey came out to Montana and located a land claim near Chester, becoming one of the developers of the natural resources of this section of the state. He later moved into town and became bookkeeper for the First Bank, from which position he was promoted to cashier, and has since taken the leading part in the management of this institution. He is one of the popular citizens of this locality, with a thorough knowledge of business, and has been able to draw a large patronage to his bank.

Mr. Harvey's parents were Lars N. and Guri (Harvey) Harvey, both of whom were natives of Norway. The father was a young man when he settled at Benson, Minnesota, and there followed farming until his death in 1899 at the age of fifty-four. He was a respected and substantial citizen. The mother came to America with her parents, who first settled in Wisconsin. She is now sixty-one years of age, and still a resident at Benson. The son of J. N. was the fifth in their family of eight children.

Mr. J. N. Harvey was married at Benson, July, 1909, to Miss Anna Simonson, daughter of Paul Simonson. Their one child, Albert G., was born in Chester, October 28, 1910. Mr. Harvey is a member of the Norwegian Lutheran church, in politics is Republican, affiliates with the Modern Woodmen of America. He is a live and public-spirited citizen, and is treasurer of the Chester Commercial Club. His recreation is mainly in the outdoor life, hunting and fishing.

EDMUND M. NILES. Intellect and industry are never incompatible. There is more wisdom, and will be more benefit, in combining them, than scholars like to believe or than the ordinary people of the world imagine. Life has time enough for both, and its happiness will be increased by the union. To this combination add those other important qualities, enterprise and energy, business tact and public spirit, and the sum total is the make-up of that class of men in which Edmund M. Niles, of Livingston, stands in prominent relief. Mr. Niles was born at Diamond Bluff, Pierce county, Wisconsin, January 3, 1869, and is a son of Edwin and Eliza (Buck) Niles.

Joseph R. and Betsy Niles, the paternal grandparents of Edmund M., natives of Maine, came from that state west in 1854 and located on the banks of the Mississippi river, ten miles above the present site of Red Wing, Minnesota. About one year later they removed to Pierce county, Wisconsin, and there spent the remainder of their lives in agricultural pursuits. Edwin Niles was born in Somerset county, Maine, in 1840, and was fourteen years of age when he left the east for the new home in the forests of Minnesota. He remained under the parental roof until he attained his majority, when he engaged in farming and stock-raising on his own account, hewing a home from the virgin wilderness. He became a prominent farmer of his day, was elected to numerous township offices as a Republican candidate, and was active in the cause of education and the work of the Baptist church. His wife, a native of Ohio, died in 1880, having been the mother of five children, as follows: Ellie M., the wife of M. L. Sparks; Edmund M.; William R.; Harry L.; and Millie E., who met her death in 1891, at the age of thirteen years, in a steamboat accident on Lake Pepin.

The early education of Edmund M. Niles was secured in the public schools of Diamond Bluff, Wisconsin, and he subsequently attended Parker College, at Winnebago City, Minnesota. In 1896 he was graduated from the law department of the University of Minnesota, and then located in practice in Twin Valley, Minnesota, where he remained until 1905. In that year he came to Livingston and has since been engaged in a general practice, having a large and representative clientele and maintaining handsome offices in the Garner-Niles block. A Republican in politics, while living in Minnesota he served as county attorney of Norman county, for the terms of 1900 and 1902, and was one of the organizers of the Citizens State Bank of Twin Valley, Minn., of which he was president until 1905. He is a member of the Delta Chi Greek letter fraternity.

On September 22, 1896, Mr. Niles was married to Miss Mary E. Dennison, who was born at Amboy, near Mankato, Minnesota, daughter of Admetus and Margaret (Farley) Dennison. Mr. Dennison was born at Albany, New York, and came to Blue Earth county, Minnesota, as a young man in 1860, there taking up government land and developing a home from the wilderness. He was one of the pioneers of his section and participated in a great deal of Indian trouble during the early days, at one time seeing thirty-eight hostiles hung at Mankato. He was a staunch Democrat, and served as deputy sheriff of Blue Earth county and in various other capacities. His death occurred in 1910, in the eighty-sixth year of his age, while his wife passed away in 1884. They had four children: Alida C., wife of Wilbur Day; Mrs. Niles; William H.; and Grace M., wife of Frank L. Buell. Five children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Niles: Grace E., Russell D., Wendel E., Kenneth B. and Donald.

J. FREDERICK KIESEL. A member of Butte's commercial contingent whose operations are of such nature and extent as to make him an important factor in trade not alone in this city and state, but throughout this portion of the whole northwest is Mr. J. Frederick Kiesel, district manager for the Money Weight Scale Company of Chicago, his territory including the states of Montana, Utah, Wyoming and Idaho. Mr. Kiesel has under his direction an average of four traveling salesmen, and since he has taken charge of the territory, sales of Money Weight scales have very largely increased and continue to grow in a very satisfactory manner.

Mr. Kiesel was born at Ogden, Utah, August 7, 1873, of German parentage. His father, Julius C. Kiesel, was born in Germany in 1848 and immigrated to the United States when a boy of fourteen years, coming to Utah on the first passenger train that passed through the state. He was a baker by trade and followed that line of business throughout his lifetime, being actively engaged in running a bakery, at Ogden, Utah, up to the time of his death, in 1906. Mr. Kiesel's mother was before her marriage Theresa Stitz. She was born in Germany in 1848 and died July 9, 1910. Of the family of seven children four are now living, these being J. Frederick and his three sisters.

Mr. Kiesel was fortunate in securing a good education before becoming an active participant in commercial life. He took up elementary studies in the parochial schools of Ogden, Utah, attended for a time All Hallows College and graduated from the Ogden Military Academy. He also took a business course in the Ogden Business College, graduating from that institution with the best commercial principles and methods thoroughly mastered. Completing his studies in 1891, Mr. Kiesel took a clerical position in the office of his uncle, the Hon. Fred J. Kiesel, of Ogden, and continued in his service for seven years. Going to Chicago just previous to the opening of the world's fair there, he secured an appointment on the special service corps, on which he served throughout the time the fair was open. When the closing of the fair made the employment of the special service corps no longer necessary Mr. Kiesel returned to the west and for about three years was employed by the Fred J. Kiesel Company at Pocatello, Idaho, being assistant manager during the last year. His next connection was with the Maple Grove Orchard and Vineyard Company of Ogden, and he represented them in their sales department for a short period. He was then for about one year traveling representative for the Salt Lake Coffee & Spice Mills, after which he was for four years proprietor and manager of the Hotel Kiesel at Logan, Utah. Disposing of his interests here, he became associated with the Cudahy Packing Company; from this last connection he resigned a year later, then went to Havre, Montana, and established himself in business as a merchandise broker. He was very successful in this venture and continued to operate on those lines for two years. During this time he became associated with the Money Weight Scale Company, distributors for the Computing Scale Company of Dayton, Ohio. Taking up his residence at Butte in September, 1905, Mr. Kiesel proceeded to devote his entire time to his work as district manager for this concern, and continues to retain that responsible position.

On August 11, 1898, at St. Anthony, Idaho, occurred the marriage of Mr. Kiesel and Miss Idonia Blanchard, a native of Utah. Her parents, John R. and Bartha Blanchard, were among the earliest pioneers of that state. They settled there in 1854 and built the first residence at the point which is now the city of Logan. Mr. and Mrs. Blanchard are eighty-three years old and still reside at their old home in Logan. Three children blessed the union of Mr. and Mrs. Kiesel: Theresa was born at Logan, October 29, 1901; Carroll, at Salt Lake City, August 4, 1903; and George, at Butte, July 23, 1910.

Mr. Kiesel is a man of exemplary personal character, liberal and progressive in his ideas and methods and enjoys the highest respect and esteem of a wide circle of friends and acquaintances throughout the northwest. He is a member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, No. 719, at Ogden, Utah.

FRANK H. WALNUM has been identified with the fortunes of Montana since 1905, and for the past three years has been a resident of Cascade, where he helped organize the Cascade Lumber Company at that time. Since then it has grown to be one of the most thriving concerns of its kind in the county and its owners and proprietors have achieved a distinct success in their manipulation of its affairs.

Mr. Walnum was born in Norway in 1881, his natal day being February 26. He is the son of S. B. Walnum and his wife, Mrs. Hapstock (Wenche) Walnum. Both were born in Norway. The father still lives there and is a clergyman. His wife died at the early age of thirty, leaving five children, of whom Frank H. was the second born. He attended the public and high schools of his town, and when his schooling was finished the young man, then eighteen years of age, emigrated to America. He came here in the year 1899, going directly to Minnesota and securing employment in a flour mill, where he remained for a period of six years. In 1905 he came to Montana, where he engaged in the grain business, buying and selling and carrying on a lively trade in that commodity. Three years ago he located in Cascade and decided to open up a lumber business, which he did, after due deliberation and making careful arrangements for the management of the business. He is now the part owner and proprietor of the business represented by the Cascade Lumber Company, which is, as previously mentioned, one of the most thriving and prosperous concerns in the county. Mr. Walnum is a man of much business ability, and has already achieved a success worthy of a more experienced man. He possesses all the traits of character and mind which make for large and worthy success, and his unquestionable integrity and reliability is one of his most valuable assets.

Mr. Walnum in his political activities maintains an independent stand, and his influence is rather to be found on the side of the most worthy candidate for any given office than for any especial party. He is a member of the Christian church, and is a member of Euclid Lodge No. 53 of the blue lodge of the Masons in Great Falls. He is somewhat of an athlete, and was prominent in athletic circles in Norway, where he was the winner of a number of medals and various swimming and running contests. Although he has for the most part given up active part in these sports, Mr. Walnum is still fond of all out door exercise and finds a great deal of his pleasure in this way.

On September 25, 1908, Mr. Walnum was united in marriage with Miss Grace L. Curran of Culbertson, Montana. They have one child,—S. B. Walnum, born September 6, 1911.

FREDERICK W. WILSON. After a long and varied career that has taken him to points throughout the western mining states, and during which he has been identified with large ventures which have met with varying degrees of success, Frederick W. Wilson is now engaged in business in the city of Stevensville, where he is one of his community's best-known citizens. Reared to the life of an agriculturist, a roving and venturesome spirit caused him to leave home at a tender age to seek his fortune in the new places of the west, and the self-reliance and adaptability to all conditions thus ingrained in him in his younger years have been of great benefit to him in the conduct of his business affairs. Mr. Wilson was born in County Bruce, Ontario, Canada, February 7, 1864, and is a son of Samuel and Sarah (Cockburn) Wilson. His father, a native of Ireland, came from Dublin to Canada when he was seventeen years of age, and during his earlier years was engaged in farming. Subsequently he removed to Lucknow, where he became a partner in the large wholesale and retail firm of Madden, Ruckledge & Wilson, and later he moved to North Bay where he engaged in farming until his death in 1910, at North Bay. His wife, a native of Canada, passed away in 1884, having been the mother of children as follows: Robert C., who is engaged in mining in Alaska; Samuel J., engaged in mining in Carter, Montana; Ruth Ada, who married Fred Clement, of Saskatchewan, N. W. T.; Margaret J., now Mrs. Alfred Glendenning, of Saskatchewan; Elizabeth, who married Robert Wilson, of Toronto; Clara M., a widow of Saskatchewan; Frederick W., and Albert E., of Saskatchewan.

Frederick W. Wilson was six years of age when taken to Lucknow by his parents, and his education was secured in the public schools, which he left at the age of fifteen years. He then served an apprenticeship of one year to the trade of printer, then spent two years in the employ of a butcher, and one year in a store and postoffice, and at this time his parents removed to the Nipissing district. At that time he and his brother, Robert, engaged in a butcher business at Callender, northwestern Ontario, but after one year the business was dissolved and Frederick W. became clerk for Gerwin, Sanders & Company, in whose employ he remained one year. He then drifted west over the north shore of Lake Superior into the Rocky and Selkirk mountain ranges, from Rogears to Ravestoke, where with eight other boys he bought a large dug-out, or canoe, and came down the Columbia river, on a five-day journey in the fall of 1885, to Marquis, or Little Dells, Washington. At that point they hired an Indian and teams and drove through the Colville valley to Spokane Falls, and were well received at the various points, there being a musician in the party. Arriving at Spokane Falls, the party divided, but Mr. Wilson remained at that point for two months and then removed to Couer d'Alene, where he began his career as a miner and prospector. In this he was almost immediately successful, and these vocations claimed his undivided attention until 1905, he having interests in Washington, Idaho, Montana, and Alaska. This has continued to be Mr. Wilson's chief interest. He has been a close student on mineral formations and is an acknowledged judge of quartz, and it is believed no man in the county has a more intimate or wider range of knowledge on the subject. In 1905 he came to Stevensville, where, with his brother-in-law, Joseph Dagenais, he engaged in a drug business, purchasing the store of Frank Cyr. Under their management the business has prospered greatly and is now the leader of its kind in the city. One year after they commenced business the store was destroyed by fire, but a handsome new structure was immediately erected and accommodations made for the rapidly growing trade. Mr. Wilson has also built a handsome home in Stevensville. He is a past master of the Masonic lodge, and is past patron of Eastern Star lodge of Stevensville. In his political belief he is a Progressive, but has not cared to hold public office.

Mr. Wilson was married to Miss Eva M. Dobbins, of Stevensville, and they have had two children, a son and daughter. Mrs. Wilson is a daughter of George W. Dobbins, one of Montana's "old-timers" who is now living a retired life in Stevensville, after a life replete with adventure and experience. He was born July 7, 1830, in Bourbon county, Kentucky, a son of J. D. and Nancy (Smalley) Dobbins, who shortly after his birth removed to Quincy, Illinois, where the mother died in 1836. The father then took the family to Marion county, Missouri, where he was engaged in general merchandising, farming and stock raising until his death, in 1842. George W. Dobbins received a public school education, and until twenty years of age was engaged in farming and stock-raising in Missouri. In 1850 he left DeKalb, that state, in an ox-team, in company with his brother, W. J. Dobbins, the latter's wife, and another emigrant, prepared to cross the plains to California. At the present site of Atchison, Kansas, they joined other parties who were joining in the rush to the Golden state, the entire band finally totalling about twenty-one wagons and 100 people. The women and children rode in the wagons during the greater part of the journey, which took from May 1st to August 1st, but the men walked, and had frequent skirmishes with the Sioux Indians, of whom at that time there were some 40,000 between Atchison, Kansas, and the point of destination, Placerville, California, and in one battle an Indian was killed. Rockers and shovels had been purchased on the journey, and on arriving at Placerville Mr. Dobbins at once engaged in placer mining, but the first two days of work showing only seventy-five cents worth of gold, he moved on to Drytown, on Dry creek. Here he was almost immediately successful and continued to carry on placer mining during the fall and winter, accumulating much gold and taking out on one occasion $1,000 in a single day. Money was spent in a prodigal fashion in the mining camps of that day, however, the prospectors feeling that what was spent today could be made up tomorrow, while the cost of foodstuffs reached as high as one dollar a pound. As a consequence, when Mr. Dobbins left Drytown, he had a capital of but $1,200, and with this went to visit the new mining district in the vicinity of Sacramento City, settling about twenty miles therefrom. He remained about two years in that locality, making plenty of money, but subsequently went to Sierra county, California, where he remained only one month. Returning to the vicinity of Sacramento, he settled in Brown's Ravine, and there remained six years. In 1858 he started for Frazierville, but after six months there pushed on to Butte county, which, in turn, he left in 1859 at the time of the Pike's Peak, Colorado, excitement. A trip of three months followed, and he continued in that locality for some time, meeting with only ordinary success.

Long before the Alder Gulch district was opened Mr. Dobbins came to Fort Limki, having been drawn to Montana in 1862 at the time of the Florence excitement. During his stay at that place he assisted in the capture of a party of ten Indians, who were held as hostage while another of their party secured two horses to give to the white men in place of a horse which the Indians had stolen and killed. On the recommendation of a pioneer named Joseph Blodgett, Mr. and Mrs. Dobbins started for the Bitter Root country, some 200 miles away, and while on their journey found miners at work in the Big Hole diggings, badly in need of food. Returning to Fort Owen, Mr. Dobbins purchased eighteen pack-loads of vegetables from Mr. Blodgett, which he took to the miners and sold for a span of American horses and harness and $200 in gold dust, all valued at about $500, and these were the first vegetables ever sold or taken out of the Bitter Root valley. During that same year Mr. Dobbins participated in the stampede to Grasshopper Falls, and later to Bannack City, but in 1863 took charge of the blacksmith shop at Fort Owen, where he was able to make and save some money. He raised 600 bushels of potatoes during the next year, which he sold at three dollars per bushel, while wheat was bringing fifteen dollars a bushel and other vegetables and grains proportionate prices. Eventually he drifted into stock-raising, in which he was uniformly successful, continuing therein until 1902, at which time he platted his land and disposed of eighty acres to George May, forty acres of his property having been given to the Stevensville Townsite Company after long litigation.

Mr. and Mrs. Dobbins are now living in quiet retirement, enjoying the fruits of their long years of hard labor. They experienced all the hardships and privations of the pioneers in any new district, and have lived hard, rugged lives, but despite this are enjoying good health for those who have reached their years, Mr. Dobbins being eighty-two and his wife sixty-nine. They were married October 15, 1860, she having been Miss Louisa Salee, a native of Missouri, and they have had nine children, of whom three are deceased, while the survivors are: Jefferson, residing in Stevensville; Jackson, of Phoenix, Arizona; Sterling, of Stevensville; Eva May, the wife of Mr. Wilson; James D., living at Victor, Colorado; and Myrtle, who married Joseph Dagenais, Mr. Wilson's partner in the drug business. Mr. Dobbins is a Socialist in his political belief, and at one time was a candidate on his party's ticket for the office of mayor, but on account of adverse political conditions met with defeat at the polls.

HARRY B. BYRNE. As local representative in Montana of the extensive brokerage firm of Paine, Webber & Company, of Boston, Massachusetts, Mr. Byrne has built up a large and substantial business for this concern and has made its branch in the city of Butte one of the most successful in the west. He is known as a progressive and reliable business man of marked initiative and executive ability, and has proved a valuable accession to the business circle of the Montana metropolis, where he has gained secure vantage ground in popular confidence and esteem. He has won advancement and success through his own ability and efforts and his status as a citizen and man of affairs amply justifies his representation in this history of the state of his adoption.

Mr. Byrne is a scion of one of the old and honored families of Maryland and is of staunch Scotch-Irish lineage on both the paternal and maternal sides. Four generations of the Byrne family have played well their part on the stage of activities in the fine old state of Maryland, where the founder of the family established his residence in 1760, upon his immigration from the north of Ireland, and records extant show that he served as a valiant soldier of the Continental line in the War of the Revolution. The maternal grandfather of Mr. Byrne likewise came from the northern part of the fair old Emerald Isle and established his home in Maryland.

Harry B. Byrne was born in the city of Baltimore, Maryland, on the 31st of July, 1872, and is a son of Samuel E. and Laura V. (Stuart) Byrne, both likewise natives of Maryland, where they continued to maintain their home until 1875, when they removed to Michigan and established their home in the city of Marquette, the metropolis of the upper peninsula of the Wolverine state. Samuel E. Byrne was born in the year 1842 and is still a resident of Marquette, Michigan, where he has been engaged in the real estate business for many years and where he is held in high esteem by all who know him. His cherished and devoted wife, who was born in August, 1850, was summoned to the life eternal in November, 1886, and of their eight children four sons and two daughters are living. The family have been communicants of the Catholic church for many generations and have been zealous in their service to this great mother of Christendom. Samuel E. Byrne was a valiant soldier of the Confederacy in the Civil war, in which he served during the entire period of the long and sanguinary conflict between the North and South, as a member of the First Maryland Battery, with which he participated in many of the important engagements marking the progress of the war, including the second battle of Bull Run, the battle of Gettysburg and the battle of the Wilderness. Harry B. Byrne was three years of age at the time of the family removal to Michigan and was reared to adult age in the city of Marquette, to whose public and parochial schools he is indebted for his early educational discipline. He was graduated in the high school as a member of the class of 1888, and, with the intention of learning the railroad business as thoroughly as possible, he entered the employ of the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic Railroad Company, with which he remained for fifteen years, within which he served in various departments, in clerical and executive capacities. He then retired and entered the employ of the Standard Oil Company, in Marquette, and after remaining with this great corporation three years he again identified himself with the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic Railroad, as an engineer and surveyor in connection with construction work. He was thus engaged for several years and in the meanwhile he determined to seek a sphere of enterprise which would offer better opportunities for advancement and individual success. Accordingly, in 1900, he associated himself with the firm of Paine, Webber & Company, the well known Boston bankers and brokers, as its representative in the city of Houghton, Michigan, where he remained until 1905. In August of that year he was transferred by the firm to Butte, Montana, and assigned to the duty of establishing a branch office in this city. He accomplished this preliminary work and has since been most successful in developing the extensive brokerage business of the firm in this state, the concern being known as the largest brokerage firm in Boston and maintaining branches in the princial mining centers of the country. Mr. Byrne is also interested in mining operations in an individual way and he has gained a success in his various endeavors that causes him to feel well satisfied with the fact that he has thus become so closely identified with business interests in the Treasure State of the Union.

His office headquarters are established at 47 East Broadway and his residence is at 401 West Granite street. He is popular in the business circles of his adopted city, and both he and his wife are similarly placed in connection with the social activities of the community. In politics Mr. Byrne maintains an independent attitude, and both he and Mrs. Byrne are communicants of the Catholic church, as members of the parish of St. Patrick's church. He is affiliated with the Knights of Columbus and holds membership in the Silver Bow Club, the Country Club and the Montana Fishing and Hunting Club.

At Hancock, Michigan, on the 23d of January, 1907, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Byrne to Miss Alice Sarah Ryan, who was there born and reared and who is a daughter of Edward Ryan, a well known citizen of that thriving mining city of the upper peninsula of Michigan. Mr. and Mrs. Byrne find their home the brighter by reason of the presence of their two children, Harriet, who was born in Butte on the 20th of February, 1908, and Thomas Joseph, born December 14, 1911.

ARTHUR A. STAPLETON. Occupying a good position among the keen and progressive business men of Lewistown is Arthur A. Stapleton, who keeps busily employed as a plumber, having a wide and lucrative patronage. A native of Canada, he was born, October 25, 1874, at Saint Marys, Ontario, which was his home until four years of age.

Mr. Stapleton's father, Arthur Stapleton, was born in England, but while yet an infant was brought by his parents to America, and from that time until his death, which occurred in Saint Marys, Ontario, in 1879, was a resident of Canada. He was a farmer by occupation, and was engaged in agricultural pursuits, including lumbering, during his active career. His wife, whose maiden name was Sarah Long, survived him until May, 1912.

The sixth child in a family of seven children, Arthur A. Stapleton was a little lad of less than five years when his father died, and very soon after that event was taken by his widowed mother to Lexington, Michigan, where he was brought up and educated. Partly dependent upon his own resources from boyhood, he began hustling for himself at the age of ten years, doing errands and odd jobs of all kinds, his first real employment having been at the age of fourteen years, when he was engaged to take care of a trotting horse at a salary of twenty dollars a month, that being the sum promised him, but which he never received. On the contrary his employer went away without paying him his wages, leaving Mr. Stapleton at a hotel, with his bills unpaid, and moneyless. Explaining his predicament to his landlord, he sought work, and earned enough money before leaving the hotel to settle his accounts with the proprietor, who had been most kind to him.

When sixteen years of age, Mr. Stapleton learned the plumber's trade in Grand Rapids, Michigan, serving an apprenticeship of three years, and has followed it continuously since, being an expert workman. He subsequently worked as a journeyman in all the large cities of the United States, traveling in that capacity until 1896, when he returned to Michigan, and embarked in the plumbing business for himself, a venture which proved successful. Coming from there to Montana in 1905, Mr. Stapleton had charge of the plumbing and heating department of the Judith Hardware Company, of Lewistown, for a year and a half, but since that time has been in business for himself, being now the leading plumber of the city.

Politically Mr. Stapleton is Independent, voting for the best men and measures regardless of party affiliations. Fraternally he belongs to the Ancient Free and Accepted Order of Masons, and is now serving as an officer in his home lodge. Religiously he is a member of the Methodist church. He is fond of hunting, and enjoys horse races and bucking contests, and also takes pleasure in reading and music. He considers Montana a veritable land of promise, and thinks it the right place for a man of energy and brains to settle.

Mr. Stapleton married, in Flint, Michigan, June 27, 1901, Nettie Tyler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Tyler, and to them three children have been born, namely: Harold Maynard, Bernice, and Tyler.

DR. JOHN G. RANDALL is a well-known physician of Missoula, Montana, a man of broad culture and high social and professional standing. He was born in Marshall, Michigan, January 19, 1873. When he was three years old, his parents moved to Ypsilanti, Michigan, and remained there until 1880. From there they went to Beloit, Wisconsin, where he staid until 1898, at which time he moved to Monroe, Wisconsin. It was at this latter place that he began the study of medicine. He remained at Monroe until 1905 and then he came to Montana and settled in Missoula.

His early education was obtained in the public schools of Beloit, Wisconsin, and in the Beloit Academy where he graduated. He then went to Beloit College. After his graduation from this institution, he studied at Hahneman Medical College, Chicago, Illinois, where he graduated and received his degree of M. D. He had formerly received the degree of M. A. from Beloit College. He served as an interne at Hahneman Hospital, in Chicago.

In addition to this, he also took special work at the Northwestern Medical College of Chicago, and he has taken several post graduate courses in New York since leaving college.

He earned a little money as a boy by working in his father's paper mill. The emoluments of his position were very small but his father insisted on each one of his sons learning the paper business and a small salary was given simply as an inducement for them to learn it.

On the 27th of June, 1911, he married at Burlingame, Kansas, Miss Nellie M. Haller, the daughter of Joseph and Margaret Haller of that city. He and his wife are members of the Presbyterian church.

Dr. Randall takes no active part in politics. He is an independent member of the Knights of Pythias, a member of the Sigma Chi fraternity, and also of the Ustin Medical Fraternity; he was at one time the president of the latter organization and has filled other minor offices in it.

He is very fond of reading, especially on the subjects of economics and sciences in general, and he has a fine library on these lines. He was editor for one year of a medical magazine in college.

He enjoys hunting and takes many trips. He takes pleasure in automobiling and owns his private car. He is interested in other out door sports, such as football and base ball and played both while at college. His fondness of the theatres and grand opera evince a cultivated mind.

In regard to Montana, Dr. Randall says: "I love Montana; it is my home. Whenever I leave it, even for a short time, I am always anxious and glad to return. The climate here is mild and pleasant and the Bitter Root valley one of the most beautiful spots in the world."

Dr. Randall's father, William T. Randall, was born in Canada. He came to these United States and settled in Beloit, Wisconsin, engaging in the paper manufacturing business there. He married Miss Sarah Geddes in Michigan; she still resides in Beloit. There were five children in the elder Randall family, Dr. Randall being the fourth child. Dr. Randall's father passed away in 1889 at the age of sixty-three.

HOMER DETRICK. Probably no resident of Fergus county is more widely and favorably known than Homer Detrick, the gentleman whose life record forms the subject-matter of this brief biography. He is one of the wide-awake, popular, prosperous young men of the section, the acquisition of whom in unusually large numbers has spelled good fortune for the thriving new community. Mr. Detrick is a lawyer and an extensive real estate operator,—one of the largest, in fact, in the Judith Basin. He also holds the office of justice of the peace.

Mr. Detrick is one of the citizens the Hawkeye state has given to Montana, his birth having occurred at Marshalltown, Iowa, April 15, 1882. When two years of age his parents removed to western Nebraska and settled upon a ranch, where they remained for about two years. At the end of that period they went to Omaha and in that city Mr. Detrick resided for eighteen years. He then left the parental roof-tree and entered the employ of the Markel Eating House System, locating at Ogden, Utah, and assuming charge of the store there, which distributed to the various eating-houses along the route of the Union Pacific Railroad. He continued in this capacity for something over a twelvemonth and then returned to Omaha, where he became connected with the Great Western Commission Company in its clerical department. After a year thus engaged he accepted a position as private secretary to W. L. Park, superintendent of the Wyoming division of the Union Pacific Railroad Company and continued as such for nearly two years. He then entered the Omaha office of Armour & Company, and after a time thus engaged, removed to St. Paul, Minnesota, where he became identified with the business of Guthrie & Company. It was after this that he first came to Montana, locating at Great Falls, in the legal department of the Great Northern Railway, as an assistant to I. Parker Veazey, Sr. This step, marking his entrance into Montana—which he does not intend soon to leave—was in 1905. Mr. Detrick stands in the front rank of those who are warmly loyal to Montana and believe it the treasure-house of the world. He firmly believes that no section offers a better opportunity to the ambitious and able young man. It was while living at Great Falls that Mr. Detrick attacked his Blackstone with all the force and fervor which is characteristic of him and in due time was admitted to the bar of the state of Montana.

Mr. Detrick is a firm believer in the policies and principles of the party of Jefferson, Cleveland and Bryan, and takes an active part in matters political. As mentioned in a preceding paragraph, he holds the office of justice of the peace, which he has held since he first came to Moore, having been originally appointed to fill a vacancy and afterwards elected. He has given a taste of his executive capacity as manager of the local telephone company, building the business to a thriving one, from practically nothing.

Mr. Detrick was married at Great Falls, Montana, October 15, 1906, Nina A. Herman, daughter of Wesley S. and Flora Herman, of Helena, becoming his wife. Mrs. Detrick, who is one of the charming young women of Moore, is a native of Missouri. Her father is traveling freight and passenger agent for the Great Northern Railway.

The subject's father, James P. Detrick, was born in Illinois and lived the greater part of his life in Iowa, but he now resides with his wife in Moore, Montana, where he is a prominent contractor. The maiden name of the elder Mrs. Detrick was Mary Glasgow, and their union was solemnized in the Hawkeye state. They had but two children, and Homer is the elder and the only survivor.

Homer Detrick received his early introduction to Minerva in the public schools of Omaha, and it was also in that city he received his high school education and commercial training. In religious faith he and his wife have inclination toward the Presbyterian. He is a member of the Modern Woodmen and clerk of the local lodge. He is not likely soon to forget how he earned his first money, for it was strenuous and consisted in mowing numerous and sundry Omaha lawns after school hours. He is fond of outdoor life, but on the attractive list of joys in the open, baseball and motoring come first. He has a fine car and is very familiar with the scenery of this part of Montana. Also dear to the heart of this young man are good music, a good play, or best of all, an hour with a fine book.

ELLSWORTH F. ROSS, M. D. The physician occupies one of the most responsible as well as confidential relations in our social existence. To him are entrusted our innermost secrets, as well as the lives and welfare of our dearest friends. To worthily and acceptably fill such a position is one of the most difficult tasks ever imposed on man, and such a task we find is assumed by the subject of this review, Dr. Ellsworth F. Ross, or Harlowton, who although a resident of this section for only a comparatively short time has already built up a large professional business and gained the full confidence and esteem of his fellow-citizens. Dr. Ross was born May 28, 1865, at Huntington, Vermont, and is a son of Sanford and Electa (Lewis) Ross.

Sanford Ross was born in Vermont in 1826, and there followed farming on the old family homestead until retiring from activities, when he moved to Great Falls, Montana, where he made his home until his death, November 4, 1912. He was always active in political matters, but rather as an adviser and director than as an office holder, as he never cared for public preferment for himself. He was married in Vermont to Electa Lewis, a native of that state, and she passed away in 1907, at the age of seventy-six years, being buried in Huntington. A much-beloved Christian gentle-woman, she was throughout her life a faithful member of the Baptist church, in which she reared her children, teaching them to fear God and honor their country. Of the four children born to Sanford and Electa Ross, three now live in Montana: Henry L., who is married and lives at Harlowton; and Elmer F., who is married and lives at Great Falls; and Dr. Ellsworth F., who was one of twins.

Ellsworth F. Ross secured a common school education in Huntington, Vermont, and even as a boy displayed youthful industry and enterprise, earning money at whatever occupation presented itself, often when his companions were spending their leisure hours in play. It had been one of the ambitions of his youth to follow a professional career, and as soon as he could obtain a license began teaching school to earn the money to defray his expenses in the higher institutions. He subsequently went to Waterbury Center and took a course in Green Mountain Seminary, where he remained four years, and then, after taking a special course at Dartmouth College, he found his funds had become exhausted and he was compelled to return home and again take up school teaching. A few years later he was able to continue his collegiate course, entering the University of Vermont, at Burlington, where he was graduated in 1895, with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Returning to his home at that time he remained until his thirtieth year, and then removed to Wales, Massachusetts, where he remained in practice for ten years, but in 1905 came to Montana. During the first year he had no permanent residence and accepted a position as surgeon for the Great Northern Railroad, where he was later appointed chief surgeon, a capacity in which he served something over two years. In May, 1909, Dr. Ross came to Harlowton, where he has since been engaged in a general practice, building up a large and lucrative practice, and demonstrating in various ways on numerous occasions his skill in his profession. Immediately on locating here he took his place among the progressive men of this vicinity, and during his residence in Harlowton has been connected with various movements for the advancement of the community. A close and careful student, he keeps fully abreast of the various discoveries and inventions of his profession, and takes a keen interest in the work of the various medical societies. He is official physician of the Woodmen of the World, a member of the Vermont Society, Sons of the American Revolution, and also connected with the Masonic fraternity and the local lodge of Elks. In his religious views he leans towards the faith of the Unitarian church, while his politics are those of the Republican party, although he has never cared for public office and has not entered the political arena.

Dr. Ross is essentially a man's man, and as such is very fond of all out-door sports, hunting, fishing and horseback riding included. Of refined taste and culture, he enjoys a good play or lecture and much reading and study has given him a vast amount of information on numerous general subjects.

SAMUEL K. CAMPBELL, M. D. Of the galaxy of medical men for which Montana has gained no little fame, is to be found in the front rank, Dr. Samuel K. Campbell, who enjoys a representative and lucrative practice in his chosen profession and has for more than five years held, in the opinion of those competent to judge, an enviable place among the citizens of Harlowton, where he serves as city clerk and president of the school board. Dr. Campbell was born December 1, 1880, in Johnson county, Missouri, and is a son of Robert Lee and Lydia (Huff) Campbell, natives of Missouri, where they have spent their entire lives, the father now being engaged in the banking business at Warrensburg, although in former years he carried on agricultural pursuits. They are members of the Christian church and have had six children, of whom Samuel K. is the first born.

As a lad Samuel K. Campbell divided his time between work on his father's farm in Henry county, Missouri, and attendance at the district schools, and he subsequently became a student in the high school at Warrensburg and the Missouri State Normal School at that place, graduating from both places. He was engaged for some time in clerical work in a mercantile establishment, but preferred a professional career to one of a business nature, and after some preparation entered St. Louis University, being graduated from the medical department with the class of 1905. After spending a few months at home, Dr. Campbell came to Montana, settling in Bozeman, where he was engaged in practice for about fifteen months. On April 19, 1907, he located in Harlowton, which city has been his field of practice to the present time, and here he has gained and maintained a reputation as a physician and surgeon of unquestioned ability. He is a member of the Kappa Sigma and Phi Beta Pi fraternities, the Gallatin County Medical Association, the Montana State Medical Society and the American Medical Association, and belongs also to the Elks and Masons, being at present secretary of the latter lodge. He also acts in the capacity of physician for the Milwaukee Railroad. In politics a staunch Democrat, he takes a keen interest in the success of his party, and is known as one of the organization's active workers. At this time he is serving as city clerk and president of the school board, and numerous improvements have been made in the school system here during his administration, while the business end of the municipality has been handled in an admirable manner. In his religious views Dr. Campbell is connected with the Christian church, while his wife is a Presbyterian and a member of the Ladies' Aid Society. He is fond of hunting, fishing and automobiling, owning his own car, and as a former baseball and football player thoroughly enjoys both sports. Dr. Campbell is one of those who believe that Montana's resources have not been developed to their full capacity, and that the future holds much in store for the Treasure state. He has aided in forwarding movements calculated to advance the community in various ways, and as one of the live, alert, progressive men of Harlowton, possesses in the highest degree the confidence and respect of his fellow-citizens, among whom he has numerous friends and warm admirers.

On October 12, 1910, Dr. Campbell was united in marriage with Miss Laura Foote, of Red Wing, Minnesota, and they have one son: Robert E.

ARMAND G. BERTHOT. One of Bozeman's best known and highly successful lumbermen, Armand G. Berthot, of No. 437 West Main street, president and manager of the Gallatin Lumber Company, has been conspicuously identified with the large and continuous building growth which the city has undergone during the past few years, and has also interested himself in grain farming, in social activities and fraternal work, and has found time to serve his adopted city in various positions of trust and importance. A native of Clearfield, Clearfield county, Pennsylvania, he was born February 28, 1878, son of Boniface and Mary Belle (Shirey) Berthot, also natives of that county. His father was born November 18, 1850, and was educated in his native locality, where he carried on farming until 1878, which year saw his removal to Franklin county, Kansas. He has since been engaged in general farming and stock raising, making a specialty of full-blooded Hereford cattle, and has also been prominent in Democratic politics, serving as township clerk and school director for many years. He and his wife are members of the Roman Catholic church. She was born April 12, 1851, and they have had four children: Armand G.; Elizabeth Matilda; Stephanie Amelia; and Francis William, who married Olive Simons.

Armand G. Berthot secured his education in the schools of Franklin county, Kansas, and after graduation from the high school at Wellsville learned the drug business and became a registered pharmacist. After spending four years in that line, however, he gave it up to enter the lumber trade with the Star Grain and Lumber Company of Wellsville, a concern with which he was associated for six years. In March, 1905, Mr. Berthot sold his interest in the business and removed to Bozeman, and here organized the Gallatin Lumber Company, of which he has since served as president and manager, and which through his ability and enterprise has developed into a business of large proportions. With L. W. Truitt he is also the owner of a section of land on the Camp Creek branch of the Northern Pacific Railroad, which they have at present devoted to grain farming. Mr. Berthot is in every respect a self-made man. Coming to this city with but little capital, he has by industry, ability and perseverance, accumulated a handsome competency. He is known as a citizen of boundless energy and business foresight, one of the stable prosperous men who go to make up a stable, prosperous community. In political matters he is a staunch Democrat, and after serving one term as alderman from the Third ward was elected to the office of mayor of Bozeman in 1909 and gave the city an admirable administration. His fraternal connections are with Bozeman Lodge No. 18, A. F. & A. M.; Zona Chapter No. 12, R. A. M., St. John's Commandery No. 12, K. T., and Western Star Lodge No. 4, I. O. O. F.

John P. Carroll,
Bishop of Helena

On March 12, 1902, Mr. Berthot was married to Miss Mildred Irene Wertz, who was born in Franklin county, Kansas, daughter of Cyrus F. and Ella Wertz, and the oldest of their five children. Mr. and Mrs. Berthot have two children: Bernice Beryl and Glenn Armand.

RIGHT REVEREND JOHN PATRICK CARROLL, D. D., second bishop of Helena, was born at Dubuque, Iowa, February 22, 1864, of Martin Carroll and Catherine O'Farrell. His primary education was received at St. Raphael's parochial school of his native town. At the age of thirteen he entered St. Joseph's College, Dubuque, where he remained until 1883, when he was graduated from the classical department with the highest honors of his class. The one ambition of this gifted young man was to consecrate himself to the service of God in the priesthood. With a view to preparing himself for his lifework, he entered the Grand Seminary of Montreal, Canada; and there, during six years, he pursued the courses of philosophy and theology, graduating June, 1889, with the degree of Doctor of Divinity. On July 7th of the same year he was ordained to the priesthood, and immediately appointed to the chair of mental philosophy in his alma mater, St. Joseph's College, Dubuque. He entered upon his new duties September 12, 1889, and for five years devoted himself with untiring energy to the cause of Christian education, and the upbuilding of the college. So successful were his efforts that the archbishop of Dubuque, the Most Reverend John Hennessy, resolved to place the college under his control, and on September 12, 1894, he was proclaimed president of St. Joseph's, —a position he continued to hold during the next decade of years. His presidency was eminently successful. The number of students increased with surprising rapidity from year to year. An earnest student himself, Dr. Carroll strove to gather around him a faculty of scholarly professors. In this, too, he was successful, and to such an extent that the fame of St. Joseph's College spread throughout the middle western states. The present status of the college gives ample proof of Dr. Carroll's foresight in planning, and his remarkable force of character in overcoming every obstacle to the execution of his designs.

In 1903, the See of Helena was left vacant by the death of Right Reverend John B. Brondel. Rome cast about for a "strong man" to take charge of this important See. It chose, September 12, 1904, the Very Reverend Dr. Carroll; and the wisdom of its choice has been abundantly approved by all the subsequent history of the diocese of Helena. The newly appointed bishop was consecrated in St. Raphael's Cathedral, Dubuque, December 21, 1904, and installed as second Bishop of Helena at the Sacred Heart Cathedral, January 31, 1905.

Bishop Carroll came to Helena well equipped for his diocesan work. As president of St. Joseph's College, he had come into personal contact with all the priests of the diocese of Dubuque. This acquaintance gave him an insight into the needs of a diocese as no other position could have given him. As a member of the board of diocesan consultors during a period extending over eight years he had become familiar with matters and methods of diocesan administration. Last, but not least, his position as president of the highest educational institution of the Dubuque archdiocese had fitted him admirably to preside over the destinies of an ambitious young diocese now looking for someone to lead it onward and upward in its educational work. It is needless to add that Bishop Carroll's appointment was highly appreciated throughout the diocese of Helena, and that he was enthusiastically received by the priests, the religious communities, and the people of western Montana.

In an age afflicted with an insatiable thirst for rights he came to his people with the inspired words, "In Sanctitate et Justitia" as his motto, to teach them that man has not only rights to demand, but also duties to fulfill,—duties toward God, "In Sanctitate," and duties toward his neighbor "In Justitia." For this reason he was doubly welcome. His motto became the text of his inaugural address at the high mass on the Sunday following his installation, and has been the inspiration of all his work since his advent to Helena.

Like the industrious Montana husbandman he believes in the intensive cultivation of the Lord's vineyard. Beginning with his clergy,—the laborers in the vineyard, he said to them, and kept saying, "Let him that is holy become holier still," and "If you wish to sanctify others, first sanctify yourselves." Realizing the necessity of sanctity of life among the clergy, he decreed that retreats for them should be given every year, instead of every two years as had been the case; and he required that all priests laboring in the diocese should attend them. To make these retreats at once efficient and attractive he invited to them the most prominent speakers among the bishops and priests of our country. Each of these retreats he has attended in person, and has given conferences at all of them. In 1909 he conducted all the exercises of the retreat himself, urging his clergy with accents of deepest conviction to give themselves without reserve to the work of the Master.

One of the first things to attract Bishop Carroll's attention upon taking up his work in Montana was the fact that the number of clergy was wholly inadequate to meet the spiritual needs of the rapidly growing Catholic population. He found but twenty-four priests in his vast diocese. He was not long in remedying this sad condition, and now his clergy number sixty.

His pastoral solicitude was next given to the religious communities of Sisters; these he has guided in their work at all times, advising them in their doubts, encouraging them in their difficulties, and urging them on, whenever prudence would permit it, to undertake new works, or to put forth more strenuous efforts. Since his advent to Montana three more sisterhoods have entered the diocese, the Sisters of Charity, B. V. M., the Sisters of St. Dominic, and the Sisters of Mercy.

With his people his voice has been but the echo of the voice of Pius X., now gloriously reigning and endeavoring "to restore all things in Christ." In conformity with the decrees of the holy father he has insisted that the priests should give to the people regularly plain and solid instruction on Christian doctrine, and should urge upon them a return to the ancient practice of frequent, and even daily communion. Firmly believing that, in the religious world, the twentieth century is destined to be the "century of the layman," he has joyfully lent his aid toward the promotion of religious and fraternal organizations of Catholic laymen. For the young men of his episcopal city he has provided a club fully equipped with all that could be desired for social and athletic entertainment. He has been for years an enthusiastic member of the Knights of Columbus. In the national convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians held in Portland, Oregon, July, 1910, he was unanimously requested to accept the office of national chaplain, and the Chicago national convention of the order held in July, 1912, insisted that he continue to be their spiritual guide. In all his addresses to the Catholic laymen he has urged upon them the grandeur of their mission, and the absolute necessity, if they would accomplish this mission, of living lives that square with the spirit and practices of their Catholic faith. To aid them in the work of their personal sanctification he inaugurated in his diocese the practice of laymen's retreats, he himself preaching the first of these retreats, held at Mount St. Charles College, June, 1912.

With Bishop Carroll education ranks next to religion,—the school must follow in the wake of the church. To increase the efficiency of the Catholic educational system of his diocese, he directed that a strong campaign be undertaken by parish priests and teachers to secure the attendance of all Catholic children at parochial schools; he ordered improvements and additions for the schools already built, and in several parishes had new schools erected. He has even succeeded in erecting high schools in the larger cities of his diocese. This is but what could be expected of him, who, whilst president of St. Joseph's College, had, in the yearly college conferences held in the east, led the fight for the extension of our Catholic high school system. To advance and unify his diocesan school system, and render it more efficient, he directed that the practice of holding summer schools be made general among the sisterhoods of the diocese, and he supplemented the work of the summer school by the annual teachers' institute which the parish priests and teachers must attend.

Bishop Carroll's zeal for the cause of Catholic education will best be understood when one considers that before undertaking any other work of importance, he set about building the St. Helena parochial school, which is now generally conceded to be the most perfect school building in the United States, not only from an architectural point of view, but also from a pedagogical and hygienic point of view as well. Besides the ordinary school accommodations it has also thoroughly modern club rooms for the young men of the city. That the educational policy of the Right Reverend Bishop has already borne abundant fruit is evident from the enviable record that the Catholic school children have made in the state examinations. To complete his diocesan educational system Bishop Carroll has built Mount St. Charles College, a boarding and day college for young men. The building occupies a conspicuous height known for over a quarter of a century in Helena as Capitol Hill. The course of studies he has outlined for the college has received the warmest encomiums from the press. Its staff of professors would do credit to older institutions of learning.

But Bishop Carroll has not confined his activities to religion and education. He has identified himself with the great civic movements of the day. The diocese of Helena knows his devotion to the cause of temperance. In his Confirmation tours he never fails to point out the dangers of alcoholism, and to invite boys and girls,—and also the older members of the congregations,—to pledge themselves to total abstinence from intoxicating drinks until the age of twenty-five, or for life. This practice is without doubt the most efficient factor presently working in the state for the cause of temperance. When the midnight closing movement was being agitated in Helena, Bishop Carroll was instrumental in having a citizens' meeting held at the Auditorium. It was his soul-stirring address on this occasion that moulded public opinion, and compelled the unwilling aldermen to vote the midnight closing ordinance which is still in force; and it is a matter of history how the midnight closing idea spread from Helena to other parts of the state.

A true friend of the laboring man, Bishop Carroll has fearlessly warned him in public addresses against the fallacies and dangers of Socialism, a movement that is injurious, not only to workingmen themselves, but to church and to state at large. The Socialistic press has fiercely attacked him for these discourses; but the editors of saner journalism throughout the country have praised them for their depth and wisdom. It may be noted here that he was probably the first Catholic bishop in the United States to establish special Labor Day services in the churches of his diocese.

A third movement that has actively enlisted his co-operation is the colonization of Montana. His keen eye saw from the beginning the agricultural possibilities of this state, and his patriotic sentiments induced him to take a hand in the promising work. In proof of this it may be said that he had not spent six months in his diocese when he asked Pope Pius X to bless his colonization work in Montana. Soon his ideas took definite shape. At this writing three of his priests are actively engaged in colonizing work, with a view to bringing colonists to the Belgian Colony on the Valier Irrigation Project, to St. Charles in the Smith River Valley, and to the vicinity of Deer Lodge.

The fame of the right reverend bishop soon passed over the borders of Montana, as is evident from the fact that he has been much in demand as a speaker at civic, as well as at ecclesiastical celebrations both east and west. To give but a few instances: He was asked to deliver the chief address at the Washington celebration in Portland, at the dedication of the Cathedrals of Seattle and of Cheyenne, and at that of the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes, Spokane, at the national conventions of the Ancient Order of Hibernians in Portland and Chicago, at the Catholic Day of the Alaska-Yukon-Pacific Exposition in Seattle; and the entire Lenten course of 1911 at St. Patrick's Church, Montreal, was confided to him. His public addresses ring true with love for America, her laws, her constitution, and her institutions. He is a fervent advocate of civil liberty and religious tolerance, just as he is the uncompromising foe of oppression and persecution. In mass meetings held in Helena and Butte he fearlessly attacked the infamous policy of spoliation and confiscation practiced by the French government. The weight of his influence in public discussion induced Hon. Edwin L. Norris, governor of Montana, to appoint him to represent the state at the peace conference held in Washington for the purpose of advancing the cause of international arbitration. The high regard in which Bishop Carroll is held by his colleagues in the hierarchy is plainly shown by the fact that he has been asked by his Eminence, Cardinal Gibbons, by various archbishops and bishops through the Union to preach retreats to their clergy. Further manifestations of this esteem are seen in the fact that he has been solicited for the offices of co-adjutor of the archbishop of San Francisco, rector of the Catholic University at Washington, D. C., and archbishop of Dubuque, Iowa. Nothing but his own conception and presentation of the importance of the work he had undertaken in Montana has prevented his appointment to one or other of these high positions.

This sketch would be incomplete if mention were not made of the St. Helena Cathedral, now in course of erection at Helena. This sacred edifice is modeled after the Votive Church in Vienna, Austria, probably, with the exception of the Cathedral of Cologne, the most perfect structure of Gothic architecture extant. The width of the new cathedral is seventy-two feet in the body, and one hundred and twenty feet in the transepts; its ceiling is sixty-five feet high, and its roof rises one hundred feet; while above the entire mass of building rise the twin spires to the height of two hundred and thirty feet. It is indeed a magnificent temple in the purest of fourteenth century Gothic. It is graceful in all its lines, and, like its type, the Votive Church of Vienna, is considered perfect in its proportions. But its proudest boast is that it is the church of all the people of Helena, because the citizens of Helena, irrespective of creed or nationality, have contributed to its erection. On the occasion of the laying of the cornerstone of the cathedral, Bishop Carroll told the people of Helena assembled at the Auditorium that he regarded them as his sheep, and asked them to regard his cathedral as their church. When this noble champion of the cause of holiness and justice will have passed to his reward, St. Helena's cathedral will ever stand as an enduring monument to his esthetic taste, his boundless energy, and his consuming zeal for the beauty of God's house.

HAVRE BREWING & MALTING COMPANY. The Havre Brewing & Malting Company is one of the recent and yet most flourishing enterprises of this city, and through the vigorous management and ability of the young men who organized and are conducting the plant its products have an extended popularity and sale throughout the northern half of the state.

The company was organized on November 9, 1910, and the plant was completed and equipped ready for operation by the spring of 1911. The capital stock of the company is $50,000, and the annual capacity of the plant is ten thousand barrels. The officers of the incorporated company are as follows: George Kuehhorn, president; Aloys Wutz, secretary and treasurer; Henry Schmidt, vice-president; and Fred Denninger, brewmaster and stockholder.

Mr. George Kuehhorn is a native of Germany, where he was born March 22, 1880, and was educated in the German schools until he was sixteen. He served a three years' apprenticeship at the brewer's trade in Germany, and has been identified with the brewing business since boyhood. In 1898 he came to America, spending the first six years in New York City, and then a year and a half in Milwaukee. In the fall of 1905 he located at Butte, Montana, and was employed there and in other localities as a brewer. In November, 1910, he became a stockholder and incorporator of the Havre company, and has since held the chief executive position. Mr. Kuehhorn since the beginning of his apprenticeship has depended for advancement on his own efforts, and his ability and industry have secured him a substantial position in the business world.

ERNEST F. KUSTER has been associated with the west in various lines of industry for the past quarter century, and has been a resident of Kalispell since September, 1905. He was born in New York City, on June 21, 1869, and is the son of Ernest Frank and Mina (Kuster) Kuster, both natives of Germany, but though of the same name, no blood relation. The father, who was born on the Weiser river, in the Fatherland, came to New York but returned to Germany and passed his life there as a farmer, dying there in 1871. After that event his widow came to America with her brother and settled in New York City. She is now living, at the age of seventy years, and is strong and active for one of her years. Three children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Kuster, but E. F. of this review is the only one surviving.

Up to his eleventh year, E. F. Kuster attended the schools of New York City, and when he was twelve years old went alone to Illinois, where he worked for a farmer for his board and keep for two years, going to school in the winter seasons. He then went to Indiana, remaining in that state for a year, where he was employed in a similar capacity and with like remuneration. His next move took him to Nebraska, in which state he continued for two and a half years, and there he was employed working at the sheet iron works in Lincoln. After leaving Nebraska the venturesome young lad went to Colorado and worked in the mines at Aspen and Leadville for two years, going from Colorado to Butte, Montana, there following mining for fifteen years. He was boss at the Diamond and other important mines of Butte. After his marriage, which occurred after he had lived for fifteen years in Butte, he went to Napa, Idaho, when the boom was on in that part of the country. He invested heavily in boom property, and was very successful with his investments. He continued there for more than two years, going from there to the Lewis and Clark exposition at Portland and thence to Oregon, locating in Salem. On looking over the ground there, Mr. Kuster decided to return to Montana, whereupon he came direct to Kalispell. At that time the city presented a very uncertain outlook, but Mr. Kuster decided that the situation would improve shortly, and he accordingly invested in a fine corner building and other Kalispell property. After a few years time, conditions began to improve rapidly, and Mr. Kuster remodeled his corner building and started a small grocery store in it. This was his first business venture, but it has proved a most unquestionable success, and from the very modest beginning of a few years ago, he has developed one of the best establishments of its kind in the city, enjoying a pleasing patronage, and turning a fair profit each year to its owner and proprietor.

Mr. Kuster is a member of the Kalispell Club and is a communicant of the Roman Catholic church. His political views are those of an Independent, and he is interested in politics only as they may be manipulated for the betterment of civic conditions.

On November 25, 1896, Mr. Kuster married Miss Mary Jordan, the daughter of Patrick Jordan and his wife, Mrs. Mary (Burns) Jordan. They were natives of Iowa, where Mrs. Kuster was born, in Independence. Two children were born to them, both deceased. Freda, born October 29, 1898, died on November 12, 1898. Rose, born April 25, 1903, died at birth.

Mr. and Mrs. Kuster are well and favorably known in Kalispell, where they are general social favorites, and have a wide circle of acquaintances throughout the state and in Idaho, won to them through long association with the west.

WILLIAM BEAUCHAMP. In the brief time that William Beauchamp has been established in the plumbing business in Kalispell, he has been able to place to his credit a goodly list of work well done, and of a character eminently calculated to firmly place him in the ranks of dependable artisans of Kalispell. He was born in Erie, Pennsylvania, on December 26, 1877, and is a son of J. M. and Mary (Johnson) Beauchamp, both native Canadians. The father immigrated to the states as a young man, locating first in Pennsylvania and later coming to Wisconsin. He followed the occupation of a marine engineer all his life, and is still occupied in that work, and makes his home in Michigan at Sault Ste. Marie. He is now in his sixty-first year and his wife is fifty-eight years of age. Both are enjoying good health and look forward to many years of life together. They became the parents of twelve children, of which goodly number William was the third born.

William Beauchamp attended the schools of Michigan as a boy, receiving only a common school education, and after leaving his books he became an apprentice in the plumbing business in northern Michigan. He learned his trade thoroughly, and thereafter was employed in various places until 1905 he came to Montana, locating first in Butte. He remained there but a short time, then going to Anaconda, where he worked at his trade for two and a half years, and in 1907 he came to Kalispell, where he entered the employ of the Kalispell Mercantile Company, remaining with that firm for two and a half years as foreman. In 1911 he saw an opportunity to get into business on his own responsibility, and he accordingly established the business which he is now the head of, and which he has managed with the most expert skill and wisdom since its inception. Some of the best work in Kalispell has been done by Mr. Beauchamp since the establishment of his firm in the city, among which might be mentioned the plumbing and heating plants for the high school building, the West Side school building, the Rudolph Ellis building and the General Hospital building. When Mr. Beauchamp decided to go into business he took a partner, John F. Clague, of whom more extended mention is made in other portions of this work, and the two have formed a combination that has from the first wrought successful business and an enviable standing in the business life of the city.

Mr. Beauchamp is a Mason of the Knight Templar degree and is a member of the Kalispell Club. He is a Republican, but not a politician in any sense of the word. He is a true sportsman and loves the open, finding genuine enjoyment in the hunting and fishing expeditions on which he repairs at intervals. He is not a churchman, but his wife is a member of the Baptist church, in which she is actively identified with all the good works emanating from that source.

Mr. Beauchamp was united in marriage with Miss Charlotte Hodgkinson, in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, on June 3, 1903.

PAUL D. PRATT. The education and training of the mining engineer in modern times have called for the establishment of technical schools and courses in engineering in the large colleges and universities. These schools provide the student with the theories of mathematics, mechanics and engineering, and by means of extensive laboratory and outside work provide him with practice in the design, construction and use of modern engineering appliances. The field is a prolific one for the young man of energy, enterprise and ability, and to the votaries of this profession must be given the credit for the growth and development of mining in Montana, where may be found young men who through training and natural inclination are eminently fitted to carry on this important work. Paul D. Pratt, of Libby, brought to his work a mind carefully trained to the intricacies of mining engineering, and a natural ability and inclination that have given him precedence in his chosen vocation, and during the past five years have demonstrated his right to be classed among the leading assayers and engineers of the Treasure state. Mr. Pratt is a native of Moberly, Missouri, and was born January 7, 1878, a son of Samuel B. and Annie (Mandeville) Pratt. Samuel B. Pratt was born at Watertown, New York, and at the age of twenty years went to Missouri, settling in the central part of the state, where he resided until 1887. In that year he removed to Kalispell, Montana, engaged in office work, becoming one of the best known men in his part of Flathead county, and died in 1907, at the age of sixty-three years. His wife, born at Natchez, Mississippi, went to New Orleans, Louisiana, in girlhood, and was there married to Mr. Pratt. Her death occurred in Missouri, when she was thirty years of age, having been the mother of three children, of whom Paul D. is the only survivor.

Paul D. Pratt received his early education in the public schools of Omaha, Nebraska, and Kansas City, Missouri, and fitted himself for his chosen vocation by a course in the Montana State School of Mines, at Butte. After graduating from that institution in 1905, he entered the employ of the Montana Copper Company, and subsequently accepted a position with the Red Metal Copper Company, of Butte, with which he was connected until coming to Libby, in 1907. He at once opened an office as an assayer and mining engineer, and his proficiency in his calling soon brought him a large clientele and gave him a firmly-established reputation, which he has maintained to the present time. His success is due entirely to his own efforts, as he came to Montana a stranger, and his present wide circle of influential friends has been gathered around him as a result of the recognition and appreciation of his ability, sincerity and true worth. He is recognized as one of the leaders of the Democratic party in this section, and since the organization of Lincoln county has acted in the capacity of chairman of the board of county commissioners, and during this time many important issues have been brought to a successful conclusion, including the bonding of the county for $125,000 to be used in building good roads. Fraternally, he is connected with the Elks, at Kalispell, and is popular with the members of that order.

Mr. Pratt was married in October, 1906, at Butte, Montana, to Miss Edna R. Payne, and they have one child: Samuel B., who was born at Spokane, Washington, in 1908. Mrs. Pratt is a member of the Episcopal church, and is popular in church and social circles of the city.

JOHN F. SCHWIERS. The United States has served as the melting-pot of the best characteristics of all other nations and the outcome is a fine sterling American citizenship consisting of strong and able-bodied men, loyal and public-spirited in civic life, honorable in business and alert and enthusiastically in sympathy with every measure tending to further the material welfare of the entire country. The great Empire of Germany has contributed its fair quota to the upbuilding of this great nation and among its representatives in this country are to be found successful men in every walk of life, from the professions to the prosperous farmer. John F. Schwiers, whose name forms the caption for this review, was born and reared in Germany and came to America in the year 1902, settling in Kalispell, Montana, in 1906. Here he is sole owner of the Schwiers Garage & Machine Repair Shop and he is recognized as a business man whose methods have ever been of the fair and straightforward type.

The Schwiers family is one of old standing in the city of Bremen, Germany, where the lineage can be traced back for six hundred years. A native of Bremen, John Fred Schwiers was born June 11, 1879, and he is a son of Ludwig and Rebecca (Holste) Schwiers, both of whom are likewise natives of Bremen, Germany. Ludwig Schwiers, descended from rugged farming and sea-faring people, at one time owned the largest machine shops in Bremen and there had two hundred men in his employ. In 1909 he came to America to make his home with his son in Kalispell and while he is now sixty-nine years of age he is still very active and is an expert mechanic. Mrs. Schwiers is sixty-seven years of age and she maintains her home in Bremen, Germany. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Schwiers and of that number five are still living, namely,—Ludwig, Jr., a resident of Kalispell; Frederick, a civil engineer in Bremen, Christian, a resident of Georgia; John F., of this notice; and Mrs. Annie Schwiers, of Bremen.

To the public and high schools of Bremen, Germany, John F. Schwiers is indebted for his preliminary educational training and that discipline was later supplemented by study in the Technical Engineering College of Bremen, which excellent institution he attended for a period of eighteen months. On leaving school he went to work for the German American Coal Oil Lines, running between Germany and America, a subsidiary company of the Standard Oil Company. He worked for that concern for one year, at the expiration of which he located in America and was employed in various cities as a machinist. He came to Kalispell, Montana, 1905, and secured a position with the Kalispell Iron Works, remaining with that company for a year and a half as machinist. In 1906 he formed the Montana Steel Works and was associated in that enterprise with a number of prominent business men in Kalispell. He gradually bought out the interests of his partners and is now sole proprietor of the business which is known under the name of the Schwiers Garage & Machine Repair Shop. In the last few years the plant has been enlarged and it now ranks as the most fully equipped concern of its kind in this section of the state. Mr. Schwiars is known as a reliable and capable business man and inasmuch as his success is the result of his own well-directed efforts it is the more gratifying to contemplate. In a fraternal way he is affiliated with the Sons of Hermann and the Liederkranz Society, and the Woodmen of the World. He has a large circle of friends in Kalispell and he and his wife are popular in connection with the best social affairs of this city.

At Kalispell, September 2, 1909, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Schwiars to Miss Clara Fuhrich, who was born and reared at Linz, Austria, and who is a daughter of Florian Fuhrich. Mr. and Mrs. Schwiars have no children. They are both well educated and are fond of reading and literary pursuits.

DR. CHARLES C. WALLIN. Appropriately enough, the year of Dr. Wallin's birth was that of the centennial of American independence, for he is a descendant of the Chadbourne who fought in the Revolution and has himself served his country as a soldier. He was born in Saugatuck, Michigan, on the third day of the historic year above referred to, and until he was five, that now popular summer resort was his home. In 1881 the family moved to the neighboring town of Grand Rapids, and in that beautiful city he lived until he was twenty-six. After graduating from the Grand Rapids high school Charles Wallin attended the state university at Ann Arbor. Here he first graduated from the academic course, receiving his A. B. in 1898. The same year he entered the medical school and in 1902 received his diploma in medicine. His course was interrupted by the advent of the Spanish-American war. Dr. Wallin enlisted in the Thirty-second Michigan Volunteers and went with them to Tampa, Florida, where he was transferred to the hospital corps of the third division of the fourth army corps. While in the service he succumbed to an attack of typhoid fever and received his discharge on account of illness. He had felt it incumbent upon him to go to the front, as he was at that time the only member of the Wallin family eligible for enlistment, and patriotism was a family tradition.

Upon finishing his course in the university, Dr. Wallin began practice in Grand Rapids. He remained there for three years, and during that time was on the staff of three of the city hospitals.

In 1905 Dr. Wallin left Michigan and came to White Sulphur Springs, Montana. Three years later he came to Lewistown where he has quickly made an enviable place for himself, both professionally and personally. He is president of the Fergus County Medical Society and is on the medical board of the National Guards, in which he holds a captain's commission. He began to work for wages for his uncle at the age of fourteen years and was always ambitious from the time he earned his first munificent salary of $14.00 per month as a farm hand. He made a wise investment of his funds in a watch chain.

Mrs. Wallin was formerly Miss Florence A. Munro of Morrisburg, Ontario. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Munro, have long been residents of that city. Her marriage to Dr. Wallin took place on September 10, 1902. Like Dr. Wallin, she is a devout Episcopalian and a regular attendant upon the services of that church. Dr. Wallin is a member of the vestry committee. Chadbourne Wallin, the only son of Dr. and Mrs. Wallin, was born in Grand Rapids and is now attending school in Lewistown.

Dr. Wallin is a believer in the policies of the Republican party, but he takes no part in the business of the local organization, for, like most physicians, his profession leaves him little chance for such side lines. He is, however, somewhat prominent in Masonry and has taken all degrees from the blue lodge to the Shrine. While at White Sulphur Springs he was an officer in the blue lodge. He belongs to the Elks and is one of the directors of the Lewistown lodge. Automobiling is one of his favorite sports. He finds a lively spin in the mountain air an ideal way of resting from the unremitting cares of his work. When time permits, he is fond of witnessing a football game, too. When the weather or some other untoward circumstance prevents his going out in his car, Dr. Wallin soothes his wearied mind by the intricate harmonies of classical music, for which he has an unusual fondness, or he spends an enjoyable hour reading in his admirably chosen library.

Franklin B. Wallin, the father of the doctor, was born in New York state, but when only five, went to live in Michigan. There he grew up and engaged in the leather trade. He was a member of the war legislature of Michigan during Governor Blair's administration. He died in August, 1908, in his seventy-seventh year and is buried in Saugatuck. His wife, Hannah Chadbourne Wallin, was born in Otsego county, New York, but was married in Saugatuck. She now makes her home in Grand Rapids.

Dr. Wallin is a member of the Sons of the American Revolution and he has proved himself no unworthy descendant of the men who won the glorious struggle against seemingly hopeless odds. Both in peace and in war he has done his share to pass on the fair inheritance, not merely undiminished, but enriched and with still greater opportunities for those who shall succeed to it.

FRANK PIVAL. Like thousands of other worthy men whose lot in their native country was always to labor, without the hope of achieving a competency, Frank Pival, of Libby, saw in the western world a rainbow of promise, and in the story of his life there is to be found a lesson for the youth of any land, something of a nature encouraging to the young aspirant, who, without friends or fortune, is struggling to overcome obstacles in his efforts to acquire an independent position and standing among his fellow men. Mr. Pival was born in Austria-Hungary, April 1, 1877, and is a son of Michael and Frances (Zea) Pival, both natives of Austria. His father, who was a contractor and farmer all of his life, passed away in 1887, at the age of fifty-two years, while his mother died in 1899 at the age of fifty-four. Of their four children, Frank and Joseph reside in Libby; John is a resident of Spokane, Washington; and Mary, who married Mr. Trorusek, lives in Austria and has six children.

The education of Frank Pival was obtained in the public schools of his native country, and on completing his education he turned his attention to the trade of carpenter, learning the business with his father and becoming thoroughly skilled in all its details. As is the custom in that country, Mr. Pival then entered the Austrian army, in which he served as a soldier for three years, and during two years of that time was on the Turkish frontier. On receiving his honorable discharge, he returned to his home, but soon determined to take advantage of the wonderful opportunities offered to young men of ability and energy in the United States, and on February 16, 1902, sailed for this country. During the first four months of his residence here he made his home in Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, and he also spent three years in working at his trade in Wisconsin. Mr. Pival then came to Libby and erected a sawmill, which he operated for two and one-half years with some degree of success, but at the end of that time turned his attention to contracting and building. He has erected nearly all of the principal buildings which have been put up since that time in Libby, including the largest and most modern residences and the First National Bank building, and the excellence of his work and the absolute confidence which his reliability has bred have gained for him an enviable reputation, and assured him of an increasing business.

Mr. Pival was married in Merrill, Wisconsin, in August, 1903, to Miss Mary Sigmond, and they have two children: Emilia born June 13, 1903; and Raymond, born January 29, 1907, both at Merrill, Wisconsin, bright and interesting children who are attending the Libby public schools. Mr. Pival's rise in the world of business may be attributed to his steadfast endeavor, his industry, inherent ability and absolute integrity. From a poor emigrant youth, friendless and without funds, he has brought himself to a position of prominence among the successful business men of his adopted section, and today has interests in a number of steadily growing enterprises, among which may be mentioned the Lincoln Mercantile Company, of which he is a director. With his family he attends the Roman Catholic church, among the congregation of which he numbers many friends, as he does, in fact, in all walks of life. His political belief is that of the Republican party, but his business affairs have satisfied his ambitions, and he has had no desire to enter the public arena as a seeker for the honors and emoluments of political preferment.

BOWEN S. CONRAD. Since April 14, 1905, Bowen S. Conrad has been an enterprising citizen and representative business man at Conrad, Montana, where his multifarious interests keep him extremely busy. He is a man of progressive ideas, exactness and thoroughness characterize all his attainments and his life achievements worthily illustrate what may be accomplished by persistent and painstaking effort.

Bowen Steward Conrad was born at Front Royal, Virginia, August 20, 1882, and he is a son of William R. and Nannie (Kerford) Conrad, both of whom were born and reared in Virginia, where was solemnized their marriage, and where Mrs. Conrad is still living. The father was engaged in agricultural pursuits during the greater part of his active career and he was summoned to the life eternal in May, 1901, at the comparatively early age of forty-four years. Mr. and Mrs. Conrad became the parents of eleven children, of whom the subject of this review was the second in order of birth.

To the public schools of his native place Bowen S. Conrad is indebted for his preliminary educational training, the same including a course in the Front Royal high school, in which he was graduated as a member of the class of 1901. After leaving school Mr. Conrad turned his attention to the life insurance business and was sales representative for the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in Virginia for two years, at the expiration of which, in 1905, he came to Montana, settling at Conrad, where he entered the employ of the Conrad Investment Company, in the surveying department of which concern he remained for the ensuing three years. He then established the City Dray Company and also became agent for the Continental Oil Company, and for the Minneapolis Brewing Company. In addition to the above interests he is engaged in the wholesale and retail ice business, the latter enterprise being known as the Conrad Ice Company. He has three men in his employ and the sales in the oil business amounted to sixty thousand dollars in 1911, while his transfer work netted him a sum of seven thousand dollars. The ice company is likewise doing a splendid business.

In his political convictions Mr. Conrad is a stalwart supporter of the principles and policies for which the Republican party stands sponsor and he takes an active part in all matters affecting the civic welfare of his home community. He served one year as a member of the city council and during that time was influential in securing good legislation in various municipal matters. Fraternally, he is affiliated with the time-honored Masonic order, with the Woodmen of the World and with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. In religious matters he and his wife are devout Presbyterians. Mr. Conrad had but fifty cents in his possession when he came to Conrad and that sum was spent in buying postage stamps. Perseverance and a determination to succeed have won him the high place he now holds in local business circles and he is recognized as a man whose methods have ever been of the fair and straightforward order. Mr. Conrad is a nephew of W. G. Conrad, of Helena, pioneer, multi-millionaire and a prominent factor in state affairs.

At Helena, Montana, October 4, 1909, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Conrad to Miss Beulah Anthony, a daughter of J. G. Anthony, who is a retired banker at Great Falls, Montana, where he was born and whither his parents went as pioneers from Missouri. Mr. and Mrs. Conrad have one child, Jeanne, whose birth occurred October 27, 1910.

AXEL C. ANDERSON has been identified with the commercial life of Missoula for the past seven years in a business way, and is recognized as one of the leading men in the city today. The florist business, which is the line of enterprise which has held his attention all his life, is not one which in its nature would add unduly to the industrial wealth of the city, but his has been a large and worthy part in the beautifying of the city, and Missoula is indebted to him for the maintenance of one of the finest florist's establishments in Montana.

Mr. Anderson was born in Sweden on May 20, 1868, and is the son of Swen and Augusta Pauline (von Fjelberg) Anderson. The father still lives and conducts a florist business, to which he has devoted his entire life. His wife is the descendant of a fine old family of Sweden and comes of a long line of knights and warriors, the ancestral record of the family being traceable directly back to the fourteenth century. She died in 1907 at the age of sixty years, and is buried in Sweden. Six children were born to them, of which number Axel Anderson was the second born. But one other of the family came to America—Baida, a sister, who is married to Charles Mack and lives in Butte City, Montana.

The early education of Mr. Anderson was of a limited character, but in his vocation he was thoroughly trained by his father who was, and still is, one of the prominent florists in his native land, and was in every way qualified to teach his son all the arts of the business. For some time before coming to America, which he did when he was nineteen years old, the young man was engaged in the most famous floral establishment in Sweden, at Guttentungh. When he emigrated to the United States, he first settled in Minneapolis, where for a year he was engaged as assistant manager of the floral department of the State Reform School. He then went to Duluth and for four years was in the employ of Col. C. H. Graves as florist, and under his able supervision the home of Colonel Graves became one of the most beautiful spots in Duluth from a horticultural view point. He next started up in business on his own responsibility and built green houses at Glen Avon, a suburb of the city, and conducted a flower store in the city. After two years he sold the business and began traveling in the interests of the floral business, and he was variously engaged with some of the most important houses in that business in Chicago, St. Paul and Pittsburgh. While living in Duluth Mr. Anderson had married, and now, with his family, he paid a visit to his old home. They spent two years in Europe, and when they returned to the United States in 1905 he came direct to Missoula, where for three years he worked for another floral concern in the city, after which he entered business for himself, in which he has since continued. At first he was engaged in landscape gardening, but after a year he built his present greenhouses, and since that time he has carried on a general florist business. He enjoys the best of success with the business and ships heavily to all parts of western Montana and northern Idaho. His place is thoroughly modern and is equipped with the most up-to-date and perfect appliances known to the business. Mr. Anderson has made the business the study of his life and he is a botanist and horticulturist in the larger sense—not a mere florist. He has given close attention to his work all his life and has developed many new things in the horticultural world. He has been particularly successful in the forcing of European bulbs, such as Narcissi, Tulips, Hyacinths and other bulbous plants. He has had most unequivocal success in the culture of roses, and has produced some special things in carnations and violets. To the decorative part of the business, Mr. Anderson is especially devoted, and gives much of his attention to the designing of elaborate and beautiful floral pieces. As for the business or commercial aspect of the enterprise, Mr. Anderson is not so attentive to that part of it, and the enterprise has prospered mightily in spite of that fact. Devoted to his profession and successful in so many of his pet projects, Mr. Anderson has every reason to be proud of his success. In addition to his reputation as a horticulturist, Mr. Anderson has won some prominence as a writer of poetry. He is an artist of considerable ability, also, and has exhibited some handsome specimens done in oil. While his education in his native land was necessarily limited, Mr. Anderson has amply made up that lack. After he came to this country for several years he continued study in night schools of the cities in which he found himself, and he thus gained a thorough mastery of the English language and accomplished not a little in the way of higher education. He is an inveterate reader of the best in literature, science, and all that pertains to his work, and is regarded as being something of a conversationalist as well.

Mr. Anderson is a Republican, but not a politician. His time is too much occupied with his interests to permit him to become involved in that way, nor has he the temperament which makes for political ambition. He is a member of the Royal Highlanders, and his religious beliefs incline toward the Lutheran faith. He is especially devoted to Montana, and in speaking of her likens her to a healthy infant, born of strong and excellent parents, developing beautifully under the influence of her diversified environment and gaining added strength with each passing year.

On March 13, 1894, Mr. Anderson was united in marriage at Duluth, Minnesota, to Cora G. Dunn, daughter of Frank P. and Theresa Dunn, natives of Pennsylvania. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Anderson—two daughters and a son. They are Selma Cora, the eldest, living at home and engaged in the study of music. Alice Grace and Fred, both in school in Missoula. The family home is maintained at 1710 South Sixth street.

MOUNT ST. CHARLES COLLEGE. Among the institutions of higher education conducted under the auspices of the Catholic church, Mount St. Charles College at Helena has a conspicuous place. The college opened September 14, 1910, and is really the flower of educational progress in the diocese of Helena.

Its foundation was the natural outgrowth of the educational policy adopted by Bishop Carroll upon his appointment to the diocese. Grammar schools had been well established; these the bishop increased in number and raised in efficiency. A few academies provided a high school course for the girls and there were high school departments for boys and girls in one or two of the parish schools. Bishop Carroll has succeeded in making high schools a distinct and permanent unit in the educational system, so that today there are central high schools in all the principal cities of the diocese. And so high is the standard of education that all the high schools which have sought it have been accredited to the University of Montana and in the grade examination the grammar schools have proven themselves to be first in the state.

Helena led in the high schools movement. In September, 1905, Bishop Carroll opened the first year of a high school course for boys in St. Aloysius School at Helena. This was a day school, but convinced of the necessity of a boarding school for boys the bishop found it possible in September, 1906, to open St. Aloysius Institute for boarders and day students.

Rev. J. M. Venus was its first principal. The following year Professor C. A. Scullon was appointed prefect of discipline and on the retirement of Father Venus to parochial work in 1909, Rev. Jos. C. Willging, of the Catholic University of America succeeded him. The growth of St. Aloysius Institute was steady and solid and it was soon apparent that newer and more commodious quarters would have to be provided. A magnificent tract of fifty acres lying on the edge of the city popularly known as Capitol Hill was secured as a site for the new college. Half of this tract belonged to the family of Governor Hauser and the other half was owned conjointly by the Great Northern Railway and George Bertine of New York. Thanks are owing to Governor Hauser and to Mr. Thomas Marlow for their efforts in obtaining the transfer of the property. To Mrs. A. P. Thatcher, wife of Dr. Thatcher and daughter of Governor Hauser, for donating her interest in the Hauser property, and to Mr. James J. Hill, chairman of the Great Northern Railway, for his liberality, the college owes a special debt of gratitude.

College plans were soon prepared and on June 16, 1909, ground was broken by Bishop Carroll for the new college. The corner-stone was laid September 27, 1909, by William Howard Taft, President of the United States. Bishop Carroll's address on the occasion was descriptive both of the site of the college and of the purpose of its establishment. The president's response was a compliment to the hierarchy and an endorsement of the religious educational policy of the church.

Bishop Carroll said: "Mr. President, we have laid the corner-stone of Capitol Hill College. The building which will rise on these foundations we have named from the eminence whereon we stand—an eminence so lofty and beautiful and so set apart from the city, valley and mountains that it commands a complete view of that magnificent panorama which nature and man have spread out before us at this gate of the Rocky mountains. No wonder the people of Helena, from the day their city was made the capital of Montana, have with one accord pointed to this eminence as the natural site for the capitol building. Disappointed that the capital was not located here they are today consoled by the thought that our college will perpetuate the name they have given to the hill, and, as the years go by, will become a most potent ally of the state in securing obedience to the laws enacted in the capital. The aim of Capitol Hill College will be to give the young men of Montana a thorough, liberal education which will fit them for leadership in any vocation they may choose and at the same time so surround them with religious atmosphere that they may ever follow conscience as their king. Knowledge and virtue are the armor with which Capitol Hill College shall strive to equip its students. And these, says Washington, are the chiefest supports, the firmest props of both state and nation. It is with singular pleasure, Mr. President, I welcome you to this height and to this ceremony of the laying of the corner-stone of our college."

In response to the bishop President Taft said: "It gives me great pleasure to participate in the laying of corner-stones of institutions of learning, whether of church or state. We are liberal enough in this country to be willing to help along educational work of all denominations. The college you are building here will be a blessing to Helena and the whole state of Montana. The only trouble is we have not institutions enough of this kind in the United States.

"Though not of your faith I cannot but appreciate the good work your church is doing in this country. I am intimately acquainted with many members of the hierarchy, and I must say that our relations have always been most pleasant. I feel at home among them. I assure you, Bishop, I regard it as an honor and a pleasure both to have made your acquaintance and to have been asked to take part in the laying of the corner-stone of your college. I wish you Godspeed in the completion of the institution."

Very Rev. S. J. Sullivan, D. D., was appointed first president of Mount St. Charles College. Failing health forced him at the close of the first college year to relinquish the reins of active government and on September 8, 1911, Rev. Jno. L. McMullen was appointed vice-president and placed in charge. On June 12, 1912, Father McMullen was appointed president of the college. While his friends and associates very enthusiastically credit his work and influence with much of success of the college, Father McMullen himself is a man of unassuming character and is too completely absorbed in the practical duties of his work to think of claiming any honors for himself. He is at the head of a splendid institution, and aided by his faithful and efficient co-workers on the faculty has made the college one which has already justified the policies and plans of Bishop Carroll and has placed itself among the higher schools of Montana and one which will continue with increasing success and service throughout the succeeding years.

WILLIAM R. HOCKING. Life teaches us that if we would succeed we must grasp the favorable moment, and it also teaches that the simplest rule for living is "Do that which lies nearest." William R. Hocking has succeeded in conforming his life to both of these rules. He did not look far afield for his work but was keen enough to realize that close at home there was a great field in which success awaited the man with brains and industry. This was assaying. When he was a boy there were few enough good assayers, and his quick mind readily grasped the fact and also saw that as the country was further developed the demand for such men would increase. He is gifted with the true scientific spirit. He has those characteristics that mark the true research man, particularly those who work in the field of chemistry. He is extremely painstaking, such a thing as careless or slipshod work being unheard of in his laboratory. He has always been a student, and will continue to be so throughout his life. A true scientist is a student from necessity, for science, especially the branch in which Mr. Hocking is interested, is going forward by leaps and bounds, and anyone who professes to be a member of the craft must be constantly on the alert that some new discovery does not slip by him. In Mr. Hocking's case inclination for study is added to the necessity, and he is therefore one of the best informed men in the country on his subject. In Butte he is recognized as one of the most trustworthy assayers, and he has a large clientele.

William R. Hocking is a native of England, having been born on the 5th of December, 1879. His father was William R. Hocking and his mother was Eliza N. Willoughby, both natives of the "tight little isle." William R. Hocking, senior, came to Montana in 1884, and soon became well known in mining circles. He it was who sunk the shaft of the celebrated Speculator mine, and he was prominent in many other mining projects. He later moved with his family to Victoria, British Columbia, and here he lived until his death, which occurred on the 12th of June, 1911, he then being aged fifty-seven.

William R. Hocking received his elementary education in the public schools of Butte, Montana, and after his parents went to Victoria he was sent to Victoria College, where he completed his education. After accomplishing this he began to work, his first position being with the Nickel Plate Mining Company, of British Columbia. Much of this work was in the line in which he was most interested, that is, assaying. He had begun to be interested in this work before he left Butte, and, in fact, he had done considerable studying in this subject before leaving the city. His instructors had been the firm of Carney & Hand, the pioneer assayers of Butte, and he could not have obtained a better start anywhere than under the tutelage of these able men. When he went to Victoria to live he continued his studies in assaying, and since that time he has studied the subject constantly. In 1906 he succeeded to the business of A. B. Rombauer and since that time has carried on the assay business which was established in Butte by A. B. Rombauer a number of years ago.

Mining men value Mr. Hocking highly, for they know that he is to be relied upon. He is extremely efficient and spares no pains to make his laboratory just as up-to-date and modern as it can possibly be. He thus has the advantage of all the latest laboratory equipment, and indeed owns one of the best equipped laboratories in the state, therefore is able to give his patrons the best of service, though his profits are considerably decreased. All who have become acquainted with him rejoice at his success, for it is well deserved.

Mr. Hocking was married in 1900 at Butte, Montana, to Lila Hartman, who was a native of the old Blue Grass state, having been born in Louisville, Kentucky. They have one daughter, Lillian. Mr. Hocking is a member of the Elks and of the Silver Bow Club, of Butte.

THE LESLIE BROTHERS, Raymond E. and Emery C., were born in Patten, Penobscot county, Maine, and are the sons of James Warren and Ella C. (Joy) Leslie, both of whom were natives of Maine and both now deceased. The father's death occurred in Bangor, Maine, on May 4, 1911, while the mother died in 1887. James Warren Leslie was a lumberman and real estate dealer, and was active in business up to the time of his demise. He was sixty-one years of age when he died, and he left a considerable estate. They were the parents of six children. Raymond E. Leslie was born May 15, 1877, while his brother, Emery C., claims February 24, 1883, as his natal day. Raymond E. was educated in the public and high schools of Patten, finishing in the University of Maine, where he took a four years' course in civil engineering, but before completing his work took a position with an eastern railroad in the engineering department. In July of 1906 he first came to Montana and settled in Helena, to take a position with the C. M. & St. P. Railroad having charge of the location of the line into Helena and Great Falls, and he remained with them as a civil engineer for two years. The possibilities in the real estate business was especially apparent to Mr. Leslie, and in 1908, after a careful study of the conditions, he organized the Prickly Pear Realty Company. The organization was incorporated on May 26, 1910, and in this incorporation James Warren Leslie, father of the brothers, was treasurer. Mr. Leslie was joined by his brother, Emery C. Leslie, in July, 1911. The latter, who had been engaged in farming in Patten and East Corwith, became an active factor in the business and is now treasurer of the company. A cousin, F. C. Leslie, is acting sales manager for the company. The official personnel is as follows: R. E. Leslie, president; J. H. Raftery, secretary; E. C. Leslie, treasurer; R. R. Spain, special representative; and F. C. Leslie, sales manager. The Prickly Pear Realty Company, (Inc.) is a particularly strong organization, and is fast forging ahead and taking rank among the solid business concerns of Helena. They are dealers in Montana farm lands, irrigated and unirrigated orchard tracts, homestead locations and farm loans, and the business is conducted on the most careful and conservative basis, thus insuring safety to its patrons and to the firm. Raymond Leslie has never entirely discontinued his civil engineering labors, and continues to make use of his ability in that line in the interests of the company. He has held the position of chief engineer of the following roads: Bangor & Aroostook Railroad Company, Fish River Railroad Company, Great Northern Paper Company, Iowa & St. Louis Railway Company, Kenefick Construction Company, Missouri Pacific Railway Company, St. Louis, Iron Mountain & Southern Railway Company, Munising Railway Company, Marquette and South Eastern Railway Company, Chicago, Indianapolis & Evansville Railway Company, Carter Construction Company, Arkansas Valley Railway Company, American Beet Sugar Company, Montana Railroad Company, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Co., of Montana, United States Geological Survey, Missouri Valley Irrigation District, Billings & Cooke City Railway Company, and Stillwater Power Company. He is a Democrat in his political affiliations, and his brother Emery is a member of the Macabee fraternity.

Raymond E. Leslie was married in Indianapolis, Indiana, on January 2, 1905, to Mrs. Charity Todd, a native of Marquette, Michigan, and they reside at 209 Seventh avenue.

Emery C. Leslie was married in the same year that his brother joined the ranks of the Benedicts, his marriage occurring on April 26th, at Milo, Maine, when Miss Mattie Buswell became his wife. She was born at Milo, Maine, and there reared. They live at 514 Eighth avenue. Mr. Leslie is a Unitarian and is a Socialist in political belief.

Concerning the ancestry of the Leslie brothers, their paternal ancestors originated in Austria many generations ago, and immigrated to Scotland. The founder of the American branch of the family came to this country in the "Mayflower" and changed the name of the family to Leslie, which has been the patronymic of the family in America since that time.

HON. RUSSELL E. SHEPHERD. The career of the Hon. Russell E. Shepherd, of Billings, has been one of great activity and uncommon success, due to the exercise of good judgment and the exhibition, under all circumstances, of the strictest integrity. Educated to follow the law, he attained distinction in that profession, and when he turned his attention to financial matters the same success attended his efforts. As president of the Merchants National Bank of Billings, of the Billings Land and Irrigation Company, and of the Two Leggings Land and Improvement Company, he has sustained an eminent position in the world of finance, while the confidence and esteem in which he is held by his fellow-citizens has been demonstrated at various times by his election to public positions of honor and trust and he is now serving as president of the city council and alderman from the Fifth ward.

Mr. Shepherd was born December 15, 1860, at Sacket Harbor, Jefferson county, New York, and is a son of Thomas B. and Augusta O. (Easton) Shepherd. The former was a native of New Brunswick, born in 1834, and educated at that place. As a young man Thomas B. Shepherd removed to New York, where he entered the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal church, and for many years labored faithfully in the service of his Master, holding charges at Syracuse, Auburn, Rome, Oswego and various other points in the Empire state. He is now retired and living quietly at Oswego. Rev. Mr. Shepherd married Augusta O. Easton, who was born in Lewis county, New York, in 1836, and she still survives, having been the mother of six children, of whom Russell E. is the eldest.

Russell E. Shepherd received his preliminary education in the public schools of Ilion, New York, and in 1883 was graduated from the law department of the University of Michigan. Shortly thereafter he located at Austin, Mower county, Minnesota, where he was engaged in active practice until 1906, and during that period held various public offices. For two years he was county attorney of Mower county, served as alderman from the Second ward of the city of Austin for one term, and for several years was a member of the board of education. He came to Billings, Montana, in 1906, and subsequently became interested in the Billings Land and Irrigation Company, of which he is now president. In 1908 he was one of the organizers of the Merchants National Bank of Billings, and at that time his associates chose him as president of the concern, a position which he has since held. During that same year he was one of the factors in the building of the canal of the Two Leggings Land and Improvement Company, of which he is president at this time. In 1884, while a resident of Austin, Minnesota, Mr. Shepherd became a member of Austin Lodge, F. & A. M., and he has since become a member of Ashlar Lodge, No. 29, of Billings; Austin Chapter, No. 8, R. A. M.; Aldemar Commandery, No. 5, K. T., of Billings, and the Mystic Shrine of Minneapolis. He also holds membership in Billings Lodge, No. 392, B. P. O. E.

On October 1, 1884, Mr. Shepherd was married to Miss Nellie Kelton, who was born at Red Wing, Minnesota, daughter of Corless W. and Delia A. (Goodwin) Kelton, natives of Vermont, Mrs. Shepherd being the youngest and only survivor of her parents' three daughters. Her father came to Minnesota when it was still under territorial government, and was for many years engaged in contracting and building on the present site of Red Wing. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd: Ruth, Helen and Irene. The family is connected with the Episcopal church. Mr. Shepherd is a man of marked administrative ability, and the enterprises he controls are prosperous and thriving ones, their increase and growth being continuous and steady. He is one of the men to whom Billings owes the distinguished position it holds in the galaxy of flourishing municipalities, and the prominence he has attained in business, social and public life gives him foremost rank among Montana's representative citizens.

JOHN R. SWEARINGEN. The standard by which to judge a community is the character of its prominent citizens. Progress is rarely, if ever, the result of chance, but always the execution of well-laid plans based on a thorough comprehension of the laws of business. It is only by keeping in view the lives of men who are ever associated in the busy marts of commerce that we can judge of the importance of development and the possibilities of progress. Thus it is that from the commercial more than the literary or political side the most valuable lessons of life are to be extracted. In this connection, as a gentleman whose business qualifications have proven of the best, as indicated by the numerous enterprises he has brought to a successful issue, a brief biographical sketch is given of John R. Swearingen, president and manager of the Montana Sash and Door Company of Billings, Montana. Mr. Swearingen was born on his father's farm in Blue Earth county, Minnesota, February 1, 1861, and is a son of Abraham and Amy (Allen) Swearingen.

As a young man Abraham Swearingen moved to Blue Earth county, Minnesota, from his native state of Illinois, and took up a homestead among the pioneers of the state. At the outbreak of the Civil war he enlisted in a Minnesota regiment and went to the front, but at the time of the Indian uprising he returned to Minnesota and took an active part in subduing the hostilities. He stood in the third tier of soldiers when thirty-eight Indians were hung for their depredations in Mankato. On securing his honorable discharge from the service, after a brave and meritorious service, Mr. Swearingen returned to his farm and developed one of the valuable properties of his locality. Subsequently he became interested in the manufacture of brick and finally disposed of his farm and moved to West Union, Iowa, where he identified himself with the furniture business and later with the lumber business at Perry, Dallas county, Iowa, but about fifteen years ago retired from business activities. Mr. Swearingen, who is now in his eightieth year, is an honored member of Perry Post, Grand Army of the Republic. He was married in Blue Earth county, Minnesota, to Miss Amy Allen, a native of New York state, and she died in 1908, at the age of sixty-eight years, having been the mother of two children: Allie, who died at the age of six years, and John R.

John R. Swearingen attended the common schools of Blue Earth county, Minnesota, and West Union, Iowa, and at the latter place was also a student in Professor S. S. Ainsworth's private school. When only fifteen years of age, and while still pursuing his studies, the youth displayed marked business ability in the flour and feed line, and when he was sixteen years old he secured a position with the Burlington, Cedar Rapids & Northern Railroad as bill clerk. While acting in this capacity he learned telegraphy, and at the age of eighteen was made operator and agent at Oelwein, Iowa, for the same railroad, being the youngest agent on the line at that time. Deciding that there was no future for him in the railroad business, after three years in the service Mr. Swearingen resigned and accepted a position with Burch & Kenyon, who were engaged in the lumber business, and with whom he continued for about three years. At the end of that time he decided that he had mastered the details of the business sufficiently to engage therein on his own account, and accordingly established himself as a lumber merchant at Perry, Iowa, where he continued to be located from 1883 until 1901. The latter year marked his selling out and the disposing of his string of yards through Iowa, and his next connection was with the firm of the Huttig Manufacturing Company, of Muscatine, Iowa, who made sash, doors, etc., and Mr. Swearingen was made vice-president.

In 1906 a business was established in Billings, and on February 1, 1911, this latter business was re-organized under the firm name of the Montana Sash and Door Company, with a capital stock of $500,000, Mr. Swearingen being president and manager and R. C. Cardell secretary. The Billings company is doing a large and lucrative business throughout the Yellowstone valley and has handled numerous contracts of an extensive nature. Under Mr. Swearingen's able management the business has grown steadily, and it is now considered one of the substantial industries of the city. In fraternal circles he is well known in Masonry, belonging to Ottley Lodge, No. 44, A. F. & A. M., of Perry, Iowa; and Gerard Commandery, K. T., No. 56, and Palmyra Chapter, R. A. M., also of that city, he being one of the organizers of the commandery, and he also belongs to Des Moines Consistory, S. R., and Za Ga Zig Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of Des Moines. He is a member of Billings Lodge, No. 394, B. P. O. E., and is vice-president of the Billings Club. In political matters he is a Republican, but has not actively entered the political field.

While a resident of Oelwein, Iowa, in 1881, Mr. Swearingen was married (first) to Miss May Redfield, who died in February, 1883, leaving one daughter, Mabel, a graduate of St. Catherine Hall, an Episcopal school at Davenport, Iowa, and now the wife of Arthur Peddecard, of Perry, Iowa. Mr. Swearingen's second marriage occurred December 20, 1888, when he was united to Miss Florence Cardell, who was born at Malcolm, Iowa, daughter of Leander and Emma L. (Chapman) Cardell. Leander Cardell was born in Warren, Vermont, in 1835, was educated in Vermont, and during the gold excitement went to California, making the trip around the Horn. After spending three years in California as a miner he returned to his native state, but subsequently removed to Iowa and became a pioneer farmer and stockraiser of Poweshiek county, where he resided until 1880. In that year he removed to Perry, Dallas county, where he engaged in the real estate and loan business until 1895 and then retired from business activity. A prominent Republican, he took an active interest in political matters, rose to a high position in the ranks of his party and served as a member of the Iowa state legislature. He was a faithful member of the Congregational church in the faith of which he died in 1907, when seventy-two years of age. He married Emma L. Chapman, a native of Ohio, who survives him, and they had a family of five children, three of whom died in infancy, while the survivors are: Robert C., secretary of the Montana Sash and Door Company of Billings, and Florence, who married Mr. Swearingen. Mr. and Mrs. Swearingen have one daughter, Irene, who in 1909 graduated from the National Cathedral, an Episcopal Institute of Washington, D. C., taking the highest honors ever secured by a student up to that date.

JOHN HENRY NIBBE. One of the well-known young professional men of Billings who is rapidly acquiring an enviable reputation as a legal practitioner is John Henry Nibbe, whose activities in the field of law and jurisprudence since coming to this city in 1906 have established him firmly in the esteem and confidence of the community. Mr. Nibbe was born on his father's farm in Goodhue county, Minnesota, January 9, 1883, and is a son of John Henry and Elizabeth (Dahling) Nibbe, and a grandson of Jacob Nibbe.

Jacob Nibbe was a native of the province of Hanover, Germany, from whence he immigrated to the United States, becoming a pioneer of Goodhue county, Minnesota, where he spent the remainder of his life in agricultural pursuits, dying in 1902. He and his wife, who was also a native of Germany, and who passed away in 1878, had six children. John Henry Nibbe, Sr., was a child when brought to America by his parents, and his education was secured in the common schools of Goodhue county, where he was reared to the vocation of a farmer. He remained under the parental roof until he had attained years of maturity, and at that time began farming on his own account in Goodhue township, where he is at present the owner of a half-section of valuable land. He has made modern improvements, has a fine residence and is one of the leading agriculturists of his district, and is especially interested in raising high grade cattle. He was one of the organizers and the first president of the Farmers Grain Elevator Company. Politically a staunch Republican, he has held numerous township offices during the past thirty years, and is the present president of the town board of Goodhue. The family is connected with the German Lutheran church. Mr. Nibbe was born in Hanover, Germany, July 27, 1853, and was married in Goodhue county to Miss Elizabeth Dahling, who was born in that county October 19, 1859. They have had fifteen children, all being alive except one and named as follows: John Jacob, a merchant of Chippewa Falls, Wisconsin; Frederick Carl, who is engaged in business at Lidgerwood, North Dakota; Louise, the wife of Daniel I. McHugh; John Henry, Jr.; George E., who died May 28, 1907, at the age of twenty-two years; Clara M., the wife of B. L. Johnson, living at Goodhue, Minnesota; and Lydia, Anna, Margaret, Peter, Clarence, Florence, Raymond, Blanche and Walter, all residing at home.

C. H. Perry

John Henry Nibbe, Jr., was educated in the common schools of Goodhue township, at the Lake City (Minnesota) Commercial College, and the Valparaiso (Indiana) University, where he graduated in the literary and law departments in 1904. He first spent one year in practice in St. Paul, Minnesota, and after spending a few months in Butte, Montana, came to Billings in June, 1906, and has since acquired a large and representative clientele. He is regarded as a lawyer of ability and has been retained in some very important cases since his arrival in the city. Fraternally he is connected with Ashlar Lodge, No. 29, A. F. & A. M.; Billings Chapter, No. 6, R. A. M.; Aldemar Commandery, No. 5, K. T., and Algeria Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of Masonry; Billings Lodge, No. 394, B. P. O. E.; and Billings Star Lodge, No. 41, I. O. O. F. In political matters he is a Progressive. During his residence here he has made numerous acquaintances, and his friends are legion. His offices are situated in the Belknap Building.

A. B. MELZNER. Not only is prestige his, as one of the representative younger members of the bar of Montana, but Mr. Melzner also has the credit of having redeemed an important county office from the status of malfeasance and ineptitude and made it a worthy and valuable department in the governmental affairs of Silver Bow county. He is now serving his second term as public administrator of the county mentioned, and it is certain that popular favor will retain him in the same if he consents to remain the incumbent after the expiration of his present term, in January, 1913. The office of public administrator in this county had, prior to his accession, come to be looked upon merely as an agency for political maneuverings and petty graft, and those who had served in the same had merely used the position as a means to an end, with utter disregard of the responsibilities it is designed to carry. Mr. Melzner has made a radical change in the administration of its affairs and has made the office a conservator of the rights and interests of the people. He has saved and recovered to different estates thousands of dollars, and previously such funds had been largely employed for political purposes and unjustified personal aggrandizement. He has been fearless and determined in the discharge of his duties and has naturally gained the enmity of certain large railroad and mining corporations, which he has antagonized by his successful efforts in securing proper redress, through due process of law, in cases where the lives of employes of such corporations have been sacrificed when in discharge of their assigned duties. He has thus protected the interests of many families that would otherwise have been left in indigent circumstances, and he finds deep satisfaction in the work thus accomplished, though he has sacrificed personal expediency to the interests of justice and humanity. He has made the office a credit and not, as formerly, a disgrace to the county, and naturally has a strong hold upon popular confidence and esteem in his home city of Butte and the county in which it is situated.

A. B. Melzner is a scion of stanch German stock and of families that were founded in the state of Wisconsin in the pioneer days. There his paternal grandparents established their home upon their immigration from Germany in 1847, and there the maternal grandparents had settled in 1840, they likewise having come from Germany. Mr. Melzner was born at Lake City, Calhoun county, Iowa, on the 28th of December, 1881, and thus became a slightly belated Christmas guest in the home of his parents, Conrad and Katherine (Horn) Melzner, both natives of Wisconsin, where the former was born in 1854 and the latter in 1856. The father was a harnessmaker and continued to be identified with the work of his trade throughout his entire active career, during much of which he was engaged in business on his own responsibility. He settled in Iowa upon leaving his native state and thereafter resided for some time in South Dakota, but he passed the closing years of his life in Waterloo, Iowa, where his death occurred on the 25th of May, 1906. His widow now maintains her home at Lake Mills, Jefferson county, Wisconsin, and of their children two sons are living.

He whose name initiates this review was a child at the time of the family removal to Yankton, South Dakota, and in the public schools of that city he received his early educational discipline. He was graduated in the Yankton College as a member of the class of 1900, and in 1902 he was matriculated in the University of Iowa, from which he was graduated in 1904 and received his degree of Bachelor of Philosophy. In the meanwhile he had formulated definite plans for his future career, and in harmony therewith he entered the law department of the celebrated University of Wisconsin, at Madison, the beautiful capital city of the state. In this institution he was graduated as a member of the class of 1906, and from the same he received his coveted and well-earned degree of Bachelor of Laws. Mr. Melzner wisely decided to make Montana the stage of his professional endeavors, and on the 1st of August, 1906, shortly after his graduation, he established his home in Butte, the metropolis of the state. He was forthwith admitted to the Montana bar and in initiating the active work of his profession he formed a partnership with Louis P. Donovan, who had been his classmate in the University of Iowa, and also in the law department of the University of Wisconsin. This effective alliance continued until the 1st of January, 1909, when Mr. Melzner retired to assume the duties of his present official position, and in the meanwhile the firm of vigorous and able young lawyers had built up a substantial practice and gained marked success.

On January 1, 1909, Mr. Melzner was elected public administrator of Silver Bow county, and to the exigent and important affairs of the same he has since given virtually his entire time and attention. He was chosen as his own successor in the election of 1911, and his second term expired January, 1913. Concerning his administration, adequate record has been made in the opening paragraph of this review. In politics Mr. Melzner is a stanch adherent of the Democratic party, and he has given effective service as an active worker in its ranks. He holds membership in the Woodmen of the World and in the University Club, one of the representative civic organizations of the Montana metropolis.

On the 30th of June, 1909, Mr. Melzner was united in marriage to Miss Ida M. Appel, who was born in Minnesota and is a daughter of Stephen U. Appel, now a well-known citizen of Kellogg, Minnesota, where he is a rancher. Mr. and Mrs. Melzner have no children.

T. J. NERNY, a representative business man and well known citizen of Butte, has resided in that city since 1906. He is a Pennsylvanian by birth, and since becoming a resident of Montana's metropolis has taken a prominent part in its business and civic activities.

While financially interested in industrial circles, he has taken a prominent part in civic affairs. Mr. Nerny has served with efficiency, as a member of the city council for the past six years, and at the present time (in 1912) is president of that body.

In every respect he a loyal and public spirited citizen, giving freely of his aid and influence in support of all measures projected for the improvement and progress of his adopted city and its industries.

FRANK A. LENZ. Seldom is it permitted to any one person to live a life so varied in environment, and at the same time so full of notable achievement, as that of Mr. Frank Lenz. The bare outline of his career reads like a romance, and if it were written as a story it would be said that it was unnatural for any single man to have so diversified a life. Born in Danzig, Germany, of noble family, he was surrounded from his youth with all the advantages of a cultivated and affluent home. His father, August Lenz, the noted German horticulturist and poet, was the son of an officer of high rank in the Prussian army and received his education in the Culm Army Academy. He expected to follow his father's profession, but lost his career through a mistake of Dr. Lauer, the physician of old Emperor William, who was at that time the academy physician, and who performed a clumsy operation on the young man's right eye, rendering it blind and incapacitating him for further army service. He devoted himself to letters, and produced poems that are genuine contributions to the German literature. Though blind for the last ten years of his life, he continued not only to compose but to write his productions, and the handwriting of that blind litterateur would put many a man with full vision to shame. He died in December, 1907, at the age of eighty-nine. His wife, Paulina Rohleder Lenz, a representative of a noble German family, is still living in Danzig. The Lenz family is one which has long been well known in the upper circles of the German empire, from the time when Jaccum August Lenz served under Frederick the Great.

Our subject was born February 13, 1862, and secured his primary education in the schools of Danzig. When he graduated from the Gymnasium he entered the Deutsch-Krone School of Architecture, from which he graduated in 1876. He was then sent to Bordeaux, France, to study the architecture of the quay and dry-dock system then being installed there. While on this quest, he met an old-time friend of the family, who was captain of a vessel then loaded with a cargo for an American port. Just at this time Mr. Lenz's passport had expired and he was due to return to Germany and to enter the army there. This was very distasteful to him, and so he was induced to accompany his sea-faring friend to America. The captain did not wholly approve of the plan, but he finally consented, and on February 2, 1891, Frank Lenz landed in New York, without one cent in his pockets and without any very suitable clothes to harbor the pockets.

In wandering about New York, Mr. Lenz met a man whom he had known in Germany. This gentleman was then engaged in some work for the government, removing the obstructions in the harbor near Hell Gate. Through his assistance Mr. Lenz secured employment with a firm of prominent architects in the city. The work was not what his training had fitted him to do, for he had to go in as a hod carrier, but he cheerfully accepted that until he could find a better position. His next place was with a stove-manufacturing plant, and from cleaning stoves he was advanced to office work. He remained with this firm until his friend, Mr. Rotzell went into the map-publishing business, and then assisted him making the geographical survey of Manhattan Island. Before this work was completed Mr. Lenz became sick.

One of the acquaintances the young German had formed was a Jesuit priest, and the father took the greatest interest in his young friend. When his health failed, the priest advised him to take a rest in Maryland at the home of the Novices and Students. In this retreat he regained his health, but when he returned to New York his friends had departed. Mr. Lenz then went to Newark, New Jersey, and there became professor of mathematics in the college. From Newark he went to Notre Dame College, where he taught the same subject as at Newark for a year and a half. While in this latter position he made the acquaintance of Mr. Charles Warren Stoddard, who was one of the lecturers at Notre Dame. The Fathers of the Holy Cross had a college at Cincinnati, and at this time there was one class in the institution which had almost broken up the discipline of the entire school. Mr. Lenz had been at Notre Dame for a year and a half when he met one of the fathers from the Cincinnati school. Greatly discouraged over their failure to secure a master who could rule this class, the father confided his perplexities to Mr. Lenz. Somewhat to his surprise, the young man asked for the appointment. When he took charge of the unruly students, he donned the priestly garments, in order to deceive them, and to carry out the part he functionated as sub-deacon at the various celebrations in Holy Trinity church. He was so successful in subduing the class that he was urged to study for the priesthood.

It was while preparing for this vocation that Mr. Lenz made the acquaintance of the noted actress, Mary Anderson, who visited Holy Trinity church every morning during her stay in Cincinnati. She urged him to take up the publication of a Catholic newspaper. The idea appealed to Mr. Lenz and he accepted the editorship of a journal and followed that profession until the abbot of St. Meinrad College persuaded him to fill the chair of professor of mathematics, which was vacant at the time. While filling this position, Mr. Lenz continued his studies, taking a course in theology and philosophy. But at the end of a year he became dissatisfied with this lot, and going to Louisville, Kentucky, he again entered the field of journalism. He purchased a paper which he conducted for two years, and then he took up the study of law. After selling the paper, Mr. Lenz worked at the insurance business in the daytime and studied for his profession at night. Later he entered the office of a prominent attorney in Louisville, and then entered the law college in the same city, from which he graduated. His admission to the bar occurred before he completed his course, as he was admitted by a special board of examiners.

Until 1906 Mr. Lenz practiced in Louisville. He had decided to move to Denver, but while on the way thither he received news of the serious illness of his brother in Butte, and so he came to the Montana metropolis instead. The climate and the people appealed to him and so he decided to make Butte his home. He was admitted to the bar of the supreme court at Helena, and his legal career in this state has been marked by that splendid success which he has won in all that he has undertaken.

Mr. Lenz is one of the best-known men of the German-American element of Butte. He is the founder of the Liederkrantz, the Montana Sangerbund, the Butte German Hall, and is active in all the undertakings of his countrymen. He belongs to the Roman Catholic church, and in the order of Lyons he is the secretary.

On October 17, 1888, Mr. Lenz was united in marriage to Miss Louise Kamuf, of Owensboro, Kentucky. Three of his ten children, Paul Albert, August Joseph and Frank Joseph, were born in that city. August died at the age of one year. His eldest child, Mrs. Eva Matzinger, was born in Louisville, as were all the others. The names of the other children are Joseph Leo Amalius, Frederick August, Marie Adelia Christine, John Urban, Louise Agnes and Marie. Mr. Lenz is a supporter of the principles of the Democratic party in political matters. He has a large circle of friends and relatives in business in Butte, and is known throughout the city both as an able lawyer and as a popular citizen.

EDWARD OWENS. In the present day and age of the world no young man who has industry, energy and ambition need want for opportunity to make for himself an honored place in the business or professional worlds, and it is a noteworthy fact, furthermore, that those who are urged by necessity and must secure through their own unaided efforts the things which they desire in life often achieve the highest results. Among the successful business men of Butte, Montana, who belong in the self-made class Edward Owens deserves conspicuous mention.

Mr. Owens, who was born in Ida county, Iowa, October 6, 1880, is of Welch-German ancestry, his maternal grandfather having come from Germany to settle first in Ohio, and later to become a pioneer in Iowa. His grandfather Owens immigrated from Wales, his native country, in an early day and was a miner at Mineral Point, Wisconsin, from the time of his arrival in this country until the date of his death. His son, David Owens, father of Edward, was born in Wales December 17, 1856, being two years old when brought to the United States by his parents. The elder Owens was reared and educated at Mineral Point, Wisconsin, and married Mary M. Dryer, a native of Iowa, who was born January 9, 1859. They became the parents of six children, of whom Edward was the second oldest. The family removed to Livingston county, Missouri, when Edward was a small child, at which place the father now lives and follows agricultural pursuits, he having been since early manhood a prosperous farmer.

Edward Owens was reared on the farm under such influences as usually obtain in rural communities. He attended school in Livingston county during his early years and later went to high school at Laurel, Nebraska, continuing his studies there until eighteen years of age. After finishing this portion of his education Mr. Owens apprenticed himself to J. B. Jouvenat, a druggist at Laurel, and while there learning the drug trade he resolved to become a full-fledged pharmacist and after three years with Mr. Jouvenat the young man went to St. Louis, entered the St. Louis College of Pharmacy and after two years' study was rewarded with the degree of graduate of pharmacy. While attending the university Mr. Owens found it necessary to support himself through his own personal efforts and found employment in the drug store of the Marion-Sims College in St. Louis. Subsequent to his graduation he continued to occupy a responsible position for two years, but afterwards accepted an offer to connect himself with the Arcade Pharmacy in the same city.

Mr. Owens cherished the laudable ambition of owning a drug store of his own, however, and believing that the west afforded the best opportunities for the wide-awake and enthusiastic to enter business he decided to locate at Butte. Upon his arrival in this city in June, 1906, he at once found employment with C. B. Hoskins, a popular druggist here, and continued to fill the position for two years. At the end of that period Mr. Owens in partnership with Mr. W. R. Montgomery purchased Mr. Hoskins' store and they have since been conducting the business as a corporation, under the name of the Owens-Montgomery Drug Company, at 140 West Park, Mr. Owens being president of the firm and Mr. Montgomery secretary and treasurer.

Theirs is now one of the leading drug establishments in Butte and as it is conducted in a modern and up-to-date manner, with a clean, fresh stock of drugs always on the shelves, the store attracts a constantly increasing clientele and is classed as one of the best and most substantial commercial enterprises of the city today.

Mr. Owens is a gentleman of superior business ability and pleasing personality and his high worth as a man and a citizen is fully recognized throughout the community. He is a valued member of the University Club here. Since his eighteenth year Mr. Owens has been a member of the Royal Highlanders order and is also a member of the Butte lodge of Elks. While he discharges his duties as a citizen and an important integral part of the commercial life of the city he is not actively interested in political affairs, although his party principles are Democratic. As a rising young business man of exemplary character and unimpeachable integrity he is held in high esteem by all who know him.

WILLIAM S. CASTO, proprietor of the New Orpheum Theatre in Butte, Montana, is distinctively a pioneer in the amusement business in the west. His operations have not alone been confined to Montana, but he has conducted a theatre business in numerous points in California for years, and he, with his brother, Grant Casto, as the firm of Casto Brothers, are properly regarded as being among the representative men of the west in connection with their business.

William S. Casto was born in Sonoma county, California, on August 27, 1869. He is the son of Timothy Everett Casto, born in Indiana, and who went to California in 1853 by way of the Isthmus and located near Santa Cruz. He was a cooper in his native state, and was one of the pioneer coopers of California, conducting a cooperage business and a lime kiln at Santa Cruz for a number of years. He died in California in 1905, at the age of seventy-seven years. His wife and the mother of his children was Ann (Bell) Casto, born in Washington, D. C., on July 4, 1828. She died at the family home in California in 1899. Two sons were born to Timothy and Ann Casto, Grant E. and William S. The latter named was educated up to his fourteenth year in the common schools at Sonoma, after which time he went to work in the cooperage shop of his father to learn that trade. The boy was of an ambitious nature, and his evenings were passed in attendance upon a night school. He followed the cooperage business for twelve years, becoming thoroughly proficient in the work and was in a fair way to success in that industry when he was irresistibly attracted by the money-making possibilities which the amusement field offered. As a venture, he and his brother Grant started an arcade in San Francisco, and were the representatives of the Edison Manufacturing Company, of which the great inventor is the head. Their efforts from the outset were attended by a reasonable degree of success, and when the cinematograph was first made possible as a popular movement, the Casto Brothers promptly opened up a completely equipped moving picture theatre, which proved a genuine success. Their operations in San Francisco was successful, and from one arcade they increased the number in that city, and also established them in Salt Lake City and in Butte. They were the first to go into that line of business in both the latter named places, and pioneers' rewards have been theirs from the beginning. In the summer of 1904 they ran an arcade at the Great Salt Lake, and in the fall of 1905 opened a large arcade in Ogden, Utah. In January, 1906, they came to Butte to look over the situation here, and as a result opened one of the first arcade theatres in that place, at 33 West Park street, investing the sum of $15,000 in the venture. In the following year they opened the first moving picture theatre in the state of Montana. At the time of the earthquake in California the two brothers lost everything they possessed in California, having still retained their interests there, although deeply interested in Montana and Utah as well, so that they were entirely dependent upon the result of their venture in the latter named states. For a time their circumstances were in a straitened condition, but by careful management and skillful manipulation of the property they possessed, the brothers were soon on their feet once more and on November 1, 1907, they opened the little theatre known as "The Orpheum," at 77 West Park Street.

After three and one-half years in this location the business had grown to proportions that warranted a larger and more commodious theatre, with the result that they secured a ten years' lease on the Baltimore Block, at 69-71 West Park street, and after remodeling the same at a great expense opened it as the New Orpheum Theatre, on August 9, 1911. This is one of the finest theatres of its kind in the West, with a seating capacity of seven hundred and fifty. The theatre is a decided success as a place of amusement, and is patronized by the best element of citizenship in the city of Butte. They have installed every new feature in the moving-picture world as fast as they are perfected, and their establishment is as complete as such a theatre could be. Advancement is the watchword of the brothers, and they aim to maintain a high standard of entertainment in their theatre, and always to have the best offerings that the market affords. In addition to their regular business, they have secured the agency for the entire northwest of the latest invention of the Edison people, the moving picture for the home, from which agency they expect a deal of benefit to accrue to them. The brothers are regarded in their section of the state as being particularly prosperous men, and it is obvious to all that they are fast forging ahead in the amusement field.

William Casto is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Woodmen of the World, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Theatrical Mechanical Association. He is a Republican in his political leanings, although never an aspirant to office. He is particularly fond of out-door life, and is well known in the theatrical world. On August 28, 1898, he was married to Miss Charlotte Fritsch, of San Francisco, California. One child has been born to them, Everett Casto, born June 28, 1899, at San Francisco. He is now attending school in Butte.

The brother of William Casto, Grant E., has been his brother's partner since he first went into the theatrical business, and their success comes from the combined efforts, with equal credit to both. He was educated in Sonoma county, where he and his brother were born, and until he went into the amusement line with his brother, was engaged in railroad work. On July 29, 1888, he was married to Miss Bell Ward, of Cloverdale, California. Two children are the result of their union: Harold W. Casto, born in 1896 in Pajaro, California, and Charles Shortridge Casto, born in 1894, in San Jose, California.

GEORGE A. JEFFERY: Prominent among the leading business enterprises of Carbon county stands the W. A. Talmage Company of Red Lodge, dealers in hardware, agricultural implements, wagons and buggies, the general manager of which, George A. Jeffery, has been identified with this line of business since the days when commercial travelers were forced to make use of the stage coach to reach the various points of their destinations in Montana. Mr. Jeffery is a native of Charlestown, Massachusetts, and was born March 25, 1861, a son of Joseph John and Katherine (Reidhead) Jeffery.

Joseph John Jeffery was born in the city of Boston, Massachusetts, May 30, 1831, and is now living in Minneapolis, Minnesota, while his wife, born at Blue Hill, Penobscot county, Maine, in 1842, passed away in 1903. They had two children, Mary Anna and George A. Joseph J. Jeffery was given an excellent education in the schools of Boston, where he took an engineering course, and as a young man entered the employ of the United States government at Springfield, Massachusetts, where he was engaged in the manufacture of guns for the United States army up to 1865. In that year he removed to Minneapolis, becoming superintendent of the Minnesota Iron Works, a position which he held for a number of years, then entering the local machinery department of the Chicago, Minneapolis & St. Paul Railroad Company. Later he was superintendent in organizing the water system of the city of Minneapolis, and at this time is superintendent of the meter department of Minneapolis. He is well known in Masonic circles, and is also an active and influential Republican.

George A. Jeffery was educated in the public schools of Minneapolis, Minnesota, to which city he went with his parents when he was four years of age, and his first employment was as clerk in a hardware store in that city, where he worked during 1879 and 1880. He then entered the establishment of Miller Brothers & Fletcher, wholesale and retail hardware merchants of Minneapolis, being connected with that firm until 1889. At that time he removed to Seattle, Washington, and engaged in the undertaking business, but the great fire in that city destroyed his place of business and wiped out his capital, and he went to Portland, Oregon, to make a new start in the business world. There he became a traveling salesman of Zahn Brothers, in woodenware and hardware specialties, but after about two years associated himself with C. W. Hackett, a wholesale hardware merchant of St. Paul, as traveling salesman, and remained in his employ for about five years. Mr. Jeffery next acted in the capacity of traveling salesman for Montana of the Marshall Wells Hardware Company of Duluth, Minnesota, with headquarters in Helena for eleven years, but in 1906 purchased an interest in the business of W. A. Talmage, of Red Lodge, whose establishment is situated at No. 21 North Billings avenue, with a branch store in Joliet. Under Mr. Jeffery's able management this business has become one of the leaders in its line in this part of the State and commands a large trade among representative firms all over Montana and the surrounding country. Connected with this line since early youth, he is thoroughly familiar with every detail of the business, and his modern ideas and progressive methods are constantly tending to bring in new business. Fraternal matters have claimed a large amount of his attention, and he is a member of Star of the West Lodge No. 40, A. F. & A. M., of which he is a senior warden; Carbon Chapter No. 20, R. A. M., where he is captain of the host; Billings Commandery No. 6, K. T., and Algeria Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., at Helena. He is a life member of Helena Lodge No. 193, B. P. O. E., of which he is past exalted ruler, and has served one term as district deputy grand exalted ruler of Montana, having been appointed to this position by the grand exalted ruler of the United States, John F. Fanning of Indianapolis, Indiana. He is likewise connected with the Knights of Pythias, belonging to Fergus Falls Lodge No. 59, and has served two terms on the grand council of the United Commercial Travelers from the districts of Montana, Idaho and Utah. In political matters Mr. Jeffery is a Republican, but public affairs have not interested him to the extent of causing him to enter the public arena as a candidate. During the early days he had many interesting and exciting experiences while traveling from point to point by stage-coach in Montana, and another well-remembered journey was the trip he made on the first train sent with passengers from Kalispell to Havre, a journey of 265 miles that took twenty-nine hours to accomplish.

On May 25, 1885, Mr. Jeffery was married to Miss Carrie Peakes, who was born in Halifax, Nova Scotia, daughter of John D. and Mary (Ruffe) Peakes, and she died December 2, 1887. Mr. Peakes was a native of Maine and his wife of Nova Scotia, and they had two children, of whom Mrs. Jeffery was the elder. One child, Marian, was born to Mr. and Mrs. Jeffery, December 2, 1886, and died July 5, 1887.

C. HENRY SMITH. A wide-awake, brainy man, enthusiastic, energetic and optimistic, C. Henry Smith is prominently identified with the manufacturing and commercial life of Butte, and as a man of broad affairs, is contributing both directly and indirectly to the advancement of the material interests of the city. Coming from excellent New England ancestry on the maternal side of the house, and of thrifty German stock on the paternal side, he was born July 13, 1869, in Hartford, Connecticut.

His father, Henry Smith, a native of Hartford, Connecticut, was there engaged in the manufacture of brick for many years. He was very patriotic and public-spirited, and was a veteran of the Civil war, serving in a Connecticut regiment. He became somewhat noted as a manufacturer of brick, having one of the largest plants of the kind in the United States. He spent his last years in Springfield, Massachusetts, dying there in 1881, at the age of three score years. His wife, whose maiden name was Margaret Doty, was born in New York state, and died, in 1871, in Hartford, Connecticut, where her body was laid to rest in "God's acre". Her early ancestors were English, the founder of that branch of the family to which she belonged having been a Mayflower passenger, and Mr. Smith has now in his possession a snuff-box and a fan brought over in that vessel in 1620.

The youngest of a family consisting of seven daughters and two sons, C. Henry Smith is the only member of the parental household living in the west, all of the others being married and most comfortably settled in homes of their own in or near their native city. Leaving the public schools of Hartford when but fifteen years old, he secured a position with a local hardware house as a traveling salesman. He had a natural aptitude, however, for the business in which he so boldly embarked, being self-reliant and self-confident, keen-witted, and possessing the aplomb and savoir faire that won him friends at all times and in all places. Meeting with unquestioned success in his work, Mr. Smith won the reputation of selling more goods than any other man on the road, and continued the business for twenty years, his territory extending from coast to coast, including all of the large cities of the different states of the Union.

While traveling Mr. Smith was constantly taking notes in regard to the places which he visited, with a view of sometime making a permanent location. When ready to make a decision, Montana had by far the most points in her favor as a residential and business place, and he has never yet had a cause to regret that Butte was his choice for a home. Having decided where he should locate, Mr. Smith resigned from his position, and in 1906 took up his residence in Butte. Having previously formulated plans for his future career, he soon organized the Montana Sunbeam Light & Supply Company, becoming president of this organization. This company began business in a small and unpretentious way, but through the efforts, experience, wise management and good business management of Mr. Smith has been wonderfully developed, being today the largest industry of the kind in the world, and the productions of his factories are now sold in all parts of Europe, China, Japan and Australia, the greater per centage of the company's trade having been secured through the mail order system, one hundred and fifty thousand copies of the company's catalogues being issued semi-annually. This company has likewise several of its representatives traveling on the road, selling its productions throughout the United States.

The Rex Portable Bath Tub, introduced by the Montana Sunbeam Light & Supply Company, is made of a patent metal that is practically indestructible, and is guaranteed as unbreakable. It can be folded when not in use, taking up but very little space, is very easily opened and adjusted, and when in use it is as stationary as if it were installed by a master plumber. The heating tank is made of galvanized steel, and finished in blue enamel to correspond with the outside finish of the tub, while the gasoline reservoir that supplies the burner is fitted with an air pressure valve, which secures quick heating of the water. This portable folding bath tub is one of the greatest conveniences invented for use on the ranch, or in the small town that has neither sewerage or water works, providing the rural householder with the comforts of a modern bath room. The Montana Sunbeam Light Company of which Mr. Smith is president, makes a specialty of installing lighting systems for both indoor and outdoor lighting, and have placed on the market a line of lamps that are unexcelled as regards beauty of design, simplicity of construction, durability and safety, being positively unexplosive, and all bearing the approval of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, with no additional rate for home lighting. This company also carries a full line of gasoline vapor lamps, portable and table lamps, tanks and pumps, inverted and upright mantles, and sundries and glassware for all makes of gasoline lamps, being ever ready to respond to the demands of the public in its line of specialties.

The Montana Sunbeam Light & Supply Company has just completed the purchase of a brick building in South Butte, on Front street and California avenue, where it will move its plant within the next month, or as soon as the building can be remodeled to suit their requirements.

On June 7, 1899, Mr. Smith was united in marriage with Helen De Laney, of Geneva, New York. Her father, a native of the Empire state, Frank H. De Laney, is a prominent contractor in Geneva, New York, where he and his wife are still residing. Mr. and Mrs. Smith have one daughter, Frances Edna Smith, whose birth occurred March 7, 1911. Politically Mr. Smith is a Republican, although he is not active in public affairs. Fraternally he is an influential and interested member of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and religiously he belongs to the Presbyterian church.

A man of decided convictions, Mr. Smith is an earnest supporter of all beneficial enterprises, and has full confidence in the future of Montana, with Butte for its leading city. He is a lover of animals, and maintains a kennel of thoroughbred dogs, among which is the champion French bulldog, "Ripp Runinrt," A. K. C., No. 131,334, a prize winner over all competitors in the leading dog shows of the United States.

DR. GUSTAVE PITKANEN. Finland, the glorious little grand duchy which has withstood successfully the aggressions of Russia and maintained the freedom and independence of its people in the face of frightful odds aggregated to conquer them and reduce them to vassalage to the grim autocrat of the icy North in Europe and Asia, is the land which gave birth to Dr. Gustave Pitkanen of Butte, who first saw the light of this world in that hyperborean region on February 29, 1864. There also he was reared and obtained his academic and professional education.

Dr. Pitkanen attended the common schools of his native land until prepared for higher courses of instruction. He completed his education in the Alexander Imperial University of Helingsfors, and there also he acquired his professional instruction and preparation for work, being graduated from the medical department of the university in 1896. After his graduation he practiced his profession at Tammerfors, Finland, for ten years, the only interruption being a period of several months during which he pursued a post graduate course in clinics in Berlin in 1898.

Finland was agreeable to him and seemed to offer him prominence and prosperity in his profession. But there was a land beyond the sea that had a more persuasive voice, a fuller hand of opportunity and a cordial welcome for all men of brain, brawn and enterprise. It beckoned to him with a force that tugged at his heart strings and in time became irresistible. So, in 1906 he came to the United States and at once to Butte, Montana, on his arrival in this country, and in that city he has made his home ever since and built up the excellent professional and personal reputation which he enjoys and so richly deserves.

When he came to Butte Dr. Pitkanen formed a partnership with Dr. G. B. Makkyla, at that time a physician of note whose help would have been valuable to any stranger or young man struggling for recognition. The partnership lasted until 1907, when it was dissolved, and since then Dr. Pitkanen has conducted his practice alone. He is one of the most popular doctors in the city, has an extensive and lucrative practice, has shown great knowledge and skill in his professional work, and has won the confidence and regard of the people of Silver Bow county by the excellence and high tone of his citizenship and strong devotion to their welfare.

Andrew Pitkanen, the doctor's father, was a farmer in Finland, where he was born in 1835 and died in 1893. The doctor's mother, whose maiden name was Helena Sundstrom, was also a native of Finland, born in 1829. She and her husband were married in their native land, and there she died in 1911. She and her husband gloried in the success of their son on this side of the water, and often felt like joining him in this land of freedom and boundless opportunity. But they never left their native heath, and at last, when "life's fitful fever" was over with them, they were laid to rest in the land hallowed by their long and useful labors.

Dr. Pitkanen was married in Finland in 1894 to Miss Hilma Johanson. She died there in 1905, leaving her husband and two children to mourn their irreparable loss. The children are Maria Helena, who was born in 1897, and Gustave Moritz, who was born in 1899. They are both now attending school in Finland. The doctor is a member of the American Medical Association, and the Montana State and the Silver Bow County Medical societies. He also belongs to the Finland Medical Academy.

Although he is a comparatively recent addition to the intellectual and professional forces in Butte, he has taken an earnest and practical interest in the social life of the city. He is a member of the University Club, and wherever men or women, or both, congregate for social enjoyment, he is always considered a valuable addition to the company, and always justifies the warmth of his welcome by the radiance of his presence and the wealth of his contributions to the enjoyment of the circle. Following the custom of his native land and the general tendency of its people, he is connected with the Lutheran church in religious affiliation.

Although a foreigner by birth and training, and but a few years a resident of the United States, Doctor Pitkanen is ardently devoted to the principles of government in this country, and especially warm and helpful in his support of every project designed to further the progress and improvement of that portion of it in which he lives. He is also, as all the people of his native land are, devoted to hunting and fishing, and takes advantage of every opportunity open to him to enjoy these invigorating outdoor recreations. He is prosperous in his business, stands well in the community, has high rank in his profession, and is justly considered one of the best and most useful citizens of Butte.

HARRY K. JONES. One of the later recruits to the professional contingent of Butte, in the field of law, is Harry K. Jones, a member of the firm of Breen & Jones, of which Peter Breen is the senior partner.

Mr. Jones' ancestry dates back both through paternal and maternal lines to settlers of the Revolutionary day. He was born on the 4th of June, 1883, at Minneapolis, Minnesota, and attended the public schools of that city until his eighteenth year, when he entered the law department of the University of Minnesota, from which he was graduated in 1904. After being admitted to practice, Mr. Jones followed his profession in Minneapolis for a short time, after which he located in North Dakota, where he was employed in the operating department of the Great Northern Railroad Company.

In 1906 he came to Butte, where he remained until the latter part of the year, when he removed to Helena, where he was connected with the legal department of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company, until November, 1910, when he returned to Butte and formed his present partnership with Mr. Breen, in Butte.

Mr. Jones was married on May 4th, 1910, to Miss Mary Hauser Kennett, of Helena, Montana, a daughter of the late Samuel H. Kennett. Mrs. Jones' family is among the old settlers of that section and is socially prominent.

LOUIS P. DONOVAN. One of the representative younger member of the bar of Montana is Louis P. Donovan, who is junior member of the well-known law firm of Nolan & Donovan, which controls a large and important professional business and is recognized as one of the leading law firms of Butte, the metropolis of the state. The success and prestige which are his in his profession offer the best evidence of the ability and sterling characteristics of Mr. Donovan and he is one of the popular citizens of the community in which he has elected to establish his home and in which he is serving as chief deputy county attorney of Silver Bow county.

Mr. Donovan claims the fine old Hawkeye State as the place of his nativity and is a scion of one of its honored pioneer families. He was born in Franklin county, Iowa, on the 10th of February, 1880, and is a son of Michael K. and Margaret (McGinley) Donovan, both natives of the Dominion of Canada, where their respective parents settled upon immigrating to America from Ireland. Michael K. Donovan was born in the year 1837 and was reared and educated in Canada, where he continued to maintain his home until 1852, when he removed to Wisconsin and established his residence at Ripon. He continued to be identified with various lines of business activity in that state until about 1868, when he removed with his family to Iowa and numbered himself among its pioneers. He finally became one of the prominent and influential citizens of Wright county. He maintained his residence at Eagle Grove, that county, for many years and there his principal vocation was that of farmer. He was mayor of the town at the time of his death, which occurred on the 9th of March, 1909, and no citizen commanded a more secure place in popular confidence and esteem than did this sterling pioneer. His wife, who was born in the province of Quebec, Canada, in 1839, still resides at Eagle Grove and is held in affectionate regard by all who know her. She is a devout communicant of the Catholic church, as was also her husband, and of their children three sons and three daughters are living.

Louis P. Donovan is indebted to the public schools of Eagle Grove, Iowa, for his early educational discipline and was there graduated in the high school as a member of the class of 1900. He was soon afterward matriculated in the University of Iowa, at Iowa City, in which he was graduated in 1904 and from which he received the degree of Bachelor of Philosophy. In the meanwhile he had formulated definite plans for his future career and he was fortunate in being afforded the best of advantages in preparing for the work of his chosen profession. He entered the law department of the celebrated University of Wisconsin, at Madison, the capital of the state, and in this institution he was graduated as a member of the class of 1906, with the degree of Bachelor of Laws. Thus admirably equipped for the practical work of the law, he decided to establish himself in practice in the great and rapidly progressing state of Montana. He arrived in the city of Butte on the 1st of August, 1906, only a short time after his graduation, and here he soon afterward formed a professional partnership with Arthur B. Melzner, under the firm name of Donovan & Melzner. His novitiate was not prolonged, as he soon proved his powers as a resourceful trial lawyer and effective counselor, and his firm gained a very satisfactory practice at the local bar. This alliance continued until the 1st of February, 1909, and thereafter Mr. Donovan continued in individual practice until June 1, 1910, when he formed a most effective partnership with his present coadjutor, Timothy F. Nolan, under the title of Nolan & Donovan. The firm maintain well-appointed offices in the Silver Bow building and control a large and representative law business of general order, the while the same shows a constantly cumulative tendency, as both of the interested principals are known as lawyers of fine ability and as men of impregnable integrity of purpose. On the 10th of June, 1910, Mr. Donovan was appointed to fill out an unexpired term in the office of chief deputy attorney of Silver Bow county and his effective service led to his reappointment for the full term, which will expire in January, 1913.

In politics Mr. Donovan is found arrayed as a staunch and effective advocate of the principles and policies for which the Democratic party stands sponsor, and his religious faith is that of the Catholic church, in which he is a zealous communicant of the parish of St. Patrick's church in Butte. He is popular in the professional, business and social circles of his home city. At the time of this writing, in the spring of 1912, he is serving as grand knight of the local lodge of the Knights of Columbus and also as vice president of the University Club. He is likewise a popular member of the Silver Bow Club, another of the representative organizations of the Montana metropolis. His standing in his profession and as a loyal and progressive citizen well entitles him to recognition in this history of the state of his adoption.

Mr. Donovan was married Dec. 26, 1911, to Sadie C. Donohoe, of Butte. At present residing at 533 W. Mercury, Butte, Montana.

WILLIAM R. KIRK. Prominent among the younger members of the legal fraternity of the Treasure state is William R. Kirk of Lewistown, whose natural talents and ability class him among the more successful attorneys of Montana. A native of Wisconsin, he was born in Pepin county, July 29, 1884.

His father, William George Kirk, was born in New York state in December, 1836, and is now a resident of Everett, Washington. He served as a soldier in the Civil war, being for three years a member of Company C, Eighth Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, which was known as the "Eagle Regiment." He was discharged on account of ill health, and on returning to Wisconsin was for many years engaged in general farming in Pepin county. He married Catherine E. Nesbitt, who was born in Canada, 1844, and died on the home farm, in Wisconsin, 1896. They were the parents of seven children, one of whom died in infancy, William R. being the sixth child in succession of birth.

Obtaining his elementary education in the common and graded schools of his native county, William R. Kirk was graduated from the Menomonie City high school with the class of 1903. The ensuing year he attended the St. Paul (Minn.) Law College, and on his return to Wisconsin successfully passed the bar examination, being admitted to practice in all the courts of that state. Coming to Butte, Montana, in March, 1906, Mr. Kirk was for two years associated in his professional work with his brother, the late John N. Kirk, when, in 1908, Judge George M. Bourquin was admitted to partnership with the brothers, the firm name becoming Kirk, Bourquin & Kirk. This enterprising firm became widely known throughout Silver Bow county, and built up an extensive and exceedingly lucrative business. John N. Kirk, the founder of the firm, was born in Pepin county, Wisconsin, March 12, 1871, and was actively and successfully engaged in the practice of law in Butte from 1894 until his untimely death, while in manhood's prime, on September 26, 1911, his death being a loss to the bar, to the community in which he had so long lived, and to the county and the state. After the death of the senior member of the firm he continued in the practice in association with Geo. M. Bourquin, who in April, 1912, was appointed to the Federal bench. He removed his offices to Lewistown, Montana, June 1, 1912.

Mr. Kirk is a Progressive Republican in politics, and takes an active interest in local and national affairs. He belongs to both the State, and the Silver Bow County, bar associations, and is a member of the Silver Bow Club, and of the University Club, being prominent and popular in the social life of the city. He has assisted in the organization of different mining companies, and has mining interests of value.

LEON S. THURSTON. The public press of Montana, outside of the two or three largest cities, has no more conspicuous example of what a newspaper should be, both as to its contents and its business management, than the Stanford World. It is distinctively individual, is clean and absolutely fearless in the publication of news and the advancement of the policies for which it stands, and in no town of the state of similar size do the business men give a local paper such generous support. The World has a large circulation through central Montana, and it has gained the one thing which above all others a newspaper should possess—influence based on confidence in the integrity of the paper's management.

The publisher of the World, Leon S. Thurston, in the public life of the state as well as in press circles has made a fine record in a few years and is attracting increasing attention from the older leaders in affairs. Energetic, progressive and courageous, he has stood for the right things, and through his paper and through his individual character he is exerting an effective influence in promoting progress of the right kind in his community and the state at large.

Mr. Thurston was born in Marshall, Minnesota, September 27, 1885, and was educated in the public schools of that place. After his graduation from high school he began his first regular experience in newspaper work, and has never known any other vocation. His first work was with the Russell Review, but in 1906, when he was twenty-one, he came to Montana and has been a resident of the Judith basin ever since. For the first four years he was connected with a paper at Moore, after which he came to Stanford and bought the World, which in a short time he has improved and developed into one of the most successful country journals of Montana.

Mr. Thurston is a son of George H. and Viola A. (Waite) Thurston, who now reside at Moore, Montana. Both were natives of New York state. The father throughout the period of his active life was a substantial farmer, and settled in Minnesota during the early development of that state. During the war he served as a member of the Fourth Minnesota Infantry. He was one of the original Lincoln Republicans, and all his life he has been vigorous in supporting the principles which he believes to be right. For many years he has been one of the active members of the Presbyterian church. He and his wife were married in Minnesota, and they have chosen Montana as the place to spend their declining years. There were eight children born to their union, Leon being the fourth, and the others still living are: Corrington W., who resides with his family at Walla Walla, Washington; Charles F. is married and lives in Stanford; H. Stanley is a Stanford resident; A. Eugene, whose home is at Moore, is a student in the Montana State University; Ada is a high school student at Moore; and Mrs. Henry Burckhardt is a resident of Russell, Minnesota.

Leon S. Thurston was married at Billings, Montana, on March 12, 1909, to Miss Addie A. Goss. She is a daughter of Farnum and Sarah Goss, residents of Leroy, Minnesota. Mr. and Mrs. Thurston have a pleasant home in Stanford and are both prominent in local society. They belong to the Presbyterian church, in the work of which Mrs. Thurston is especially active. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias, having been chancellor commander, and also with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Masonic order.

As a citizen Mr. Thurston has been called upon for varied service in the public life of the community. He first held the office of justice of the peace and was United States commissioner for this district. But he has given up the office of justice of the peace as well as the United States commissioner to become mayor of Stanford, of which he is the present incumbent, being the youngest man elected to this office in the state, age twenty-six. He also ran for state representative with the old Republican party and with it met defeat. At the present time he is precinct chairman of the Republican party, and has taken an active part in politics. He is himself a good speaker and has often presided in political and business gatherings. Mr. Thurston is typical of the average vigorous American in being a baseball enthusiast, and is manager of the local team. He is also fond of hunting and other diversions.

Concerning his home state, this progressive and well informed young publisher says: "I believe in the future agricultural Montana as I do of money in the bank. There are probably few whose experiences have been more direct, practical or convincing than my own, and basing my assertions on these things I feel perfectly safe in predicting that Montana is destined to be the greatest agricultural state in the Union."

SIDNEY J. RUNDLE has been an undeniable factor in the settlement of the agricultural districts of Montana, and as such is deserving of much credit. Certainly he is eminently deserving of some mention in this historical and biographical work, embracing as it does, the lives and works of those men who have been prominent and active in business matters pertaining to the growth of the state and the development of its resources.

Mr. Rundle was born in Toronto, Ontario, Canada, on April 13, 1884, and is the son of James and Adeline (Pickel) Rundle, both natives of Ontario. James Rundle was a prominent farmer and land owner in Ontario, and well known in that country. He was twice married. His first wife, the mother of Sidney Rundle, died in 1884, and he later married Annie Frank. Of the first union four children were born, one of whom is deceased. The others are Cephas, a farmer in Ontario, Beatrice, the wife of Fred Curtis of Ontario and Sidney J. Of the second marriage there were five children.

Sidney J. Rundle was given the advantages of a common school education in the excellent schools of Toronto, and was graduated from the high school of that city in 1891. He came directly to the States and first settled in Kenmare, North Dakota, where he engaged in the real estate business,—a line which has always presented unusual attractions to him in which he has from the beginning been so signally successful. He became the owner of a large quantity of farm lands in Williams county, which he still holds. He remained there for almost five years, coming to Glasgow in 1906, where he immediately launched a real estate and abstract business, which has proved to be undeniably successful under his able and wise management. It is an acknowledged fact that Mr. Rundle is the leading man in Valley county in his line of business, and he has undoubtedly accomplished more in the way of locating homeseekers on the farm lands of Montana than any other man in this section of the country. His advertisement, "See Rundle," is one of the cleverest of ideas, and presents the opportunities of the great Treasure state in a manner most attractive, and certainly productive of excellent results. He has his principal office in Glasgow, but maintains branch offices in Saco and Poplar, and in both of these places he has representatives who are personally familiar with every inch of available land in those vicinities. Not only is he successful in establishing the homeseeker on government lands, but he owns and controls a vast acreage of lands already under cultivation, which are to be purchased on the most agreeable terms. He also owns considerable valuable Glasgow property. Mr. Rundle is one of the ablest business men known in this section of the country, and his natural splendid business qualifications are most admirably fortified by his engaging personality. He is alert, obliging and pleasant, and moreover, he is thoroughly posted upon the matters in which he is interested, and is able to inspire confidence which is never misplaced. His reputation for honorable dealings is one of his most valuable business assets, and has done more to establish him in the place he now occupies than any other characteristic. Mr. Rundle is at present serving Glasgow in the capacity of city clerk. He is a Republican and takes an active interest in the political preferment or honors. He is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, but beyond that he maintains no other fraternal affiliations.

In 1906 Mr. Rundle was united in marriage with Miss Florence May Heddon, a native of Ontario. They have two children,—Lawrence Sidney Rundle, and Helena Ruth Rundle.

DR. G. F. TURMAN gives promise of becoming one of the best known and most useful physicians in the great northwest. His heritage, his natural ability and his excellent education have fitted him to accomplish a great work for humanity. His profession is of his own choosing and to it he gives the best that is in him.

His father, E. G. Turman, was born in Virginia ten years before the great struggle in which her sons were compelled to choose between their state and their nation. Loyal to his state he lived always within her borders, working for reconstruction and endeavoring to build up her mercantile credit. In 1911, he passed away and was laid to rest in the town where he had spent his life. He left to mourn him, a wife and a son. He had married, in his early manhood, Emazetta Philips, a characteristic daughter of one of the old families of Virginia. It was she who taught her son that honor, honesty and hospitality have made the people of Virginia famous and will do much to bring success to the newer country of the west.

Young Mr. Turman was educated at the University of Virginia, graduating from the medical department of that institution in the class of 1905. For one year he served as ambulance surgeon and city hospital surgeon in Richmond and then went to Missoula, Montana where the opening for a general practice seemed more to his liking. In this thriving city, his ability as a surgeon as well as a general practitioner was at once recognized.

He is a member of the county, state and national medical associations and in 1909 served Missoula county as their public physician. Ambitious to be abreast of the times in all branches of medical science, Dr. Turman, in 1910, resigned this position to continue his studies in Vienna. After little more than a year abroad he returned once more to Missoula to resume his rapidly growing practice.

Frank W. McCarthy.

Dr. Turman, although a person of wide reading and much general information, is neither a lodge member nor a politician. His entire time is at the disposal of those who are in need of his science. Up to the present time, he remains a bachelor, wed only to the profession of which he is making so marked a success. She is, as of old, a most jealous mistress.

The traditions of the sunny south, the culture of the old world and the courage of the great west have produced in this young man a physician courteous in heart and manner, learned in his profession and equal to any emergency that may befall him or the city of his adoption.

FERDINAND A. SILCOX. One of the more important bureaus of the National Department of Agriculture is the Forest Service, which has charge of the administration and protection of the national forests, and likewise promotes the practice of forestry. As district forester Ferdinand A. Silcox, of Missoula, Montana, has the management of one of the six districts among which the national forests of the United States are distributed, the territory of which he has control covering an area of thirty million acres. He was born, December 25, 1882, in Columbus, Georgia, and there grew to manhood. His father, Ferdinand A. Silcox, Sr., was born in South Carolina, while his mother, Carrie A. (Spear) Silcox, was a native of Georgia.

Completing the course of study in the common and high schools of Columbus, Mr. Silcox entered Charleston College, in Charleston, South Carolina, and was there graduated with the degree of Bachelor of Science in 1903. Going then to New Haven, Connecticut, he took a post graduate course in forestry at Yale University, securing the degree of Master of Forestry. Thus finely equipped for the work in which he was most interested, Mr. Silcox secured a position in the Forest Service, for a year being located in Colorado. Coming to Missoula, Montana, in 1906, he was for a time technical assistant in one of the forests, later being made an inspector, in that capacity becoming thoroughly familiar with all parts of the state. In 1908 Mr. Silcox was promoted, becoming assistant to Mr. W. B. Greeley, district forester for district one, which includes Montana, northeastern Washington, northern Idaho, northwest South Dakota, northern Michigan, northern Minnesota, and southwestern North Dakota, with headquarters at Missoula. Energetic and enthusiastic, with a broad capacity for organizing and directing, Mr. Silcox proved himself of great value to the service, and when, in May, 1911, Mr. Greeley was transferred to Washington, he was appointed his successor in the Missoula office. This district of which Mr. Silcox has supervision includes all of the national forests of Montana and Idaho north of the Salmon river, some small forests in Michigan, two in Minnesota, two areas of land in North Dakota, and some in South Dakota, the district being extensive.

The Forest Service is mayhap of greater value and importance to our country than any of the other departments of agriculture of note of the government. It directs the cutting of mature timber; aids the work of forest planting; supervises their protection; allots grazing privileges and issues grazing permits; divides the lands into sheep and cattle ranges; and has established a branch of products to further the more complete utilization of the products of the forests, a work which promises to be of inestimable value to the industrial and commercial world.

Mr. Silcox married, March 4, 1909, Miss Louise Thatcher, who was born June 10, 1885, in Charleston, South Carolina, and a daughter of John Q. A. and Mrs. C. E. Thatcher.

FRANK W. MCCARTHY. As manager of the Havre Electric Company, Frank W. McCarthy is one of the prominent factors in the business and municipal affairs of Havre, and during his brief business career has made a very fine record for efficiency and high-principled citizenship.

Mr. McCarthy came to Montana six years ago, and was at the time a young man of twenty-three. He was born in Troy, New York, February 16, 1883, attended the public schools of his native city and gained his initial business experience there. In April, 1906, he arrived in Havre, but thence went to Butte and for two years was employed by the Hennessey Mercantile Company of that city. In May, 1908, he returned to Havre as book-keeper for the Electric Light Company, and three years later was entrusted by its stockholders with the office of manager. As executive head of one of the important public service companies of northern Montana he has made a very efficient record, both for the company and for the municipality and private patronage.

Mr. McCarthy's grandparents on both sides came to America from Ireland. Mr. McCarthy is the younger of two children born to John B. and Nellie (Whitney) McCarthy, both of whom were natives of New York state and now reside at Watervliet, that state. Both of them were born about the year 1854. The father is an old railroad man and is still in the business.

On October 19, 1908, in New York state, Mr. McCarthy was married to Miss Kathrine E. Barry, a daughter of Bernard Barry. They are the parents of two children, Katherine E., who was born at Havre, August 9, 1910, and Janet Elizabeth, born July 25, 1912. The McCarthy home is one of the most attractive in the city of Havre, and Mr. and Mrs. McCarthy have a large social acquaintance. They are both members of the Catholic church, and he is affiliated with the Knights of Columbus and is a trustee of the Order of Elks. In politics he is a Democrat. He is fond of the outdoor sports, and is one of the vigorous young citizens who are taking up the important responsibilities and larger affairs of the state of Montana.

JAMES WILLIAM LEEDOM. The metropolitan and up-to-date character of the city of Butte, Montana, is fittingly exemplified in the number of beauty of its restaurants and cafes, one of the finest of which is owned and conducted by Mr. William Leedom. Mr. Leedom has spared no expense in fitting up his establishment elegantly and artistically with an eye to the comfort and convenience of his guests, and as his own chef caters to the desires of the inner man with an interest and success that cannot be assured when one must depend upon hired assistants to head that important part of a cafe's business. Leedom's Cafe is located conveniently in the downtown district and enjoys a large patronage which constantly increases. In the conduct and management of the business he is ably assisted by Mrs. Leedom, who gives her personal attention to the guests and trade in the front part of the cafe while her husband is in the culinary department, a portion of her duties including also the cashiership of the place. The unusual success of the business is due entirely to the ability and energy of these two indefatigable workers and the pride they feel in their achievements is worthy and pardonable.

Mr. Leedom came originally from Carroll county, Missouri, in which locality he was born December 13, 1868, and spent the first eighteen years of his life. Mr. Leedom's father was a native of Ohio and the son of a minister who took his family to Missouri in an early day. The elder Leedom was a farmer by occupation and died in Carroll county, Missouri, in 1873, when his son James William, the only survivor of five children, was a lad of four years. The mother of Mr. Leedom still survives and makes her home with her son in Butte.

When eighteen years of age Mr. Leedom started west with the determination to carve a worthy career for himself, and after spending one year at Kansas City, he located at Seattle, Washington, remaining there four years, being employed as chef in some of the largest hotels and restaurants of that thriving city. From Seattle he went to Spokane but was there only a short time before he decided to go to Butte and arrived here in 1894. Before setting up in business here permanently Mr. Leedom visited various other points to ascertain the opportunities they had to offer, for this purpose going to Kansas City, Salt Lake City, and several points in California, and was in the Goldfield country during the great boom there over the discovery of the big gold mines. He was in business for a short time at Missoula but finally decided that no city held the inducements for the establishment of a fine cafe that were found in Butte, and he accordingly secured his present place and has since 1908 conducted it continuously with marked success. Mr. Leedom is known as one of the leading chefs of the state of Montana and is an expert with no superior in his line. He early learned the value of industry and thrift and recalls how he earned his first money as a boy of ten years plowing corn with one of the old style diamond plows, working twelve hours a day at the task, and receiving the sum of twenty-five cents a day for his arduous labor.

One of the evidences of the prosperity now being enjoyed by Mr. Leedom and his wife is the handsome automobile they own and drive. Mr. Leedom is exceedingly fond of all kinds of outdoor sports, is an ardent fisherman, a baseball enthusiast, and is one of the best skaters in this part of the state.

On September 13, 1901, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Leedom and Miss Francis Iva Lewis, the daughter of Joseph D. and Phoebe Lewis. Mrs. Leedom's father died at the age of fifty-five years in Bay City, Michigan, while her mother still lives at that place with one of her married daughters. Mr. and Mrs. Leedom are prominent in leading social and religious circles of Butte and are members of the Baptist church. Mrs. Leedom holds membership in the Ladies' Woodcraft order.

As a citizen Mr. Leedom is public spirited and liberal, and lends the weight of his influence to the furtherance of all efforts that have for their object the advancement of the best interests of this city and state. He is a man of genial personality, of unimpeachable honesty and integrity; and possesses a high order of business talents that make for his success in whatever capacity he bends his energies.

WILLIAM F. WILFORD. Seizing each opportunity as it came to him, and turning it to his best advantage, William F. Wilford, of Fort Benton, Montana, has risen from a poor boy to one of the most successful business men in this thriving city. He has not been afraid to take what to other people looked like a risk, but which he was far-sighted enough to regard otherwise. Entering the automobile business as the pioneer in this section of the country, everything was against him, but his splendid business methods and his determination to succeed, as well as the gradual change of the automobile from an article of luxury to one of necessity, militated in his favor, and success was eventually his. He has not devoted himself to his business exclusively, but has always taken an active interest in the public affairs of the community, and Fort Benton has no citizen who takes a greater interest in her welfare, both politically and socially.

William F. Wilford was born in Washington county, Minnesota, on the 24th of October, 1880. He was the son of John O. Wilford, a native of the state of Wisconsin. He was a resident of Baldwin, Wisconsin, for a number of years and was one of the most influential men in the town. He was interested in the meat and ice business, and at various times during his residence in this city was president of the town council. He moved to Wisconsin from Minnesota three years after the birth of his son William, so that the latter grew up in his father's native state. John O. Milford married Vinelia Rutherford, who was a native of Minnesota, but their married life was not long, for she died in 1888, at the age of thirty-six. Three children were born of this union, of whom William was the eldest.

Having received his elementary education in the public schools and the high school of Baldwin, he then matriculated at the University of Minnesota. He completed a year of work in this institution, being at the end of this time eighteen years of age, when the Spanish-American war broke out and for the time drove all thoughts of study from the head of this young man. He enlisted in Troop I, of the Fifth United States Cavalry. He was in the service for a year, being stationed in Porto Rico. He was discharged on the 2nd of May, 1899, and then returned to the state where he had enlisted, locating at Faribault, Minnesota. Here he took up electrical and mechanical engineering, and received the offer of a position with the Sheffield Milling Company, which he accepted. After working for this firm for two years, he went to Morristown, Minnesota, in the employ of the same company, remaining here two years also. His next position was in Owatonna, Minnesota, where he became chief engineer of the Owatonna Gas and Electric Heating Company. After three years in this position, his work was adjusted so satisfactory that he was promoted to the position of manager, and altogether spent three and a half years in the service of the company. In October of 1906 he came out to Montana and located in Fort Benton, where he became superintendent of the Electric Light and Power Plant. For three years he remained in this position, and then in the spring of 1909 he entered the automobile business, in which he has been engaged ever since. When he entered this field there was only one machine in the town, now many are in use and a new car causes scarcely any comment, whereas it used to be an event to be discussed at length. He has a very satisfactory business and one which will continue to grow. He is sole agent for Fort Benton and the vicinity, of the Petrel, the Ford and the Redding cars, all of which have proved to be well suited to the country and the needs of the people in this locality.

The interest in military affairs which was aroused in Mr. Wilford through his Spanish-American war experience has never died down, and today he is one of the most active members of the Montana National Guards, being captain of the company and one of its first members from Fort Benton. In politics Mr. Wilford is nominally a Democrat, that is, he votes the Democratic ticket in the national elections, but in the state and local elections he votes for the man whom he considers the strongest man for the place. This is the attitude of the western man so often, in contrast to the man of the east, who usually considers himself bound to vote with his party regardless of the qualifications of the candidate, and is one of the arguments that political economists advance as proof of their belief that there will be a break up of the great parties. In that case it is such men as Mr. Wilford who stand by their convictions and are not simply sheep following a leader, who will carry the country through the crisis. Fraternally, Mr. Wilford is a member of the Ancient Free and Accepted Masons, belonging to Benton Lodge No. 25. He is a member of that organization which has meant much to the advancement of Fort Benton, the Commercial Club, and has ever been a valuable worker in this association.

Mr. Wilford was married in Morristown, Minnesota, on the 10th of May, 1902, to Miss Monte M. Rhorer, the daughter of Samuel Benton Rhorer, who was a native of Minnesota. One son John Benton Wilford has been born to this union, his birth occurring on the 19th of February, 1907, at Morristown, Minnesota.

JACOB RITTER. One of the youngest men in the business world of Fort Benton, who has achieved such success that it is thought fitting that a brief account of his activities should be incorporated within these pages, is Jacob Ritter. He is only twenty-five, but has had to support himself for a number of years and has gained an experience that many men of twice his age would value. Beginning in the humble capacity of a stenographer he is now general manager of one of the most successful enterprises in the state of Montana. Such a gap was not bridged by magic nor in one leap, but by hard work, by devotion to the interests of his employers, and by a gradual advancement. He always took a deep interest in his work and put his best self into it, making himself invaluable to his company. His cordiality and the charm of his manner have won him many friends and it is safe to say that although he may seem to have climbed quite far on the ladder to success, yet twenty years hence he will look back upon these years as those in which he stood on the bottom rungs of this ladder, so difficult of ascent.

Jacob Ritter was born in Macomb county, Michigan, on the 20th of January, 1887. He was a son of Jacob Ritter, senior, who was a native of New York state. The ancestors of this side of the family came from Holland in the early days of this country and settled in Pennsylvania. Jacob Ritter, senior, saw service in the Civil war, and in the early seventies moved to Michigan, and located on a farm in Macomb county. Here he is living and pursuing the peaceful life of a farmer. His wife was Nancy Blocher, who like her husband was a descendant of Hollanders who had immigrated to Pennsylvania in colonial days. She was a native of New York state, and her marriage to Jacob Ritter occurred in New York in 1894. Young Jacob, then only seven years of age lost his mother, and thus grew up without a mother's care. He was the youngest of the boys in the family of seven. Of these children four were boys and three were girls, so the little fellow was well cared for, though it was not the same as a mother's love.

Having received his elementary education in the common schools of Macomb county, he entered the University of Valparaiso, at Valparaiso, Indiana, where he took a business course. He completed this course at the age of nineteen, and then turned his face westward, whither he had always been strongly drawn. Coming to Fort Benton, he accepted the first position which was offered him, this being a place as stenographer with T. C. Power & Brother Company, Limited, who were dealers in general merchandise. He filled this position nine months, and during this time labored to make himself as indispensable as possible. He succeeded and was next appointed bookkeeper, which position he filled for three years. On the first of January, 1910, he was made general manager and has held this position ever since. This business was established in 1867, and is the oldest firm of its kind in existence in northern Montana. The annual amount of business transacted amounts to something like three hundred and twenty-five thousand dollars, and about twenty-two persons are employed. Mr. Ritter has the entire oversight of the business, and it is a big compliment to his energy and tact that he should be entrusted with such a responsibility, but he has been tried in the balance and not found wanting, and his employers watching the accuracy and care with which he performed his first duties began to watch him at this time and their expectations were fulfilled. In addition to his duties as general manager, he is also secretary of the company.

Politically Mr. Ritter is an independent voter, believing that the two great parties are now so nearly identical that the question lies no longer between parties but between men. He takes no active part in politics, being content to perform his duty as a citizen by casting his vote at the polls. He is a member of the Masonic order, affiliating with the Fort Benton Lodge, No. 25, of which he is at present worshipful master, and he is also a member of the Commercial Club. His social life and his business take up the greater share of his time, for he is unmarried, and has no family ties.

ROBERT C. CARDELL. Prominent among the younger generations of business men in Billings, Montana, Robert C. Cardell holds prestige as president of the Cardell Lumber and Coal Company, secretary of the Montana Sash and Door Company, and a director and one of the organizers of the Farmers and Traders State Bank. Although he has been a resident of Billings only since 1906, he has already attained a substantial position among the leaders of industrial and commercial activity in the city, and his ability as an organizer and executive has been recognized by his business associates on various occasions. Mr. Cardell was born in Malcom, Powshiek county, Iowa, July 21, 1879, and is a son of Leander and Emma L. (Chapman) Cardell.

The late Leander Cardell had an eventful and successful career. Born in the state of Vermont, in 1835, he was still a youth when he joined a party of venturesome comrades and started for the newly discovered gold fields of California, making the trip around the Horn. Three years were spent in mining, but with only indifferent success, and he eventually returned to his home in the East, only to once more seek his fortune in the western fields as a pioneer in Iowa. Locating in Powshiek county, until 1880, he carried on farming and stock-raising, and at that time removed to Perry, Dallas county, Iowa, where he was engaged in the real estate and loan business until 1895, when he retired from active life. While a resident of Malcom he was actively interested in political matters, serving with dignity and distinction as a member of the Iowa state legislature, and in his death, which occurred in 1907, his community lost one of its most able and representative men. He and his wife, who survives him, held membership in the Congregational church. Of their five children, three died in infancy, the survivors being: Florence, the wife of John R. Swearingen, president of the Montana Sash and Door Company of Billings, and Robert C.

Robert C. Cardell was educated in the schools of Perry, Iowa, in Stetson University and the University of Michigan, and his first venture in the field of business was in a partnership in Perry, in 1900, in the firm of John R. Swearingen & Company, dealers in lumber. In 1903 he removed to Muscatine, Iowa, where he became a traveling salesman for the Huttig Manufacturing Company, makers of sash, doors and mill work, and subsequently became a stockholder in that company, and when, in 1906, the company awoke to the great possibilities in the West, Mr. Cardell was sent west as one of the directors of the company's western branch at Billings, which position he has filled with ability and judgment to the present time. On February 1, 1911, he was one of the organizers of the Montana Sash and Door Company, capitalized at $500,000, and at that time became its secretary. The Cardell Lumber and Coal Company was organized at the time the Huttig Manufacturing Company established its western branch in Billings, in 1906, and now Mr. Cardell is president of this company.

Fraternally, Mr. Cardell is connected with Ashlar Lodge, No. 29, Ancient, Free and Accepted Masons; Billings Chapter No. 6, Royal Arch Masons; Aldemar

Commandery, No. 5, Knights Templar; Butte Consistory (thirty-second degree), Scottish Rite, and Algeria Temple, Ancient, Arabic, Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, of Helena. He also holds membership in Billings Lodge, No. 394, Benevolent, Protective Order of Elks, and like his father, is a Republican in his political proclivities.

On April 10, 1906, Mr. Cardell was united in marriage with Miss Florence Penfield, who was born in Missouri, the second of the three children of Herlan Penfield. Mr. and Mrs. Cardell have had two children: Mary and Robert Leander.

GEORGE W. SEEBECK. In May, 1906, George W. Seebeck came to Montana, settling at Choteau, where he was in the employ of C. H. Drake as drug clerk for fifteen months, at the end of which he removed to Conrad. Mr. Seebeck is an enterprising citizen, whose persistency and initiative have won him an enviable place in business circles in this city. He is the owner of a fine ranch of one hundred and sixty acres, eligibly located not far distant from Conrad, and he also has valuable real estate holdings within the city limits.

A native of the fine old Gopher state of the Union, George W. Seebeck was born in LeSueur county, Minnesota, December 26, 1877, and he is a son of August H. and Bertha C. (Saltan) Seebeck, the former of whom was born in Germany and the latter of whom is a native of Minnesota. The father came to the United States in the early '60s, at the age of eleven years, and in the pioneer days of Minnesota assisted in the subjugation of hostile Indians. He was a miller by trade but after coming to America engaged in agricultural pursuits. He and his family now reside in the city of Redwood Falls, Minnesota. August H. Seebeck is possessed of considerable inventive genius and among the devices which he has had patented is a straw stacker much in use by farmers of the middle west. Mr. and Mrs. Seebeck are the parents of twelve children, and of that number the subject of this review was the first born.

George W. Seebeck was a child of but three years of age when his parents removed from LeSueur county, Minnesota, to Redwood county, that state. To the public schools of the latter place he is indebted for his preliminary educational training. He was reared to maturity on the old homestead farm, in the work and management of which he early began to assist his father. At the age of twenty-three years he left home and entered the employ of E. A. Luscher, a druggist at Redwood Falls. Mr. Seebeck spent four years as an apprentice learning the drug business and in the spring of 1906 he came to Montana and located at Choteau, where he worked in the drug store of C. H. Drake for the ensuing fifteen months. August 26, 1907, he came to Conrad and here undertook the conduct of a drug store established by Mr. Drake. He afterward had charge of this store, which was the first one opened for business in this city, and he became a partner in the Drake Drug Company, which was incorporated under the laws of the state in 1912. The official corps of the company were as follows: C. H. Drake, president and treasurer; A. G. Witmer, secretary; and Mr. Seebeck, manager.

May 26, 1908, Mr. Seebeck was appointed postmaster at Conrad and on June 30, 1910, he was reappointed to that position, being promoted from fourth class to third. In politics he is a stalwart Republican and while he is interested in public affairs he is not an active politician. In the time-honored Masonic order he is a valued and appreciative member of Conrad Lodge No. 80, Free and Accepted Masons, and in religious matters he and his wife are devout members of the Presbyterian church, in the different departments of whose work they are zealous factors.

When Mr. Seebeck landed in Choteau, Montana, his capital in a financial way amounted to thirty cents. With the passage of time he has made the most of his talents in a business way and he now holds prestige as one of the prominent and influential citizens of Conrad. He has a finely improved farm of one hundred and sixty acres, located four miles from Conrad, and he owns a beautiful home in this city.

June 26, 1907, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Seebeck to Miss Marguerite E. Barr, a daughter of Adam H. Barr, of Kansas. Mr. and Mrs. Seebeck are the parents of two children, George B., born April 12, 1908; and Harold Maxwell, born December 1, 1909.

OSCAR JUDSON SEELEY. In little over seven years the Seeley Lumber Company, of Billings, has grown to be one of the leading establishments of its kind in the state, and its success may be directly traced to its organizer and executive, Oscar Judson Seeley, a man who has been the architect of his own fortune in a marked degree.

With yards supplied with every kind of lumber and building material demanded by the trade, Mr. Seeley's operations are seen to require more than ordinary executive ability and a knowledge of detail that no one acquires who is not thoroughly versed in the business. His operations cover a wide area, as he maintains a number of branch yards in the state and handles some of the most desirable business in this section of the country.

Mr. Seeley was born at Cordova, Rock Island county, Illinois, September 5, 1864, and is the son of Jesse and Gulaelma (Witter) Seeley. His great-great-grandfather was Capt. Samuel Seeley, who was killed by the British at the defense of Danbury, Connecticut, and his great-grandmother, Elizabeth Taylor, was a cousin of Zachariah Taylor. Jesse N. Seeley, son of Nathan Seeley (an 1812 veteran) and Elizabeth (Taylor) Seeley, was born at Charleston, New York, in 1815 and received his education for the ministry at the old Hamilton Theological Seminary of New York. He became the representative of the Baptist Home Missionary Society for the then territory of Iowa, and organized and established many of the churches which are now the pillars of the Baptist denomination in that state. He lived to see the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of many of these churches. On his retirement from the ministry he moved to Clinton, Iowa, where his last years were spent, and where he died in 1898, being eighty-three years of age. The life-work for humanity of this pioneer minister is intimately interwoven with the development of the middle West.

By his first wife he had two children, all being now deceased. His second wife, who bore the name of Gulaelma Witter, was born near Albany, New York, a descendant of the Holland Dutch Witters, who settled on the Van Rasalear grant during the Dutch reign, and who died in 1887, having been the mother of three children, Rachel A., who was the wife of George A. Rock of Two Harbors, Minnesota, and died in 1911; Oscar Judson; and Jessie Elma, who married Francis V. Hall of Clinton, Iowa, and died in 1911.

Oscar Judson Seeley received his early education in the public schools at Clinton, Iowa, supplemented by attendance at the Central University at Pella, Iowa. After finishing school he was employed in the Clinton postoffice, the C. & N. W. Ry., and C. Lamb & Sons, manufacturers of lumber, later moving to Minnesota, learning telegraphy and following that occupation on various roads for about four years.

Realizing, before too late, the limited opportunities in that line of endeavor, he went to Minneapolis and sought employment as shipping clerk for a lumber and sash and door concern.

Mr. Seeley has had a varied and all-around experience in the lumber business, having held the position of logging superintendent, saw and planing mill superintendent, charge of sales, credits, auditor for a line of yards, etc., all of which eminently fitted him for the time when opportunity came.

In 1906 Mr. Seeley decided to enter the retail lumber business in Montana and organized the Seeley Lumber Company, with headquarters at Billings. Having begun his career as a lumberman at the bottom of the ladder and worked his way up rung by rung, he has thoroughly familiarized himself with all the details of the trade, and has won success by hard work and thorough honesty, intelligent effort and efficient service.

The duties and responsibilities of his business have demanded the greater part of his time and attention, and he has neither the leisure nor the inclination to seek official preferment. He has, however, taken the interest which all good citizens should feel in political movements, and in the election of those whom he deems best fitted to represent the community.

He has been prominent fraternally, being a Knight Templar, thirty-second degree Scottish Rite Mason, and a Shriner. He has many friends, both in business and fraternal circles, and is regarded as one of the solid, substantial men of his community, and one who is assisting to advance the development of his city and state.

On April 30, 1900, Mr. Seeley was married to Miss Blanche Bissell, daughter of L. L. and Sarah (McKibbe) Bissell of Lakeview, Michigan.

MCQUITT Y BROTHERS. Montana and its records furnish no better illustration of the congenial and successful business relations that may be carried on by brothers than the proprietors of the Harlowton Grocery Company, Ewell F. and Isbell S. McQuitty, who followed the railroad to this city and have carried on satisfactory business operations here ever since. In addition to being prominent factors in the commercial and industrial importance they have risen to high places in public life, Ewell F. McQuitty being mayor of Harlowton, while Isbell S. is representing his district in the state legislature. Natives of Columbia, Missouri, they were born June 15, 1878, and November 17, 1876, respectively, the only children of James D. and Anna (Dysart) McQuitty. James D. McQuitty was born in Missouri and has spent his entire life there, at present residing at Columbia, where he is the owner of a fine fruit farm, although in his younger years he was engaged in agricultural pursuits. A devout Christian, he has always been active as a church worker, and is equally well known as an influential politician of his locality. He was married in Missouri to Anna Dysart, who died in 1897, at the age of forty-two years, a faithful member of the Baptist church, who was buried at Columbia.

The McQuitty boys secured their educations in the public schools at Columbia, subsequently attended the high school there, and finally the university, working their way through college. Progressive and enterprising, they had begun to earn money at the age of twelve years, applying themselves assiduously to whatever task opportunity threw in their path. They have declined to be separated in their business dealings, and the result has been a satisfactory and profitable partnership in various ventures. In about 1900 they began to work on contract with various railroad companies, traveling extensively in the construction of a number of roads and coming into Montana with the new Milwaukee Railroad. In 1906 they arrived in Harlowton, having worked along the new Milwaukee extension for three years, and in 1909 returned to Harlowton and built the McQuitty block, a handsome two-story building, the first floor of which is devoted to the Harlowton Grocery Company, dealers in groceries, hardware and farming implements, while the second floor is known as McQuitty Hall. Mr. E. F. McQuitty is unmarried. While he belongs to no particular faith, he supports all religious bodies and is a friend of morality and probity. He holds an official position in the local Masonic lodge, and takes a very active part in Democratic politics, being the present incumbent of the office of mayor, in which he is giving his adopted city a safe, clean and businesslike administration. Baseball and football are his favorite pastimes, although all healthy sports have in him an ardent admirer and good reading and music have always appealed to him. With unbounded faith in the future of Montana, to the soil of which he accredits the ability to raise more produce with less effort than that of any other state which he has visited, he gives unstinted praise to its climate and industries and has pledged unwavering support to all of its activities.

Isbell S. McQuitty was married in July, 1905, at Centuria, Illinois, to Miss Ida Kyger, formerly of Fulton, Missouri. Mr. McQuitty, like his brother, has been active in Democratic politics, and at the last election was the choice of his party for the office of representative. He is prominent also in Oddfellowship, and at present is past noble grand of his lodge. A man of progressive and enterprising spirit, he has done much to forward movements of a beneficial nature and stands high in the respect and confidence of his fellow citizens in the thriving city which he has done so much to build up.

CHARLES J. MARSHALL. Prominent among the well known attorneys of Fergus county is Charles J. Marshall, one of the successful young lawyers of this district, where he has been established since 1906. Mr. Marshall is a native son of Michigan, born in Berrien county on the 18th day of January, 1882, and he is the son of Charles H. and Dora C. Marshall. The father was born in England, there remaining until he was about eighteen years old, when he came to America and henceforth made his home in this country. In his home he had been designated for the ministry, and his education up to the age of eighteen had been along the line of theology, but he never entered the profession. Instead, he settled in Benton Harbor, Michigan, and in the county which is famous as a fruit growing center, he has devoted himself to the quiet and pleasant life of the farm. He is now a resident of that city. His wife was born in St. Joseph county, Michigan, whither her parents had migrated from the state of Pennsylvania. She married her husband in 1877, and they became the parents of two children, Charles J., of this review, and a daughter, Maud, who is a teacher in her native state.

Charles J. Marshall attended the public schools of Benton Harbor as a boy. He was an ambitious youth, determined on a college career, and in order to make it possible to at least begin his college work, he employed himself in his spare time by hauling fruits to the boats from the rural communities in his district. While attending college he added something to his expense fund by performing various services for his fellow students who were more advantageously situated than he with regard to finances, and he was able, by practicing a certain amount of economy, to complete his studies in the academic department of the institution at Valparaiso, after which he entered the law school of the same college and there received his law degree in due season. Returning to Michigan, he passed the state bar examinations, then entered the teaching profession, and for four years he was engaged in educational work. His popularity as an instructor was enhanced considerably by the fact that he was a football player of some note, and his services as a coach were in demand while he was engaged in teaching.

In 1906 Mr. Marshall came to Montana, his objective point being Lewistown, and there he located and has ever since continued to be identified with the legal activities of the city. He was not slow in winning a certain recognition among the legal fraternity in the city and county, and before he had been two years a resident of the state he had been elected to the office of county attorney, and he is the present able incumbent of that office as the choice of the Democratic party, although it is an acknowledged fact that he found ardent supporters in the ranks of opposing parties.

In local lodge circles Mr. Marshall is found affiliated with a number of fraternal orders, among which may be mentioned the Odd Fellows and the Elks. In the last mentioned organization he is now past exalted ruler. He is a communicant of the Methodist Episcopal church, and his wife is one of the members of that body who ably assist in carrying on the work of the denomination in its many departments of usefulness.

On the 24th of November, 1903, at Benton Harbor, Michigan, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Marshall and Lillian Grace Tubbs, daughter of Everett and Lillian Tubbs of that city. Two children have been born to them, Lillian, born in Benton Harbor, and Charles, who was born in Lewistown, Montana.

THOMAS HENRY LARKIN. One of the public-spirited men in Great Falls is Thomas Henry Larkin. He is one of the most successful real estate dealers in the city, and devotes considerable attention to the civic and political affairs of Great Falls. He is active in the progressive movements of this city, giving both time and money to advance its interests. One of the proudest possessions of the city, the Valeria Way, was built at his instigation. He is not only anxious that the city should have good schools and hospitals, but that it should be made a city beautiful, so that the man who comes from the elm shaded Massachusetts village may not shudder at the sight of bare, dusty streets. In his position as a real estate man he is not only able to influence others to his way of thinking, but is in a position to practice what he preaches, and civic improvement is more than a hobby to him. Mr. Larkin has lived in Great Falls for a comparatively short time but he has won the regard and friendship of all with whom he has been brought into contact, and is one of the prominent business men of the city.

Thomas Henry Larkin was born in St. Paul, Minnesota, on the 15th of July, 1872. His father was John Larkin, who was a native of Ireland, having come to America in 1851. He first settled at Paterson, New Jersey, where he lived for two years. Reading and hearing of the opportunities to win fame and fortune in the young town that was growing up in the vicinity of the Falls of St. Anthony, on the far distant Mississippi, he decided that there was room there for one more Irishman, so he became one of the pioneers in the city of St. Paul. Real estate was the field which offered not only the greatest profit, but also furnished the largest amount of risk and excitement. He was an Irishman and loved a fight, therefore he went into the real estate business. This was in the days when one had to be possessed of the wings of Mercury in order to keep up with the sales of property, for one piece of land might exchange hands several times in one day. Mr. Larkin was shrewd and observant, possessed of good judgment, with the patience to await the auspicious moment, and a thorough knowledge of values of real estate in St. Paul and in the surrounding country. He was a man of limited education, but he was a great reader, and a keen thinker, so by his own efforts he acquired a knowledge that put better educated men to shame. He was very prominent in the commercial circles of the city, for though of very decided views and a blunt manner, he was generous to a fault, and once a man's friend he stood by him through thick and thin. Therefore when he made friends he kept them, and when, after spending a long life in the real estate business, he died on the 26th of February, 1904, at the age of seventy-two, he was mourned by many friends, not only in the city but in many sections of the country, for he was a man one could not easily forget. Mr. Larkin was married on the 13th of May, 1862, to Anne Griffin, also a native of Ireland, Listowel, Kerry, being her birthplace. She lived to be seventy years old, dying in St. Paul on May 23, 1907. Six children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Larkin, of whom Thomas was the next to the youngest.

Thomas Henry Larkin was educated in the public schools of St. Paul, and also spent several years in the Christian Brothers College, and St. John's University. He had heard much talk of the great opportunities of the far West, and so in 1888, he and his brother, James, set out on a trip through this section of the country. They spent five years traveling over the west, working whenever an opportunity offered, and acquiring valuable information concerning the country. Thomas felt that there in the West was the place for him, the only difficulty was in deciding between the charms of the many fascinating spots. Finally he decided that Montana, with its splendid climate, whole-souled people, and possibilities in the business line, offered the greatest inducements, so on the 1st of August, 1906, he permanently settled in Great Falls, Montana. He selected Great Falls at the request of James J. Hill, and became manager of the Water Power and Townsite Company, of Great Falls. He held this position for four years, the first two of which were spent under the Hill regime and the latter two under the authority of John D. Ryan and his associates, of the Amalgamated Copper Company.

In August, 1910, on the 1st day of the month, he resigned his position with the above company and went into the general realty business on his own account. Through his knowledge of the property values in Great Falls and the surrounding country, and through the reputation he had built up during his position as manager of the Water Power and Townsite Company, he has been able to build up a very satisfactory business. He has the confidence of the citizens of Cascade county, and it is easy to prophesy that his future career will be one of prosperity. He served as secretary and later as a director in the Great Falls Civic Club, and his activities in this regard have been mentioned. In politics he is an active member of the Democratic party, while his membership on the board of directors of the Commercial Club, Real Estate Exchange and Park Board shows the interest which he takes in the welfare of the city. He was the first to hold the office of vice president of the Great Falls Real Estate Exchange.

Mr. Larkin has seen considerable service as a member of the United States army in the Philippines, having resigned the position of road-secretary of General Manager Kendrick of the Northern Pacific Railway to go to the front. He enlisted in Company E of the Thirteenth Minnesota Regiment, in 1898. He was artificer in the company and was largely on detached service. He took part in the battle of Manila, on the 13th of August, 1898, and was also in active service during the period of the Philippine insurrection, and the assault on the city which took place on the 5th of February, 1899. He was discharged at Manila, on the 13th of August, 1899, but remained in the islands eight months longer as clerk and stenographer in the subsistence department under Major Brainerd. His active service in the volunteer army extended over a period of sixteen months. He also served three years in Minnesota National Guard. He is now a member of the Minnesota branch of the Army of the Philippines, and was commander of this patriotic organization in the year 1906.

In religious matter Mr. Larkin is a communicant of the Roman Catholic church, and has always been an ardent worker for his church. He organized the Knights of Columbus at Great Falls, Lewistown and

Fred W. Dralle.

Miles City, Montana, and was district deputy of the order.

Mr. Larkin was married in Fort Benton, Montana, on the 12th of June, 1907, to Miss Myra Kelly, the daughter of Edward and Rose L. Kelly. She was born in Fort Benton, where her father settled at an early date. He is now deceased but he was well known among the pioneer settlers of Montana, as the man who established the Twenty-eight Mile Springs on the old stage road connecting Fort Benton and Helena. He spent most of the years of his life as a rancher, owning property west of Fort Benton on the Teton river. Mrs. Larkin's mother is yet living and makes her home in Fort Benton. She is a native of Louisville, Kentucky, and came to Montana with her parents at an early day. She married Mr. Kelly in Fort Benton.

Thomas and Myra Larkin are the parents of one child, Mary Rose Anne Larkin, who was born in Great Falls, Montana, on the 6th of April, 1909. They live at 213 North Fifteenth street and Mr. Larkin has his offices at 325 Central avenue.

SAMUEL CARPENTER. Prominent among citizens of Lincoln county who have achieved business success and public prominence solely through the medium of their own efforts, stands Samuel Carpenter, county clerk and recorder, who, through a career marked with numerous discouragements and misfortunes, has ever displayed steadfast determination and unyielding perseverance that have finally gained their reward, both in business and public life. Born in Pennsylvania, April 11, 1874, Mr. Carpenter is a son of Gabriel and Rosana (Brecht) Carpenter, and is a descendant of ancestors who played an important part in the making of American history, three of whom were companions of William Penn on his journey to the new world. Gabriel Carpenter was born in Pennsylvania, but some time after his marriage moved to Kansas, where the remainder of his life was spent in agricultural pursuits, and where his death occurred in 1881, when he had reached the age of forty-nine years. His wife, also a native of the Keystone State, died on October 1, 1910, at the age of seventy-eight years. They had a family of ten children, of whom six are living. George, Morris and Mary reside on the homestead; John, also in Kansas; and Lemon, who lives in Alberta, Canada.

Samuel Carpenter received his education in the Kansas public schools, attending at Milford and Atchison, and graduating from a regular banking and business course at the latter place August 19, 1896. After leaving school he went to Minnesota, where he remained but a few months. He came to Kalispell, Montana, December 19, 1906. There he entered the lumber business and also engaged in farming, and also spent some time in the meat business, but eventually sold his interests therein and returned to the farm. He then took and passed a civil service examination and for a short period was a clerk in the Kalispell postoffice, but subsequently gave up his position and began teaching school in Flathead county. After a short period spent as an educator, he again returned to the farm on his ranch in the eastern part of Lincoln county, but, being appointed principal of the Eureka school, went to that point to teach. He later took charge of the McIntosh Hardware Company of Eureka, Montana, and remained at Eureka with that company until the destruction of the establishment by fire, when he rebuilt the building and then returned to Gateway and taught for two years. After spending two years at Gateway Mr. Carpenter returned to the Carpenter ranch of fifteen hundred acres, located in Lincoln county, on Lakes Irene and Sophy, near Gateway, and during that fall became a candidate for the office of county clerk and recorder. On the day of his nomination, Mr. Carpenter suffered an incomparable loss in the death of his mother, and setting aside all business and political matters, he devoted himself to taking charge of her affairs and taking her body back to Kansas, where she was buried. On his return he was elected by a majority of forty-one votes. In November, 1912, he was reelected, with a majority of one hundred and thirty-four votes over both his competitors. His administration has been an admirable one and has convinced the citizens of Lincoln county that they made no mistake in choosing him as the incumbent of the office. He has given the same conscientious attention to details that has made his private interests successful, and as a result Lincoln county has profited largely. Politically a Republican, Mr. Carpenter has been known as one of the active and influential workers in the ranks of the party in this section of the state. In fraternal affairs he is affiliated with the Odd Fellows of Eureka, with the members of which he is very popular, as he is, indeed, with all who have had his acquaintance in public or private life. Mr. Carpenter is unmarried.

FRED W. DRALLE, county clerk and recorder, living in Roundup, Montana, has such faith in the future of his state that he is only sorry that he did not arrive sooner to help boost it. He arrived in 1907, remaining for the first year in Deer Lodge, where he taught school. The next year and a half he spent in Butte City as a teacher in the Industrial School. He then came to Roundup, and has remained ever since. After a year and a half of school teaching in Roundup, holding the position of superintendent of schools, he was appointed clerk and recorder for the new Musselshell county, and is still holding the office.

Mr. Dralle was born in Louis county, Missouri, April 4, 1881, the son of Henry C. Dralle, a native of Germany, and Josephine (Dell) Dralle, who was born in New Orleans. Mr. Dralle came to the United States as a boy and settled in Missouri, working as a miller at first, and later taking up farming. He always took an active interest in politics and was county sheriff for two terms. His church also owned him as one of its most indefatigable workers. He served in the Confederate army during the Civil war, and fought in many battles. He died in 1909, at the age of ninety-three. His wife died in 1900, at the age of sixty-six, and they are buried together in Missouri. Fred W. was the youngest of their ten children, all of whom are now scattered over the Union, only one brother being in Montana with Fred W.

Fred W. Dralle attended the Missouri public schools until he was eighteen, when he began to work on a farm at a salary of eighteen dollars a month in order to get money enough to continue his education. He is now a graduate of the State Normal School at Kirksville, Missouri, and has taken several courses at the state university in Columbia. He taught school in Missouri for about seven years before he came to Montana.

On November 9, 1907, Mr. Dralle was married at Green Castle, Missouri, to Rose Terry, the daughter of Bishop O. and Mary J. Terry, of Green Castle. They have had no children. Both Mr. and Mrs. Dralle attend the Christian church, and Mrs. Dralle is an active worker. Mr. Dralle is an Odd Fellow, an Elk and an Eagle, and is a member of both the Roundup Commercial and the Pioneer clubs. As a believer in the principles of the Democratic party he takes an active interest in politics. His greatest amusements are base ball and foot ball, and at any game there is no more enthusiastic rooter to be found than Mr. Dralle.

CHARLES W. NEWTON. "Efficiency" is the slogan of the hour, and has been the key to the successful career of Charles W. Newton, of Butte, superintendent of the Butte-Ballaklava Copper Company. The same intrepid spirit that has characterized his professional and business career was also displayed as a soldier in the Spanish-American war, in which his services were such as to win honorable and special mention from his superior officers. At the opening of that conflict he promptly enlisted in Company I of the Third Wisconsin Volunteer Regiment. He served at Porto Rico and throughout the war and received his honorable discharge at Superior, Wisconsin.

Mr. Newton is a native of Wisconsin, born at Superior on May 21, 1870, a son of James and Mathilda M. (Brennen) Newton. The Newton family is of English descent and originated in this country with ancestors who settled in Massachusetts. On his mother's side his blood is Scotch-Irish, a strain perhaps the most credited for physical vigor, mental alertness and robust morality of all those that have mingled in the shaping of American character. Judge James Newton, the father, was born in New York and died at Superior, Wisconsin in 1881. He was a well-known citizen of his community and was prominent in the municipal affairs of Superior. He was married in Detroit, Michigan to Miss Mathilda M. Brennen, who was born in Ottawa, Canada and died at Superior, Wisconsin, in 1900. To these honored parents were born three sons: Capt. Harry W. Newton, of the United States Artillery who is now stationed at Fort Casey; Herbert W. Newton, who is now with a Wyoming Coal Company; and Charles W. Newton, the subject of this review.

After completing the usual public school education, Mr. Newton applied himself diligently to mastering the profession of a civil engineer. His first position was in charge of an iron property on the Iron Range in Minnesota. He came to Montana in July, 1907, and immediately took up the duties of assistant superintendent of mines for the Butte Ballaklava Copper Company at Meaderville. Possessing those qualities which make for success, character, ability and practical knowledge, his work soon led to a promotion, and on January 1, 1908, he was made superintendent of the company, a position in which he has proved himself worthy of the trust imposed in him and the work of which he is carrying forward along able and successful lines. The Ballaklava mine is one of the largest producers of high grade ore in the Meaderville district. It has a capacity of several hundred tons of ore a day, is equipped with the latest type of electric machinery and buildings, and has a shaft of 1600 feet. The company employs a force of 150 men.

At Superior, Wisconsin, on October 25, 1899, Mr. Newton was united in marriage to Miss Kate Manwaring, a daughter of Edward and Syndonia Manwaring, residents of Ann Arbor, Michigan. Mr. and Mrs. Newton have two children: Faith M., born September 11, 1900, at Superior, Wisconsin, who is now attending school at Butte; and James, born at Superior, Wisconsin, February 18, 1904, who also is a pupil in the Butte schools.

Of courteous address and a man of pleasant personal characteristics, Mr. Newton has made many friends during his residence in Butte and is a valued member of the social, fraternal and church life of that city. He is a member of the Silver Bow Club and the Butte Country Club and also sustains fraternal membership in the Knights of Pythias. Politically he affiliates with the Republican party, and his religious creed finds expression as a communicant of the Episcopal church. Fishing and hunting are his favorite sports in relaxing from business cares, and he and his family enjoy one of the most comfortable and delightful homes of Butte, located at No. 303 West Park street.

ALVIN BERRY. Among the young men who in recent years have identified themselves with the progressive activities of Montana and gained influential position in business and citizenship is Mr. Alvin Berry, of Basin, the proprietor of the largest and busiest hardware store of that town.

Until recently Mr. Berry was a banker and had been engaged in that business from the beginning of his career. He was born in Winona county, Minnesota, December 16, 1873, a son of James P. and Emma Josephine (Thyson) Berry. His father, who was a pioneer of Minnesota and a substantial farmer, was a veteran of the Civil war, having served his full time as a member of Company D, Fifth Minnesota Infantry. He was wounded during his service. His death occurred in 1883. The mother, who was born in Minnesota, is now living with her son at Basin, Montana. The one daughter, Francis May, is now the wife of Carl D. Mutchler, of Winnipeg.

Alvin Berry attended the public schools at Winona and at La Crosse, Wisconsin, where he was graduated in the class of 1892, and then took a full course in the business college at La Crosse. His business career began as clerk in a national bank at La Crosse, and during ten years with that institution he became one of the trusted and efficient young bankers of the city. The only important interruption to his banking career occurred during the Spanish-American war of 1898, when he enlisted with the Third Wisconsin Volunteers and saw service in Porto Rico, being mustered out at the close of the war at La Crosse.

On leaving that city he went to the southwest and took a place as bookkeeper in the bank of Globe, Arizona, where he remained one year. In 1907 he was offered the position of cashier and business manager of the bank at Basin, Montana, and was the executive head of this financial institution four years. In June, 1911, Mr. Berry, with Eugene Picot as partner, established the hardware and general merchandise store which they have developed into the largest and most important mercantile concern of the town. In Jefferson county, now one of the leading counties of the state in mineral resources, Mr. Berry has some sound investments, and is a loyal citizen of his adopted state. His success in life has come about through his own efforts, and he has won the thorough esteem of his fellow citizens. Fraternally he is a Mason and Shriner, and has filled the chairs of the lodge of Knights of Pythias. In politics he is Republican.

Mr. Berry was married at La Crosse in 1900 to Miss Lilly C. Becker, of that city. They are the parents of three children: Robert Alvin, Charlotte Josephine and Dorothy Ann.

DR. FRED BURGMANN was born in Halle, Germany, on February 17, 1879, and has been a resident of this country only since 1907, all his previous existence being passed in the town of his birth. It was here that his parents, Albert and Johanna Burgmann, were born, and they spent their entire lives in the quaint town with its famous university, founded by Frederick the First, the "red tower," the old residence of the bishops of Magdeburg, and all the many other famous landmarks. The atmosphere of this city, so rich in historic associations, educational advantages, and at the same time, of such growing commercial importance, set its mark upon Dr. Burgmann, and he has brought to this newer land that fine training and scientific attitude toward his work which is one of the fine products of an older civilization. There were three children in the Burgmann family, of whom our subject is the youngest. His brother and sister are still living in the old home town with their mother, as the father died on August 7, 1908, at the age of sixty-one.

Dr. Burgmann completed the course of the public schools of Germany and also served his time in the German army, his regiment being the First of Guard Uhlans. From his childhood he had an extraordinary fondness for animals, especially horses, and he earned his first money in the congenial employment of assisting a veterinary surgeon in Berlin. The boy determined to follow that calling for himself, and accordingly entered one of the largest veterinary colleges in Germany and completed the course offered there. For a number of years after graduating he practiced in Germany and in 1907 decided to come to America. His first stopping-place was San Francisco, but he remained there for only four weeks, and then came to Butte, which has since been his home. Although he arrived in the city with no acquaintances, and even without knowledge of the language, Dr. Burgmann soon made a place for himself by virtue of his excellent professional skill and training, and also by reason of his admirable personal qualities. He quickly mastered the language, and his abilities did the rest that was needed to establish him in the front rank of the profession to which he belongs. In achieving the success which has been his in this city, Dr. Burgmann has been greatly aided and inspired by his wife, Freda Nebelung Burgmann. She, too, is a native of Halle, which is the place where her parents, Gustave and Anna Nebelung, were born. Her marriage to Dr. Burgmann occurred on October 15, 1904, and the union is in all respects an ideal one. Mrs. Burgmann possesses the qualities of mind and personality which made her admirably fitted to preside over the home of her talented husband, who is a student as well as a successful practitioner. One child has been born to Mr. and Mrs. Burgmann, Charlotte, born August 22, 1908.

In the brief time of his residence in Butte Dr. Burgmann has built up a large and profitable practice. As a veterinarian he ranks second to none in the state. The doctor is an expert rider and trainer of horses and his favorite recreation is a cross-country ride. He has ridden horseback since he was ten years old, and has never been thrown, but has several times fallen with his mount and sustained some injuries from the accidents. In training horses to jump he is an adept, and has fitted many an one to win the prize in horse shows.

Both Dr. Burgmann and his wife are members of the church of their fathers, the Lutheran. It was in this faith that Mrs. Burgmann's father died in 1893, at the age of thirty-nine, and her mother, her sister and her four brothers are all communicants of the church at Halle. Dr. Burgmann is a man of strong convictions and of strict devotion to what he conceives to be his duty. In politics he is a non-partisan, and like most students of sociological conditions believes that what is most needful to our national welfare is whatever will elevate the masses. An omnivorous reader, he is especially interested in scientific lines, and keeps abreast of all advances in the realm of his profession. Few residents of Butte have made so high a place for themselves in so brief a time as have Dr. and Mrs. Burgmann, the one as an individual, and the other both as an individual and as a professional man. Butte is proud to number on her rolls these two citizens, born in a foreign but not an alien land, and now adding their talent and training to the resources of this great northwest.

PAUL A. GOW. The present incumbent of the office of city Engineer of Butte, Montana, is Paul A. Gow, who has resided in this place for the past five years.

Paul A. Gow was born in Fontanelle, Iowa, June 6, 1883. His father, George L. Gow, was born and reared at Washington, Pennsylvania, from which place he removed to Iowa in the year 1872. He was a lawyer by profession and was a prominent attorney in the courts of southwestern Iowa for a number of years prior to his death, which occurred in 1890, at the early age of forty-four years. His mother, Belle (Purviance) Gow, was born in Allegheny county, Pennsylvania, and at present resides in Denver, Colorado. She is a daughter of Col. Henry Augustus Purviance, of the Eighty-fifth Pennsylvania Regiment, who was killed in the siege of Charlestown. Mr. and Mrs. George L. Gow became the parents of a daughter and two sons, all of whom are living at the present time (1912) and of whom Paul A. is the youngest.

Paul A. Gow received his preliminary training in the public schools of Greenfield, Iowa, Los Angeles, California, and Denver, Colorado, later entering the Colorado School of Mines, from which institution he received the degree of Mining Engineer in the class of 1907. Immediately after his graduation from College he entered the employ of the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, at Butte, remaining in the employment of that company, in the capacity of mining engineer, for the ensuing four years. In May, 1911, he received the appointment as city engineer in the city of Butte. He is independent in politics and in the organization of the engineering department political affiliations have ever been ignored. He has been a member of Golden City (Colorado) Lodge, No. 1, A. F. & A. M., since 1907.

In 1905 Mr. Gow was married to Miss Gertrude Nelson, who was born at Winterset, Iowa, and who is a daughter of Dr. J. V. Nelson, deceased, a Civil war veteran and a successful and respected physician, and Elizabeth (Nicholls) Nelson, a native of Iowa and now residing in Los Angeles, California.

Mr. and Mrs. Gow have one daughter, Elizabeth, whose birth occurred July 27, 1908.

GLEN A. SMITH. Born in Bates county, Missouri, September 15, 1879, Glen A. Smith has, at the early age of thirty-two years, established himself firmly in the district with which he has been identified for the past decade, and he is regarded among conservative minds as one of the coming men of Montana.

It may well be said of Mr. Smith, that he has made the best use of his every opportunity, and a short review of his life thus far will amply support that statement.

Glen A. Smith is the son of Albert M. and Lucinda (Pepper) Smith. The father, Albert M. Smith, was born in Schuyler county, Illinois, February 2, 1850; he is now a resident of Kalispell, Montana. The mother was a native of Ohio, and she died in 1896, at the age of fifty-three years. Two sons and two daughters were born of their union, all of whom are living. Glen A. Smith, our subject, was the third child. Albert M. Smith led the life of a farmer in Illinois until 1876, when he removed to Bates county, Missouri, and there he continued to farm until the year 1903. The death of his wife in 1896 had a tendency to break up the home life of the family, and after remaining in the home alone for a few years, Mr. Smith removed to Kalispell, where his son Glen then lived, and there the elder Smith still resides. Mr. Smith is a Republican in his political inclinations, and is a member of the G. A. R., he having enlisted in Company K Thirty-seventh Regiment, Illinois Volunteers, at the beginning of the war of the rebellion, and served his full time. He participated with his regiment in many a bloody conflict, and at the close of his term of service was honorably discharged.

Glen A. Smith in his boyhood days was a student in the public schools of Sprague, Missouri, and later he attended the Kalispell (Mont.) Business College, where he was thoroughly grounded in business theory and practice. He was a careful student, and his course of study while there amply prepared him for the many demands of actual business life. Upon his graduation he first entered the service of the O'Neil Lumber Company, with whom he remained for a number of years, both in the office and on the ground. Later he went with the Northwestern Lumber Company, also of Kalispell, as superintendent in charge of their outside interests and as sales manager of their road force.

His practical experience in the heart of the timber districts while looking after the details of management for the two firms in whose employ he had been, gave him a keen insight into the forestry situation, and he was not slow to recognize the needs of the department for careful representation. His love of nature also was largely influential in determining his next move, and on January 1, 1907, he entered the employ of the government in the forestry department at Libby, Montana, where he remained until November, 1908, and he was then transferred to Custer National Forest at Ashland, Montana, as forest supervisor. From there he was sent to Billings, Montana, in December, 1910, as forest supervisor of the Beartooth National Forest, his ascent in the forestry department thus far being particularly rapid and eminently satisfactory to the department and all concerned.

Mr. Smith holds a valuable tract of fertile land in the Kootenai Valley of Montana, which he is planting to apple trees as rapidly as he can accomplish the work.

On November 16, 1904, Mr. Smith married Cressie R. Rowe. She was born near Fort Benton, Montana, and is the daughter of James H., and Catherine (Ivey) Rowe. Mr. Rowe died in 1895, but Mrs. Rowe still lives. They were the parents of eight children, all of whom are living, Mrs. Glen Smith being the youngest child. Mr. and Mrs. Rowe came to Montana in 1877, at a time when the state was in an unsettled and extremely primitive condition. They located near Fort Benton, and Mr. Rowe became interested in ranching and stock raising, to which he gave much of his time and attention for many years. When he came to Montana he was accompanied by his two brothers, one of whom is now living. For many years Mr. Rowe was assessor of Chouteau county, Montana, it being an especially large territory, six counties having been lately erected from the original Chouteau county.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith have one daughter, whom they have named Ivey, that being the family name of Mrs. Smith's revered mother.

JACOB B. GREGG is a prominent business man of Ryegate, Montana, who has extensive ranching interests in Musselshell county, and is numbered among the progressive and enthusiastic promoters of this section of Montana. He was born in Williamstown, West Virginia, March 16, 1862, and was a lad about seven years of age when his parents removed to Le Sueur county, Minnesota, and gave him his first glimpse of western life. There he grew to the legal age of manhood, acquired a public school education, and earned his first money as a boy, working in a stone quarry, later following railroad work for a while; then he moved to South Dakota, where he resided eleven years and followed farming and stock buying. Returning to Minnesota, he farmed in Douglas county and also engaged in the sawmill business there until 1904, when he moved to the northwestern part of North Dakota. There he organized the Star Livery and Implement Company, and became president and active manager of the concern, but at the end of three years he sold those interests and returned to Minnesota, where later he bought a stock of merchandise and shipped it to Ryegate, Montana. In February, 1912, he sold the general store he had opened and conducted at Ryegate, and has since given his attention exclusively to the implement business, his stock including a full line of everything appurtenant to this business. He owns several fine ranches south of Ryegate which he rents out, and he is personally experimenting in fruit raising in this section. During his thirty years of business experience he has been engaged in the meat business four times.

Jacob B. Gregg is the eldest son of Jehu Gregg, who was born in Old Virginia, but is now a retired resident of Minnesota, in which state he followed farming for many years. In West Virginia Jehu Gregg married Mary E. Shreves, who bore him seven children, of whom Jacob B. is second in birth. The mother died in 1888, at the age of fifty-six, and is buried in Minnesota. She had the distinction of having won the first prize that the state of Minnesota ever gave on dairy butter.

The marriage of our subject occurred at Lexington, Minnesota, on September 27, 1882, and united him to Miss Fannie Sires, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sires, of that place. To this union have been born five daughters and three sons, as follows: John J., now a resident of northern Canada; Ida M., who married Joseph Zingham and resides at Mandan, North Dakota; Grace, now Mrs. Merritt E. Doty, of Lewistown, Montana; Edith, who became the wife of William H. Graham and also resides at Lewistown, Montana; Bertha, who married Lloyd L. Smith and resides near Ryegate, Montana; Mary E., at the parental home; and William H. and Leslie, both of whom are attending school.

In religious faith Mr. Gregg favors the creed of the Christian denomination, while Mrs. Gregg is a member of the Methodist Episcopal church and takes an active interest in its work. Mr. Gregg is a member of the Modern Woodmen of America and in political views is a Republican. While a resident of Minnesota and Dakota he served at different times in various minor offices, such as supervisor, county commissioner and chairman of the school board, and during the last twenty years he has frequently been a justice of the peace, in which capacity he is now serving at Ryegate. He enjoys the different diversions essential to a well balanced life and is well informed on the live issues of the day. Mr. Gregg is very loyal to Montana and is one of the men who are contributing to its development.

FRANK T. BAILEY. The person who irradiates the usually somber and always toilsome course of human life with amusement, music, mirth and other means of enjoyment is a public benefactor and deserving of the high regard of mankind. If he adds only a few beams of bright, warm sunshine to the gloomy pathway of human endeavor, he is doing a great deal for the comfort and happiness of his fellow men and is worthy of a high place in public estimation and appreciation. And if he does more, having at his command at all times some source of enjoyment and entertainment for those who can secure the opportunity to take advantage of his offerings, he is doing a vast amount of good.

Frank T. Bailey, of Butte, president and controlling spirit of the Montana Amusement Company, which has in operation several places of refined and elevating entertainment for the public, is a man of this character. Mr. Bailey conducts his business primarily, of course, for his own profit and financial benefit. But this does not detract from the value of his services to the people in the circles of his residence and occupation, who, without such enterprise as he exhibits, would not have the means of enjoyment he provides for them, and in which he studies to please them.

Mr. Bailey was born in the city of Akron, Ohio, on July 22, 1876, and is a son of Griffin H. and Katharine (Stein) Bailey, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of Maryland, but now residents of Billings, Montana, where the father is engaged in the theatrical business. He, also, is a purveyor for the entertainment of the public, and holds an enviable rank among the useful men who are engaged in this business in an active and fruitful manner.

Frank T. Bailey obtained his education in the public schools of Cleveland, Ohio, finishing with a thorough course of instruction at a high school in that city, which he left at the age of eighteen years. He then secured a clerical position in the employ of the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad in Cleveland, and remained in the service of that road for a period of ten years, with successive promotions to higher rank and more elevated and important duties from time to time while his connection with the road continued.

Mr. Bailey's next venture in business was in the real estate field, in which he conducted an enterprise in Cleveland for three years. But through all these years and notwithstanding his exacting engagements, he was ambitious of becoming a factor in the business of entertaining the public, and at length he found or made the opportunity to gratify his longing in this respect. In 1907 he moved to Butte, Montana, and started the first moving picture show in that city. His show is located at 41 North Main street, and is one of the most popular places of resort in the city. It has been successful from the start, and has grown in prestige and popularity every year. For Mr. Bailey studies the tastes and desires of the community and lays all his resources under tribute in his efforts to meet the requirements of the case in every particular.

As a means of promoting his business and more amply providing for the entertainment of the public, in the fall of 1907 he organized the Montana Film Exchange in Butte, and this enterprise he conducted by his personal management until July 1, 1911, when he sold the business in order that he might give more time and attention to other projects he had in operation. He is the pioneer in his business of conducting picture shows in the state of Montana, and one of the leading men in the business in the country. He has many competitors in his line in this state and those which adjoin it, but they all started and all continue as imitators of his methods and his skill. He still sets the pace for this part of the country in his undertaking, and the others keep up with it if they can. Mr. Bailey has succeeded in placing the photoplay theater on the same high standard as occupied by houses playing the highest class productions, and in no other city in the country will be found as large a percentage of the very best class of theater goers constant patrons of this form of amusement. No better evidence of this fact is shown by the attendance of over 28,000 people at the new American Theater during the first week it was open.

Mr. Bailey, as has been noted, is president of the Montana Amusement Company, which has headquarters in Butte and operates four of the five moving picture shows in that city, and fifteen of the leading houses of the kind in the state. The company, under his inspiration and influence, built and now manage the American Theater in Butte. This playhouse, the finest in the United States for photoplay productions, was opened to the public on April 6, 1912. At this time the Anaconda Standard, in describing the American theater, said in part:

"In opening the new American Theater to the Butte public yesterday the Montana Amusement Company has more than made good its promise to local patrons of the photoplay. The company promised that within 90 days from the date construction began it would open the finest photoplay house in the west. Exactly 85 days from the date the first stick of timber was placed in position for the framework of the concrete foundation the finest motion picture theater in America was entertaining its patrons with Sarah Bernhardt in a pictured version of 'Camille,' one of the finest and most expensive photoplays ever produced.

"The new theater is not only a monument to the faith of its builders in the future of Butte, but it is a splendid example of the progress that has been made in theater construction. While there are probably more costly theaters devoted to the legitimate drama in the west, there are none more modern, more up to date or prettier. That it will be one of the show places of the city in the future goes without saying. Outwardly it is imposing and commands attention, while one must deplore the lack of adjectives in describing the interior.

"The claim that the American is the finest and most lavishly equipped theater devoted exclusively to photoplays in this country has never been challenged. Denver, Salt Lake, Portland, Chicago and Cleveland boast of costly and beautiful picture houses, but none of them compare in architectural beauty, equipment or construction to the American."

In political affairs Mr. Bailey takes but little part. He never neglects his duty in connection with them, which every good citizen performs, and always votes for the best interests of the public according to his convictions, but his action is always independent of partisan considerations, and without direct personal entry into the contests involved as a working factor. He is earnestly interested in the welfare of his community and its people but not in the personal ambitions of his fellow men and the struggles and contentions which they engender, and does not mingle with them in any way.

On July 22, 1898, Mr. Bailey was married in Cleveland, Ohio, to Miss Grace Grombacher, a native of that city and the daughter of Henry and Eliza (Arkwright) Grombacher, highly respected citizens there. One child has been born of the union, a daughter named Dorothy, whose life began in Buffalo, New York, on October 28, 1902, and who is now attending school from the comfortable and attractive home of her parents at 715 West Park street, which is commodious in capacity and equipment and artistic in appointments and adornment, and is a center of gracious hospitality.

The ancestors of Mr. Bailey's mother came from Germany to this country and located in the state of Maryland before the Civil war. They were sturdy and sterling, as his parents are, and faithfully performed their duty as American citizens and as men and women in all the relations of life. The forebears of the father came to this country from England at an early day and took up their residence in Akron, Ohio. Mr. Bailey, however, received no aid of a financial character from either side of the house beyond what was expended on his rearing and education. When he left school he took up the struggle for advancement among men for himself, and he has ever since made his own progress, and is entitled to all the credit for it. He is an excellent citizen, and is everywhere highly esteemed as such as well as for his genial and companionable nature.

CRAWFORD JOHNSTON, M. D., practicing physician of Culbertson since 1907, is a native born Canadian, his birth occurring at Alma, Ontario, on January 4, 1880. He is the son of James S. and Jane (Booth) Johnston, both natives of Ontario. The father was a prominent land owner and implement dealer in Alma, Ontario, where he still lives. They became the parents of three children, Dr. Crawford Johnston being the first born; the others are Russell, a druggist in Cochran, Ontario, and Della, who lives in her native town, Alma, Ontario.

As a boy Dr. Johnston attended the public and high schools of his home town and of Elora City, in which latter town he was graduated from the high school with the class of 1896. He began the study of medicine in Toronto Medical College in 1903, and in 1907 began the first practice of his profession in Drayton, Canada, where he continued for six months, coming to Culbertson in July, 1907, where he has with the passing years built up a very successful practice.

Dr. Johnston is the owner of a drug store at Poplar, Montana, which is one of the leading business houses, of that place. He is a past master in the Masonic lodge, a past patron in the Order of Eastern Stars and a member of the Modern Woodmen of America. He has a pleasant home in Culbertson and is the owner of considerable ranch lands in Valley county.

On May 25, 1910, Dr. Johnston was married to Miss Nora Carr of Detroit, Minnesota.

FRED DENNINGER. The president of the Havre Brewing & Malting Company is Fred Denninger, who has had an extensive experience in the business, having been connected with the trade in Germany for a number of years and also with brewing establishments in various cities of America.

Born in Germany, September 17, 1877, and educated in the public schools from the age of six to sixteen, he then spent three years in the imperial navy. At the age of fourteen years he began learning the brewing and malting trade. As apprentice and journeyman he worked in Germany until he was twenty-six years old. On July 9, 1904, he arrived in America, having a capital of about one thousand dollars. Since then by combining experience and skill with gradually increasing capital he has firmly established himself, and is today one of the substantial citizens of northern Montana. The first nine months in America he spent in Philadelphia, was in Chicago three months, in San Antonio, Texas, two years, and then successively at New Orleans and in Denver and Golden, Colorado, being connected with his profession in each of these places. From Colorado he came to Montana and during his residence at Butte formed the acquaintance with Mr. Wutz which later resulted in their business association. He was located at Helena six months and at Kalispell two and a half years, and in 1910 joined in the organization of the Havre brewing enterprise. He is a member of the Sons of Hermann, and is a Democrat in politics, without being an active party man.

CONSADINE LUKIS, a Greek-American of much business ability, is best known in Butte through his prominence as vice-president of the rapidly growing corporation of the Pallas Candy Factory of this city. His father was George Lukis, a contractor in Fernis, Greece, and his mother, Belio Lukis, was a native of that locality. The former died a few years ago, at the age of fifty-five, but the latter is still living in Fernis, being now about fifty-one years old.

In that land which is noted for so much of legendary as well as of natural beauty, Consadine Lukis was born on July 12, 1876, in the parental home at Fernis. He received his education in the schools of that place and at eighteen years of age took the first definite steps toward the business success he has since reached. At that time, the year 1894, he came to America to test its possibilities, some of which he knew had proved advantageous for others of his countrymen. For five years he worked in various parts of the United States in various lines of candy manufacturing. After concluding this preparatory experience in Indiana Mr. Lukis joined his brother, Dematrius Lukis, and Peter Lambrose in establishing a factory in Chicago for the producing of high grade candy. After continuing this business for a number of years they went to Seattle, Washington, where again each of them entered the employ of other heads of manufactories, thus further learning the more complex and less common features of this work. As Peter Lambrose had preceded the Lukis brothers to Butte, and had there already begun the manufacturing of special and superior candies, Dematrius and Consadine Lukis soon joined their former partner and they were again associated in preparing and disposing of their products. Their experience and ingenuity seemed here to bring marked success from the start, although its beginning, in 1907, was a very modest one. Located at 47 West Park street, they at first conducted only a retail business. To this they devoted their abilities and their energies, with a view to offering not only pure candies from the highest quality of materials, but also to provide all new confections on the market and to originate yet others.

In 1911 the Lambrose and Consadine business was on such a satisfactory basis that its proprietors established a factory at the corner of Mercury and Colorado streets. This added enterprise brought them a large increase of business and in order to properly care for this, outside capital was interested, a corporation being formed in June, 1912. The large building which was bought for the wholesale manufacture of confectionery by this company is installed with the most modern and up-to-date machinery and is the largest of its kind in the state, being considered by many to be equal to any of its kind in the west. Its products are manufactured by methods and from ingredients which combine the most sanitary arrangements with a thorough observance of pure food laws. Extreme cleanliness prevails at all times and the public is extended a cordial invitation to visit the factory at any time, an innovation which the Pallas Candy Factory was the first to introduce. The installation of this factory involved an expenditure of about $50,000 and its worth requires the services of approximately 100 workmen. The emporium where the retail business of the firm is done is exceptionally complete in all its details, is counted the finest store of its type in the western country and is one of the show places of the city of Butte.

The president of the Pallas corporation is Mr. Lambrose, the subject of this sketch being its vice-president and Dematrius Lukis, the secretary. All have become wealthy through the successful operation of their business. The three are well-known and popular men in Butte.

Consadine Lukis is a member of the Business Men's Association of Butte. He is a member of the Greek church and is politically independent. Mrs. Lukis, nee Rose Heinze, is a native of New York, where she was married to Mr. Lukis on the third of March, 1901.

PERCIVAL E. ALLEN. A member of a family that traces its ancestry back to the days of the American Revolution and members of which have at all times held prestige as patriotic soldiers and leaders in civic life, Percival E. Allen, the efficient county attorney of Carbon county, has demonstrated that he possesses the family traits of firmness of character and conscientious devotion to public duty. Born in Racine, Racine county, Wisconsin, April 16, 1888, he is a son of Edgar E. and Mary (McCullough) Allen. His great-great-great-grandfather, Ethan Allen, was the famed American patriot, and his sword, made in England in 1727, is now in Mr. Allen's possession. His grandparents on both sides of the family located in what is now Racine county, Wisconsin, during the early thirties, there becoming pioneer agriculturists when Wisconsin was still a territory. Edgar E. Allen was born in Racine county, November 23, 1848, and was there engaged in contracting until 1902, since which year he has lived retired. His wife was also born in Racine county, November 13, 1852, and they had one son: Percival E. Mr. Allen belongs to the Masonic fraternity and the Royal League, and in political matters is a staunch Republican.

Percival E. Allen received his early education in the public schools of Racine, Wisconsin, and as a youth of fifteen years learned telegraphy in that city, where he was connected with the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad Company. Later he became train despatcher at the Wells street depot, Chicago, and then held a like position with the Illinois Central Railroad at Memphis, Tennessee, subsequently being connected with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad at Savannah, Illinois. During all this time he had been engaged in the study of law, and eventually entered Northwestern University, Chicago, and when he had completed his course there became a student in the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, where he was graduated from the law department in the class of 1907. During the summer vacation of that year he was admitted to the bar at South Bend, Indiana, June 26, 1907, and during the following August came to Joliet, Carbon county, Montana, where he was admitted to the bar in November following, practicing in Joliet until November, 1910, when he came to Red Lodge to take up the duties of the office of county attorney, to which he had just been elected on the Republican ticket. In his official position Mr. Allen has been given the opportunity to display his skill as a legist and in numerous important cases has demonstrated his entire fitness for the position which he holds. Although still a young man, the manner in which he has discharged his duties has won the entire confidence of the people of Carbon county, who feel that their interests are being carefully looked after while he holds his position. Mr. Allen belongs to the Greek letter society, Alpha Epsilon, and to Carbon Lodge No. 16, A. F. & A. M., and Joliet Lodge, I. O. O. F.

On December 1, 1909, Mr. Allen was married to Miss Louise Dean McClellan, who was born in North Liberty, Indiana, daughter of Charles A. and Allie (Souerdt) McClellan, the former a native of Ohio and the latter of St. Joseph county, Indiana, and both now living. They have two daughters: Mrs. Allen, and Alma. Mr. McClellan is one of the prominent farmers of St. Joseph county, Indiana, where the family is widely and favorably known. Mr. and Mrs. Allen reside at No. 115 West Seventh street, Red Lodge, and are prominent in the social life of the city.

GEORGE F. DOWNER, superintendent of the public schools of Butte, is one of the young men of the west of marked ability and enterprize, whose progressive spirits are bringing about the rapid development of this section of the country. During his four years' connection with the schools of Butte he has succeeded in greatly raising the intellectual standard and promoting the efficiency of the system as a preparation for the responsible duties of life. Indeed, the constant aim and general character of Mr. Downer's life work are summed up in the famous dictum of Sydney Smith,—that "The real object of education is to give children resources that will endure as long as life endures; habits that time will ameliorate, not destroy; occupation that will render sickness tolerable, solitude pleasant, age venerable, life more dignified and useful, and death less terrible."

A native of the fine old Badger state of the Union, Mr. Downer was born at Lake Geneva, Wisconsin, the date of his birth being the 20th of February, 1875. He is a son of William H. and Emma J. (Hale) Downer, the former of whom died in 1908, at the age of sixty-four years, and the latter of whom is now residing in Montana with her only son. The father was a merchant and agriculturist by occupation and he was prosperous and successful in both those lines of enterprize.

In the public schools of Lake Geneva, Mr. Downer received his preliminary educational training and later he supplemented this discipline by a course of study in the celebrated University of Wisconsin, at Madison, in which excellent institution he was graduated as a member of the class of 1897, duly receiving his degree of Bachelor of Letters. Immediately after leaving college he turned his attention to the pedagogic profession, spending some ten years in teaching in the schools of Wisconsin and Michigan. He came to Butte, Montana, in 1907 and for the ensuing three years was principal of the high school. In 1910, by virtue of his splendid success and apparent ability as a teacher, he was elected as superintendent of the Butte schools. He is the popular and efficient incumbent of this position and is achieving remarkable success as an educator in this city.

At Milwaukee, Wisconsin, on the 22nd of August, 1901, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Downer to Miss Jessie A. Phillips, a native of Wisconsin and a daughter of C. W. and Mary Phillips, the former of whom is engaged in business at Milwaukee. Mr. and Mrs. Downer are the parents of one child, William C., born at Milwaukee, on the 16th of May, 1902.

In a social way Mr. Downer is affiliated with the Silver Bow Club, the University Club of Butte and with the Beta Theta Pi college fraternity. In politics, Mr. Downer is a Republican of Progressive sympathies. In community affairs he is active and influential and his support is readily and generously given to many measures projected for the general progress and improvement. In their religious faith he and his wife are members of the Protestant Episcopal church.

DR. ALEXANDER MALCOLM MACAULEY. Among the wide-awake young professional men of Montana is Dr. Alexander Malcolm Macauley, a busy and successful practitioner of medicine at Stockett who though established there but a few years has already gained prominence through his professional ability and is recognized as a young man of merit and high character. As one who has elected to give in this state the best of his energies and endeavors to one of the most responsible and self sacrificing professions, Dr. Macauley merits recognition among those men who are making Montana what it is and who are contributing to its future prestige. His name is suggestive of his lineage—Scotch and English. Born at Baddeck, Cape Breton Island, off the north of Nova Scotia on November 1, 1876, he is the eldest of the ten children of Daniel William Macauley and his wife Margaret, born Fraser. Both parents were born in Nova Scotia, were married there on the 25th of December, 1874, and are still residents of their native isle. The father is a farmer by occupation. The American branch of the Macauley family was established by the great-grandfather of Dr. Macauley who settled at Pictou, Nova Scotia, in 1815. The family of Margaret Fraser was established in Nova Scotia in 1823 by emigrants from Scotland.

After due preliminary educational training in the Baddeck Academy and in the academy at Pictou, Nova Scotia, Dr. Macauley matriculated in Manitoba University, from the medical department of which institution he was graduated in 1907 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. Following his graduation he served six months as an interne in the Winnipeg General Hospital, Winnipeg, Canada; then in the summer of 1907 came to Montana, locating first at Sand Coulee where he became associated with Dr. T. B. Anthony and remained thirteen months. From there he removed to Belt where his associate in practice is Dr. W. F. Paterson, a brief sketch of whom appears elsewhere in this volume. He has taken post graduate work at the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minnesota, is alert and keeps in close touch with the thought of the day and the methods of practice advanced by the leading members of the medical profession throughout the world. He is a general practitioner, and during the comparatively short period that he has been established there he has built up a very satisfactory practice.

At Great Falls, Montana, on September 7, 1909 was solemnized the marriage of Dr. Macauley and Miss Annie Magdalene Eitlegoerg, a daughter of F. M. Eitlegoerg who came to Montana from his native state of Illinois. The fraternal associations of Dr. Macauley are with the Masonic Order at Great Falls, as a member of Cascade Lodge No. 34, Independent Order of Odd Fellows at Belt, with the Knights of Pythias at Sand Coulee and with the Modern Brotherhood of America at Belt. In church associations he is a Presbyterian and holds his membership at Ponoka, Canada. As a loyal and progressive citizen Dr. Macauley is interested in the development of his city and of the state and gives substantial evidence of that interest through his membership and work in the Commercial Club of Belt.

ALEXANDER ALLA, a well-known attorney of Butte, is a native of the state of Michigan, born on March 20, 1881, in the city of Allouez, Keweenaw county, in the extreme northern part of the commonwealth. His parents, Charles and Saraphine Catherine (Onkka) Alla, were born, reared and educated in Finland, the enterprising and independent grand-duchy which forms the northwestern corner of Russia. They came to the United States early in their mature life and took up their residence in Keweenaw county, Michigan, where they lived until their removal to Calumet, Michigan. There the mother died in February, 1909, and the father now resides in Laurium, Michigan.

Alexander Alla obtained his academic education in the public schools of Calumet, and after completing their course of instruction, entered the law department of the University of Michigan, from which he was graduated in the class of 1904. He practiced his profession for a short time in Calumet and in 1907 he came to Butte, arriving in the city on April 28th of that year. At once opening an office and taking up the practice of his profession, he has been successful and has won for himself a high position among the members of the legal profession in Silver Bow county.

Mr. Alla has taken an active part in the public affairs of the city and county of his adoption, and his participation in them has been well appreciated, as his efforts have been directed for what he believed to be for the best interests of the locality. He is a strong Republican in politics and has creditably served his party as a delegate to its county conventions and in many other ways, including zealous and effective campaign work in the field before every election.

He was married in June, 1908, to Miss Ann J. Beckman, a native of Missouri. Mr. and Mrs. Alla are well known in Butte's social circles.

FRANK S. LUSK. From the position of a cowboy and rancher to that of bank president seems a long step upward in the rank of a man's industry, but it is one many a man has taken easily and naturally in this western world, where everything is mobile and conditions are constantly changing. Opportunities for such an advance, or something similar, are frequently presented, and readiness for the change is all that is required to make it. This readiness must be acquired by previous experience and usefulness in the employment of natural ability and acquired powers, and it was such experience that enabled Frank S. Lusk, president of the First National Bank of Missoula at this time, but in his young manhood a rancher, to become what he is.

Mr. Lusk is a native of New York, where his life began on April 27, 1857. His parents were James W. and Cornelia M. (Stillman) Lusk, the former born and reared in the state of New York and the latter a native of Cleveland, Ohio. The father was a gentleman of high repute and prominence in educational circles, with which he was connected during almost the whole of his mature life, especially in the line of publishing school books. He was at one time a member of the firm of Bryant, Lusk & Stratton, conductors of first class business colleges in various leading cities in the country, and his mind was ever bent on the business in which that firm was engaged.

Because of this he put into wide circulation throughout the country the Spencerian system of penmanship, which soon became the standard in all the schools, public and private, and practically revolutionized the art of teaching boys and girls how to write. He got out the first Spencerian copy books and put them on the market, and before his death he owned all the copyrights and royalties belonging to the system. In giving circulation to his boon to teachers and pupils alike, he became a member of the publishing firm of Iverson & Phinney, as it was then, now a part of the American Book Company, and went all over the country as the special advocate of his system of penmanship and the Spencerian copy books that taught it, which were then published by that firm. He died in Cleveland, Ohio, in 1863 after a long life of uprightness and great usefulness.

His son Frank was educated in Cleveland, Ohio, and as soon as he left school came west. He was of a vigorous physique and high in spirit, and the wild life of the plains appealed to him with irresistible force. He located in Colorado in 1876, and afterward moved to Converse county, Wyoming, taking up his residence where the town of Lusk has since grown up and been named in his honor. There he conducted a large ranching business and engaged extensively in raising cattle and other live stock for the markets.

The life was very agreeable and even fascinating to him. It required him to travel through Montana and other parts of the farther west for the purpose of buying cattle, and thus not only gave variety to his experiences, but also made him intimately acquainted with many parts of this section of the country. Early in the nineties he engaged in the construction of railroads under contracts, and during his connection with this line of enterprise he did considerable work of importance and great service to the country. He built the railroad into Deadwood, South Dakota, and the short lines in that locality, and aided in the construction of other lines of great value in developing the country through which they run.

In 1907 he came to Montana to build the Milwaukee & St. Paul through this section of the state and the tunnels west of Missoula. Two years later he decided to make Missoula his home for the remainder of his life, having been very favorably impressed with the city and the country around it, and their future possibilities, and having also been highly pleased with the people of this region, in the enterprise they displayed, the resourcefulness they manifested and the lofty ideals of progress that inspired them.

Mr. Lusk located in the city in 1909 and bought an interest in the First National Bank. At the next annual meeting he was elected president of the bank, succeeding A. B. Hammond, and since then he has been the controlling force in directing the affairs of the institution. He is a gentleman of commanding energy and force of character, to whom difficulties are no obstacles, fear is unknown, and the only thing required is knowledge of the end to be reached in any enterprise that enlists his attention and support. He believes firmly in the future of Missoula and the state of Montana, and is a tireless worker for the advancement of both.

On April 25, 1894, Mr. Lusk was married to Miss Louise Buchanan Findley of San Francisco. Of the social organizations so numerous in all parts of this country he belongs to many, but the ones of chief interest to him are the Missoula Club, the Denver Club and the Calumet Club of Chicago. He is well known all over the farther west and is everywhere highly esteemed as one of the most enterprising, progressive and upright men and useful citizens of the country. He would be an inspiring force and an ornament to any community, and Missoula is well pleased to have him as a resident among her people and as a stimulus to her activities of all kinds. He does his part in all that are worthy and commendable, and they all respond to his influence in increased benefits to the people.

E. H. FREEZE, M. D. A man of broad mental attainments, talented and cultured, E. H. Freeze, M.D., of Missoula, has gained marked prestige as a physician and surgeon, and honors the profession in which he is so successfully engaged. A native of the Dominion of Canada, he was born in May, 1878, in Penobscus, New Brunswick, coming on both sides of the house of English stock, his ancestors having been among the earlier settlers of New Brunswick. His parents, Byron and Matilda (Hall) Freeze, were both born, bred and married in New Brunswick, the father being employed in farming during his entire life.

Educated in Montreal, Quebec, E. H. Freeze, M.D., was graduated from McGill University in 1903. Continuing his studies abroad, he was graduated from the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons, in Edinburgh, Scotland, in 1904, and afterwards spent a year doing hospital work in Dublin, Ireland. Returning to America, Dr. Freeze began the practice of his chosen profession at Wolfville, Nova Scotia, where he remained two years, meeting with well deserved success. His health then failing, the doctor traveled for a year, at the end of which time he came to Missoula, Montana, to visit his two sisters, who were living in this city. The climate proving beneficial, he was induced to remain, and has since been actively engaged in the practice of medicine and surgery, his patronage being extensive and lucrative, while his continued and well directed effort in his professional labors has brought him preeminence, not only in Missoula, but in all the medical societies of the state.

Dr. Freeze married, in Missoula, July 14, 1909, Maud Evans, a daughter of David and Gwendlyn (Evans) Evans, early settlers of Montana. Fraternally the doctor is a member of the Ancient Free and Accepted Order of Masons; of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows; and of the Knights of Pythias. •

JOSEPH H. WHITE. Experiments in the utilization of electrical energy as a mechanical power began as early as 1830, and today the galvanic battery and electric dynamo are rapidly ousting steam and in a thousand ways doing its work with less noise and expense and with better results. The possibilities of electricity as a mighty successor to the decreasing energy of our coal fields, its illuminating powers, its advent into the science of medicine and its many, many other uses have all contributed to make the subject of electricity one of vital interest to the whole world. Every college and university worthy of the name provides a course in electrical engineering, and the large enrollments in that department is an evidence of the part which electricity is expected to take in the world's future industrial life. Among the most valuable achievements of invention in recent years, is the application of electricity as a motive power on railways, and it has been in this line of work that Joseph H. White, manager of the Helena light and railway system, has been engaged.

Mr. White was born in the state of Pennsylvania on the 18th of September, 1869, and there completed his education in the scientific department of the University of Pennsylvania at Philadelphia. Shortly before graduating he was seriously stricken with illness and after recovering he took up professional work in electrical construction for the Western Engineering Company at Carney, Nebraska, remaining there one year. He next went to New York and up through the New England states where he was engaged in electrical street railway construction work for the Western Engineering Company and remained in this field for the same company for five years, installing and constructing many miles of electric street railway systems in this section.

From the New England states he went to Texas and constructed the street railway system at El Paso. The establishment of the street railway system at Mobile, Alabama, was his next accomplishment, and following this he performed a similar service for the city of Ogden, Illinois, and later for Winona, Minnesota. In 1907 he came to Helena to take charge of the city's light and railway systems. His work there has been of the highest order and has given to that city facilities and an efficient railway and lighting service which are highly appreciated by its people. One of the many improvements already accomplished is the new street railway system out to the state fair grounds, and a number of other improvements are contemplated.

Mr. White is the son of Rev. John W. White, a prominent Episcopal clergyman of Pennsylvania who had charge of one diocese in that state for thirty years. He was born in 1824 and died in 1900. On the maternal side Mr. White is descended from sturdy Holland ancestors who came from Holland to America in the seventeenth century and were prominently represented by descendants in the soldiery of the Revolution. From four different sides of the house Mr. White can trace his descent back to patriots in the American war for independence, by virtue of which he sustains membership in the Sons of the American Revolution. His mother, who was Miss Mary Beaver prior to her marriage, was born in 1835 and died November 1, 1911. She took great delight in assisting all good works, both within and without the church, and was well known for her large hearted charity. Rev. John W. and Mary (Beaver) White were the parents of six children, of whom Joseph H., our subject, was fourth in order of birth.

On June 23, 1908, at Millersburg, Bourbon county, Kentucky, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. White and Miss Rebecca Martin. Both are communicants of the Episcopal church. Mr. White is prominently identified with the Masonic order, being a Knight Templar Mason, a 32d degree Scottish Rite Mason, and a member of the Ancient Arabic Order, Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He is also a member of the Montana Club. Though Mr. White has been a resident of Helena but five years, his enterprise and evident interest in the city's welfare have won him the admiration and regard of its people, and his courteous manners and happy social qualities make him a welcomed and valuable member of the different circles, church, social and fraternal, in which he mingles. Helena is glad to welcome such men as Mr. White to her citizenship.

HARRY HECTOR DALE has been established in Culbertson since 1907, since which time he has built up a legal practice that is highly gratifying to him, in view of his limited experience in the profession. He was born on September 28, 1882, in Peele county, Ontario, Canada, and is the son of Prof. John W. and Mary (Ashbury) Dale, both natives of Canada. Professor Dale has been identified with educational matters all his life, and has won to himself a considerable prominence as an educator of ability and progressiveness wherever he has been located. He is, and has been for some years, filling with a high degree of satisfaction the position of superintendent of the public schools of Mondak, Montana, and has done much for the advancement of the school system in that place, as well as being chiefly instrumental in the building of a fine brick school, erected at a cost of $11,000. His labors in the cause of education have not been confined to one place, but have extended throughout eastern Montana, where his influence is felt in all matters appertaining to the advancement of the educational system. In his exertions in the cause of learning in Mondak, Professor Dale saw the need of a better school building, and after beginning to raise the needed funds to erect such a building, he was unremitting and tireless in his efforts to complete the work. He is one of the most highly esteemed men in eastern Montana, and is recognized throughout the state as the exponent of better educational methods, and an able educator as well.

The early education of Harry Hector Dale was received at the hands of his father, who grounded him most thoroughly in the fundamental principles, a training which was of inestimable value to him in later years. He attended the high school of Butte, Montana, and was graduated therefrom, after which he entered the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor, and was graduated from that institution in 1905 with the degree of A. B. He continued his studies there for two years, specializing in law, his first course having been a literary one, and in 1907 Mr. Dale was graduated from the law department of the university. Immediately thereafter Mr. Dale established a law practice in Culbertson, opening his first office in October, 1907, and his efforts have been rewarded with a pleasing degree of success since that time. He is recognized as one of the rising young men of this city, and has won considerable prominence as a citizen of progressive ideas and general worth.

Mr. Dale is unmarried. He is one of the two children born to his parents, the other being Lily, now Mrs. T. W. Collinson, whose husband is a prominent doctor of Culbertson.

Mr. Dale is a Republican, and takes an active and intelligent interest in the affairs of the party in his district.

OSCAR M. ELTON. Foremost among the young and vigorous enterprises which have been established in Missoula within the past five years, none is more worthy of mention than the ice cream and candy factory owned and operated by Oscar M. Elton. Without the progressive and dauntless spirit of Mr. Elton, the business could not have reached the present state of prominence and prosperity which it enjoys, and of the man who has so successfully come to be regarded as a factor in the business life of his community, it is fitting that something be said in this historical and biographical work of the state of Montana.

Oscar M. Elton was born in Norwegian Grove, Minnesota, on February 25, 1878. He is the son of Martin O. Elton, a native of Norway, who came to America when he was thirteen years of age and settled in Minnesota, where he passed his life engaged in agricultural interests. He married Liza Myhre, and in recent years gave up farming and moved to Missoula, Montana, where they now live. Ten children were born to Martin Elton and his wife, of which number Oscar M. is the eldest. All are living, and are here named in the order of their birth: Oscar M., in business in Missoula; Carl, married and living in Montana; Emma, wife of William Barrett, lives in Missoula; William; Harry; Edna and Ellen, twins; Reginald; all living in Missoula; Edwin W., lives in Virginia; Clara, the wife of George E. Higson, lives in Norfolk, Virginia.

After the birth of Oscar Elton, the family remained in Norwegian Grove about three years, when they removed to Clay county Minnesota. They lived there for six years before they went to Pelican Rapids, and that place represented the family home for a matter of twenty years. In the meantime, in common with others of the family, Oscar had attended the schools of the communities wherein the family lived. In about 1905 Mr. Elton left home going south to Virginia, and in that state he remained about two years. He worked in a saw mill part of the time and later in a wholesale hardware house. His next move brought him to Montana. He located first at Columbia Falls, remaining there for a year in the employ of a leading mercantile house, and then went to Kalispell, where he became connected with the M. M. Company, remaining with them for three years as a department salesman. It was the aim and intention of Mr. Elton, however, to become his own "boss," and he was ever on the lookout for a suitable location in which he might engage in business for himself. About this time he settled upon Missoula as the most opportune location, and he gave up his work in Kalispell, and went to Missoula, where he immediately opened up a confectionery store. From a small beginning the business has assumed splendid proportions, and in the comparatively short time that has elapsed since the inception of the business, it has grown apace. He carries on a wholesale manufacture of candies and ice cream, and conducts both a wholesale and retail business.

Mr. Elton is a man of indomitable will and tireless energy. He has worked all his life, beginning as a boy of sixteen when he earned his first money working in a hardware store at Pelican Rapids, Minnesota. While there he learned the tinner's trade, and at first received the munificent wage of $5.00 weekly, which he dutifully shared with his parents, who wisely inculcated in their children principles of independence, which in the case of Mr. Elton has been one of the strong factors in his splendid success. With regard to his political views, Mr. Elton is an independent voter and has never been active in local politics. He is a member of the Presbyterian church, and fraternally is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias and the Modern Woodmen of America, of which latter order he was clerk for two years. Mr. Elton is particularly fond of reading and possesses a fine library. He is especially devoted to Montana, and has evidenced his great faith in the future of the country by investing in real estate to a considerable extent on the Teton river in Chouteau county; he is interested in a one thousand acre hay and stock ranch.

In 1905 Mr. Elton was married to Ida Buck, daughter of Orville and Mary Buck of Farmington, Washington. One child, Alice, was born to them, but is deceased.

SYLVESTER J. SMALL. The Judith Gap Journal is one of the progressive newspapers of central Montana, a clear index of the local news, a mold of public opinion, and a worthy influence for the substantial development and civic improvement of its home town and vicinity. In its editor and publisher, the state has one of its ablest newspaper men, with a long and varied experience in the field both east and west.

Mr. Small has spent practically thirty-eight years in the active following of his profession. He began it when he was a boy, and has never stepped outside of his chosen career to accept the many opportunities of business that come to every newspaper man.

Sylvester J. Small was born in Beaver, Pennsylvania, on May 6, 1858, and was educated in the common and high schools of that city, subsequently taking a business course from private instruction. While a school boy he worked in a newspaper office, and in this way by the time he was sixteen and had completed his schooling he had saved enough to make his start in his chosen field. Western Pennsylvania was then in the height of its oil boom, and though one of the youngest newspaper proprietors in the state he soon had his paper a going concern. When he was nineteen he was publishing both a morning and evening edition from the same office. His experience in the oil fields made him one of the expert reporters of the operations, and for three years he was connected with the large metropolitan dailies as expert correspondent, following up the development work and making monthly reports on the production and other technical news.

James L. Wallace

Mr. Small lived in Pennsylvania until he was about twenty-two years old, and then came out to the Northwest. He settled at Fargo, North Dakota, about the time that region was beginning its development, and as editor and publisher was identified with practically all phases of the growth and progress of this portion of the United States. He was a resident at Fargo until 1907, a period of twenty-seven years, and then came to Montana in the Judith Basin. He was at Moore and Hobson for a time, but in 1908 established his present plant at Judith Gap. His paper is now conceded to be the leading one in circulation and influence in Meagher county, and has an excellent mechanical equipment.

In November, 1882, Mr. Small was married at Manchester, Iowa, to Miss Susan C. Bailey, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Bailey, of Manchester. A son and three daughters have been born to their union—Marion, Susan C., Bertha and Jean. Marion, who has followed in his father's career, was formerly associated in the management of the Judith Gap Journal, but is now proprietor of a paper of his own at Hedgesville. The three daughters live at home. All the children were well educated, and the girls are trained and enthusiastic in music, Susan and Jean being performers on the piano and Bertha a violinist. Their little home orchestra is one of the most attractive features of the Small home in Judith Gap.

Mr. Small's parents were Henry and Arabella A. (Ecoff) Small. The father was a native of Beaver county, Pennsylvania, and as a farmer by occupation spent all his life in that part of the state. His death occurred at the age of fifty-eight, and he is buried in his native county. His wife survived him many years until 1910. Her death occurred at the advanced age of ninety-four, and father and mother now rest side by side. Of the nine children, Sylvester J. was the youngest, and all the others are still residents of Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Small and her daughters are active members of the Episcopal church. Mr. Small affiliates with the Masons, the Elks and the Knights of Pythias, and as a citizen, besides the influence he exerts through his paper, he is also one of the active promoters of Judith Gap prosperity through the local Commercial Club, and is a member of its executive committee.

He is one of the leading factors in the local Republican organization, and is now serving as United States commissioner and as townsite agent. During his residence in North Dakota he was postmaster four years at Fargo. He has had an exceedingly busy career, but his capacities and tastes have been so broad as to include many things outside of his regular pursuits. In literary matters he is both a keen critic and himself a capable writer, and in his private library and his editorial sanctum takes delight in the technique and atmosphere of his vocation. A fisherman, hunter, baseball fan, and in all these active diversions, he finds pleasurable recreation. He is a close observer, and his extended experience and first-hand knowledge of many parts of the United States lend convincing authority to his expression of belief that Montana is the greatest state of the American Union. It is faith of this kind that makes one of the best assets of a community or state, and through the medium of the press and his own personality he exerts his influence on all occasions for the continued advance and prosperity of the Treasure state.

JAMES L. WALLACE. The city of Missoula, which is said to be the most beautiful in Montana and one of the most pleasing and attractive in the United States, numbers among its residents many men of high culture, fine scholastic and professional attainments, business capacity of great scope and unusual enterprise and progressiveness in public affairs, and is well pleased to name James L. Wallace, one of its leading lawyers and counselors, as a good representative of them all. He possesses some measure of all the characteristics enumerated above, and in his own domain of action is in the front rank. As a citizen, too, he is alert, broad minded and progressive, with a warm and helpful interest in the welfare of the community and its people, and an unhesitating readiness to do whatever he can to promote it.

Mr. Wallace's life began in Keokuk county, Iowa, on November 23, 1863. His father, John Wallace, was born in Trimble county, Kentucky, and is a scion of an old Virginia family of Scotch ancestry. The first of the family to reside in this country was Peter Wallace, who came to America from Scotland in 1719, and located in Virginia. He afterward moved to what is now Kentucky, and there his descendants lived for several generations. One of them, John Wallace, the father of James L., moved to Iowa early in the fifties, and from thence to Kansas soon after the seventies began. In 1890 he followed farther in the wake of the setting sun and took up his residence in Idaho. He is still living and is now eighty-six years of age. He is a millwright by trade and in the active period of his life did important work at his craft in all the states of his residence, being accounted a man of unusual skill and proficiency in his business. The mother, whose maiden name was Retta Lawler, was born in Jefferson county, Indiana.

Their son James began his education in the public schools of Iowa, continued it in those of Kansas, and attended Washington Academy at Washington, Iowa, in the latter state one year. He then passed a year at Oskaloosa College in Oskaloosa, Iowa, after which he devoted the years of 1890-91-92 to the academic course of the University of Nebraska. He studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1893, after which he at once located in Cripple Creek, Colorado, and began the practice of his profession.

Not being satisfied with his legal preparation, in 1896, 1897 and 1898 he attended the law department of the University of Nebraska, and was graduated in 1898. He then returned to Cripple Creek and resumed his practice there, which he continued until 1907, when he moved to Missoula. While living in Cripple Creek he was very popular and took a very active part in public affairs. He was city attorney from 1905 to 1907. In 1898 was nominated on the Union or Fusion ticket for county judge. The year 1901 he was also nominated as his party's candidate for the lower house of the state legislature. But his political career did not begin there. He was elected county clerk of Norton county, Kansas, in 1885, just after attaining his majority, and filled the office four years. His first campaign work was done in behalf of James G. Blaine for the presidency before he was of age.

Mr. Wallace came to Missoula in 1907, as has been noted, and at once took a prominent place at the bar and in politics. He was elected alderman and was serving as such when the commission form of government was adopted for the city. Although he knew his action would legislate him out of office, he was one of the most earnest, energetic and effective of its advocates, and his speeches and writing did a great deal toward making the issue successful in the election.

Under the new form of city government Mr. Wallace was one of the candidates for the office of mayor and among the three leading ones. He did not secure the office, but he made a very creditable showing at the polls, and when it is remembered that he was comparatively a new comer in the city and the other candidates were old residents, the vote he received was altogether flattering and somewhat remarkable. It showed that he had already made a very favorable impression on the people, and this has increased in extent and intensity as time has passed since the election.

Mr. Wallace, always alert and attentive to agencies for good in his community, and desirous of making all he knows of as useful and influential as possible, has taken a deep and serviceable interest in the fraternal life around him. He is a Freemason, an Odd Fellow and a member of the order of Elks. He is also active in social life and a welcome addition to any social gathering at which he presents himself. No element in the life of the people among whom he resides goes without his attention and active aid if he deems it worthy of his regard.

On November 23, 1887, he was married at Norton, Kansas, to Miss Nellie B. McRea. They have two children, their sons, Enid C. and Howard H. The father stands well in the regard of the residents of Missoula in every relation of life. He is prominent in his profession, in the fraternities to which he belongs, in social circles in every part of the city, and in political affairs. He has been tried and found worthy in public office, and, if health and strength be spared to him, will undoubtedly make his mark in the professional and public life of the great state which he has adopted as his home.

HOWARD W. BATEMAN, M. D. One of the able and representative members of the medical profession in Teton county, Montana, is Dr. Howard W. Bateman, of Choteau, a young man of education, of energy and of high character, who in the few years that he has mingled with the people of that section has become highly esteemed by them.

Dr. Bateman was born in Le Sueur county, Minnesota, on the 23d of January, 1879, and is the second of five children born to his parents, George C. and Mary J. (Moore) Bateman. The father, who was born in New York, was descended from one of the old German families of the Empire state. He removed to Minnesota in 1857 and there followed his trade as a miller and engineer until his death at the age of fifty-one years. Mary J. (Moore) Bateman was born in Minnesota and now resides with her son in Choteau, Montana; she is of English lineage.

Dr. Bateman secured his preliminary schooling, including the high school course, at Lexington and Dundas, Minnesota, and then entered the state normal school at Mankato, where he was graduated in 1900. His professional studies were pursued in the State University of Iowa, where he completed the medical course in 1907 and was graduated as a Doctor of Medicine. He began the practice of his profession at Augusta, Montana, and continued there until his removal to Choteau, in April, 1909, where he has since continued his professional labors with gratifying success. Aside from his general practice he also gives attention to surgery, and he has served two years as health officer of Teton county. As secretary and treasurer he is identified with the Choteau Irrigation and Development Company and every project which has for its purpose the advancement of his community or of the state, receives his hearty support. Politically he is a Republican. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Woodmen of the World and Choteau Lodge No. 44, Free and Accepted Masons.

At Iowa City, Iowa, on June 25, 1908, was celebrated the marriage of Dr. Bateman and Miss Effie H. Shultz, a native of Iowa. They have one son, Howard William Bateman, Jr., born at Choteau, Montana, on August 29, 1909. Dr. and Mrs. Bateman are members of the Methodist Episcopal church.

HOMER F. COX. From the time when he finished his college career until 1902, Homer F. Cox devoted his energies to educational work, in which field of activity he experienced a pleasing measure of success and gained distinction as an educator wherever he was known. Since 1902 his attention has been devoted to business affairs, and he has experienced a success in this field also which has been noticeably good. His first business enterprise was in the implement business, but in more recent years he withdrew from that line and has since confined his attention to the lumber business. He has been a resident of Shelby, Montana, since 1911, and in the brief time that has elapsed since locating in these parts has established himself firmly in this community and won a place for himself in public confidence and esteem that speaks most eloquently of his many excellent traits of character.

Born in Buffalo Ford, North Carolina, on November 10, 1867, Homer F. Cox is the son of Eli and Mary A. (Pickett) Cox. The father was a native of Buffalo Ford, North Carolina, which was the birthplace of four generations of this branch of the family, and he died in 1893, at Rose Hill, Kansas. The mother was also a native North Carolinian, and she is yet living and makes her home at Rose Hill, Kansas. These worthy people became the parents of six children, of which number Homer was the third born.

At the age of nine years Homer F. Cox began his attendance at the district schools of his native community and he continued there until he was nineteen, when he entered the normal school at Emporia, Kansas. He was later a student in the National Institute of Mathematics, at Madisonville, Kentucky, and was duly graduated from the institution in 1890. For one year before graduation he taught in the preparatory department and upon his graduation the young man was called to teach in the School of Mathematics, and he continued there for one year. He then taught for a year at Perry, Missouri, after which he became principal of the Carlowville Academy at Yates, Alabama. From that place he went to Kansas, was principal at Rose Hill, Kansas one year and Oklahoma in 1893, in which states he was engaged in educational work for about nine years.

In 1902, Mr. Cox withdrew from educational work and turned his attention to the more prosaic affairs of business. He engaged in the implement business in Perry, Oklahoma, there continuing with success for four years, but removed to Minot, North Dakota, to manage the Western Implement Company, and remained there for a year, engaged in a similar business. In 1907, Mr. Cox came to Malta, Montana, and engaged in the lumber business—an enterprise which claimed his attention until 1910, when he moved to Shelby and turned his attention to the same line of enterprise. He has experienced success in the lumber industry, and is one of the prosperous and busy men of the place.

Mr. Cox was married in Nashville, Tennessee, on May 7, 1891, to Miss Edna Tucker, of Madisonville, Kentucky, the daughter of Robert Tucker of that place. Two children have been born to them: Marie E., who is the wife of V. T. Pettigrew, of Shelby, Montana, and Hazel B., who is unmarried and makes her home with her parents.

Mr. Cox was reared in the Quaker faith, and has been a minister of the Friends or Quaker church for the past twenty-five years. His father was commissioned in the Civil war and his remote ancestors participated in the Revolutionary struggles of the nations, the family on mother's side being one of the old Quaker families of the country. Mr. Cox is a member of no lodges or societies, and has lived a life of quiet and painstaking attention to duty which ever characterizes those of his faith.

HON. HIRAM S. BUELL. When a man has shown abilities that in the mind of his fellow citizens entitle him to the chief executive office of a community after a residence of less than five years, and that community such a large one as the city of Bozeman, it may be said without fear of contradiction that he is possessed of more than usual qualifications. Coming to Bozeman in 1907, Mayor Hiram S. Buell immediately took rank among the best citizens of this progressive city, where his business and personal excellencies have made him a leader in commercial and social life, while his sagacity and executive capacity have united in making him one of the most efficient officials the municipality has known. Mr. Buell was born July 9, 1861, on his father's farm in Jackson county, Iowa, and is a son of Timothy and Mary (Cain) Buell.

Timothy Buell was born in County Yonge, province of Ontario, Canada, in 1825, the son of a Canadian farmer, and at the age of thirty-one years immigrated to the United States, becoming an agriculturist in Iowa, where he spent the remainder of his life, passing away March 28, 1882. He was a stalwart Republican in his political views, and both he and his wife were members of the Methodist church. His wife, who was born in Niagara county, New York, in 1835, died in 1872, having been the mother of five children, of whom one died in infancy, Hiram S. being the fourth child and only son.

Hiram S. Buell secured his education in the country schools of Jones and Buchanan counties, Iowa, and as a young man engaged in the grain, live stock and lumber business at Livermore, that state. In July, 1907, he came to Bozeman, having been interested as an investor in Gallatin county land since 1902, and in January, 1907, engaged in dealing in Gallatin county lands. His business was successful from its inception, and led to the forming in 1908, of the H. S. Buell Land Company, of which he has been president to the present time. Mr. Buell has great powers of organization and was one of the prime movers in the forming of the Gallatin Valley Electric Railroad Company, of which he was president until its absorption by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad in 1912. He turned the first sod in connection with the building of the first interurban line in the state. The extent and volume of his business dealings have made him a well known figure in the business world throughout this part of the state, and the connection of his name with any project is a guaranty of its legitimacy, so firmly has he established himself in the confidence of his business associates and the general public. He is a staunch Republican in his political views, and in December, 1911, the voters of Bozeman expressed their desire for a business administration by electing him to the office of mayor, where he is vindicating their faith in his ability, conscientiously discharging the duties of his high office to the city's advantage. Mayor Buell was made a Mason in Urbana, Iowa, in 1882, but demitted to Jasper Lodge No. 424, A. F. & A. M., in Livermore, Iowa, and subsequently became a member of Bozeman Lodge No. 18, A. F. & A. M. He also holds membership in Bozeman Lodge No. 463, B. P. O. E. His religious connection is with the Presbyterian church. Mr. Buell maintains well-appointed offices in the Commercial National Bank building, while his comfortable residence is situated at No. 502 South Grand. A shrewd, alert and energetic citizen, quick to see an opportunity and to grasp it, and to turn it to his interests or those of the city, he belongs to the class that are making Bozeman a center of commercial and industrial activity, and as such fully merits the high esteem in which he is universally held.

On October 8, 1885, Mr. Buell was married to Miss Olive M. Hart, who was born in Humboldt county, Iowa, daughter of George and Ann (Tilson) Hart, natives of New York state. Mr. Hart came west to Humboldt county, Iowa, during the early fifties, becoming a pioneer agriculturist, and there spent the rest of his life in farming, his death occurring September 11, 1900, at the age of seventy-two years. His widow, who survives him, makes her home at Belgrade, Gallatin county, and is the mother of five children, of whom Mrs. Buell is the eldest. Mr. and Mrs. Buell have had three children: Grace, who is the wife of R. P. Seidleitz, living in Bozeman; Vera O., married December 28, 1912, George R. Callaway; and Gelia H., living with her parents.

MARK A. STRANG. In these modern days of great accomplishments, large fortunes and general activity along all lines, the West expects much of her young men, and, as a rule, is not disappointed in her expectations. It is doubtful, however, if there have been many who have in so short a time attained the success that has been won by Mark A. Strang, president of the M. A. Strang Land Company (Inc.), of Floweree, Montana, and a man who, rising from a clerkship to the position of one of the leading real estate dealers in Montana, has founded and fostered a city that promises to become a center of commercial and industrial importance. Mr. Strang was born at Springville, Utah county, Utah, on January 1, 1883, and is a son of James P. and Lydia (Houtz) Strang natives of Wisconsin and Utah, respectively.

James P. Strang crossed the plains during the early days by ox team, enduring all the hardships and privations of the pioneers, and settled in Utah. Subsequently he moved to Canada and engaged in farming, and he now owns immense tracts of land near Calgary, where property has doubled its value during the past few years. He was married in Utah to Lydia Houtz, a native of that state, and they had a large family of children, seven of whom are living, Mark A. being the second in order of birth. The others are as follows: James Jesse, engaged in farming in Canada; J. Claude, a farmer near Floweree, Montana; Vere, proprietor of a livery stable and other interests in that thriving little city; Miss Anna B., a trained nurse in a hospital at Nelson, British Columbia; and Misses Hazel and Gale, who make their home with their parents at Claresholm, Alberta, Canada.

The early education of Mark A. Strang was secured at Hungerford Academy, Springville, Utah, and after finishing his preliminary studies he entered Park College, Parkville, Missouri, and later attended Colorado College at Colorado Springs, Colorado, where he gained signal success as a debater and public speaker. Prior to his graduation, however, he received an offer of a responsible position in the land department of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, with which company he was connected for two years, and it is to the excellent training that he received while the incumbent of that position that he attributes his subsequent success. While engaged in discharging the duties of his office, Mr. Strang came to Great Falls, Montana, in the year 1907, and soon thereafter he founded the M. A. Strang Land Company, which has since been incorporated, and on February 1, 1910, he was the founder of the city of Floweree, located on the main line of the Great Northern Railroad, between Havre and Great Falls, and about twenty-three miles from the last named city. It is the nearest railroad market for about twelve townships of land. The soil of this section is exceptionally fertile, and has been settled upon by responsible, permanent settlers, men who are all well versed in agricultural operations and conditions. During March, 1910, Mr. Strang's company had the phenomenal record of selling a farm a day. The firm handles all kinds of property, but gives the greater part of its attention to farm land.

Mr. Strang is a man of progressive ideas, alert and enterprising in all his activities. Modern methods have always been adhered to in his operations, and a number of automobiles are in use by the firm for the conveyance and convenience of prospective customers. His entire energies have not been confined to handling land, however, as he has also erected a hotel and a number of store buildings, all of which are now occupied. He is the president of the Floweree Townsite Company and the M. A. Strang Land Company.

In political matters Mr. Strang is independent in his views, voting rather for the man than for the party, although he has never found it practicable to devote a great deal of time and attention to matters of a public nature. Socially pleasant and courteous, he is fond of out-of-door life and finds much enjoyment in the study of literature. He and Mrs. Strang are members of the Presbyterian church and have numerous friends in church and social circles. Although his residence had been formerly maintained in Great Falls, as well as his office, in the spring of 1912 he moved his office to Flowerree, where he might be in a better position to look after his interests there, and has built a fine residence in the town, where the family now resides.

On May 6, 1905, at Colorado Springs, Colorado, Mr. Strang was married to Miss Gertrude Stevens, daughter of John M. and Ella A. Stevens, and two children have been born to them: Gerald V., born on February 13, 1908, and Mark Jerome, on August 14, 1909.

CLIFFORD B. HARRIS has been identified with financial matters in Kalispell since 1907, the year in which he formed his first associations with Montana, and in the passing years has extended his operations in various directions, winning reputation as one of the ablest of bankers in Flathead county. Mr. Harris is a native Missourian, born in Harris, Sullivan county, that state, on August 30, 1877. He is the son of Overton and Mary Susan (Jones) Harris, both born and reared in Missouri, and well known and highly esteemed in their section of the country throughout their lives. Overton Harris has been president of the Harris Banking Company for years, as well as the founder of that company. The mother died in 1904 at the age of forty-seven years. Six children were born to them, Clifford B. being the first born of that number.

Mr. Harris was favored with an education rather beyond that of the average youth, after finishing the common schools of his community being permitted to attend the state university at Columbia, from which he was graduated in 1897, receiving the degree of LL. B. Following his graduation, Mr. Harris became associated with his father in the business which he had founded and conducted for so many years, filling the responsible position of cashier, and learning thoroughly the intricacies and details of the banking business while thus employed. In 1907, he severed his connection with the Harris Banking Company in his native town and removed to Montana, coming to Kalispell on August 1st of that year. He was soon thereafter elected president of the Kalispell National Bank, a well organized institution which had been established on April 27, 1907, just previous to the arrival of Mr. Harris in Kalispell. A few months later Mr. Harris organized the First National Bank of Polson, of which he became president. J. L. McIntyre is vice-president, William Irvine second vice-president, and A. W. Pipes is cashier. The bank is in a thriving condition, with assets of $220,000, and under the management of an experienced financier of Mr. Harris' ability, has made excellent progress in Polson and vicinity, winning the complete confidence of the public, and in every way proving itself a beneficial institution to the community. Not content with his banking operations, Mr. Harris, on May 2, 1910, organized the Dayton Banking Company, at Dayton, Montana, with assets of $100,000, of which he is president, J. B. Lawlis vice-president, and George Brawith cashier. This also is conducted on the same reliable basis which characterizes the management of the other two banks, and is a decided stimulus to the business life of Dayton. The Kalispell National Bank is one of the solid financial establishments of the county, with a capital of $50,000, surplus and undivided profits, $5,771.82; unpaid dividends, $2,500; circulation, $49,400; and deposits, $412,327.61. It has an especial personnel as to its officials and board of directors, all being men of prominence and ability in the business life of the city. As previously mentioned, Mr. Harris is president, while W. N. Noffsinger is vice-president, P. C. McStravick is second vice-president, and O. H. Moerly, a sketch of whose life will be found elsewhere in this work, is cashier.

On September 12, 1897, Mr. Harris was united in marriage with Miss Clara Moore, the daughter of Col. A. B. Moore of Carthage, Missouri, well known in that state, but a native of Kentucky. One daughter has been born to them, Helen Estelle, whose birth occurred on July 25, 1908, at Harris, Missouri.

Mr. Harris is a Democrat, with reference to his political affiliations, but has never taken more active part in such matters than any good citizen might be expected to assume. He is a man of excellent character and of sterling value to any community in his capacity as a citizen, possessing, as he does, many admirable traits inherited from his English and Scotch ancestors, who were early settlers of Virginia and Kentucky, and among whom were numerous pioneer settlers of Missouri. The town of Harris, Missouri, was named after the grandfather of Mr. Harris, A. M. Harris, who was also a banker and a man of considerable note in his time. The family is one of the oldest in American history and many of the name have been prominent in affairs of national import.

OSCHAR H. MOBERLY. Since Oschar H. Moberly came to Kalispell in March, 1907, and assisted in the organizing and incorporation of the Kalispell National Bank, he has held the position of cashier of that bank. He has in that capacity shown himself to be a man of resource and ability, and has come to fill an important position in the affairs of the community, winning to himself the esteem and confidence of all with whom he comes in contact, and in every way showing forth the qualities of an admirable citizen and a capable business man.

Mr. Moberly was born in Sullivan county, Missouri, on February 24, 1875, and is the son of John T. and Agnes (Haley) Moberly. The father was a native of Kentucky and was of English ancestry. He moved to Missouri in early life, settling in Sullivan county some time in the fifties. He was among the "forty-niners" to California, but soon returned to his Missouri home. He was a well-known stock raiser there for years, and died at his home in Sullivan county in 1890, when he was sixty-five years of age. The mother was born in South Carolina, and was of Irish parentage. She died in 1882 when she was in her forty-fifth year. They were the parents of eleven children, Oschar H. being the youngest of the family. He was educated in the schools of Humphrey, Missouri, and later attended Westminster College at Fulton, Missouri, leaving in his junior year, when he was twenty years of age. His first employment was in the capacity of a salesman for H. C. Humphrey of Webb City, Missouri, and for two years was thus employed, having charge of the dry goods department as buyer and manager. He next went to Chicago, where he entered the employ of Carson, Pirie, Scott & Company in their wholesale department as assistant buyer and manager. He remained with the Chicago firm for a period of six years, enjoying splendid success, and then removed to Pontiac, Illinois, where he purchased a stock of goods and engaged in the retail dry goods business. After two years he disposed of the business and went to Montana, reaching Kalispell in March, 1907, when he straightway became associated with a number of the prominent business men of the place in the organization of the Kalispell National Bank, of which he has been continuously engaged as cashier since its incorporation, as previously mentioned.

On April 24, 1905, Mr. Moberly was united in marriage with Miss Estelle Harris, the daughter of O. Harris, a native of Missouri. One daughter has been born to them, Mary Susan, whose natal day is February 10, 1909.

Mr. Moberly is a Democrat, politically speaking, and is a member of the Christian church. He is a member of the Kappa Alpha fraternity, and of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks of Kalispell. He is president of the Kalispell Club and a member of the Chamber of Commerce, also a director of the fair association. Mr. Moberly is a man of progressive spirit and great civic pride, and in him Kalispell has made a valuable acquisition, men of his stamp being zealously sought for by every city of aggressive and progressive tendencies.

JAMES C. BAILEY has been postmaster at Whitefish since February, 1911, and in that position has given service indicative of his splendid ability. From his youth he was identified with railroad work until he was appointed to his present position by President Taft, and he has been connected with some of the greatest railway systems in the United States in the years of his railroad activities. Mr. Bailey was born in Ogdensburg, New York, on February 6, 1864, and is the son of Cyrus A. and Anna (Dwyer) Bailey. The father, who was a native Vermonter, went to New York state as a child, and there he passed his life in the contracting and building business. He was a prominent and popular man in his community, and lived to reach the age of eighty-five years, his death occurring in Ogdensburg in 1909. The mother was a native of Ireland, born in Sligo. She came to America with her parents as a child of four years, and the family settled in New York state. She died in 1872 when she was in her thirty-seventh year. They became the parents of eight children, of which number James C. of this review was the fifth born.

The public schools of Ogdensburg afforded such educational advantages as Mr. Bailey was permitted to receive in his youth, and after completing the course of study thus prescribed, he took service with the railroad company now known as the New York Central, where he was employed for a short period. His next work was in Wisconsin, where for three years he was employed by the C., M. & St. P. Ry., and with the C., St. P., M. & O. Ry., for thirteen years as conductor. After severing his connection with that company he went to Bayfield, Wisconsin, where he bought a hotel and for four years remained there as its proprietor. He eventually sold the hotel and such other interests as he had there and in 1907 came to Montana, locating in Whitefish, there entering the service of the Great Northern Railway, and he continued with them until his appointment to the position of postmaster, which came to him in February, 1911, and which post he is still holding. He has discharged the duties of his position in a manner highly creditable to himself, and wholly acceptable to the public, thus proving the wisdom of the appointment.

On May 6, 1888, Mr. Bailey was united in marriage with Miss Nellie E. Dowd, at Wabasha, Minnesota. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. W. Dowd, originally from Connecticut, but now residents of Whitefish, where they make their home with their daughter and her husband. No children have come to the Bailey home.

Mr. Bailey is a Republican, active and interested in all party affairs, and a leader in local politics. Fraternally, he is a member of the Masonic order, and is identified with the blue lodge of Whitefish. He is also a member of the Order of Railroad Conductors, in which he holds the office of chief conductor.

RICHARD L. IGEL, M. D. As in the early years, with its wonderful treasures, Montana attracted the sturdiest and bravest of the pioneers, so now with its remarkable developed resources and its still greater possibilities as the state of the future it is becoming the home of the best and strongest representatives of the professional and business activities. It was a discriminating choice, after extended travel and experience in many states and countries, that led Dr. R. L. Igel to Montana. He is one of the leaders in his profession, and as one of the physicians who began practice in Stanford about the time the new town was founded he has gained an extensive business, and is one of the influential and progressive citizens of this locality.

Doctor Igel was born at Cape Girardeau, Missouri, June 30, 1871, the fourth child and youngest son in a family of six, whose parents were Richard L. and Emma (Schuesler) Igel, now residents of Leavenworth, Kansas. Doctor Igel has one sister in Montana, the wife of Col. Frederick Harper, of Helena. The father, who was born in Germany and came to America a boy of fourteen, is one of the oldest druggists in the country, having been actively identified with the business for sixty-four years, and is still connected with that line in Leavenworth. He and his wife were married in Madison, Indiana, and for the past thirty-five years have been residents of Leavenworth.

Doctor Igel was about five years old when the family moved to Leavenworth, and that was his permanent home until 1907 when he took up his residence in Montana. His early training and preparation for his professional career were very complete and diversified. After graduation from the Leavenworth high school, he became an interne in the soldiers' home in that city. He next entered the Kansas State University, where he was graduated after extended work in the departments of pharmacy, chemistry and assaying. Under his father's supervision he had been brought up to a knowledge of drugs, and in Montana has been engaged in the drug business in connection with his regular profession. On leaving the university he became an interne and hospital steward in the United States penitentiary at Leavenworth. With this broad experience, he then entered the University Medical College of Kansas City, where he was graduated Doctor of Medicine in 1901. Going abroad, he did post-graduate work in Europe, especially at the renowned clinics of Vienna, and on his return was engaged in practice at Leavenworth until 1907. In that year he located in Montana, first at Mondak, then at Lewistown, and permanently established himself at the new town of Stanford before the town was formally founded. His drug store is now located in his own building, which has a hospital annex, and he has all the facilities for attending to his large and increasing practice.

Doctor Igel was married at Kansas City, Missouri, November 21, 1906, to Miss Margaret Bradley. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bradley, were natives of Ireland. One daughter has been born to their union, named Gretchen. Doctor Igel and wife are members of the Episcopal church, and he affiliates with the Masonic order and the Woodmen of the World. A good citizen, casting his vote regularly, and an adherent of the Democratic party, he is not actively concerned in practical politics. He is a thorough and systematic reader, not only in his profession but in general literature, and is interested in all the intellectual diversions. The outdoor sports, hunting and fishing, baseball and football, make a strong appeal to him, and both personally and for people in general he is an advocate of a wholesome, broad course of living and thinking.

PAUL BABCOCK, successful lawyer of Culbertson, Montana, where he has been located since 1907, was born near Spring Valley, Minnesota, on December 9, 1875, and is the son of Seth C. and Sarah A. (Cole) Babcock, both natives of New York, and still residing in Spring Valley, where they have spent the best years of their lives thus far. The father was a farmer, now retired, and is a veteran of the Civil war, having served through the war as quartermaster in Company A of the Twenty-ninth Wisconsin Regiment. They became the parents of five children, all of whom are living but one. They are: Howard B., an attorney of Sisseton, South Dakota; Rev. George Babcock, of Rushmore, Minnesota; Julia B., the wife of Dan Hall, of Alden, Minnesota, and Paul, of this review.

In the fall of 1898 Paul Babcock entered the law office of his brother, Howard, located at Sisseton, South Dakota, and was admitted to the bar of South Dakota on July 25, 1901. Thereafter he remained with his brother until 1907, in which year he came to Culbertson, where he has since continued, and where he has built up a thriving practice, winning to himself the esteem and confidence of the entire community, and becoming known for a citizen of worth and a man of splendid character and integrity.

Mr. Babcock is a Republican, active and interested in the councils of his party, and a helpful member of the political fraternity in his district. In 1912 he was a candidate for the office of county attorney of Valley county, on the Republican ticket. He is a Mason of the blue lodge and chapter, and is also a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. Since coming to Culbertson, Mr. Babcock has interested himself in the acquisition of city realty and agricultural lands in the county, and is now the holder of some valuable property. He is fast forging ahead in the ranks of the rising and progressive younger set in this section of the state, and his future is unclouded by any untoward present conditions.

R. S. WARK, who is now a civil engineer and surveyor of well established reputation, was born in Adair, Iowa, on the sixth day of February, 1884. At the early age of seventeen he had completed his high school education and was ready to make the choice of his life profession. Having been used to a life in the open and possessing a natural aptitude for science and mathematics, he very naturally chose to become a civil engineer. To perfect himself along this line he entered, in the autumn of 1901, the Iowa State Agriculture College at Ames, of which Secretary Wilson, our national secretary of agriculture, was for so long a time the successful president. No institution of learning in all the middle west supports engineering schools of higher standards. From the Iowa State College, then, Mr. Wark obtained his degree in June of 1905, being then only twenty-one years of age. His extreme youth, however, did not weigh as against his ability when it came to the matter of procuring employment in his chosen profession. His first position was with the Denver, Northwestern & Pacific Railway Company in the capacity of surveyor. This position he resigned that he might make an extended trip throughout the great northwest and examine the country for himself. When short of funds, he accepted employment in the engineering department of the Union Pacific Railway, working from Denver to Salt Lake City, Utah, and Green River, Wyoming. After another six months he changed to the St. Louis, Rocky Mountain & Pacific Company that he might see yet another section of the country. This time, he worked throughout New Mexico, thus obtaining a valuable knowledge of the state and surrounding conditions. At the expiration of the year he came to Three Forks, Montana, then merely a postoffice and railway station. Here in April of 1907, together with a company of engineers from the Chicago & Milwaukee Railroad, he platted and surveyed the new addition to Three Forks. So great was his belief in the future prospects of this infant city that he immediately chose it for his future home, settling there permanently as a resident engineer and surveyor. Having seen much of the big west and being by nature a keen observer, Mr. Wark believes that the possibilities of Montana are greater than those of any other state and that Gallatin county is the garden spot of Montana. So far as one may judge in the brief period of five years Mr. Wark has no reason to change this opinion. The town has made marvelous growth and shows every sign of continuing to do so, while he, as an engineer, is in constant demand.

He numbers one more young man from the east to swell the already large colony of Montana bachelors.

His father, Alexander G. Wark, was born in New Brunswick on December 6, 1854. His parents brought him to the United States while still in his third year and settled in Princeton, Illinois, where he was educated and reared to manhood. After his marriage to Miss Emma Stickle, a young woman born in Illinois, they purchased for themselves a farm in Adair county, Iowa, and he became one of that most wholesome and useful type of man, the successful Iowa farmer. They still live in Adair, where all of their five children were born, Mr. Wark owning many acres of the world famous Iowa corn land worth at least two hundred dollars per acre.

The oldest son, Roscoe, manages the Adair county farms, while the three daughters, Vera, Helen and Eva, are still at home with the parents.

The son, W. R. Wark, who has wandered so far from the Hawkeye home has strayed also in his political views, being still a Republican but of the Progressive school.

JOHN E. LANNING is an Ohioan, as he was born at Dresden in that state on March 12, 1881. But though born in the eastern section of the country, he received his training in the west, as his parents moved to Ogden, Utah, when he was but a child, and he received his elementary education in the public schools there. He graduated from the Ogden high school in 1899, and then went to Chicago, and entered Armour Institute. He spent four years as a student here, graduating from the engineering course in 1903. As soon as he finished his academic training he went to work for the Lanyon Zinc Company at Iola, Kansas, in the engineering department of their plant, and he kept this position for a year and a half. At this period, he was tendered a place with the Minneapolis Machinery Company at Salt Lake City, his work being to do engineering for them, and he also worked in the drafting department for a year. This same firm sent Mr. Lanning to El Paso, Texas, to take charge of their interests there, and the following year, 1907, they transferred him to Butte, where he was to open up an office for them and to have charge of the business generally. The venture has been a great success under the able management and direction of Mr. Lanning, and this company has a number of the large machines used in the different factories and workshops of this region. Mr. Lanning is a skilled mechanic, and has added practical training to that of the college. He is thoroughly grounded in every branch of his profession and he has the enthusiasm for his job and for making it the very best that can be, which is an unfailing recipe for success. By his own work he has risen to a high place in his profession, and as this is the steel age, the opportunities for the trained and practical engineer are unlimited. The demand for men of this sort is always in excess of the supply, and will always be, for however common training may become, the native qualities which make it valuable will continue to be the difficult things to find, and the men who have them will always be found at the top.

I. N. Lanning, the father of the subject of this sketch, was born in Ohio, but later removed to the west and engaged in mercantile business. At present he has retired from commercial work and is living in Florida. He is fifty-eight years of age. The mother of John Lanning was also an Ohioan, who died at the early age of twenty-three, in the year in which her son was born.

The only other surviving member of the family of Mr. Lanning is his sister, Mrs. Florence Beauvina, who now lives in Ogden, Utah.

On Christmas day of 1907, Mr. Lanning was married to Miss Vivian Brunner of El Paso, Texas. The wedding occurred in the bride's native city, where her parents had long resided. Her father, John Brunner is still conducting one of the leading mercantile establishments of El Paso. His wife, and the mother of his daughter, was taken away by death in November, 1911.

Mrs. Lanning is a devoted worker in the Woman's Club of Butte, and is very popular socially, as is also her husband. He belongs to the University Club. Both are valued members of the Presbyterian church, and they are in every respect representatives of the best citizenship of Butte. Mr. Lanning is a Republican, but not a politician. Like most good Montanians, he is enthusiastic on outdoor pursuits. Though still only a young man, he has established himself in the commercial and the social life of the city, and is counted as one of its substantial citizens.

NORTON H. PEARL. Mr. Pearl is a young man of signal ability and fine qualities of personality who has devoted himself to the work which is agreed by our best thinkers to be the most important one before the world at the present time; that of education. Mr. John W. Pearl, his father, was a native of New York state, who removed to Eastport, Michigan, shortly before his marriage to Miss Addie Z. Harris, of that city. He was a miller and also carried on a mercantile business and accumulated considerable property. Norton is the oldest of the three children in the family. The mother died in 1883, and at present the two sisters live in Michigan with their father, who is in the employ of the government.

Our subject was born in Eastport, Michigan, on November 4, 1878. He attended the village school in his home town, and after leaving school, went into business for himself, handling merchandise and machinery. After two years in this occupation, Mr. Pearl again entered school. He took a course in the normal at Mount Pleasant, Michigan, and graduated in 1906, immediately beginning his work as a teacher. His first position was at Bay City, Michigan, and the following year, he came to Butte to accept the place of principal of the Washington school. He filled this during 1907 and 1908. From here he was called to the McKinley school, a new and larger institution, the principalship of which was vacant at the time. His management of this school was such as to command the respect and admiration of both its patrons and the six hundred pupils in his charge. There are eighteen rooms in the building, and this, under his leadership, was admirably equipped for efficient work. Mr. Pearl at the time of his departure from the McKinley school in June 1912 was acknowledged among thinking men and women to be the finest educator in Butte. His methods were of the most advanced and that they were effective is indicated by the fact the work of his pupils received the commendation of some of the leading instructors of the country. Mr. Pearl possesses the rare faculty of making comrades of the boys under his charge and at the same time maintaining most perfect discipline, and authoritative control. Through the voluntary tribute of love and admiration which his pupils pay him he achieves this control—never through fear.

Mr. Pearl's reputation as an educator is not confined to this city, but throughout the state he is known and esteemed for his service to the profession, which Mr. Eliot of Harvard declared had no equal among all the occupations of mankind.

In politics Mr. Pearl is an Independent. He belongs to the blue lodge of the Masonic order, is a member of the University Club of Butte and vice-president of the Butte News Boys Club.

Mr. Pearl is typically a man of the great out-of-doors—to whom the greatest lure is:

"A trail to break, and a life a stake, and another bout with the foe."

Physically perfect and always in training his greatest joy is in the mountains. Answering the Call of the Wild he has temporarily left his profession to accept a responsible position in the government service in Glacier National Park, where he, in a different field, is "making good" in the best sense and scoring a record which proves his versatility as well as his ability.

No man in Butte has a wider circle of friends than Mr. Pearl and all of them hope that his absence is but temporary and that soon he will return to resume the work in which he has made such an admirable record.

CHARLES W. GREENING. Montana is exceptionally favored in the number of college men to be found in the ranks of her citizens. They are found not only in the professions, but also predominate to a remarkable degree among those engaged in the different avenues of commercial and industrial activity. Charles W. Greening, who has entered upon a business career at Melstone, Montana, as cashier and manager of the bank there owned by Wiley, Clark and Felton, is a college man; a graduate of law, energetic, capable and resourceful; a representative of that type of citizen so valued in a young and growing commonwealth.

Born at Grand Meadow, Minnesota, on July 26, 1882, he acquired his earlier education there, including two years of high school work, and then completed both an academic and collegiate course at Carleton College, Northfield, Minnesota, receiving from that institution his B. A. degree. Following that, he matriculated in the University of Minnesota at Minneapolis as a student in the law department and was graduated as an LL. B. He spent four years at Minneapolis and during that time not only completed his course in law but also gained a practical experience in the banking business as an employe in the Northwestern National Bank of that city. In 1908 he left Minneapolis and came to Montana, stopping for a few days in Miles City, where he made arrangements for opening the bank in Melstone, and in August of that year established the institution of which he has since remained cashier and active manager. He has all the qualities that make for success—character, ability and practical knowledge—and during the four years that he has had charge of this business he has conducted its affairs in the most capable and acceptable manner.

Mr. Greening is a son of Charles F. Greening, a banker and real estate man at Grant Meadow, Minnesota, and one of the well-known men of that state. The senior Mr. Greening came to America from his native England when a boy and for many years has been a resident of Minnesota, where he has acquired prominence in different ways. He has served as a member of the Minnesota state legislature and was the author of the present Minnesota herd law. As a veteran of the Civil war, who participated in many of the hard-fought engagements of that conflict, he is now serving as senior vice-commander of the Minnesota G. A. R. and he has also attained a high position in the Masonic order in that state. He has a strong civic pride, is a man of generous impulses and large charity, and is deeply interested in all that touches the general welfare of his state, where he has made his life count for good in all its relations and is recognized as one of its most sterling citizens. He was married at LeRoy, Minnesota, to Clara Caswell, a native of Illinois, and to their union were born five children, of whom Charles W. is fourth in order of birth and is the only one located in Montana.

At Carroll, Iowa, on November 22, 1911, the junior

Mr. Greening was joined in marriage to Miss Jewell Ross, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William T. Ross of that city. Mrs. Greening is a graduate of Drake University, Des Moines, Iowa, is a lady of excellent attainments and is a very fine musician and reader. Both Mr. and Mrs. Greening are members of the Congregational church and the latter is also a member of the Ladies' Aid Society and superintendent of the Sunday school. Mr. Greening is president of the Melstone Commercial club, is also president of the school board, and in politics is aligned with the Republican party. Both are young people of high character and qualifications who have taken a place among the most esteemed people of their town and community. Mr. Greening predicts that Montana will be the Pennsylvania of the west, though on a much larger scale; for here are the same combination of resources, although their development is still in its infancy.

THOMAS FRANCIS SHEA was born at Emmettsburg, Iowa, June 22, 1878. He received his education partly at the public and high schools. He taught school for one year, having attained the age of eighteen, and then attended the normal school at the Highland Park College, at Des Moines, Iowa, graduating in 1901. He then taught in the Capital Park high school for one year, after which he pursued a collegiate course at the same college, graduating in 1904, with the degree of B. S. Following this course he attended Drake University, where he specialized in law for one year. He then returned to his home city, Emmettsburg, Iowa, and was elected mayor. After one year, being anxious to continue his law practice, he returned to Des Moines, Iowa, and practiced successfully for two and a half years. Having the opportunity to join the firm of Sharnikow and Paul at Deer Lodge and believing a newer country would give him greater opportunities, he came to Deer Lodge and accepted the proffered position with Sharnikow & Paul attorneys. He remained with them one and a half years and then began to practice for himself. He has been very successful. Mr. Shea is prominent in the Republican ranks and is active in behalf of the Progressive wing of the party and is proud of the fact. At the November election of 1912 he was elected county attorney on that ticket.

He was married November 17, 1910, to Miss Ella Cotter, of Deer Lodge, the daughter of Charles Cotter, a prominent mine owner and early settler. One child, Francis, was born of this union, on August 30, 1911.

The father of Mr. Shea, William Shea, was a prominent farmer, who lived in retirement at Emmettsburg for many years. He died in 1911. The mother of the subject of this sketch was Mary Martin.

Both parents were natives of Ireland. The mother still lives at Emmettsburg. Five children were born in the parents' family: Rose, the eldest, now Mrs. C. C. Egan, of Emmettsburg; William; the third child was the subject of this sketch; John Joseph, who lives at Deer Lodge; and Leo, who lives at Emmettsburg.

Mr. Shea is a member of the Knights of Columbus and of the M. W. of A., being clerk of the camp. His family are members of the Catholic church.

Mr. Shea is devoted to hunting and is a base ball enthusiast, and Mrs. Shea is fond of horseback riding and out-door life. He is a stockholder in bank and city realty.

ALBERT SCHAAL. Among those who have identified themselves with the agricultural industry in Montana and who have been fortunate in securing land in fertile Dawson county is Albert Schaal, one of the leading and progressive farmers of his section, whose magnificent property is located about ten miles west of Glendive. Although he is not a pioneer of this section, his arrival in Montana as an agriculturist having taken place but a few years ago, the extent of Mr. Schaal's operations, and the remarkable success with which he has met, give him a prominent place among the agriculturists of Dawson county and give evidence of his ability in his chosen field of endeavor. He was born at Potosi, Grant county, Wisconsin, February 6, 1871, and is a son of George F. and Adolphenia (Kimmich) Schaal.

George F. Schaal was born in Rittenburg, Germany, March 3, 1830, and when about eighteen years of age came to the United States on a sailing vessel which took ninety-seven days to cross the ocean. Landing at New York City, he remained in that city only a few days, when he went to Chicago and there secured employment at seventy-five cents per day in a lead foundry. A short time thereafter he went to Galena, Illinois, and there worked on a barge on the Galena river, but subsequently removed to the head of the St. Croix river, in the lumber woods of Wisconsin, where for seven years he was employed in a sawmill. He then engaged in running lumber rafts on the Mississippi river through to St. Louis, and as far south as New Orleans, and after four years spent in this occupation started a shingle mill on the Wisconsin river. Selling this enterprise, he located in Grant county, Wisconsin, where he carried on a lumber and stave business for ten years, but eventually gave this up to give his attention to farming and stock raising. He became one of the prominent men of his county, and at the time of his death, which occurred April 11, 1906, was the owner of 1400 acres of valuable land. In 1863 Mr. Schaal enlisted in a Wisconsin volunteer infantry regiment, with which he served until the close of the Civil war, participating in fourteen battles and skirmishes and taking part in the Grand Review at Washington, D. C. He was a prominent G. A. R. man, and in political matters was first a Whig and later a Republican, while his religious belief was that of the Methodist Episcopal church. On December 20, 1862, Mr. Schaal was married in Wisconsin to Miss Adolphenia Kimmich, who was born in the province of Baden, Germany, December 12, 1844, and to this union there were born twelve children, of whom seven are now living, namely: George F., living at Black River Falls, Wisconsin; August, of Glendive, Montana; Henry, living at Potosi, Wisconsin; Albert; William, of Glendive; and Edward and Gustav A. R., who live at Potosi, Wisconsin.

Albert Schaal secured his education in the schools of Wisconsin, first attending the Waterloo schools and later the Valentine School of Telegraphy, from which he was graduated with the class of 1894. At that time he gave his attention to buying and shipping cattle in Grant county, where he remained for three years, and then extended the business, buying in ten different states and shipping to Chicago, St. Paul, Omaha, and Cedar Rapids and Waterloo, Iowa. In May, 1908, Mr. Schaal came to Montana and for three weeks was engaged in classifying land for the Northern Pacific Railroad, after which for four months he served as superintendent of fence building for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad. At that time he located on a homestead ten miles west of Glendive, where he has one and three-quarter sections of land, most of which is under cultivation. In 1910 he had the distinction of being the first man in Dawson county to plow 1,000 acres of land, and in 1911 had 1,400 acres in flax and 400 acres in oats, his land paying him fourteen dollars per acre. Progressive in his operations and possessed of modern ideas, he uses scientific methods in cultivating his land, and owns the best and most highly improved power farm machinery. The rapid and far-reaching success which has attended his efforts is an illustration of what may be accomplished in this section by a man of energy, industry and ability, and stamps Mr. Schaal as one of the leading agriculturists of his district. In political matters he is a Republican, but he has been too busy to enter the public arena. During the winter months he makes his home in Glendive, but spring finds him at work on his ranch, where he is busily engaged until fall.

Mr. Schaal was married to Miss Lily Holt, who was born at Cassville, Grant county, Wisconsin, daughter of William G. and Amelia (Scharfenstein) Holt, the former a native of Charlottesville Court House, Virginia, and the latter of Cassville, Wisconsin. Mrs. Schaal's mother died April 22, 1906, when forty-four years of age, having been the mother of twelve children, of whom seven are living, as follows: Lily, who married Mr. Schaal; May, the wife of B. F. Finecum, of Mona, Montana; Ross, also a resident of Mona; Anna, the wife of D. F. Finecum; Monea, living at home; Dorothy, attending high school at Cassville, Wisconsin; and Donald, at home. Mr. Holt, who was left an orphan as a lad, accompanied his aunt, Mrs. Beach, to Wisconsin, and was there educated in the public schools. He became a newspaper man, in which business he continued for ten or twelve years, then turning his attention to the manufacture of brick. Later he became a contractor and builder, and after the death of his wife removed to Dawson county, Montana, and engaged in the horse business in conjunction with general farming. While a resident of Wisconsin he served as police justice for many years, and in 1910 received the appointment as postmaster of Mona, Montana, the first to hold that office there. In political matters he is a Democrat, and is widely and favorably known throughout his section of the county. Mrs. Schaal was given good educational advantages in the schools of Cassville, Wisconsin, and for nine months prior to her marriage, in 1908 and 1909, taught school in Dawson county, having charge of a district forty miles wide and eighty miles long. She is popular in social circles of Glendive, where she has many friends.

JAMES D. TAYLOR. A man of broad intellectuality, thoroughly familiar with the law and precedents, J. D. Taylor, of Hamilton, Montana, has won a position of note among the leading members of the legal fraternity of Ravalli county, and as an honorable, courteous and loyal citizen he has the friendship and esteem of an ever-growing acquaintance. A native of Wisconsin, he was born, February 14, 1880, in Plum City, Pierce county. His father, the late William H. Taylor, was for many years an extensive and prominent stockman and meat packer at Niagara Falls, New York. In 1873, he sold out his interests in New York state and removed with his family to an estate in Plum City, Wisconsin, where he lived in ease and comfort until his death, July 15, 1903. He married Annie Zimmerman, a native of Switzerland, and she still resides at the beautiful family home in Plum City. Five children were born of their union, as follows: Dr. Joseph Taylor, of Kendrick, Idaho; Lena, wife of M. M. Kelley, of Spokane, Washington; William H., of Sutersville, Pennsylvania; J. D., the special subject of this sketch, and George, a civil engineer, also of Sutersville, Pennsylvania.

Receiving his rudimentary education in the public schools of his native city, J. D. Taylor was graduated from the high school at Red Lake Falls, Minnesota, in 1898, and there was a teacher in the eighth grade schools during the ensuing two years. Entering the University of Minnesota in 1900, he was graduated from its law department in 1904, and after his admission to the bar was engaged in the practice of his profession at Warroad, Minnesota, for four years. Coming to Montana in the spring of 1908, Mr. Taylor remained for a brief time in Missoula, while there making arrangements to enter into partnership with the late Charles M. Crutchfield, of Hamilton. The firm of Crutchfield and Taylor being formed, Mr. Taylor located in Hamilton, and on the death of the senior member of the firm, succeeded to the well known and extensive business established by Mr. Crutchfield, a business which under the control of Mr. Taylor is constantly increasing in extent and importance.

Mr. Taylor is an Independent Republican in politics, and while a resident of Minnesota was appointed appraiser of state lands by Governor Johnson. On November 5, 1912, he was elected to the office of county attorney, of Ravalli county by a plurality of three hundred and sixty. Fraternally, Mr. Taylor is a member of the Ancient Free and Accepted Order of Masons, belonging to the blue lodge; and of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks. He has accumulated property of value; owning agricultural lands in the Bitter Root valley and city realty.

In March, 1905, Mr. Taylor was united in marriage with Miss Florence B. Johnson, of Ellsworth, Wisconsin, a most estimable woman, whose tastes and purposes are in harmony with his own. Mrs. Taylor is a faithful and consistent member of the Episcopal church.

SEVER THOMPSON, although an American by birth, is of Norwegian parentage, both of his parents having been born in that country. His father, Ole Thompson, came directly from Norway to Polk county, Minnesota, where he purchased a tract of land which has since greatly increased in value. He is now one of the well-to-do farmers and dairymen of the vicinity. His mother, Christina Severson, left her native land to accompany the young husband to America. She became the mother of ten children, of whom all but one have reached maturity. Only three of the ten are sons. Thomas Thompson is still a farmer near his old home. His property lies in Buffalo county, Wisconsin. Elmer, the youngest of the family, has not completed his schooling. He still desires, during his vacations at least, on the parental farm. Of the daughters, Stina is the wife of Anton Linden, a farmer of Polk county, Minnesota. Her next younger sister, Louise, is Mrs. Otto Serum, of Buffalo county, Wisconsin, while Severina, the third daughter, married Louis Ogaard, of International Falls, Minnesota. Mr. Ogaard is now chief engineer of Minnesota. Mary Thompson is living at home and teaching in the schools of Polk county. Matilda, Mrs. Dan Danielson, lives on a neighboring farm, and Julia, like her sister Mary, has become one of Minnesota's teachers.

Sever Thompson, who carries his mother's maiden name, is the only member of the large family who has strayed far from his native state, but he has had no reason to regret the move that brought him to Montana. Mr. Thompson was born in Buffalo county, Wisconsin, on the twenty-ninth day of March, 1876. Until the age of fourteen, his parents remained in that county where he attended the district schools. In 1890, however, the family moved to Minnesota. After completing his secondary school work, he entered the university of North Dakota, completing the entire four years' course. For ten years thereafter, he taught in the schools of Polk county, Minnesota, the present home of his parents, later taking up a claim in Minnesota. For the necessary two years he lived on and cultivated this claim, before accepting a position as cashier in the bank of Eldrid, Minnesota. During four years he filled this position, at the end of which time he resolved to gain a more accurate idea of his native land. In 1908, he came to Missoula, Montana, but remained only a short time, as he had resolved to spend at least one year in travel before choosing a permanent location. During this year of rest and sight seeing, he found no spot that appealed to him so favorably as had Montana. On his return, in 1909, he resolved to make his home in the Bitter Root valley, and, with this intention, he became cashier of the State Bank of Darby, in which institution he is also one of the principal stockholders. In addition to his bank stock, Mr. Thompson has amassed considerable real property in and about Darby. He is an Independent in politics, voting for whomsoever he considers the right man for the office. In the local lodge, of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, he is, at present, acting as treasurer. The only other organization to which he belongs are the Commercial Club of Darby and the Scandinavian Brotherhood. Mr. Thompson's people were members of the Lutheran church, with which he has never severed his connection, although his wife is an Episcopalian.

MICHAEL BROWN. One of the leading members of the legal profession of Yellowstone county, Michael Brown, of the firm of Hathhorn & Brown, of Billings, has been a resident of this city for only four years, but during this time he has shown himself a conspicuous and faithful member of that great body of men, who, unobtrusively control the destinies of the state, a man wise in counsel, shrewd in management and fearless in the execution of plans which he believes will result in prosperity to the city, the state or the nation. During a long and useful career he has been intimately connected with the political and military history of various sections of the country, and his record today is without the slightest stain or blemish. Mr. Brown was born in Indian Creek township, Pulaski county, Indiana, April 20, 1841, and is a son of Ira and Sophia (Blew) Brown.

Ira Brown was born at Daretown, Salem county, New Jersey, October 30, 1813, and received his education in his native locality, his boyhood being spent on the farm of his father, William Brown. When he was twenty-one years of age he removed to Indiana, locating first at Brookville, Franklin county, where he obtained employment as a farm hand. In 1839 he removed to Pulaski county, purchasing 160 acres of land from the government, and to this original purchase he added from time to time, until he was the owner of 1,220 acres, located on the east bank of the Tippecanoe river, thirty-eight miles above the famous Tippecanoe battleground. When he first located in this section his nearest neighbor lived a quarter of a mile away, on the east side of the Tippecanoe river, and it was forty miles to the nearest settlement.

Ira Brown became judge of the probate court, a position he held for four years, was justice of the peace for nearly a quarter of a century, held nearly all the township offices, and was sent to the legislature of his state for one term. A great believer in the benefits to be derived from a good education, he assisted to build the first schoolhouse in his locality, was a stanch adherent of the free school system, and gave all his children educational advantages of an exceptional nature. He and his wife were consistent members of the Presbyterian church. In politics Mr. Brown was a Democrat until 1860, in which year he cast his vote for Abraham Lincoln, and from that time until his death, which occurred March 22, 1871, he voted with the Republican party. Ira Brown was married at Mount Carmel, Indiana, to Sophia Blew, who was born December 18, 1816, at Brookville, Franklin county, and she died March 3, 1899, having been the mother of eight children, of whom five survive.

Michael Brown was the eldest of his parents' children, and as a lad he assisted in cultivating the home farm. His early education was secured in the public schools, after leaving which he became a student in the county academy at Logansport, Indiana, and after one year of preparation there entered Franklin College, at Franklin, and afterwards Wabash College, Crawfordsville. Leaving college in his sophomore year, he answered his country's call for troops and enlisted May 9, 1862, in Company C, Second Indiana Volunteer Cavalry, for the term of three years or during the war. His regiment, attached to the Army of Cumberland, was mustered out of the service July 25, 1865, after a service that included some of the hardest fighting done during the war. Mr. Brown's first battle was New Middleton, Tennessee, and following that he participated in the battles of Shelbyville, Mossy Creek and Fair Gardens, and all the skirmishes that took place in eastern Tennessee, the campaigns of 1863 and 1864, and the entire battle of Chickamauga. He was taken prisoner near Dalton, Georgia, May 9, 1864, and was confined in Andersonville Prison until October 16th, at which time he was taken to Florence, South Carolina, and there kept until December 13th of the same year. On securing a ninety-day parole, he reported for duty at Nashville, Tennessee, and by order of General Thomas was detailed as a special courier for the military division of the Mississippi, and served in that capacity until the close of hostilities, when he was mustered out of the service at Nashville, Tennessee. Mr. Brown's service was a brave and gallant one, and he was known as a soldier whose enthusiasm could not be checked, whose ardor could not be dampened and whose cheerfulness under all conditions was familiar to all. Like many others, he bore the terrible hardships and privations of the fearful southern prisons, and when he had secured his release cheerfully rejoined his command, ready to perform any service asked of him. On his return from the army he took a commercial course in Bryant & Stratton's College, Chicago, and then returned to Indiana, and for three months was engaged in school teaching. During the summer of 1866 he worked on his father's farm, and on October 1st of that year he became a student in the law and literary department of Michigan University, and was graduated from the former in March, 1868. He first located in a general practice in Big Rapids, Michigan, where he was eventually admitted to all the courts of the state, and on December 9, 1884, was allowed to practice before the supreme court of the United States at Washington, D. C. He became one of the attorneys for the Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad, and continued to hold that position for twenty years, only relinquishing it when he came to Montana. His first visit to Billings was in 1903, and five years later he became a permanent resident of the city, where he is in partnership with Fred H. Hathhorn, under the firm style of Hathhorn & Brown.

Mr. Brown has been prominent in Republican politics for many years. In 1869 he was elected school commissioner for Mecosta county, Michigan, an office he held for two years, and in 1873 was sent to the mayoralty chair of Big Rapids. In 1876 he was appointed judge of the Fourteenth judicial circuit, and in 1878 was elected to the office, resigning it in 1881 on account of failing health. Subsequently he was appointed manager of the governing board of the Soldier's Home, and served as clerk for the board of managers for six years, during which time the home was erected under his supervision at Grand Rapids, Michigan. In 1908 Mr. Brown was elected on the Republican ticket and was a delegate in 1908 to the Republican National Convention, and served on the committee on credentials, being the only member of the committee from the state of Michigan. He has also been prominent in Grand Army circles. Originally a member of Andrew Post, No. 294, of Big Rapids, on coming to Billings he transferred his membership to William McKinley Post, No. 28. He was department commander of Michigan in 1889, when there were 22,500 members in good standing, served as judge advocate for two terms in Michigan, and is now serving his second term as judge advocate of Montana. He was made a member of the Masonic fraternity when he became connected with Winnamac Lodge, No. 171, A. F. & A. M., of Indiana, and subsequently joined Big Rapids Lodge Luella Chapter and Commandery 2 and Saladin Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., of Grand Rapids.

Michael Brown

On August 3, 1871, Mr. Brown was united in marriage with Miss Mary Alice Osburn, who was born in Tioga county, New York, daughter of Levi J. Osburn and Mary (Lyman) Osburn, natives of the Empire state. Mr. Osburn was a tailor by trade in New York, and when he removed to Big Rapids, Michigan, continued to follow that occupation up to the time of his death. His widow, who survives him and lives at Big Rapids, has reached the advanced age of eighty-eight years, and five of their seven children are still living, Mrs. Brown having been the third in order of birth. Her parents were connected with the Universalist church, and Mr. Osburn was a Republican in political matters. Mr. and Mrs. Brown have had three daughters and one son, as follows: Carrie, who is the wife of Major S. G. Reynolds; Lillian H., the wife of Herbert V. Bailey, of Miles City, Montana; Herbert F., cashier of the Citizens National Bank of Laurel, Montana and Mary Alice, the wife of William Lee Mains.

In any community such a clear-headed man of affairs, who brings strict integrity as well as sound judgment to assist his talent and legal ability, must be a valued and highly respected member—and such a member Michael Brown has always been. He has been a man of action and a man of study, and possesses a thorough and minute knowledge of the laws of the country. A steady and regular reader of the higher class of literature, he keeps fully in accord with the times by giving many of his spare moments to literature upon current events. He is courteous to all, ever ready with a cheerful word to stranger or friend, and in all affairs conducts himself with the unostentatious dignity of a true gentleman.

EDWARD D. NOONAN. Industrious, capable and self-reliant, well versed in legal lore, Edward D. Noonan holds a noteworthy position among the rising young attorneys of Ravalli county; during the comparatively short time that he has been in Hamilton, he has won a fair share of patronage, his law practice being quite extensive and constantly increasing. A native of Ohio, he was born, August 11, 1881, in Saint Marys, Auglaize county, Ohio, where he acquired his elementary education, being graduated from the grammar and high schools. Gifted from boyhood with a rare command of language and clear, logical reasoning powers, he acquired fame as an orator even during his school days, being generally perfectly competent to handle his end of an argument. Having early determined to become a lawyer, Mr. Noonan began his technical reading under the tutelage of D. F. Mooney, one of the leading lawyers of Saint Marys. Subsequently receiving the appointment of deputy clerk of court, he held the position two years, and the money that he thus earned assisted him in paying his expenses through the law department of the Ohio State University, at Columbus, which he completed in 1908, and he was admitted to the bar in Montana.

The limited advantages afforded a young man of energy and ambition in the eastern states caused Mr. Noonan to turn his eyes toward newer and wider fields, and he immediately started for the great northwest. Coming directly to Montana, he was for a year associated with the law firm of Walsh & Nolan, prominent lawyers of Helena. In 1909, Mr. Noonan located in Hamilton, where he has since been prosperously engaged in the independent practice of his profession, having gained an excellent reputation for legal skill and ability, and having won the confidence and good-will of the people. As a public speaker, Mr. Noonan is widely and favorably known, more especially in political ranks. During the Taft-Bryan campaign, he stumped the state for Bryan, and became very popular as an orator.

Mr. Noonan married, at Saint Marys, Ohio, June 5, 1905, Miss Jessie Whitcomb, of Austin, Pennsylvania, and of their union four children have been born, namely: Edward Dennis, Jr., Richard Patrick, Gertrude Honora (deceased) and Timothy Bryan.

DANIEL T. GOFF. Possessing a strong personality, courteous and kindly in manner, and being both enterprising and public-spirited, Daniel T. Goff is numbered among the esteemed and valued citizens of Hamilton, where he is successfully engaged in the buying and selling of real estate. A Kentuckian by birth and breeding, he was born, March 1, 1848, in Breckinridge county. His father, John A. Goff, spent the entire eighty-eight years of his life in Kentucky, where during his active career he was a prosperous farmer and stock-raiser. He was well known in his community as a man of sterling worth, and had a large acquaintance, among his personal friends having been that greatly beloved and much revered man, Abraham Lincoln. To him and his wife, whose maiden name was Nancy A. Steele, twelve children were born, Daniel T. being the youngest child of the household.

Leaving school at the age of fourteen years, Daniel T. Goff offered his services to his country, enlisting in the Federal ranks and for a year serving as a drummer boy in the Thirtieth Missouri Volunteer Infantry. Being seriously wounded at the Battle of Rolla, Missouri, he was sent to the hospital in St. Louis, where he was well taken care of for a time, although he has never fully recovered from the effects of the wound then received, the bullet having penetrated the groin. Returning from St. Louis to Kentucky, the brave soldier lad remained at home five months, when he joined the United States Navy, enlisting in the Mississippi Squadron, with which he was connected until the close of the war. He first served for eighteen months as call boy on board the "Argosy," No. 27, later being transferred to another gun boat, the "Grampus." To Mr. Goff belongs the distinction of being the youngest commissioned officer in the history of either the United States Navy or the United States Army, having as a reward for bravery in action received from the hands of Lieut. George Dewey, later Admiral Dewey, the commission of ensign. Mr. Goff is now commander of the John C. Freeman Post, No. 21, Grand Army of the Republic, and an honorary member of the Lincoln Farm Association.

After the war, as a beardless boy of eighteen summers, Mr. Goff left home, going to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, where he soon found work, agreeing to drive a four-mule team from there to Trinidad, Colorado. Completing the trip without special incident, he remained a resident of Colorado for forty-three years, being actively and successfully employed in mining and prospecting. During his earlier years of residence in that state, he, in company with one of his brothers and H. M. Hoxie, who was later president of the Missouri Pacific Railroad Company, made an overland trip to Pike's Peak, not in search of gold, which had then but recently been discovered in Montana, but for the purpose of buying hides and furs from the Indians and the trappers. The trip proved very successful. Mr. Hoxie and Mr. Goff's brother having conveyed their load of furs and hides to the nearest river port, took it on their own boat to Kansas City, Missouri, where they disposed of it to advantage, reaping a good profit in the transaction.

Owing to failing health, Mr. Goff came to Montana in September, 1908, and has since been actively and profitably engaged in the real estate business at Hamilton, dealing extensively in farm and city property. He has here built a fine modern home, in which he and his wife delight to entertain their many friends.

Mr. Goff married Miss Clara C. Sherwood, a native of Iowa, and though they have no children of their own, they have adopted, reared and educated four children, who are now the joy and comfort of their parents. Although not an active politician, Mr. Goff is a firm adherent of the Democratic party, supporting its principles at the polls.

During the exercises commemorative of the birth of Washington, held at the Canyon Creek school, in 1912, Mr. Goff, as commander of the John C. Freeman Post, participated in the interesting programme, delivering before the pupils a fine address, from which we take much pleasure in giving a few extracts, as follows:

"The Birthday of the Father of His Country"—may it ever be freshly remembered by Americans. May it ever awaken in them a filial veneration for his memory; ever rekindle the fires of patriotic regard for the country which he loved so well and to which he gave his youthful vigor and energy. His memory is first and most sacred in our love, and until the last drop of blood shall freeze in the last American heart his name shall be a spell of power and might. Yes, dear children, this is one personal and vast felicity which no man can share with him. It was the daily beauty and towering and matchless glory of his life which enabled him to create his country, and at the same time secure the undying love and regard of the whole American people. The first in the hearts of his countrymen? Yes; first, he was our first and most fervent love. Undoubtedly there were brave, wise and good men before his day in every colony, but the American nation we do not reckon to have begun before 1774, and the first love of that young America was Washington—the first word she lisped was his name; her earliest breath spoke it; it still is her proud ejaculation, and it will be the last gasp of her expiring breath. When the storms of battle blow darkest and rage fiercest, the memory of Washington shall nerve every American arm and cheer every American heart; it shall re-illumine that Promethean fire; that sublime fire of patriotism; that devoted love of country which words have commanded—which his example has consecrated."

MARTIN R. SWANSON, a man who has quickly risen to prominence in every community of which he has been a part, possesses that indomitable energy which has enabled him to conquer every obstacle placed in his path. Now living in Roundup, Montana, he is president of the Citizens' State Bank and of the Montana Land and Investment Company. Whereas the great mass of people who do not succeed, no matter what their advantages, complain that the world was against them, Mr. Swanson, although hampered by his lack of financial resources and by his ignorance of the English language, was able to overcome all this and to advance steadily up the ladder of fortune.

Mr. Swanson was born in Sweden, November 8, 1868, the son of William and Emma (Eckman) Swanson, both natives of Sweden. Both parents, who are still alive, have remained in Sweden, although several of their children, besides Martin R., have come to the United States. Mr. Swanson, Sr., is a farmer, with the church as his strongest outside interest. He is a devout Christian and an active church worker. Martin R. was the third born in a family of twelve children, four of whom besides himself are now in this country, one sister, who is the wife of Carl Swanson, of Minnesota, another, the wife of Emely Atterling, of Chicago, and two brothers, Swan, a resident of Minneapolis, and Ole, living at Clary City, Minnesota.

Martin R. received his education in the public schools of Sweden, and worked during vacations and off hours on the farm. When he was nineteen years old he had saved up enough money to come to the United States. He first settled in Minnesota, living part of the five years he remained in the state in Minneapolis, where he worked during the day and attended school during the evenings to learn the language, and the rest of the time out in the country working on a farm. He also attended a business college in Minneapolis. The next twelve years he lived in North Dakota, engaged both in farming and in the mercantile business. In 1908 he sold out his mercantile interests and part of his land and came to Roundup, where he has remained ever since. For the first two years he engaged in his old occupation as merchant, but in 1910 sold out his business, and bought into the Citizens' State Bank, which in 1912 elected him president. In addition to his banking interests he also operates a real estate, insurance and loan office, and is interested financially in the Musselshell County Abstract company.

Mr. Swanson is a man in whom everyone places the greatest confidence, and he could probably have held many public offices if he had cared to seek them. During his residence in Minnesota he was first a justice of the peace, and later the city assessor, and since coming to Roundup he has served in the city council. He is a Republican and takes an active interest in politics. He is treasurer of his Masonic lodge, and is a member of both the Roundup Commercial Club and the Pioneer Club. He is fond of all outdoor sports.

Mr. Swanson was married at Hartington, Nebraska, in November, 1905, to Bernice Acord, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Acord, of Hartington, and they have had one child, Lawrence W.

ALFRED W. EISELEIN, editor and publisher of the Record of Roundup, Montana, is typical of the intelligent, energetic men who are today developing the possibilities of the west. Mr. Eiselein believes that Montana is a state of unlimited opportunities and resources, and that some day it will be one of the richest states in the Union. He has been living in Roundup for four and one-half years, or since the town was established, but these years have been long enough for him to develop a sound belief in the future of the state, and also to prove to his fellow townsmen his own progressiveness and capabilities.

When Mr. Eiselein first started the Record in April, 1908, he used an Army hand press. The office is now, after only four years, equipped with every appliance of the modern newspaper office, linotype machine, Cottrell cylinder press, etc. It is a well-edited sheet, and with a steadily growing influence is a factor to be considered in both local and state affairs.

Mr. Eiselein was born in Carver county, Minnesota, September 9, 1884, the son of Adolph and Mina (Ziemer) Eiselein. His father was born in Germany and came to the United States as a young man, to settle in Minnesota. Although he has now retired, he followed the mercantile lines for many years as his regular business, and was interested on the side in several newspapers and in land. Although he never cared for any office for himself, he always followed the political game with zest both in national and in local affairs. Although his wife was also a native of Germany they met in the United States and their marriage took place in Minnesota. Alfred was the seventh child of a family of eight children.

The family lived in Carver county until Alfred was sixteen years old, when they moved to Renville county. Alfred attended the public schools and graduated from the Minneapolis high school. He was also an art student for two years under Director Robert Koehler, of the Minneapolis School of Fine Arts. He earned his first money as a boy in the newspaper business, so that when he took up the earning of his own living in earnest that was the trade he turned to. When he was about twenty years old he went to North Dakota for a year, working as a printer and conducting several newspapers. He then came on to Montana, arriving in Roundup in March, 1908, and has remained here ever since. One of his brothers, Adolph H., Jr., is now with him and associated with him in the Record office. Mr. Eiselein is a member of the Elks and of the Modern Woodmen of America. He takes an active interest in politics and is at present secretary of the Republican county central committee.

JAMES B. MULCAHY. America has been styled the melting pot of the various races, where each loses his peculiar traditions and habits, his manner of thought and of life, and is transformed into the cosmopolitan representative of sturdy Americanism which is the admiration of the world. In many ways this is a most desirable consummation, but in an excessive zeal for adaptation it has often happened that much has been lost which is of inestimable value, and this is a fact which Mr. James B. Mulcahy has recognized, and he has set himself to work to remedy this condition. Hyde, Synge, Yeats and Lady Gregory have done much to arouse interest in the Celtic literature, and in all that pertains to the folk-lore of those people, but the public to which they appeal is somewhat limited. Mr. Mulcahy has elected the task of keeping before the Irish-Americans the thoughts and the ideals which have been the source of the power of that gifted people. It is especially desirable that in this new country, where the ease with which material success may be attained makes the commercial game such an all-absorbing one, that our citizens of foreign ancestry should not lose sight of what their nation stands for, and that they should be urged to transplant to this newer soil those growths which have made the power and the beauty of their people. A man will not be less a good American for having a vital interest in the country of his fathers. It is a small nature which cannot love both mother and bride, and this Mr. Mulcahy realizes to the full, and the service he performs in keeping up this interest cannot be overestimated.

Limerick, Ireland, is the birthplace of Mr. Mulcahy, and he was born in a year most important to Americans, 1876, on October 10. His education was received in the national schools of Ireland, and when he had completed his course in them, he was employed in the auditing department of the Railroad of England and Ireland. Here he served as a clerk for eight years, and during that time wrote articles for the newspapers in different parts of Ireland, for he was a born journalist and easily earned more by his pen than he received from the railway company.

In the fall of 1906 Mr. Mulcahy came to America and spent a year in Chicago in the employ of a dry-goods store. He had no intention of devoting himself to that line of work, and so he decided to go west and to look for a desirable location. For a year he was in Seattle, Washington, and from there he came to Butte in 1908 and founded the Independent Weekly. This is an organ devoted to Irish achievements and interests, both in literature and in political matters. Current news of Ireland is supplied in its pages, and in every way Mr. Mulcahy aims to arouse the enthusiasm of his people for their own nationality. Mr. Mulcahy's patriotism beats in his blood, for his father, Michael Mulcahy, is now, at the age of seventy-one, still an active worker in politics in his native isle. He was an active supporter of the Fenian cause, and was later thrown into prison at the time of the Agrarian agitation for his utterances. He has since continued to work for the issues in which he believes with unabated fervor. His wife, Ellen Burke Mulcahy, was born in Ireland in 1840 and died in 1880. There are six of their children now living. Mr. Michael Mulcahy still resides on his farm in Ireland.

The editor of the Independent Weekly is a man who is fond of athletics and who has the social qualities which characterize the men of his race. His political views are those of the Democratic party, and his grasp of the national and local conditions make him a power in the party, aside from the influence of his paper, which is primarily printed in the cause of disseminating knowledge of things Celtic. He is a member of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, of the Gaelic League, the Robert Emmet Literary Association, of the Knights of Columbus and of the Royal Order of the Moosé, of which he is secretary. He is a devout communicant of the Roman Catholic church, and he has scores of friends in the city, not only among his compatriots and their descendants, but among all who are interested in the best things along all lines.

SAMUEL G. TAYLOR. In Montana to a very large degree the rewards of business and the honors of office belong to the young men. Probably merit and ability are nowhere more quickly and effectively recognized than in Montana, and it is not surprising that so many of the leaders in affairs are young men who in older states would be well satisfied with half their advancement. Among these prominent young men, Mr. Samuel G. Taylor of Anaconda has gained noteworthy position and has a growing reputation for public ability which promises to lead him into state-wide prominence in the near future.

Samuel G. Taylor is a native of Newcastle, Pennsylvania, where he was born June 9, 1884. His parents, George L. and Elizabeth (Douglas) Taylor, are still living in that locality. His father, who was born and has spent all his life in Lawrence county, Pennsylvania, was for many years a substantial farmer, but is now living retired in Newcastle. He has taken an active working part in church and charity and is one of the highly esteemed citizens of his old home vicinity. There were five children in the family, of whom Samuel was the fourth. One sister lives in California, and the others reside in Pennsylvania.

Reared on a farm and educated in the public schools, finishing with a course at Smith's Business College in Newcastle, Mr. Taylor began his practical career when about sixteen years old as a farm hand. On leaving the farm his first salaried position was in a box factory at Newcastle. Later he secured a clerkship, and has been identified with business management practically ever since. On reaching his majority he sought his opportunities in the West, and for the first two years was located at Seattle and other coast towns. Most of this time was spent in traveling in the employment of the Northwest Improvement Company. In July, 1908, he arrived at Anaconda, which has been his home city ever since. For two years he was with the MacCallum & Cloutier Mercantile Company, and since then has been office manager for the Bourbonniere Meat Company of this city. He is a thorough business man, a master of details and a good manager.

Though he has been identified with the citizenship of Montana only a few years, Mr. Taylor is now recognized as one of the leading Republicans of Anaconda, and has a large field of useful service before him in political life. At the present time he holds the office of city clerk. He is a member of the blue lodge and chapter of the Masonic order, has held office in the former and is now an officer of the chapter. The Christian church is his choice among the religious denominations. Mr. Taylor has a keen interest in all of the activities which make up the diversions of society apart from practical business.

CARROLL R. BANCROFT, M. D. The medical profession of Montana has one of its ablest representatives in Dr. Carroll R. Bancroft, of Anaconda. Dr. Bancroft is a man of broad experience, world-traveled, and splendidly equipped professionally, has acquired success and high standing here, and as a citizen is a loyal believer in the greatness and possibilities of Montana.

He was born at Wichita, Kansas, March 19, 1879, but when he was only two months old his parents returned to their former home in New York state, where he grew up and received his education in the public school. He earned his first money by working on a farm, and in this way paid for his further education in the State Normal at Potsdam, after which, at the age of eighteen, he began teaching. As an educator he had a more than ordinary experience. When he was twenty years old, and soon after the conquest of the Philippines, he was chosen for the government educational service that was introduced into the islands to help reorganize the school system there. That was the field of his labor for four years, and his youthful enthusiasm and ability as teacher contributed an important individual share to the reconstruction and Americanization of our eastern possessions.

On returning to the United States, having determined upon the medical profession for his subsequent career, he entered the well known College of Physicians and Surgeons at Baltimore, where four years later he was graduated with the degree of M. D. As a result of his work in college he was appointed an interne in the Mercy Hospital of Baltimore, and later took a special course in the study of mental and nervous diseases under Dr. Richard F. Gundry, one of the eminent American specialists. With this thorough preparation, he came west and in 1908 settled in Montana, where he was first assistant physician for two years in the Montana State Hospital at Warm Springs, but for several years has had his home and practice in Anaconda.

Dr. Bancroft's parents were Samuel W. and Flora A. (Hadley) Bancroft. His father, a native of New York state, spent practically all his life there as a substantial farmer. His death occurred in 1908 at the age of sixty-one. He was married in New York, and his wife still resides there. They were the parents of two children, the doctor being the older. The other son is Guy R. Bancroft, who is married and lives on the Flathead Indian reservation of Montana.

Fraternally Dr. Bancroft affiliates with the Masons, Odd Fellows, the Loyal Order of Moose and the Woodmen of the World. He is a member of the Deer Lodge County Medical Society, of the Montana State Medical Association, and of the American Medical Association, and is also a member of the Anaconda Club, Anaconda, and of Silver Bow Club of Butte. He is Republican in politics, and is impartial toward the different religious denominations. From his broad observations of the world, he is naturally interested in many departments of knowledge and activities outside of his own profession. Music, literature, automobiling comprise his chief diversions. When younger he played football and is still a keen follower of that sport. As to Montana he says: "I have traveled nearly all over the world, and I have never found a place that suits me quite so well, in every way, as Montana. I should advise anyone looking for a home to come here and settle. The opportunities are wonderfully attractive and numerous."

Dr. Bancroft was married June 19, 1912, in Anaconda, to Miss Ellen C. Kennedy, a native of Michigan.

HERBERT B. SCHWARTZ. Prominent in the modern business enterprise of Havre is included the Havre Auto Company, which was the second establishment of the kind to be located in this city. Under the energetic management of its proprietor, H. B. Schwartz, it has prospered and supplied a service such as has now become an essential requirement in every city in the country.

Herbert B. Schwartz is one of the youngest independent business men in Havre. He was born in Denison, Iowa, July 14, 1890, and is a son of one of northern Montana's substantial farmers and highly esteemed citizens, Henry F. Schwartz. The father, who was a native of Germany, on emigrating to America settled at Denison, Iowa, where he was a resident until 1890, and on August 3rd of that year took up a homestead in Chouteau county, Montana, leaving his family in Iowa and the farm in the care of his older sons until he had proved up on his claim, after which the family came on to this state. The mother's maiden name was Mathilda Zehfeldt, and she was also born in Germany. Of their eight children, Herbert was the youngest.

The boy remained in Iowa until he had completed his education in the Denison high school with the class of 1908, in which year he came out to Montana and joined his brother Paul H. on his ranch at Big Sandy in Chouteau county. On the 1st of August, 1910, Mr. Schwartz moved to Havre, and has since been actively identified with the business life of this city. With B. L. Newgard he established the Havre Auto Company, which, as already stated, was the second concern of the kind here. Mr. Schwartz was enabled to embark in business through the kind and liberal assistance of his father, who himself has been a prosperous man and has provided well for his family. In March, 1912, Mr. Schwartz bought out the interest of his partner and is now sole proprietor in the establishment. In addition to the sale of automobiles he does a large business with his garage and in expert repairing and supplies. To bring the business to its best efficiency of service, the lot at No. 114 First street was bought and a concrete building forty-two by seventy-five feet was erected for the garage and supply house. It is one of the best equipped places for its purpose in northern Montana.

Mr. Schwartz is also a stockholder in the Mackton Coal Company at Big Sandy. His politics is Republican. As a young man he has made an excellent record, and has thoroughly deserved the confidence of his father in thus starting him upon a successful career.

WILLIAM T. SIDELL. Years of experience, constant study and natural inclination are superinduced upon a careful training in the case of William T. Sidell, one of the prominent attorneys of Billings, who adds to his natural ability a keen insight into human nature and sound judgment. His heart is in his work and he brings to it an enthusiasm and belief in its importance, and his career has been marked with many a successful outcome for his clients. Mr. Sidell was born February 20, 1865, at Switzer, Monroe county, Ohio, and is a son of Francis and Anne T. (Perry) Sidell.

The grandfather of Mr. Sidell, Francis Sidell, was a native of Virginia, and was interested in the West Indies trade. During the War of 1812 he fought as a soldier in the American army, and rose to the rank of major. His son, also named Francis, was reared and educated in Loudon county, Virginia, where he was born in 1819 and was there engaged in agricultural pursuits, becoming a well-to-do planter. Some time previous to the Civil war he removed to Ohio and engaged in farming and also carried on a general merchandise business. In 1870, however, he returned to West Virginia, and was there engaged in farming until his death in 1889. In political matters he was a Union Democrat. Mr. Sidell married Anne T. Perry, who was born in Belmont county, Ohio, in 1820, and died in 1905, and they had a family of seven children: Mary, who died in infancy; John W., who at eighteen years of age enlisted in Company F, Fifty-second Regiment, Ohio Volunteer Infantry (known as "McCook's Avengers," from the fact that the regiment was organized by Col. Dan McCook, whose father had lost his life in battle), was wounded in the battle of Perryville, Kentucky, and died from his wound in Bowling Green hospital; Perry A., an attorney at Dallas, Texas; Lon, living at New Martinsville, West Virginia; Jasper D., who lives in Wetzel county, West Virginia; Amos G., now living at Clyde, West Virginia, and William T.

William T. Sidell received his early education in the common schools of Wetzel county, West Virginia, and when he was eighteen years of age became a teacher. He continued in the educational field until he was twenty-four, in the meantime studying law with W. S. Wiley, of New Martinsville, West Virginia, and in January, 1891, was admitted to the bar in that city. There he engaged in practice until 1904, when he went to Bartlesville, Oklahoma, and in August, 1908, came to Billings, where he has since been engaged in a general practice. He is a Democrat in politics, but has found himself too occupied with his practice to enter the public arena, except on rare occasions. He served two terms as mayor of New Martinsville, West Virginia, one term as county superintendent of schools of Wetzel county, West Virginia, and was mayor of Bartlesville, Oklahoma, in 1906 and 1907. He has found time, however, to interest himself in fraternal work, and is a charter member of Bartlesville Lodge No. 1060, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and is a thirty-second degree Mason, belonging to Albert Pike Lodge No. 162, Guthrie, Oklahoma, and to Oklahoma Consistory, in the Valley of Guthrie. He also belongs to the Loyal Order of Moose and to Bartlesville Chapter No. 142, Order of the Eastern Star.

On August 1, 1900, Mr. Sidell was united in marriage with Miss Carrie Burlingame, who was born in New Martinsville, West Virginia, on June 24, 1880, and is a daughter of Thomas M. and Amanda (Burgess) Burlingame, and a member of a family that traces its ancestry back to the landing of the Pilgrim fathers. Mr. Burlingame, who was born in Providence, Rhode Island, and is now living in New Martinsville, West Virginia, has for many years been engaged as a building contractor and is well and favorably known as a substantial business man. He and his wife, who is a native of Wetzel county, West Virginia, had eleven children, ten of whom are living. Mrs. Sidell being the fourth in order of birth. Mr. and Mrs. Sidell have one son, William T., Jr. Having a comprehensive knowledge of dialectics, Mr. Sidell presents his arguments with cogency and marked conciseness, and his knowledge of the law and precedents makes him a safe and valuable counselor. He has won the esteem and respect of his fellow practitioners in Billings, and the confidence in which he is held by a large and constantly growing clientele is evidence of his ability.

WILLIAM McMORRIS. From the beginning of the postal service the representative men of each community have been chosen to fill the important position of postmaster, and as so much responsibility rests in their hands it is necessary for them to be men of strict honesty, tried reliability and absolute solidity. William McMorris, postmaster of Park City, Montana, is one of the best officials in the employ of the postal authorities, and is discharging his duties in a way that awakens admiration and brings forth commendation on every side. Mr. McMorris was born in the city of Toronto, Ontario, Canada, and is a son of Daniel and Arabella (Sanderson) McMorris.

Daniel McMorris was a native of the Emerald Isle, being born near Londonderry, and as a child was taken to Canada by his parents. Locating in Toronto, he there learned the trade of cabinet maker, an occupation which he followed in Toronto until his death at the age of fifty-five years. His wife, who was a native of New York state, and to whom he was married in Ontario, survived him some years and passed away when she was seventy-five years of age, having been the mother of eight children, of whom four are now living.

William McMorris was given the advantages to be obtained in the public schools of Toronto, and being the oldest of his father's children remained at home until he was twenty years of age, then going to Colorado, where he was engaged in prospecting for one year. Subsequently he entered the employ of the Quarter Circle and Two Link ranches, and then associated himself with George Chase, with whom he continued to ranch for one year. When the Case & Trail Company started operations in the Dakotas, Mr. McMorris entered their employ, and continued to be identified with that firm for five years, at the end of which time he came to Montana and engaged in ranching on his own account in Yellowstone county, successfully breeding horses, cattle and sheep. In 1908 he was thus engaged when he received the appointment to the position of postmaster of Park City from President Roosevelt. Mr. McMorris has not been a politician in the sense of being an office-seeker, but his influence is recognized and appreciated by the Republican party's leaders, and the able manner in which he is discharging the duties of his position testify to the fact that no mistake was made in his appointment. Genial and courteous in manner, he has won the friendship and esteem of those who have had business to do with his department, and is without doubt one of the most popular officials in the service. He has found time for fraternal work, and is affiliated with Billings lodge No. 394, B. P. O. E.

On December 23, 1880, Mr. McMorris was united in marriage with Miss Elizabeth Burnett, who was born in Ontario, Canada, and they have had eight children, of whom seven are now living, as follows: William Charles, Henry H., Mabel, Maud, Harvey, Theodore and Dorothy.

MOSE SEATON COHEN holds distinct prestige as a particularly able attorney at Butte, where he is one of the most influential citizens of the younger generation. He is strictly a self-made man, having earned his own education and having himself built up the splendid practice which is now his at Butte.

A native of Helena, Montana, Mose S. Cohen was born on the 14th of April, 1887, and he is a scion of fine old pioneer settlers in this state. His parents were Samuel and Hattie (Silverman) Cohen, the former a native of Warsaw, Poland, where his birth occurred in 1843, and the latter of whom was born at New York City in 1856. Samuel Cohen came to America with his parents when he was a mere child and after sojourning for a time in Virginia City, Nevada, the family removed to Montana, being the first white people to settle at Choteau. Major Julius Silverman, paternal grandfather of the subject of this review, started the first store at Choteau, where he sold merchandise to the Indians and few ranchers of that section. Samuel Cohen was a friend and associate of Col. W. S. Sanders and he participated in a number of the early wars with the Indians. He had a conversation with General Custer just three hours prior to the massacre of the latter's entire regiment, by Sitting Bull, chief of the Sioux tribe, on the Little Big Horn river. Samuel Cohen removed to Helena in 1867 and there was identified with mercantile pursuits for a number of years. He came to Butte in 1895 and is now living in virtual retirement in this city, where he is honored and esteemed for his fine character and sterling integrity. He married Hattie Silverman, who came to Montana with her parents in 1867, being at that time ten years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Cohen became the parents of three children, concerning whom the following brief data are here incorporated. Miss May, born in 1885, in San Francisco, was graduated in the New York Conservatory of Music, at New York City, and is now a teacher of music at Butte; Bert, born at Helena, in 1884, is engaged in the insurance business at Butte; and Mose S. is the immediate subject of this review.

Major Julius Silverman, father of Mrs. Samuel Cohen, was one of the early pioneers in Montana, having come hither from St. Louis, Missouri, in 1858. The journey was made overland by wagon and consumed a period of six months, during which time many privations were endured, the same including a number of attacks by bands of hostile Indians. Ida Silverman, the wife of Julius Silverman, came to Fort Benton, Montana, by river from St. Louis and she was on the way for three months.

Mose S. Cohen was educated in the public schools of Helena, being graduated in the high school in 1904. He was matriculated as a student in the New York Law School in that year and was graduated in that excellent institution as a member of the class of 1908, duly receiving his degree of Bachelor of Laws. He earned money for his legal education and himself paid all his college expenses. He was admitted to the Montana bar at Helena, in 1908, and since that time has been engaged in the practice of his profession at Butte, where he controls a large and lucrative clientele. He has figured prominently in a number of important litigations and is recognized as one of the finest young attorneys in Silver Bow county.

In politics Mr. Cohen is an uncompromising Democrat and in a fraternal way he is affiliated with the University Club, the Loyal Order of Moose and the Alpha Mu college fraternity of the New York Law School. He is a member of the Jewish Temple at Butte and is a liberal contributor to various charitable organizations. He is a young man of unusual ability and the future holds great promise for him.

JOHN J. CROWLEY. The city of Butte, Montana, is liberal in its support of all lines of commercial life and no department of business or trade is without its high class representatives here. To be well and fittingly dressed is one of the requisites of modern business and professional men in their stores or offices as well as at social affairs and the up-to-date tailor who conducts a stylish establishment is sure to be well patronized. Among the men engaged in this line of endeavor in Butte whose business is extensive and with a high class of customers is John J. Crowley, sole proprietor of the Crowley Tailoring Company, whose store is located at 223 North Main street. Mr. Crowley has been conducting his tailoring business here independently for only about a year but has enjoyed a profitable trade from the very beginning and has a clientele at the present time to satisfy whose wants require the employment of a force of eleven persons. He carries in stock a fine line of domestic and imported fabrics of the latest pattern and the clothes which he manufactures have distinction of cut and style equal to the best eastern city tailoring establishments.

John J. Crowley was born in County Cork, Ireland, August 7, 1880, the son of a farmer, James Crowley, who was born in Ireland in 1816 and died in that country in 1886. The mother was also a native of Ireland, born in 1832, and is still living there. Of the nine children of the family John was next to the youngest. He secured a good education in the land of his birth, attending the national schools as a boy and later entering Clondalkin Academy, from which he was graduated in 1901. Before entering this institution of learning Mr. Crowley had served a four-year apprenticeship in a general dry goods store, where he was taught merchant tailoring as well as the principles of general merchandising. After finishing his studies at the academy he came at once to America, arriving in New York City late in the fall of 1902. In that city he secured employment in the establishment of H. O'Neill on Sixth avenue, and later became associated with Saks & Company of New York, remaining with the latter firm three years.

Mr. Crowley's next move was to San Francisco, California, and for two years he was connected there with the Hastings Clothing Company. He then decided to give up work at his trade for a while and went to seek his fortune in Nome, Alaska. A prospecting tour extending over one year failed to reveal sufficiently alluring advantages to make him desire to extend his stay in that country and in 1908 in the month of July he became a resident of Butte. Upon his arrival here he aligned himself with the city's business interests by accepting a position with the Hennessey Company, having charge of the gentlemen's furnishing department in that firm's store. Two and a half years later Mr. Crowley resigned that responsible position in order to establish his present business, in which venture he has met with so much success.

Mr. Crowley is a gentleman of genial personality, is energetic and possesses a high order of business and executive abilities. He is independent in thought and action and is aligned with the leading social and religious organizations of the city. He is a devout communicant of the Roman Catholic church and liberal in his contributions to its various charities and benevolences. He is an active member of the Catholic men's organization, the Knights of Columbus, belongs to the Robert Emmet Gaelic League, is vice president of the Hibernian order, Division No. 1, and is fraternally affiliated with the Moose order. Mr. Crowley has a host of friends in Butte and other cities of the country in which he has lived at various times, and carries with him wherever he goes the respect and esteem of all his associates.

WILLIAM E. MADDEN, M. D. Although he has been a resident of Great Falls for less than five years, Dr. William E. Madden has so conducted his activities and displayed his ability in his chosen profession as to gain in an eminent degree the esteem and confidence of the people of his adopted community, and takes front rank with the leading physicians and surgeons of the younger generation in Cascade county. Born in Lyons, Iowa, October 15, 1876, Dr. Madden is a son of Martin E. and Elizabeth (Kelley) Madden, and the seventh in order of birth of their ten children.

Martin E. Madden was born in Ireland, and was nine years of age when brought to the United States by his parents. The family first settled in Wisconsin, where he was reared to manhood, attending the district schools of his locality and being brought up to the vocation of farmer. In 1859 he removed to Iowa, becoming one of the pioneer residents of this community, and was there located at the time of the outbreak of the Civil war. During the early months of that great struggle he became a private of Company H, Sixteenth Regiment, Iowa Volunteer Infantry, and served with Grant's army during his term of service. After receiving his honorable discharge he returned to Lyons, embarked in the mercantile business, and for many years was actively engaged in business in that city. He is now living a retired life, being seventy-five years of age. In 1858 Mr. Madden was married to Miss Elizabeth Kelley, in Wisconsin, to which state she had come from Canada, her birthplace, at the age of six years. They celebrated their golden wedding anniversary in 1908, but in 1909 Mrs. Madden's death occurred when she was seventy years of age.

The preliminary literary training of Dr. Madden was secured in the public schools of his native vicinity, and after preparing himself for a collegiate course he entered the University of Illinois, at Champaign, being graduated from the medical department in 1903. Following his graduation he began the practice of his profession at Volga City, Iowa, where for five years he was successfully engaged in handling a large clientele, and at the end of that period came to Great Falls, where he has since continued in a general practice. A close and careful student, Dr. Madden spends much time in scientific investigation, takes a great deal of interest in the work of the various organizations of the profession, and in every way keeps fully abreast of the advances being made in the sciences of medicine and surgery. He belongs to the Woodmen of the World, the Knights of Columbus, the Fraternal Order of Eagles and the Order of Moose, being physician for the local lodges of the latter two societies, is a Democrat in his political views, and gives his religious allegiance to the Roman Catholic church. His many friends in Great Falls testify to his popularity with all classes, and he is regarded as one of the rising young members of the Montana medical fraternity.

On November 11, 1909, Dr. Madden was married to Miss Josephine Ehrlich, at Minneapolis, Minnesota, daughter of H. C. Ehrlich, a merchant of that city, and to this union there has been one child: George E., born at Great Falls, December 28, 1910.

WILLIAM JENNINGS TIGHE. Among the prominent young attorneys of Great Falls eminently deserving of mention in a historical and biographical work on the state of Montana, William Jennings Tighe ranks foremost. He was born at Independence, Iowa, on July 6, 1878, and is the son of Frank and Elizabeth (Eagan) Tighe. The father was a native of Ohio who came to Iowa while a young man and there settled on a farm, attaining an unusual degree of prosperity during his lifetime. He died at his home in that state in 1882 at the age of forty-two years. The mother was also a native of Ohio, and she moved with her family to Iowa when a young girl. She died in 1889.

William Jennings Tighe was an attendant at the public schools of Independence, and after completing the course of study afforded by them, took a collegiate course in the Upper Iowa University, and was graduated therefrom in 1903. After leaving college he became superintendent of schools for Iowa and later filled a similar position for the state of North Dakota, during which time he represented the states of Iowa and North Dakota in oratorical debates. He retained these positions for a period of five years, and in 1908 came to Great Falls, Montana, there entering the legal profession, for which he had prepared himself in the previous years, and having taken his law course in the University of North Dakota, graduating therefrom in 1909. He took as a partner one Mr. Gullickson, since which time they have enjoyed a high degree of success and have built up a wide and lucrative practice.

Mr. Tighe was one of seven children born to his parents, he being the sixth in order of birth. The entire family of seven are living, brief mention of them being given here. Frank is a member of the legislature of Wyoming. Ira is a farmer in Iowa. Barth is farming in South Dakota. Mrs. Margaret (Tighe) Delaney, of Iowa. Mrs. Mary (Tighe) McIntyre, also of Iowa, and Miss Teresa Tighe, a teacher in the public schools of Seattle, Washington.

Mr. Tighe is a Republican in his political convictions, and was the only Republican from Cascade county elected to the legislature. He is deputy county attorney, having taken his office the first Monday in January, 1912. He is a member of the Catholic church. He is connected in a fraternal way with the Knights of Columbus and is grand knight of the Great Falls Council, and district deputy for the state of Montana. He is also a member of the Order of Eagles, in which he is an officer, and is a member of the Phi Delta Phi, his Iowa college fraternity. He is a member of the Bar Association of Great Falls, and is one of the more prominent and popular members of his profession in Cascade county.

ERWIN E. KEMP. A young man of ability, integrity and college education, Erwin E. Kemp, the efficient and accomodating postmaster at Ryegate, Montana, is one of the many men who have found opportunity in the commonwealth of Montana and who each year grow firmer in their faith in a great future for this state. He came to Ryegate in 1908 to open the station there for the New Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railroad and continued as agent there until March, 1912, when he resigned to give his whole attention to his ranching interests near Ryegate and to his duties as postmaster of that place, of which office he is the first incumbent.

Mr. Kemp was born at Tipton, Iowa, September 23, 1875, and lived there until about twenty-four years of age. His earlier education was acquired in the district schools of Cedar county, Iowa, and in the graded schools at Tipton, and his college education was obtained in Valparaiso University, Valparaiso, Indiana, where he spent three years. He was about twenty years of age when he took up the study of telegraphy, though he had earned his first money when a lad of twelve years, and had continued to be employed in various ways until he entered the railroad service. His first position as telegrapher was at Morning Sun, Iowa, where he became night operator, and following that he became joint agent in Floyd county, Iowa, for the Rock Island and the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroads, continuing in this position four years. He was then successively stationed at Buchanan, Iowa, one year and at Plato, Iowa, one year and then in 1908 came to Montana and entered the service of the New Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railroad as station agent, which position he continued to fill until his resignation in March, 1912.

He was married at Tipton, Iowa, on July 25, 1901, to Maud, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Darius M. Culver, of that place. A daughter, Waiva M., has been born to this union and is now attending school. Both Mr. and Mrs. Kemp are members of the Christian denomination and the latter is a member of the Ladies' Aid Society of that church in Ryegate. Mr. Kemp is a member of the Knights of Pythias, and of the Ryegate Commercial Club, and served as the first president of the latter organization. He is also president of the Ryegate school board. The Republican party receives his political preference, and he is actively interested in its work. As is usual with college men, he enjoys athletics and all kindred diversions, and in every respect is a worthy representative of the alert and energetic American citizen of the day.

WELLINGTON H. MEIGS is a representative of a family which has won distinction in various fields, and has given soldiers and statesmen to the country since 1638, when its first American branch was established at Guilford Courthouse, Connecticut. Wellington H. Meigs was born on March 11, 1871, at Fort Gibson, Indian Territory. Not long afterwards, his parents moved to Siloam Springs in northwestern Arkansas, and here Wellington grew up and received his elementary and secondary education. For his legal training, Mr. Meigs attended the State University of Missouri at Columbia, and finished in 1895. He then returned to Siloam Springs, and for a time practiced there and in Indian Territory. He did not remain here long, but went to Sioux City, Iowa, where he opened an office for himself. From here, he went to Chicago, to accept a position in the contract department of a large concern of that city, and in 1908, left Chicago for Montana. Here Mr. Meigs took an office in the Conrad Bank building, and began his work as an attorney. In the short space of four years, his energy and ability have secured him a lucrative and a growing practice.

James Madison Meigs, the father, was born in Danville, Kentucky, in 1843. He lived but thirty-three years, as he had lost his health in the Civil war. Four times, during his term of service, he was out on furlough on account of his health, and when mustered out, a sergeant major. He remained until the close of the war, and was with General Banks in a number of engagements, including the Red River campaign, in which every officer was killed. When he returned from the war, he went into the drug business, and was so engaged at the time of his death. His wife was Nannie E. Chilton, born in Mercer county, Kentucky, in 1844, and now residing in Montana with her son, Wellington Meigs. Her other son, R. V. Meigs, is a Baptist minister, and is now pastor at Urbana, Illinois. The only daughter, Grace Meigs Ruegnitz, her husband being Dr. Louis H. Ruegnitz, of Denver, Colo. Richard Holt Meigs, the grandfather of Wellington Meigs, was one of the pioneers of Kentucky. He was a merchant by occupation and owned a store before the war, which made him a wealthy man. The sturdy stock to which he belonged had endowed him with a magnificent physique, and to the end of his life he was an active and hale worker. He died at Siloam Springs in 1898, at the age of eighty-four, while on a visit to one of his sons there. Mrs. Meigs' family, the Chiltons, were early colonists in Kentucky.

Mr. Wellington Meigs is unmarried, and his home is with his mother. He is a man who is somewhat retiring in disposition, and who is devoted to his home. He is very fond of reading, and has a discriminating taste in literature. He is a blue lodge Mason, and senior warden of his lodge. Politically, he is a Republican. He was elected county attorney on the Republican ticket Nov. 5, 1912, and will take office first Monday in January, 1913. Although rather fond of a quiet life, he is not one who is inactive or who enters into undertakings half-heartedly, as those who know his professional record can testify. In the brief period of his residence in the city, he has not only gained a footing in the legal profession, but has made many friends among the acknowledged leaders of the community.

EDWIN J. GREER. Born in Pontiac, Michigan, on June 14, 1874, Edwin J. Greer prepared for college in the public schools of his native city. He then entered the Columbian University at Washington and graduated from the literary department in 1900. With this broad academic foundation, Mr. Greer began his professional studies at the University of Illinois, some years later, and in 1908, the degree of Doctor of Medicine was conferred upon him by this institution. The same year as that of his graduation, Dr. Greer came to Montana, and remained in Butte for a half year, but in 1909 he opened his office in Great Falls and has now built up a large practice, and made a reputation for himself in medical circles. Dr. Greer is considered one of the best informed physicians in this section of the state, and he is regarded as an authority in cases demanding expert opinion. He makes it a rule to keep in touch with all the recent advances in methods of the treatment of disease, and with the wonderful work in the domain of surgery.

Dr. Greer is an only child and unmarried, so that he has not many family ties. He has, however, many friends, both among the members of his profession in the city and in social circles. He is a member of the Episcopal church, being of English descent. As a descendant of the British, and a resident of Montana, he is an ardent sportsman who finds both hunting and fishing delightful ways of spending leisure time. Dr. Greer is a Republican, but like most physicians finds no time to devote to practical politics. Fraternally he is a blue lodge Mason, and this with the medical associations with which he is connected, completes the list of his membership in societies and secret orders.

Both of Dr. Greer's parents are still living in Michigan, the state in which both were born. Robert Greer was born in 1850, and now, at the age of sixty-two, has retired from business. He was engaged in the handling of real estate. His wife, Emmaline Campbell Greer is four years his junior. Both are well known in the district where they reside, as Mr. Greer has long been one of the leading citizens of the place. His father, the grandfather of Dr. Greer, came to America from England, and first settled in Canada, later removing to Michigan. Dr. Greer's maternal grandfather was also of English birth and came directly to the United States, when he was a young man. One of his sons, A. J. Campbell, came to Montana in the '90s and settled at Livingston. Later, he removed to Butte, and became active in the political history of Montana during that time.

Dr. Greer has become known not only in Great Falls, but throughout this section of the state. His natural talent for the work he has chosen and the energy with which he throws himself into his calling, added to his thorough and scientific training, are constantly enlarging his practice and adding to his well-deserved reputation.

FRED J. CUMMINGS. For the past year or more Fred J. Cummings has been in charge of the Sand Coulee Commission Company at Sand Coulee, and in the time of his residence here he has come to be regarded as one of the admirable business men of the city. He has in that short space of time made a large number of friends, and his success in a business way has been unusual. It is his present intention to leave Sand Coulee in the near future for Montana, where he owns a valuable tract of land, and where he expects to make his home, and his departure from the town in which he has come to be so well regarded will be deeply regretted by all.

Fred J. Cummings is the son of C. L. and Annie (Sullivan) Cummings. The father was a native of the state of Vermont, and he went to North Dakota when he was twenty-eight years of age. He has always been classed with the Dakota pioneers, and in that state he was well and favorably known as a contractor and builder. He accumulated a considerable fortune and lately retired from active business, when he removed to Great Falls, where he has since made his home. The mother was born in Canada, but removed to Canada with her parents at an early age. She also is living in Great Falls, whither the family removed in 1908. Ten children were born of this union. They are: James H. Cummings, night yardmaster in the employ of the Great Northern Railroad at Great Falls; Edward James, a merchant, located at Lethbridge, Canada; Hiram, a railroad conductor in the employ of the Great Northern, located at White Fish, Montana; Harold, a printer in Lethbridge, Canada; Kathryn, attending school in Great Falls; Clifford, an employe of the Great Northern at Great Falls; Mark, also in the employ of the Great Northern; Timothy and Howard both attend school in Great Falls; Fred J., of Sand Coulee, Montana.

Fred J. Cummings was born at Grand Forks, North Dakota, May 23, 1884. He attended the schools of that city and while still in his teens enlisted in the United States navy as a marine. He was assigned to the battleship Charleston, and almost during the entire period of his enlistment did duty at the American legation at Peking, China. While in the service he was promoted from the ranks to sergeant. On January 20, 1911, his term of enlistment having expired, he was discharged at Birmingham, Washington, and he came direct to Sand Coulee to take charge of the Sand Coulee Commission, owned and controlled by Edward Gerber, now retired. Mr. Cummings attributes his splendid business success in a great measure to the excellent training he received in the navy, in which he learned habits of industry, punctuality and method, all of which, combined with his natural integrity and executive ability have conspired to win to him a high degree of success.

Mr. Cummings is a member of the Sand Coulee Social Club and is somewhat of a sportsman, being especially fond of hunting and fishing. All outdoor life appeals irresistibly to him, and he is enthusiastic in his regard for the west, in which he has spent so much of his life. He is a Republican, and a member of the Catholic church.

HILDORÉ C. EKLUND. Since the year 1814, when M. Niepce first produced permanent pictures by the chemical influence of light, at Chalais-sur-Mer, the art of photography has made rapid strides among the world's skilled vocations, and today the photographer occupies an established position in our commercial and industrial life. Photography has entered many fields, but the one wherein lies the most importance, perhaps, is in the preserving of human likeness for future generations. For this reason the family photographer is generally widely known in the various large cities and many young men have adopted the business, or art, and won a pleasing amount of success. Few, however, have in so short a time attained the reputation that has come to Hildoré C. Eklund, proprietor of one of the largest studios in the Northwest, at Great Falls, and also having branches at Billings and Fort Benton, whose success is all the more remarkable in that but a few years ago he was possessed of only a meagre capital and no experience in his chosen line.

Mr. Eklund was born June 11, 1887, at Grove City, Minnesota, and is a son of Eric P. Eklund, a native of Sweden, who came to the United States during the early sixties and settled in St. Paul, later removing to Grove City, where he followed blacksmithing and wagon making. Since his retirement, some years ago, he has been a resident of Great Falls. His wife, who bore the maiden name of Julia Kruger, was born in Russia, of German parents, and is related to the famous Boer statesman, Stephanus Johannes Paulus Kruger (Paul). Hildoré C. Eklund was educated in the public and high schools of his native city, and later attended a business college at Little Falls, which he left at the age of fifteen years to be apprenticed to the trade of carpenter. This he found not to his liking, and after he had followed it for a short time took up the study of photography and served an apprenticeship of three years to the business at Little Falls. Three months after completing his term, being fully equipped to engage in business, he removed to Havre, Montana, and in the spring of 1908 opened a gallery with a younger brother. This proved to be a profitable venture, the business being conducted at Havre until 1911, at which time the brothers purchased the Cummings Gallery at Fort Benton, an establishment still owned by Mr. Eklund. Subsequently he became the owner of the photographic gallery originally established by D. D. Morrison, in the Vaughn block, the first in Great Falls, in addition to which he conducts an extensive business in Billings. Mr. Eklund has become recognized as one of the foremost photographers in the northwest. His artistic genius, the excellence of his work and the originality of his ideas have given him a large following throughout this part of the state, and his popularity has grown each year. He holds prestige among his confreres as vice president of the Photographers' Association of the Pacific Northwest, reelected for 1912. In religious matters Mr. Eklund belongs to no particular denomination, but strives to fashion his life according to the Golden Rule.

EDGAR G. MOORE. Having been identified with theatrical matters for nearly a quarter of a century, Edgar G. Moore, proprietor of the Orpheum Theater, one of the leading places of entertainment in Great Falls, is well qualified to cater to the public amusement. Starting out in life a poor boy, and in his youth experiencing numerous hardships, his early struggles served to make him self-reliant and to develop traits of character that have been of great value to him. Mr. Moore is a native of Hamilton, Illinois, where he was born July 31, 1863, and belongs to an old and honored family. His paternal great-grandfather, James Moore, was the founder of this branch of the family in America, settling first in Ohio, removing later to Indiana, and ultimately making his home in Illinois. His maternal ancestors came to America during colonial days, participated in the struggle for independence and the War of 1812, and were early settlers in Indiana. His older brother, William Moore, was for three years a soldier during the Civil war, being in the army of General Grant. James Hamilton Moore, the father of Edgar G., was a native of Indiana and spent his life in buying and selling live stock, his death occurring when he was sixty-three years of age. He married Hilda West, also a native of Indiana, who died at the age of sixty years, and they had a family of seven children, of whom Edgar G. is the youngest.

Edgar G. Moore secured his education in the public and high schools of Hamilton, graduating from the latter with the class of 1879. On completing his studies he spent several years at home, but at the age of eighteen years decided to make his own way in the world, and struck out for the west, settling first in Waterloo, Iowa, where for three years he clerked in a grocery. Owing to ill health, caused by the close confinement, he was obliged to give up his position, and subsequently secured employment as a traveling salesman for the firm of Dyer Brothers, Minneapolis, dealers in musical instruments. During the three and one-half years that he was connected with this concern, Mr. Moore came into touch with numerous theatrical people, and it was but natural that he should enter the profession himself. Accordingly, he established what was known as the Moore Concert Company, an organization of artists that met with great success and was a general favorite in twenty-nine states. Mr. Moore was the active head of this company for a period covering more than twenty years, but in 1908 decided to settle down and give up traveling. He had seen towns and cities in every part of the Union, and it may be termed a compliment to Great Falls that he selected this city as the field of his activities. That his faith in this city has been vindicated is shown by the large patronage maintained by his Orpheum Theater, than which there is no more popular playhouse in Great Falls. He believes in the ultimate greatness of the city, is an ardent "booster," and has invested a great deal of his capital in real estate here, his modern residence being situated at No. 1208 Fifth avenue, North. Mr. Moore has always kept his performances up to the high standard that characterized them from the start, and his theater has a reputation for respectability. He is a Republican in his political views, but has taken no active part in public affairs. He is a member of the Eagles, the Board of Commerce and the Traveling Men's Association, and attends the Congregational church.

Mr. Moore was married at Waterloo, Iowa, January 21, 1884 to Miss Alma Farr, daughter of Foster Farr, of Newhampton, Iowa, where the family has been well known for many years. Two children have come to Mr. and Mrs. Moore: Harry, born at Newhampton, September 12, 1885, married November 2, 1909, at Helena, Montana, to Miss Waneta Short, a native of Montana; and Hazel, born at Newhampton, Iowa, November 2, 1887.

ENVALD R. STANGLAND. To the pioneers in any line of endeavor must be given due credit for the development of a community's industrial growth. The qualities of courage, perseverance, enterprise and energy are absolute necessities to those who would enter a new field, and to these must be added ability far beyond the ordinary in order that the innovations be carried to a successful conclusion. One of Montana's latest industries is the manufacture of hats, and to Envald R. Stangland must be given the honor of accomplishing the establishment of such an enterprise in the prosperous and progressive city of Great Falls. Mr. Stangland, as his name suggests, is a native of Norway, and was born September 24, 1853, the oldest of the ten children of Enoch and Andrina (Anderson) Stangland, the latter of whom died in Norway at the age of forty-four years. The father came to America in 1881 and settled in Sheldahl, Polk county, Iowa, where for a number of years he was engaged in agricultural pursuits, but since his retirement has lived at Norway, Iowa, his present home.

Envald R. Stangland attended the schools of his native country until he was seventeen years of age, at which time he secured a clerical position and was so employed until 1879, when he had accumulated enough money to pay his passage to the United States. He arrived in this country with a cash capital of seventy-three cents, and during the next eight months his earnings netted him but thirty-three dollars. The youth was ambitious and industrious, however, and locating in Story county, Iowa, secured employment in a clerical capacity and by the year 1883 was ready to enter the general merchandise business at Aurelia, Cherokee county, Iowa. He invested his small capital and in two years, finding that he had outgrown his field, removed to Marathon, Buena Vista county, in the same state, where he was engaged in the mercantile and stock-raising business from 1885 until 1907, when he disposed of all his holdings and started west. Arriving in Great Falls in the summer of 1908, he immediately established a cleaning and dyeing and hat manufacturing business, purchasing a one-half interest in the store of C. Z. Patton, at 405 First avenue, South, the first business of its kind in the northern part of the state. After six months, however, he sold out to Mr. Patton and moved to his present location, No. 315 First avenue, South, and since that time the business has grown to large proportions, being widely known throughout this part of Montana. At the present writing Mr. Stangland is erecting a large, up-to-date plant, at 809 First avenue, North, with the latest improved machinery for cleaning and dyeing, the manufacture of hats, which will be a decided addition to Great Falls' enterprises. He is of the progressive type of business man, relying absolutely on his own judgment, and being fearless in the execution of plans which his business shrewdness assures him will succeed. It is to this trait and to the absolute fairness that has characterized all his dealings that his success is due, as his present enviable position in the commercial world is the result of his own efforts. In political matters Mr. Stangland is a Republican, but at this time takes no interest other than a good citizen's in political matters, although while a resident of Marathon, Iowa, served twelve years, the entire period of his stay there, as a member of the council. He belongs to the Knights of Pythias and the Modern Woodmen of America, and holds membership also in the Merchants' Association. He owns a comfortable modern home at No. 1209 Third avenue, north.

Mr. Stangland was married at Sioux Rapids, Iowa, April 13, 1884, to Miss Elina Torkelson, daughter of Torkel Torkelson, a native of Wisconsin, and six children have been born to this union, one of whom died in infancy. The others are: Emma, a resident of Omaha, Nebraska; Irvin, who is engaged in the hardware business in South Dakota; Edna, a teacher in the schools of East Cascade, Cascade county; Opal, who is teaching a country school ten miles west of Great Falls; and Bernice, who is attending the public schools.

JOHN G. HOWE. In former years all butter was made in small quantities upon individual farms, but the tendency to concentration has affected this as well as other industries, and today a larger and larger proportion of it is being made in butter factories or creameries. These factories receive the milk and cream from many neighboring farms, and make the product in large quantities, and in these large institutions, naturally, the whole process can be more carefully controlled and the butter is generally better and more uniform in character. That this last statement is true has been proved by John G. Howe, manager of the Stevensville Creamery, a man who through his expert knowledge of his business has produced butter that has won numerous prizes all over the country and against all kinds of competition. He has followed this business during his entire active career, and his experience in his chosen line, as well as his ability as a business man and executive, give him a prominent position among his city's enterprising and successful citizens. Mr. Howe was born February 9, 1879, at Kellogg, Minnesota, and is a son of Peter and Elizabeth (Baker) Howe, natives of Germany. His father came from the Fatherland to the United States in young manhood, and is now a farmer and extensive bee raiser of Kellogg, Minnesota, where he has a large apiary. There were six children in the family: Kate, who married Peter Schierts, of Helena, Montana; Elizabeth, wife of Peter Stever, of Kellogg, Minnesota; Marie, a teacher in the schools of Little Falls, Minnesota; Celia, who resides with her parents; William, whose death occurred in 1886; and John G.

John G. Howe attended the public schools of Kellogg, Minnesota until he was sixteen years of age, at which time he entered the Minnesota State Agricultural College, and graduated therefrom in 1899. During the summer of 1899-1900, he was engaged in butter making at Kern, Minnesota, but realized the need for further instruction, and during the fall of the latter year entered the Minnesota State Dairy School, from which he was graduated in the spring of 1902. Shortly thereafter he accepted a position with the Milton Dairy Company, of St. Paul, Minnesota, but after one season left their employ to take charge of the operations of the Banner Co-operative Company's Creamery at Oakland, Minnesota, and remained there four years. At that time he went to Spokane, Washington, to take charge of the Hazelwood Creamery, at that time the largest in the northwest, but in the spring of 1908 came to his present position in Stevensville, Montana, where he has since acquired a national reputation as a producer of prize-winning butter. In the spring of 1911, during the busy season, the three-year-old creamery at Stevensville was destroyed, and Mr. Howe was given a free rein by the stockholders of the controlling company to build a new plant according to his own ideas. With characteristic energy and faith in his own ability, Mr. Howe immediately made extensive plans superintended the building, which was erected of cement blocks made on the ground, and bought machinery in far-distant cities, of the finest and most highly improved manufacture. Sparing neither time nor money, inside of one month's actual time, Mr. Howe had the finest, most modern and most highly equipped plant of its kind in the state, capable of running to capacity, and has since increased its output from 1,000 to 3,000 pounds per week. This butter has a reputation second to none in the west, and among the honors won by it may be mentioned the following: Second prize, silver medal, St. Louis World's Fair, 1904; silver medal, best butter National Dairy Men's Meeting, 1906; Montana State championship silver cup, 1908; first prize, gold medal, Ravalli County Fair, 1910; first prize, silver cup, Montana State Fair, 1910; first prize, gold medal, Ravalli County Fair, 1911; first prize, gold medal, Montana State Butter Men's Convention, 1911; first prize, Montana State Dairy Men's Convention, 1912; and first prize Montana State Butter Makers' Convention, 1912, scoring 98 per cent for six months' scoring. It is largely due to his efforts that it has been a success. He is a systematic, thorough and alert manager, believing in doing all things well, and perhaps his success in the business has been greatly due to the conscientious attention he gives to small details. He has found time from his business duties to give to fraternal work, and is a popular member of the Modern Samaritans of Minnesota, the Woodmen of the World and the Modern Woodmen of America.

Mr. Howe was married May 4, 1904, to Miss Ruby E. Parsons, of Mankato, Minnesota, and they have two children: John G., Jr., and Warren.

FRANK BERNATZ. The United States has served as the melting pot of the best characteristics of all other nations and the outcome is a fine sterling American citizenship consisting of strong and able-bodied men, loyal and public-spirited in civic life, honorable in business and alert and enthusiastically in sympathy with every measure tending to advance progress and improvement. Germany has contributed its fair quota to the upbuilding of this great nation and among its representatives in this country are to be found successful men in every walk of life, from the professions to the prosperous farmer. He whose name forms the caption for this review is of German descent, his father having been born and reared in Germany, whence he came to America as a young man. Frank Bernatz is engaged in the general merchandise business at Dixon, Montana, where he is the efficient incumbent of the office of postmaster and where he has resided since 1908.

In the vicinity of McGregor, Iowa, March 4, 1863, occurred the birth of Frank Bernatz, who is a son of Michael and Veronica (Bonzer) Bernatz, the former a native of Germany and the latter a native of Bohemia. The father came to America as a young man and located in Iowa, where he was engaged in the flour-milling business during the greater portion of his active career and where he died in 1888, at the venerable age of seventy-six years. Mrs. Bernatz survives her honored husband and is now a resident of Elma, Iowa.

The fifth in order of birth in a family of seven children, Frank Bernatz was reared to the age of seventeen years in Iowa and there he received his preliminary educational training. He attended a commercial business college at Decorah, Iowa, for one term and as a youth learned the trade of telegraphy at Janesville, Wisconsin. His first work as telegraph operator was on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railroad and he remained in the employ of that company in different towns for a period of two years, at the expiration of which he secured a position on the Northern Pacific road at Riverside, Montana. This was in 1883 and he has been a resident of this state during the long intervening years to the present time, in 1912. Mr. Bernatz continued in the railroad service for a period of thirty years and during that time was agent for the Northern Pacific System at Boulder, Manhattan, Drummond, Philipsburg and Dixon, Montana and at various other stations. In 1910 he gave up telegraphy and engaged in the mercantile business at Dixon, where he controls an extensive and lucrative patronage. He has a very select stock of goods and caters to the best trade in this section. He is the inventor of the Tremendous Power Water Machine, or motor. In 1908 he was appointed postmaster at Dixon by President Taft and he is assisted in the work of that office by his daughter Vera.

In politics Mr. Bernatz is an independent Republican but he takes no active part in public affairs. In a fraternal way he is connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, in which organization he has passed all the official chairs of both the subordinate lodge and the encampment. He is very fond of music, public speaking and lectures and is quite an orator himself. He was a member of the school board at Dixon for three years and he gives freely of his aid and influence in support of all measures and enterprises forwarded for the good of the general welfare. He is a popular citizen and a capable business man and is accorded the unalloyed confidence and esteem of all with whom he comes in contact.

At Boulder, Montana, in 1894, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Bernatz to Miss Nellie Sweet, a daughter of William T. and Emma Sweet, old pioneers in Montana. Mr. Sweet is clerk of court of Jefferson county and a sketch of his career appears elsewhere in this work. Mrs. Bernatz was called to eternal rest in 1909, at the age of thirty-seven years and is buried in the cemetery at Boulder. She is survived by five children, whose names are here entered in respective order of birth, Vera is still attending school but helps her father in the store and postoffice; and Carl, Fred, Violet and Otto are all attending school at Dixon.

ENOCH M. PORTER, A. B., M. D. Although he is recognized as one of the leading members of the medical profession in the state and as a citizen who has always held the best interests of his adopted community at heart, it is probable that Dr. Enoch M. Porter is best known as the founder of the Fort Benton Sanitarium. The theory that the modern hospital is a luxury or a convenience of the well-to-do is both unfounded and injurious. It is not only the highest development of science for the alleviation and cure of the swarming bodily ills of mankind, a wonderful organization into which the best thought and experience of experts at work the world over have entered, but is also a great philanthropic enterprise, and for this reason Dr. Porter may lay claim to a position among those who have contributed to the general public welfare and rendered their city incalculable service. Dr. Porter was born in Adrian, Bates county, Missouri, June 17, 1877, and is a son of Robert I. and Katherine (Pulliam) Porter. His grandparents were natives of Kentucky, whence they removed to St. Louis, Missouri, at an early day, as pioneer settlers. Robert I. Porter was born in Missouri, and in 1863 journeyed overland to Virginia City, via Omaha, joining the gold seekers. In 1865 he went to San Francisco, where he boarded a vessel, and returned to his native state via Panama, and for many years was engaged in agriculture and stock-raising. He is now retired from active pursuits and lives in Nevada, Missouri. He was married in Cass county, Missouri, to Katherine Pulliam, whose parents had come to that state in frontier days, and they had three children, the doctor being the youngest.

Enoch M. Porter attended the country schools of Bates county, Missouri, until he was fifteen years of age, and his youth was spent in work on his father's farm. He had decided on a professional career, however, and managed by hard study and strict economy to work his way through William Jewell College, Liberty, Missouri, from which he was graduated in 1898, with the degree of Bachelor of Arts. Entering the University Medical College, of Kansas City, he was graduated in 1902 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine, and spent the following year as interne in the University Hospital. He then began practice at Cordell, Washita county, Oklahoma, but after a few months removed to Old Mexico, where the next two and one-half years were spent. He was for one year physician for the Blalack Mexico Colony at Chamal, Mexico, and then removed to Matchuala, where he was surgeon for the Cia Metalurgica Nacional, one of the large copper-producing companies of Mexico. On leaving Mexico he went to New York City and took a post-graduate school and hospital course, and then again came West, seeking a location in numerous states and finally settling in Fort Benton, where he arrived in the spring of 1908. Since that time he has built up a large general practice, and through his zeal, knowledge, natural talent and sympathetic nature has won the confidence and friendship of the people of the community. He is a member of the Chouteau County Medical Society, the Montana State Medical Society, the American Medical Association, and the American Academy of Medicine, has been county and city health officer for four years, and is a director of the Benton Drug Company. He belongs to the Sigma Nu fraternity, the Aesculapians and Benton Lodge of Masons. On February 1, 1910, the doctor opened to the public the Fort Benton Sanitarium, an institution erected and equipped at a cost of $25,000, with all modern improvements, and capable of taking care of thirty-five patients. It has a large patronage and has taken its proper place among the foremost establishments of its kind in Montana.

HALLIE L. BILLS. One of the leading bankers of Central Montana is Mr. H. S. Bills, the organizer and active head of the Security State Bank at Judith Gap. This bank has been one of the important factors in the business development of this part of the state, and is a substantial institution, with the confidence of the community behind it and in turn itself a promotor of well ordered business, investment and progress in this section.

The possession and exercise of enterprise and ability gave Mr. Bills an early start in the responsible affairs of business. He is a well educated man, was thoroughly prepared for his career, and since attaining his majority has been identified with railroad and banking lines. He was born at Ada, Minnesota, January 3, 1884, and was reared and educated there. The leading attorney of Judith Gap, Glen S. Bills, is his older brother, and more detailed information concerning the family will be found in his sketch on other pages of this work.

Hallie L. Bills was educated in the public schools of his native state, and after leaving high school took up the study of law, though he never continued it to the point of getting a license. Business has been his active field, and his first employment after leaving home was in the capacity of relief agent for the Great Northern Railway, and spent two years in railroad work, being stationed at various points on the system and for a time was ticket agent in Fargo. He then entered banking as cashier of a bank in Radium, Minnesota. After about two years there, in 1908 he came to Judith Gap and took the leading part in organizing the Security State Bank. With the opening of this institution he took the position of cashier, and has been active executive in its successful management ever since. He is also a director in the First State Bank of Breathy, capitalized at $25,000, and in the Montana State Bank of Volier with a $25,000 capitalization.

Mr. Bills is both a successful business man and an active, public-spirited citizen. He is an enthusiast on the subject of Montana as a state of unrivaled resources, with a solid development in the past and a splendid assured future. He is one of the influential men in the local ranks of the Republican party, but does his political work for the public good and not for his own preferment. His fraternal affiliations are with the Masons and Odd Fellows, and his religious preference is for the Methodist church. All kinds of outdoor activities attract him as a witness or participant, and he finds his recreation in watching a baseball game, boxing or running matches, and in occasional hunting excursions. While in Minnesota he was a member of a volunteer fire department, and he could run a hundred yards in ten seconds flat. For two seasons his company won the banner in the tourneys of the Northern Minnesota Firemen's Association. He also enjoys a happy home life, has a nice little family, and enjoys his library and the other interests of the home. Mr. Bills was married at Rice Lake, Wisconsin, April 28, 1909, to Miss Clara B. Thompson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ole Thompson of Rice Lake. One child has been born to this union, named E. Sanford Bills.

GLEN S. BILLS. One of the ablest attorneys of central Montana, Mr. Glen S. Bills has been identified with his profession in Judith Gap since 1908. Previous to locating in Montana he practiced in North Dakota. Mr. Bills has won his way to a leading position in the law as a result of his solid ability and a sturdy reliance on his own efforts, having worked his way through college, and thus possessed at the beginning of his professional career a practical experience that was invaluable.

Mr. Bills was born in Augusta, Wisconsin, on August 1, 1879, being the second child and oldest son of E. Sanford and Kate (Prill) Bills. The father, who died at Ada, Minnesota, in 1896, aged sixty-four, was born in Canada in 1832. Farming was his regular occupation, and he was a substantial and highly respected citizen. Having settled in Wisconsin during young manhood, he enlisted in a Wisconsin regiment during the Civil war, and had a long military experience, engaged in many of the battles of the war. He owned land in Wisconsin on which the town of Augusta was founded, and one of the principal thoroughfares there is called Bills avenue. He was married there, but the latter years of his life were spent as a resident of Minnesota. His widow now resides in Spokane, Washington. There were seven children in the family, and two of the sons are at Judith Gap, Glen S. and his brother Hallie L., the banker, (see sketch elsewhere).

Glen S. Bills was two years old when the family moved to Ada, Minnesota, and there he was reared until about sixteen. During this time he had attended the public schools, and by work in light occupations had earned a considerable amount of money for a boy. For the next four years he was engaged in farming, but about the time he became of age he left the farm to prepare himself for a broader career. After a year in the Minneapolis Academy, he took a three-year course in and graduated from the State University of Minnesota, having earned all the money for his education. Most of his professional preparation was done at the North Dakota University in Grand Forks, where he graduated from the law department in 1904. His first location for practice was at Maxbass, North Dakota, where he followed his profession three years. In 1908 he located in Judith Gap, where he has since had a large share of the office and court business of this locality.

Mr. Bills is a type of the self-reliant and progressive citizen whose personal enterprise and character are to work and develop the splendid natural resources of this state. Like many other residents, he believes that no other state offers better opportunities than Montana, and with his practical achievements during his brief career he is destined to take high rank among the legal fraternity of the state during the first half of the twentieth century.

Mr. Bills was married in Milbank, South Dakota, October 26, 1910, to Miss Mary E. Phelan, a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Phelan, of Milbank. They are the parents of one son, John E. Bills. In the civic and social life of his community Mr. Bills has taken a quietly effective part and supports all the activities which afford better living conditions and make for the real progress of the community. Though affiliated with no church, he takes an interest in the moral and spiritual work of religious organizations. He is one of the live members of the Judith Gap Commercial Club, is identified with the local Republican organization, but has always refused any inducements to run for office. He is also a member of the Elks club. Mr. Bills is one of the enthusiastic automobilists of this locality, but takes a keen interest in all outdoor sports. During his college days he played a great deal of baseball and is now one of the active fans.

CHARLES W. TIERNEY. Like many of the successful journalists of today, Charles W. Tierney, editor of the Cascade Courier, of Cascade, Montana, started his newspaper career in a very humble capacity, and has devoted nearly his whole life to the gathering and distributing of news, gradually working his way up the ladder of success until he now maintains a position among the prominent men of his profession in Cascade county and is an acknowledged power in the local political field. He is one of the self-made men of his section, and the success which has finally crowned his efforts has come only after years of discouragements and disappointments. Mr. Tierney was born at Henderson, Sibley county, Minnesota, November 30, 1881, and is a son of Patrick and Mary (Moran) Tierney. His father, a native of Pennsylvania, is now a resident of St. Paul, Minnesota, where he is engaged in an extensive insurance business. He was married at Henderson, to Miss Mary Moran, who was born in Ireland, and came to the United States when she was a girl of seventeen years.

Charles W. Tierney was the oldest of his parents' ten children, and secured his education in the public and high schools, graduating from the latter in 1894. At that time he was apprenticed to the trade of printer, at which he continued to serve three years in Henderson, and when he began to work as a journeyman, went to St. Paul, where he continued for about eight years, being employed on the Pioneer Press. In 1908 he moved to North Dakota, but after a short period went to Havre, Montana, where with others he promoted the Havre Promoter, a weekly newspaper with which he was connected for one year. At this time, removing to Glasgow, he took charge of the Montana Citizen, but in the fall of 1911 came to Cascade and took employment with the Cascade Courier, the plant of which he has since purchased. The Courier is an independent organ and aims to present to its readers a fair, unbiased opinion on all matters of importance. A neat, well-printed sheet, its pages are devoted to the interesting national news of the day, together with all the local happenings, and terse, well-written editorials. It endeavors to educate the reading public into discouraging sensational matters, the management believing that a clean, reliable newspaper will be the means of ultimately developing the best interests of the community. In his political belief Mr. Tierney maintains an independent stand, exercising the right to vote for the man he deems best fitted for the office at stake, regardless of party ties. He has been fearless in advocating the principles that he has thought right, and just as courageous in attacking and denouncing the movements which he thinks not for the best interests of his community. Placed in a position where his word makes a decided impression upon public sentiment, he has wielded a distinct influence for good in Cascade, and has demonstrated that he possesses the rare faculty of stating his views and still retaining his numerous friends. As a consequence the circulation has sustained a healthy growth, and the Courier now has about 800 readers. Mr. Tierney is a consistent member of the Roman Catholic church. He is unmarried.

RALPH M. HATTERSLEY. The career of Ralph M. Hattersley is a splendid example of what may be accomplished by young manhood that is consecrated to ambition and high purposes. He is a lawyer and a self-made one at that and he is recognized throughout Teton county for his high order of ability and his conscientious dealings with his clients. His start in getting his education was difficult and many young men, under similar circumstances, would have become discouraged and left the field, but the obstacles, instead of discouraging Mr. Hattersley, spurred him onward, giving him a momentum and force which have resulted since the period of his first struggles in steady progress and success and won him the esteem of all with whom he has come in contact. At the present time, in 1912, Mr. Hattersley is incumbent of the office of city attorney of Conrad and he is discharging the duties connected with that position in a most satisfactory manner. The Hattersley pedigree is traced back to the year 1367 in England and the founder of the family in America was Jonathan Edward Hattersley, who settled in the city of Cincinnati, Ohio, about the year 1850.

Ralph M. Hattersley was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, August 11, 1883, and his parents, Charles M. and Mary B. (Bowman) Hattersley, were likewise born in Cincinnati, the former in 1857 and the latter in 1857. The father is engaged in the general merchandise business in Cincinnati and he and his wife are the parents of five children, of whom the subject of this review was the third in order of birth. To the public schools of his native place Ralph M. Hattersley is indebted for his rudimentary educational discipline, the same including a course in the Cincinnati high school. Subsequently he was matriculated as a student in George Washington University, in the city of Washington, D. C., and he was graduated in the law department of that excellent institution as a member of the class of 1907, with the degree of Bachelor of Laws. In 1908 the degree of Master of Laws was conferred on him by his alma mater. Prior to graduating from college Mr. Hattersley was in the government service at Washington, working in the interior department for a period of five years. In 1908 he came west for the government as special agent for the general land office and settled in the city of Helena, Montana, where he continued as land agent until February, 1910. In the latter year he came to Conrad, where he has since maintained his home and where he has succeeded in building up a large and lucrative law practice. Most of his legal work is along the line of land disputes and settlements.

In his political allegiance Mr. Hattersley is a staunch supporter of the principles and policies for which the Republican party stands sponsor. In 1911 he was honored by the appointment to the office of city attorney of Conrad and he has proven himself particularly well fitted for that position. In connection with the work of his profession he is a member of Teton County Bar Association and the American International Law Association. Mr. Hattersley is homesteading in Teton county and when he proves up his land claim will be the owner of 320 acres of the most arable land in this section of the state. He is affiliated with Conrad Lodge No. 80, Free and Accepted Masons, and his religious faith is in harmony with the tenets of the Presbyterian church. Inasmuch as Mr. Hattersley is self-educated, having earned the money with which to defray his college expenses, his fine success in life is the more gratifying to contemplate. He is decidedly loyal and public spirited in his civic attitude and gives freely of his aid and influence in support of all measures projected for the good of the general welfare.

CHARLES H. SANDS. With a marked capacity for the successful conduct of business interests, Charles H. Sands, of Concord, Chouteau county, has gained distinctive recognition in financial circles as cashier of the C. H. Sands Banking Company, the only institution of the kind in Concord. A son of Caspar Sands, being the second child in order of birth of a family of four children, he was born, October 9, 1883, at Fergus Falls, Minnesota.

A native of Norway, where his birth occurred in 1860, Caspar Sands came when young with his parents to this country, locating in Wisconsin, where he grew to manhood. He afterwards lived at Fergus Falls, Minnesota, a few years later taking up land in Polk county, that state, where he is still engaged in agricultural pursuits. His wife, whose maiden name was Mary Christianson, was born in Norway, came with her parents to America when a child, and died in Crookston, Minnesota, in 1892.

Educated principally at Grand Forks, North Dakota, Charles H. Sands was for three years a student at the University of North Dakota, becoming well prepared while there for a business career. Accepting a position at Grand Forks as assistant cashier of the Scandinavian-American Bank, he retained it six years. Having acquired a substantial knowledge of the business connected with banking, Mr. Sands, foreseeing the advantages awaiting young business men in Montana, located in Concord, and at once established the Bank of Concord. Successful in its management, he subsequently had it incorporated under the Montana laws as the C. H. Sands Banking Company, a private banking concern, and the only bank in the city. It has a capital of $20,000, and has as its officers men of ability and prominence, C. B. Roberts, of Kalispell, being president; C. B. Richards, also of Kalispell, vice-president; and C. H. Sands, cashier.

On December 20, 1909, Mr. Sands married Miss Clara Brattan, of Reynolds, North Dakota, and to them two children have been born, namely: Adeline, born at Concord, Montana, September 29, 1910; and Marian, born January 15, 1912, in Concord. Politically Mr. Sands is a straightforward Republican, and religiously he is a Lutheran. He is quite active in financial circles, and is a member of the State Bankers' Association, and of the American Bankers' Association. For two years he has been a member of the school board here and is chairman of the board. A man of integrity, whose word can always be relied upon, Mr. Sands has won a host of friends in the community, and is popular in both business and social circles.

JAMES C. JOHNSON came to Montana in 1908 and since that time has been an honored and influential citizen of Conrad, where he is most successfully engaged in the real estate business. He is the owner of farming lands in Teton county, valued at no less than $12,000, and a great deal of the above property is under cultivation. Mr. Johnson has spent most of his active career in the Pacific Coast states and while there met with varying success. He insists that Montana is the best state in the Union and will probably make Conrad his permanent home.

In Poweshiek county, Iowa, on the 17th of November, 1857, occurred the birth of James C. Johnson, who is : son of James and Sarah (Swangel) Johnson, both of whom were born and reared in Ohio, where was solemnized their marriage. The Johnson family traces its lineage back to staunch English stock and the Swangel family is of German extraction. James Johnson removed from the Buckeye state to Iowa in 1833 and was one of the pioneers in the settlement of the latter state. He was a carpenter by trade but devoted his attention to agricultural pursuits in Iowa until 1867, when he went to Linn county, Kansas, there taking up a tract of government land, on which he farmed until his demise, in 1873. He was a gallant and faithful soldier in the Union ranks of the Civil war during the latter years of that conflict. Mrs. Johnson passed to eternal rest in Allen county, Kansas, in 1899, aged sixty-three years.

Of the eleven children born to Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, James C. was the fourth in order of birth and he was a student in the public schools of Linn county, Kansas, until he had reached his eighteenth year. He remained at home with his mother, after his father's death, and assisted in the care and education of his younger brothers and sisters until he was twenty-three years of age. In March, 1883, he went to San Francisco, California, remaining in that city for a period of four months, at the end of which he went to Walla Walla, Washington, where he engaged in the lumbering and freighting business. In 1888, after a very successful career in the last mentioned lines of enterprise, he removed to Morrow county, Oregon, there leasing a ten thousand-acre ranch, which he conducted for one year. As a result of a freeze-out and a dry summer his entire crop was lost and his health in a very bad state. In order to recuperate he accepted a position in the quartermaster's department at Fort Walla Walla, where he remained for three years. He then resigned his position and with improved health and repaired financial conditions he contracted with the government to furnish the fort with vegetables, which he did for the ensuing four years. He was very successful in the latter venture and next turned his attention to mining, becoming a member of the company which controlled the Wild Rose mine, the Santiago group and the Fleet Wood group, all valuable and paying properties in the vicinity at Pierce, Idaho. He was identified with mining interests for a period of ten years and still owns a placer mine in the Pierce City district.

In 1908 Mr. Johnson came to Montana to visit a brother whom he had not seen for many years. He became so impressed with this state and its possibilities that he immediately decided to locate here and with that in mind took up a homestead just two miles distant from Conrad. With the passage of time he has accumulated more land in Teton county and his holdings now comprise 480 acres, the same being valued at $12,000. He has real estate offices in Conrad and has met with most gratifying success in his various real estate transactions. In politics he is an uncompromising supporter of the principles and policies promulgated by the Republican party and while he does not participate actively in public affairs he is ever on the alert to do all in his power to advance progress and prosperity and he gives freely of his aid and influence in support of all measures affecting the general welfare. He is a devout member of the Methodist Episcopal church in his religious faith and the list of his personal friends is coincident with that of his acquaintances. He is unmarried.

D. D. MORE. One of the earliest citizens to locate in the town of Hingham was D. D. More, of the More Land Company, and one of the rising young business men of the state.

Mr. More was born in St. Lawrence county, New York, on the 16th of February, 1881, but has spent most of his active career in the Northwest. He was the third in a family of five children born to Roland V. and Arthusa (Martin) More, both of whom were natives of New York state, where the mother died in 1887 at the age of thirty years. The father, who is now fifty-nine years old and is engaged in the hotel business at Waddington, New York, has been a resident of his native state all his life. The other children in the family are named as follows: Clarence, a resident of Maine; Mrs. Lula Houston, of Wood Lake, Minnesota; Ashton, of New York state; Maurice, of Hingham, Montana.

After completing his schooling at Lisbon Center, New York, Mr. D. D. More was employed in various ways for a time and then for two and a half years was in the milk business at Ogdensburg in his native state. In 1900 he came west to North Dakota, and began his career as a farm worker, and from that became an employe in his uncle's general store at Buffalo, North Dakota. A year later he filed a homestead claim near Berthold, that state, and then worked for two years in Devils Lake. He was then a resident on his claim until it was proved up. His energy and good management were bringing him a steadily increasing prosperity, and after one year's employment in the State Bank at Berthold he bought an interest in the institution, and was engaged in banking until he sold out and came to Montana. He is still owner of a fine farm at Berthold. In March, 1910, a few months after the town was started, he settled at Hingham, where he opened a well equipped livery stable. He is still proprietor of this business, though it is only a minor part of his business operations. He has extensive interests in the school lands of Hill county, these lands being, as he says, as fine as the sun ever shines upon. His real estate business has been developed on a large scale, and he is one of the best informed land men in Montana.

Mr. More was married in Minnesota, February, 1904, to Miss Alta Hawley, and they are the parents of three children: Martha, who was born in Minnesota in 1906; Earl, born in Berthold, North Dakota, in 1908; and Lowell, born at Berthold, in July, 1910.

Mr. More is independent in politics. He is fond of outdoor life, and finds this new country of northwest Montana a place to excite all his enthusiasm as a citizen and his best efforts for its welfare and substantial development.

JAMES P. AYLEN, M. D. chief surgeon of the Northern Pacific Hospital in Missoula, was born in Canada, September 25, 1863. He is the son of Dr. John and Saloma (Prentiss) Aylen, both natives of Quebec, where they spent the greater part of their lives. The father lived there his entire life with the exception of a three-year period which he passed at Rochester, New York. He was a noted physician and practitioner of Canada, and died there in January, 1900, at the age of sixty-seven. The mother still lives, and it at present residing in Winnipeg. Four children were born to them, the eldest of whom was James P. Aylen of this review.

Dr. Aylen lived in Quebec until he was about thirteen years of age, at which time the family removed to Rochester, New York. In three years they returned to the Canadian home, and the son, James P., remained there until he was about twenty years of age, after which he entered McGill University and pursued a four years' course of study. He then went to New York City and attended Bellevue Hospital and Medical College, from which he was graduated and received his medical degree. Upon leaving college he went to Minneapolis and began to practice orthopaedic surgery, but a serious breakdown in his health after a few months compelled the young doctor to give up his work for a time. He then moved to North Dakota where he resumed practice, and there enjoyed a long and more than ordinarily useful career in the practice of his profession. He located there in the old territorial days (1888) and still holds the certificate granted by the Territorial Medical board. For twenty years he continued in North Dakota, and in that time he occupied many important positions of an official nature in his district. For twelve years he was a member of the State Board of Medical Examiners of North Dakota, and during a large part of that time was president of the board. At one time he was president of the North Dakota Medical Association. He was county physician for twenty years in Ransom county, North Dakota, and in his connection with the various offices named rendered valuable service to the people. His removal from North Dakota was a distinct loss to the community with which he had been identified for so many years, but with his removal to another field Dr. Aylen did not lay aside his habits of usefulness. In his Montana home he is carrying on as great a work as he did in past years, and is recognized in Missoula as one of the substantial men of the city and county.

Dr. Aylen removed to Missoula in January, 1908, to take charge of the Northern Pacific Hospital at this point, and since he took charge of the hospital, rapid strides have been made in the standing of that splendid institution. Its equipment has been increased and improved in many ways, and under his supervision the hospital has come to be one of the most modern and perfectly appointed places of its kind in the United States. A nurses' home has been added as well as a new laundry building and a new elevator shaft. The boiler capacity in the engine room has been increased and a new X-ray coil installed, as well as many other changes of a similar nature, all equally important.

Dr. Aylen is a man of exceptional mental attainment, and is a student of note. He is an inveterate reader and owns a fine private library. The doctor is somewhat of a fraternalist, being a member of the Masons and affiliating with the blue lodge and the Mystic Shrine. He was master of the blue lodge for three years. He is a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and has gone through all the chairs of the order. He was past grand master of North Dakota, and at one time was grand representative from North Dakota to sovereign grand lodge. He is also a member of the Modern Woodmen of America, the Maccabees and the Yeomen. He is a member of the Missoula Club. As relating to his profession, Dr. Aylen is a member of the American Medical Association, of the Association of Life Examiners of America, of the Montana State Medical Association and the Missoula County Society. Dr. Aylen is a Republican and takes an active and worthy interest in the political affairs of his county, in which he is an important factor. He is an enthusiastic sportsman and enjoys shooting, fishing and all forms of outdoor exercise. He is particularly fond of coursing and at one time kept a kennel of thirty-five prize greyhounds, which he exhibited in many of the larger cities of the United States. Automobiling is a favorite pastime with the doctor, but it has by no means supplanted the horse in his affections. Dr. Aylen is particularly delighted with the Montana climate and the country in general. He believes it to be the finest state in the land for the ambitious young man, and he claims that the climate can not fail to add to the vigor of youth and to increase the faltering vitality of old age.

On March 26, 1887, Dr. Aylen was married in Montreal, Canada, to Miss Florence A. Carter, daughter of William H. and Emily Carter, of that city. Two children have been born of their union, Gerald Valleylee, deceased, and Walter Carter, now in attendance at a medical college (Vanderbilt University) in Nashville, Tennessee.

DR. CLARKE S. SMITH, engaged in general practice in Kalispell, has been located in this city since 1909, in which time he has won a considerable prominence in his profession. Dr. Smith is a native of Michigan, born in Muir, that state, on May 19, 1881. He is the son of Justin and Christina Elizabeth (Fox) Smith, both native born New Yorkers. In the late sixties Justin Smith moved to Michigan where he spent some twenty years. He died in 1890 in Brainerd, Minnesota, where he had been engaged in the lumber business for some time, as a member of the firm of J. J. Howe & Company of that place. He was a veteran soldier of the Civil war, having entered the First New York Dragoons as a private, and soon being advanced to the rank of captain. He served throughout the war, giving valuable service to the Union, and meeting with many harrowing experiences. He was taken prisoner at Beaver Dam and after nine months imprisonment was exchanged. Mr. Smith was always prominent in a political way in whatever locality he found himself, and was a man of considerable influence with his party, which was that of Republicanism. His marriage to Christina Elizabeth Fox occurred at Syracuse, New York. She died in 1896 at Bozeman, Montana, on the fourteenth day of June, when she was sixty-two years old. She was the mother of four sons, Clarke S. being the youngest of them.

Clarke S. Smith was educated in the Brainerd public schools and at Ionia, Michigan, finishing with the class of 1898. On leaving school he took a position with the Northern Pacific Railway with whom he continued for five years; when he resigned his position with them he was filling the important post of traveling auditor for the company. Following his resignation from that position, he entered the University of Minnesota, from which institution he was graduated in the medical department in 1907, receiving his degree of Doctor of Medicine. For one year he was engaged as interne in St. Luke's Hospital of St. Paul, Minnesota, after which he engaged in practice in Bridger, Montana. He remained there for one year, then removed to Kalispell and became associated with Dr. A. D. Macdonald; they later took Dr. Arthur Morrow into the association, and the firm was known as Drs. Macdonald, Smith and Morrow. This copartnership endured for a year, since which time all three have been engaged in independent practice. In May, 1910, Dr. Smith took leave of his work in Kalispell and for three months thereafter was engaged in post graduate work in a prominent eastern hospital, as a further aid to his already wide knowledge of medicine and surgery.

Dr. Smith is an active and enthusiastic Republican and takes a lively interest in the civic affairs of the city, rendering a citizenship well worthy of the man and beneficial to the community. He is a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks of Brainerd and of the Knights Templar in Kalispell and the order of the Mystic Shrine. He is a member of the Kalispell Club, and professionally, is identified with the County and State Medical organizations.

Dr. Smith was married in Bozeman, Montana, on September 14, 1910, to Carolyn Van Zandt, daughter of John Nelson Van Zandt, a native of Bozeman, now retired from business life.

CLARENCE E. KENYON is one of the proprietors and owners of the largest drug store in Great Falls. He has been identified with the drug business since his earliest manhood, first as a pharmacist in the employ of others, and in more recent years established in business on his own responsibility. The business which he has been conducting since April, 1910, is steadily increasing in volume, and is one of the most popular and reliable houses of its kind in this section of Montana.

Mr. Kenyon was born in Cook county, South Dakota, on June 22, 1887. When he was yet a child his parents removed to Iowa and settled in Winneshet county, where he was for the most part reared. He is the son of Alonzo E. and Emma May (Akerson) Kenyon. The father was a native of Ohio, born there in 1851, and he came to Frankville, Iowa, in his young manhood. He was prominent in real estate circles throughout the state of Iowa in his early life, and for the past sixteen years has been connected with the police department at Decorah, Iowa—for the first three years as deputy sheriff and for the past thirteen years as chief of police. The mother, who was born in Iowa, died on February 14, 1908, at Corona, California, and is buried at Decorah, Iowa, where she passed the best years of her life. Three children were born to them,—Mark E., now prominent in the jewelry business in Corona, California; Harry R., of Great Falls, and employed in the store of his brother, Clarence E.

The father of Alonzo E. Kenyon and the grandfather of Clarence Kenyon of this review, is Henry R. Kenyon. He was born in New York state in 1817 and came west to Ohio in the early pioneer days of that state. He served in the Civil war in an Iowa regiment and also fought with General Miles in the Indian wars, where he was severely wounded, losing the sight of one eye. He still lives in his Iowa home, and though he is ninety-five years old, he is hale and hearty. The maternal grandfather of Clarence Kenyon was Case Akerson, a well-to-do land owner in Iowa, and widely known in that state. He also fought in the Indian wars with General Miles and was with Sheridan in the Civil war. He died in 1890 at the advanced age of seventy-four years.

Mr. Kenyon attended the public schools of the town he was reared in, and later was entered at the High Park Pharmacy School of Des Moines, Iowa, from which institution he was graduated after completing a course in pharmaceuticals, and he then became a drug clerk in a store in Decorah, Iowa, where he remained for two years. He then went to Mercedes, California, remaining in the drug business for three years, after which he came to Great Falls and entered the employ of Peer Brothers, druggists. He remained with that firm for one year, then opened a drug store on his own responsibility, which he conducted for a year, and on November 1, 1909, he sold out his interests there, becoming associated in April, 1910, with Frank R. Wheeler. The two established the present thriving drug store, and the success which they have achieved thus far augurs well for the future fortunes of the young men. They are prominent and popular in business circles in Great Falls and unlimited success in a business way is freely predicted for them. Mr. Kenyon is fast nearing the front ranks of the leading men of the community, and his accomplishments thus far are of a most worthy nature.

Mr. Kenyon is a Republican in his political adherence, and is a member of the Congregational church. He is connected with the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks in a fraternal way, and with various other societies of a similar nature.

DANIEL L. O'HERN. Although less than five years a resident of Missoula, and with no previous acquaintance with the people of this part of the country, their needs, their purposes, their tendencies or their special aspirations, Daniel O'Hern of Missoula has put himself in close touch with them and become as one of them in all essential particulars. Their interests are his care and study, their welfare is his constant aim in all his activities, the development and improvement of the city and county of his present home, and the augmentation of their industrial, mercantile and social influence and power are the objects of his greatest solicitude. The people around him realize his zeal for their advancement and commend him highly for it, and they have shown and continue to show their appreciation of his worth and ability.

Mr. O'Hern was born in Webster county, Iowa, on January 13, 1882, but his parents, John and Mary (Sheehan) O'Hern, were natives of Ireland, the former born in County Tipperary and the latter County Galway. The father came to the United States when he was a young man and located in Illinois. A few years later he moved to Webster county, Iowa, and there he passed the remainder of his days as an industrious and well-to-do farmer, well thought of in his locality and true to his duty as a man and a citizen in all the relations of life, domestic, social, industrial, religious and political.

His son Daniel obtained his academic education in the country schools and at Tobin College in Fort Dodge in his native county, and was graduated from the college in 1902. He then studied law in the law department of the University of Iowa, and was graduated from this in 1908. He at once came to Missoula and began the practice of his profession. Notwithstanding the shortness of his residence here he has built up a fine practice and won a high and firmly established place in the public esteem and the regard and good will of the whole city and county. He is one of the most promising of the younger members of the Missoula bar, and already one of the most energetic, capable and successful.

Since Mr. O'Hern's arrival in Missoula he has been very active in connection with political affairs. He is a firm and zealous member of the Democratic party, always eager for its success in its contests, and at all times diligent, energetic and effective in helping its cause along. As its candidate he was elected in 1910 to the lower house of the state legislature as one of the representatives of Missoula county, and while in that body rendered such signal and satisfactory service to his constituents and the whole state of Montana that he won for himself universal commendation and prominent mention for higher honors in the official life of the state.

Fraternally he is connected with the order of Elks and the Knights of Columbus, and the Loyal Order of Moose, and his membership in both is very serviceable to them and highly valued by their other adherents in this locality. Socially he is warmly welcomed at any gathering of the residents of the city or county, and in his daily intercourse with the people he is always courteous, obliging and agreeable. In the transaction of business he is alert, knowing and resourceful, whether in his office giving counsel to his clients or in court engaged in the trial of their cases. In all respects he is an excellent citizen and one of the most vigorous and highly vitalized forces for good in the community he has adopted as his home. He is all zeal for the welfare and progress of Missoula city and county and the state of Montana, and they are enriched by his citizenship and his activity in their behalf.

MORRIS D. ROWLAND. Among the learned professions, that of law is ably represented in Montana by many of the younger generation, and in this class in Lincoln county none has attained a higher standing than Morris D. Rowland, of the legal firm of Rowland & Gray, of Libby. Mr. Rowland has not confined his activities to the practice of his profession, however, as he is interested in various enterprises of a business nature, and at present is vice-president of the Lincoln County Abstract Company. He was born in Milton, Iowa, September 22, 1885, and is a son of Jonathan D. and Mary (Clafin) Rowland. His grandfather, Samuel Rowland, is a well-known merchant of Milton, Iowa, settlers in the vicinity of Milton, where he was engaged in agricultural pursuits throughout his life, and his farm is still in the family's possession. Jonathan D. Rowland has lived in Milton all of his life, and is one of that city's leading capitalists and business men, being engaged in banking and mercantile lines and owning large properties in northern Iowa and southern Missouri. He is a Republican in politics, but his business interests have satisfied his ambitions, and in spite of numerous offers of public preferment has never agreed to enter the political arena. The mother of Morris D. Rowland, the daughter of an army officer who graduated from West Point, was reared in a convent, and was married to Mr. Rowland at Olathe, Kansas. They had three children, of whom one is deceased. The oldest child, Lamar H. Rowland, is a well known merchant of Milton, Iowa, and Morris D. was the second in order of birth.

Morris D. Rowland received his primary education in the Milton public and high schools, graduating from the latter in 1903, and playing with the high school football team four years. He subsequently spent one year in the University of Iowa, and then entered Yale University, where he was graduated with the degree of L.L.B. in 1908. During the fall of that year he went west to Spokane, Washington, and after being admitted to the bar of the state engaged in practice for six months. However, he was not satisfied with conditions as he found them, and, hearing of the opportunities offered to young men of ability and energy in Montana, came to Libby and for one and one-half years was engaged in practice with C. A. Adams. He next formed a co-partnership with W. H. Gray, a prominent attorney of Libby, under the firm style of Rowland & Gray, and is also connected in the abstract business with Mr. Gray, who is president of the Lincoln County Abstract Company, Inc., Mr. Rowland being vice-president. Both as an attorney and a business man, Mr. Rowland is recognized as an alert, progressive and enterprising citizen, and one who has the best interests of his community at heart. He has invested in Lincoln county land, and at the present time is engaged in farming to some extent. He is a member of the National Guards, being first lieutenant of his company, is connected with the Masonic fraternity, and in political matters adheres to the principles and supports the candidates of the Republican party. Was one of the charter members of the Acacia fraternity at Yale, name Pe Chapter.

Mr. Rowland was married at Iowa City, Iowa, September 18, 1910, to Miss Alberta Allis, daughter of William H. Allis, a well known real estate man of Iowa, and to this union there was born one child who died in infancy.

IGNATIUS STAPLETON. The growth and progress that has marked the history of the United States during the past decade or two has been one of the wonders of the age, and in no section of the country has this development been more marked than that embracing the Northwest Rocky Mountain states. Montana has been one of the conspicuous examples of this marvelous upbuilding and in Montana no city has attained a greater fame than that of Butte. As is but natural where development is so rapid the real estate business is one of the most active of any line of endeavor, and draws to the ranks of those engaged therein men of large abilities and experience. Among the men prominently identified with the real-estate business in Butte today is Mr. Ignatius Stapleton, efficient manager for the T. B. Potter Realty Company, which controls large interests in this section and does an extensive business in engineering deals for the purchase and sale of properties.

Mr. Stapleton has enjoyed a business experience that has taken him into all parts of the country and given him practical insight into various lines of commercial activity. A native of New York City, where he was born May 7, 1850, he was two years later taken by his parents to Illinois, the family becoming residents of Joliet. The father, William Stapleton, and his wife, Anne (Casey) Stapleton, both were natives of Templemore, Tipperary county, Ireland. They were married in New York and were citizens of Joliet from 1861 until the time of their death, the burial place of both being in the last named city. Mr. Stapleton was during his life engaged in mercantile business. His family consisted of five boys and two girls.

Ignatius Stapleton was the recipient of a good education secured in public and parochial schools of Joliet, Illinois, in which place he lived until 1878. He was plucky and ambitious as a boy and earned his first money when he was thirteen years old, when he received fifty cents a day as a messenger boy for the Western Union Telegraph Company, and during the time that he held this position he sturdily walked three miles to and from his work every day. For a year he continued to act as messenger and found time before he was fifteen years old to master telegraphy, and at that young age secured a position as operator on the Rock Island Railroad. During the two years that he remained in that place he acquired a great deal of valuable experience which served him well in later work. His next position was with the Joliet Iron & Steel Company as operator of a private wire for that concern. He next went to Milwaukee having secured work with the North Chicago Rolling Mill company, filling the double position of pay roll clerk and operator. From that place he went to South Chicago and worked at the rolling mills there, but subsequently returned to Milwaukee and entered service of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway as operator in the general office of the company there.

After a period he was sent by the company to Chicago to act as train dispatcher, remained there about six months, and was then transferred to Perry, Iowa. Subsequently he severed his connection with the Milwaukee company and went to Sacramento, California, and entered the employment of the Central Pacific (now Southern Pacific) Railway Company as dispatcher and operator, and was later transferred to Tulare, California. Returning to the east again he re-entered the employ of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway Company and was operator at Davis Junction, Illinois, for a time.

Desiring to engage in some other line of work Mr. Stapleton then went to southwestern Nebraska in the cattle country and worked on the range for three years. This did not satisfy him, however, and feeling the lure of the railway employee's life he went to Colorado and took charge of a station at Arkansas Junction for the Colorado Midland Railway Company. Leaving that place he next became station agent at Colorado City. This was in the mining section and like many others he succumbed to the mining fever and going to Sugar Loaf mountain west of Leadville he leased the Virginia mine, which he worked for about a year. That was the extent of his mining experience for he went back to Colorado Springs at the end of that time and accepted a position as statistician clerk in the auditor's office of the Colorado Midland Railway Company. He left that position to go to Chicago as chief clerk of the joint railroad commission during the construction period of the World's Fair in that city, and remained there until after the close of the fair.

Again wishing to vary the nature of his employment, Mr. Stapleton next engaged in the butter and egg business in Chicago, later branching out into a general commission business. He continued in this line for a time then sold out his interests and was with a firm of public accountants in Chicago for a time. He re-entered the butter and egg trade, pursued the business a short time then went to Kansas City and became traveling salesman for a creamery supply house, his territory embracing Kansas, Missouri, Oklahoma and a part of Nebraska. Retiring from that position he next represented the Sharples Cream Separator Company in the same territory, and when that company was absorbed by the John Deere Plow Company Mr. Stapleton remained with the latter company until 1905.

Mr. Stapleton's next connection was with a Portland, Oregon, firm, Wallace, Corcoran & North, who handled a general line of wagons, buggies, etc., and he covered Oregon, Washington, Idaho and British Columbia as their traveling representative. Receiving tempting inducements to travel for the firm of John S. Beall, Mr. Stapleton accepted the offer, and later was promoted to general manager of the offices of that company, remaining in that capacity until August 1, 1909. At that time he made his present connection with the T. B. Potter Realty Company as manager for their interests in Butte City, and that position he continues to occupy at the present writing.

While Mr. Stapleton has made many business changes during his life he has invariably "made good" in the various positions he has filled and his career has been one of advancement to larger and more responsible fields with each change. His energy and strict personal integrity have never been questioned and he has always held the highest respect of his business and social acquaintances and friends wherever he has been. He is a man of independent thought and action and politically believes that principles are far more important than party lines. His interests are varied and he takes enthusiastic part in a multitude of affairs that affect the industrial, civic, religious and social affairs of the city in which he resides. He is a devout member of the Catholic church, prominent in its affairs and liberal in subscribing to its benefactions and is one of the most valued members of the Knights of Columbus. Mrs. Stapleton also is a consistent communicant of the Catholic church and prominent in its various activities. She is a member of the Ladies' Catholic Benevolent Association and the Ladies' Aid and Altar Societies of Sacred Heart parish.

The marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Stapleton occurred April 29, 1908, at Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Mrs. Stapleton was before her marriage Catherine McCoy, daughter of Martin and Mary McCoy of Milwaukee. Her father died in that city in 1886 at the age of 52 years and her mother's demise occurred at the same place in 1901, she being fifty-seven years old at the time of her death. Mr. and Mrs. Stapleton have a host of friends throughout the country and are held in high esteem by all who have the pleasure of their acquaintance.

JOHN P. MCCARTHY. The Flathead Drug Company, which was established at Polson, July 3, 1910, the second business of this kind in the town, has become one of the leading concerns in Polson and this section of Montana. Mr. McCarthy, who is an expert pharmacist with long experience previous to coming to Polson, is owner of half the stock in the company, with Frank and J. B. Jette as the other proprietors.

John P. McCarthy was born in Holt county, Nebraska, March 12, 1888, and was the second of five children born to Jeremiah and Mary (Dwyer) McCarthy. The grandfather McCarthy came from Ireland when Jeremiah was six years old, and settled at Hancock, Michigan, where he followed mining and farming, and was also a soldier in the Civil war. The father was a carpenter by trade, and he died at O'Neill, Nebraska, May 11, 1906, at the age of forty-three. The mother was born in Michigan and is now a resident of Butte, Montana.

Most of his youthful years Mr. McCarthy spent at O'Neill, Nebraska. He prepared himself carefully and thoroughly for his branch of business, but he worked for his advantages in the way of schooling, and since a boy has been enterprising and dependent on his own efforts. After graduation from the high school he worked his way through Creighton University, getting his A. B. degree in 1906 and graduated in pharmacy from the Creighton College of Pharmacy in 1907. His first experience in the drug business began when he was eight years old, and he had eleven years' practical work in pharmacy before getting his certificate. In 1907 he was licensed in Nebraska and Iowa, and in 1908 in Montana, where he had the management of the Family Drug Company in Butte one year. Then in 1910 he came to Polson and established the Flathead Drug Company.

Mr. McCarthy is a Democrat, but takes no active part in political work. He is a member of the Knights of Columbus at O'Neill, Nebraska, and the Woodmen of the World and the Fraternal Order of Eagles at Polson. His church is the Catholic. He was married in Polson, May 18, 1912, to Miss Clara Gates. Mrs. McCarthy, whose father was A. M. Gates, was born in Aberdeen, South Dakota, but was reared in Missoula, Montana.

LEON L. LONG is most successfully engaged in the lumber business at Ravalli, Montana, and he is also the owner of a fine ranch eligibly located two miles distant from this city. He is possessed of ambition and determination and his energy, courage and business judgment have brought him to a position of esteem and influence among the citizens of this section of Montana, where he is a man of mark in all the relations of life. He is deeply and sincerely interested in community affairs but has never been an office seeker, preferring to give his undivided attention to his extensive business interests.

A native of the fine old Badger state of the Union, Leon L. Long was born at Downsville, Wisconsin, October 27, 1872, and he is a son of Jackson P. and Anna M. (Harrington) Long, the former of whom was born in New York and the latter in Illinois. Jackson P. Long settled in Wisconsin as a young man and there was engaged in farming operations during the greater part of his active career. He was summoned to the life eternal in 1902, at the age of seventy-eight years. His cherished and devoted wife, who survives him, is now a resident of Montana, her home being on a ranch adjoining that of the subject of this review. She is a woman of most gracious personality and is deeply beloved by all who have come within the sphere of her gentle influence. Mr. and Mrs. Long became the proud parents of sixteen children—nine daughters and seven sons. One other son, Paul C., resides in Montana; he lives on and conducts the ranch for the subject of this review.

The eighth in order of birth in a family of sixteen children, Leon L. Long was reared to maturity on the old homestead farm in Wisconsin and he was educated in the district schools. He remained at home until he had reached his twentieth year when he went to North Dakota, settling in the vicinity of Fargo, where he followed railroading for about one year. In 1893 he came to Montana and remained at Helena for about two months but as business did not look very promising he returned east, locating in Minneapolis, where he was engaged in railroad work for about a year, at the end of which he went south and became identified with the lumber business in Louisiana and Texas. He remained in the latter states for some three years and then went to the famous San Louis valley, where for the ensuing two years he was interested in lumbering and also ran threshing outfits. He then went to California and thence to Portland, Oregon, where for the greater part of ten years he was superintendent in the lumber department of the Oregon & Washington Boating Company. About 1908 he drifted back into Montana, settling at Taft, where he conducted a store for the Flathead Mercantile Company for one year, at the expiration of which he came to Ravalli, establishing a stage line between Ravalli and Polson. Subsequently he disposed of his stage line and engaged in the lumber business, beginning with one yard at Ravalli. He and his associates now have branch offices and yards at Roman, Dixon, Perma and Arlee. The business is constantly growing larger.

Mr. Long has a fine government homestead just two miles from Ravalli and his mother has a quarter section of land adjoining his. They were both fortunate enough to get lucky numbers at the recent government drawing for homesteads. Both quarters are valuable and rich. Mr. Long planted two sacks of potatoes on his land last season and they yielded him in return sixty-five sacks; other vegetables were fully as profitable. Mr. Long's estate is managed by his brother, Paul C., mentioned above, and he himself resides on it, driving to and from business every day. In politics Mr. Long is an independent Republican but he takes no active part in public affairs. He served for years as deputy sheriff, and he is a member of the school board of his district. In a fraternal way he is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows and in sporting matters he is very enthusiastic about base ball, playing a great deal as catcher and shortstop. He goes on a great many hunting expeditions and is also fond of angling. He devotes considerable time to riding and driving and always keeps many head of fine horses on hand. While his early educational training was somewhat limited he has supplemented that discipline with extensive reading, being exceedingly fond of all the old masters. He enjoys good shows, music and singing and is a man of broad and liberal ideas. He cannot say too much in praise of Montana and following is a statement by him in regard to the golden opportunities of this state: "Montana is all cream and pure gold—same inside and out—never deceives or disappoints and is a composite picture of confidence, activity, prosperity and wealth."

Mr. Long is a business man of progressive ideas and considerable aggressiveness. He is deeply interested in all that affects the good of mankind and never lets slip an opportunity to better material conditions in his home community. He is a man of fine mentality and broad human sympathy. He is always courteous, kindly and affable and those who know him personally accord him the highest esteem. His life has been exemplary in all respects and he has ever supported those interests which are calculated to uplift and benefit humanity, while his own fine moral worth is deserving of the highest commendation.

MARION B. RIFFO, noted architect and talented violinist, ranks as one of the foremost citizens and business men of Kalispell, where he has maintained his home since 1909. A native of the city of St. Louis, Missouri, Mr. Rizzo was born August 1, 1877, and he is a son of Marion B. and Amalia Estelle (Scheible) Rizzo, the former of whom was born and reared in Switzerland and the latter of whom was a native of Kentucky. The father immigrated to America when he was twenty-one years of age, and settled in the East, subsequently locating in St. Louis, where he passed the residue of his life. He was a structural engineer by occupation and prior to his demise had achieved considerable fame as a musician. He was summoned to the life eternal in 1889, at the comparatively early age of thirty-five years, and his wife passed away in 1887, aged thirty-three years.

After completing the curriculum of the public schools of St. Louis, Mr. Rizzo was matriculated as a student in the University of Pennsylvania, in which excellent institution he was graduated as an architect in 1901. After leaving college he worked in New York, Philadelphia, and Atlantic City for several years and during that period was associated in business with some of the noted architects of the East. He came to Montana in the latter part of the year 1908 and in the following year located in Kalispell, where he has since maintained his home and where he has succeeded in building up a large and lucrative business as an architect. He has designed all the prominent buildings erected recently between Kalispell and Spokane, among them being the hospital at Havre, all the schools in Kalispell and many of the more imposing residences in this city. He drew the plans for the Sisters of Mercy Hospital and has just completed the plans for the new Elks building that is soon to be erected here. He is an expert in his particular line of business and is recognized as the best architect in this section of Montana.

At Boonsbury, Pennsylvania, in 1900, Mr. Rizzo was united in marriage to Miss Lillian Redeker and this union has been prolific of five children, whose names are here entered in respective order of birth,—Marian B., Cyril S., Lillian A., Raymond R. and William Waldo.

In a fraternal way Mr. Rizzo is affiliated with the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, the Kalispell Club and the time-honored Masonic order, in which latter organization he is connected with both the York and Scottish Rite branches. In politics he is a Democrat and in his religious faith he is a devout member of the Presbyterian church. He is a well-known and popular citizen and is recognized as a good sportsman, his favorite recreations being hunting and fishing. Much of his spare time is devoted to music and he has won wide renown as a violinist. He began to study music as a child and while very young played a number of very difficult compositions on the violin. He plays at many musical entertainments and is decidedly popular in his home community, where he is honored and esteemed by all with whom he has come in contact.

CARL B. TAYLOR. Highly as this community prizes its more mature citizens for their experience and judgment, it finds an element no less indispensable in its vigorous and enterprising young professional and business men. It is especially gratifying to contemplate the steady development of a successful career like that of Carl B. Taylor, Polson's enterprising young jeweler.

The son of William Tate and Mary Louise (Gross) Taylor, Carl B. Taylor was born in New Brunswick, Canada. Both parents were natives of New Brunswick, his father's life having been full of interest and adventure through his experience as a miner and prospector through the west. From New Brunswick he traveled to Oregon by way of Panama in March, 1863; from there he went to San Francisco; later he left that city for the less advanced possibilities of Lewiston, Idaho, Florence, Warrens and Boise Basin, Territory of Idaho, and in other parts of the latter named state, as well as in Montana and in Nome, Alaska, he followed the variable fortunes of a miner. He was one of the early prospectors of the Flathead country, and during one of his trips through this region in 1870, he and his companions carried over many miles of trail a gum boot over 250 pounds avoirdupois from Rhodes' Gulch, Canal Gulch and Orofino Gulch, Idaho, packed with gold. It was a precarious journey, but its end was finally reached in safety. Many stories are told of the dangers of this and other trips taken by this courageous and venturesome miner, whose skirmishes with hostile Indians were not a few. He has since settled down to the peaceful life of a homesteader near Ronan, where he and his wife are now living. A son, Roscoe S., lives in the same community, and another son, Levant Tate, resides at Dillon, as does their daughter, Cora V.

Both optimism and a temperament of hearty goodwill are the most valuable heritages of Carl Taylor. His life thus far has been one of even progress, such as is ever deserved by the faithful and well-intentioned seeker after success. His years of educational training passed on smoothly and satisfactorily, first in Bannock, to which place the family moved in 1889; later at Dillon, where he pursued courses in both the county high school and the State Normal College, and finally in the Northern Illinois College of Ophthalmology, in Chicago, where in 1906 he gained his professional knowledge.

Returning to Dillon, where he had made many friends and had won both the respect and confidence of his acquaintance, Mr. Taylor resumed his position in the jewelry store of Mr. Albert Stamm, where he began his profession as an optician. So highly were his services appreciated that he continued here for eleven years. In 1910 he came to Polson, where he established a jewelry business of modest proportions. Since then, through his wise management and assiduous attention to the quality of his stock and the needs of his customers, Mr. Taylor's little store has become the largest establishment of its kind in the entire district.

It goes without saying that Mr. Taylor is popular as well as prosperous. His professional honors include membership in the State Board of Optometry and the vice-presidency of the State Association of Opticians. His fraternal relations are with the Modern Woodmen of America, and his political activities are confined to the Democratic party. His recreations are of the healthy, out-door sort, particularly hunting and fishing, and his many trophies of the gun trail are objects of pride to himself and of interest to his many friends.

On June 25, 1912, Mr. Taylor was married to Miss Ivy Lee Davison, of East Helena, Montana. Mrs. Taylor is a native of Montana, born at Twin Bridges on January 25, 1886, and the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Asa Lee Davison. Dr. Davison was engaged in the practice of his profession in Madison and Beaverhead counties for several years, and he died at Weiser, Idaho, in 1897. Mrs. Taylor is the third child in the family of five children born to her parents, the other four residing in East Helena. She was graduated from the Montana State Normal College with the class of 1905, and from that time has been a successful teacher in the public schools of the state. She has membership in the Methodist church, and in the Rebekah and Yeoman lodges.

MRS. BLANCHE BRINTON KIENITZ. Perhaps there is no one profession that makes heavier demands on the vitality than that of an educator. Mind and body are both taxed and every faculty is engaged either in imparting knowledge or in exercising authority, for it is a sad fact that in many cases parents not only expect the brains of their children to be developed, but that their physical welfare should be carefully regarded, and their manners and morals looked after. The ordinary teacher has, thus, his time fully occupied, while the extraordinary one is compelled to bear a still further strain. Added to the long period of necessary and technical preparation, is generally the possession of such a teacher, of a high sense of personal duty and a loftier idea of scholarship than is altogether comprehended by his pupils, and while he succeeds in bringing the general standard very high, it sometimes is at the expense of the educator's health and strength. Nevertheless, so enjoyable to an earnest, conscientious teacher is the realization of the stimulation he has given to inquiring minds, and, perhaps, of the awakening he has brought about of latent talents, that today, particularly in America, may be found men and women who willingly and gladly give their lives to this ennobling work. Undoubtedly, though, in order to be unusually successful, a natural gift for teaching must be inherent, and in this connection mention should be made of Mrs. Blanche Brinton Kienitz, principal of the schools of Libby, Montana, and a teacher whose work has materially advanced the standards of education in this part of the state.

Mrs. Blanche Brinton Kienitz was born at Brighton, Iowa, October 7, 1885, a daughter of Thomas and Hester (Smith) Brinton, the former a native of Iowa and the latter of Ohio. Her father was for many years engaged in agricultural pursuits in the vicinity of Brighton, where he now makes his home at the age of fifty-five years, being retired from active pursuits. Mrs. Brinton who was taken by her parents to Iowa when a child, also resides in Brighton, and is fifty years of age. There were five children in their family, namely: Ray, Vera, Eugene, Harry and Blanche.

The primary education of Mrs. Kienitz was secured in the public schools of Brighton, where she early displayed a thirst for knowledge far above the ordinary, and an alert mind that was receptive to all problems, she invariably standing among the leaders of her classes. In 1903 she was graduated from the Brighton high school, after leaving which she took a course at Drake University, receiving her diploma in 1908. In the meantime she had taught primary and graded schools and was then advanced to the high school in Iowa, but in 1908, after some preparation in the higher branches came to Libby and taught until 1910. By that time too close application to her work had impaired her health and strength, and she was compelled to return to her Iowa home, but in 1911, refreshed in bodily and mental vigor, she returned to Libby to accept the principalship of the Libby schools, where she has two hundred and thirty-three pupils under her charge. Mrs. Kienitz has continued to hold her official position with great and increasing acceptance to the present time, and while it would be invidious and inaccurate to attribute leadership in accomplishment to one school or another, it may be stated without fear of contradiction that under her wise and efficient administration the schools of Libby have taken front rank with those of any other city of their size in the state.

Mrs. Kienitz is a member of the P. E. O. Society and of the Daughters of Rebekah, and attends the Christian church. Fond of the arts and literature, she is widely known in literary circles in Libby and as a woman of culture and refinement has numerous friends in society, both here and in her home city in Iowa.

She was married in Spokane, Washington, on June 1, 1912, to W. F. Kienitz, of Libby, Montana.

JAMES M. DAWSON. The town of Polson on the southern shores of Flathead lake is one of the localities of northwestern Montana to which the modern spirit of improvement and development has brought many changes within recent years, and as a business and municipal center it is in advance of many places of larger population.

The present mayor of Polson is Mr. James M. Dawson, an enterprising young business man, who has led the way for much of this recent progress. Since taking office twelve blocks of concrete walks and street curbs have been constructed, tree planting has assisted toward the town beautiful, and at this writing the mayor and citizens are planning sewer construction and other improvements.

Mr. Dawson, who began his career a poor boy and has gained success through his own efforts, was born in Topeka, Kansas, September 29, 1877, being next to the youngest in a family of eight, four sons and four daughters. The father, James M., Sr., a native of Illinois, was a Kansas pioneer of 1856, was a farmer by occupation, served a short time in the Civil war, and died in 1883 aged fifty-two years. The mother, who is now a resident of northern Washington, was Nancy S. Cousins, a native of western Virginia, but was reared in Terre Haute, Indiana, where she was married.

Mr. Dawson was reared and educated in his native city of Topeka, where he graduated from the high school with the class of 1897, afterwards taking a course in the Topeka business college. He then entered the Williams Institute of Embalming at Kansas City, his diploma from that institution being dated January 20, 1898. For two years he followed his profession with Shellabarger & Son at Topeka, and then a year with W. B. Raymond at Kansas City. From there he came west and was engaged in the real estate business at Spokane for a time. In November, 1908, he established the first furniture and undertaking business at Polson, where he has been successful in business and has ever since taken an active part in the public life of this community.

He served a year in the council and then in April, 1911, was elected mayor for a term of two years. He was the second president of the Polson Chamber of Commerce, having succeeded W. H. B. Carter in that office. He is affiliated with the Mission Lodge No. 86, I. O. O. F., the Rebekahs, and the Polson Camp No. 9111, M. W. A.

On June 25, 1912, Mr. Dawson married Miss L. Blanche Klingensmith of Spokane, Washington. She is a native of Pennsylvania, coming to Spokane with her parents in 1888, and received her education in the Spokane schools. Mrs. Dawson possesses the true western spirit and is an enthusiastic and boosting citizen of Montana.

Mr. Dawson's younger brother, Martin L., has been associated with him in business both at Spokane and in Polson. Martin L. Dawson married, in November, 1911, Miss Wilmetta Sterrett, daughter of a wholesale seed merchant of Walla Walla.

The ancestry of Mr. Dawson on the paternal side was English and Irish, and on the maternal side Scotch and German, but this branch of the Dawson family has been for many generations resident in America. Thomas Dawson, the grandfather, was colonel of a regiment in the Black Hawk war.

ARTHUR J. LOCHRIE. Arthur J. Lochrie is a native of Murray, Iowa, having been born there, February 7, 1886, and received his education in the public schools until he had reached the age of fourteen and then entered upon a business career in the bank of Simmons and Company, of Murray, Iowa. He remained there for three and one-half years, and in 1904 was transferred to the main bank of the firm at Osceola, Iowa, as cashier of that institution. In 1909 he was proffered the cashiership of the Drummond (Mont.) State Bank, with the understanding that if he could increase the business of that institution in six months his salary would be increased and he would be given an assistant. He was successful before the allotted time expired. Upon the organization of the United States National Bank at Deer Lodge, in the fall of 1910, he was proffered the cashiership of that institution and accepted its responsibilities. Mr. Lochrie has already been the direct means of bringing new business men into Deer Lodge and has gained the entire confidence of the community. His success as a financier is established. He was one of the youngest men in the history of banking to fill the important position he occupies.

Fraternally, Mr. Lochrie is a Mason. He is also a member of the Knights of Pythias and has held the chair of senior deacon. In politics he is a Republican.

The father of the subject of this sketch, George Lochrie, is a native of Scotland. He came to the United States at the age of fourteen. During the Civil war he was a Federal cavalry officer in an Illinois regiment. He was for years in the real estate and insurance business, ranking among the big six agents for The Hawkeye Insurance Company of Iowa, but is now retired from active work and lives at Murray, Iowa. The mother was Addie M. Geer, a native of Illinois and now residing at Murray. There were eight children in this family: Warren G. Lochrie, living in Kansas; Grace, now Mrs. Nicholas Hoffman of Murray, Iowa; Mayme, the widow of Dr. J. F. Hasty, of Des Moines, Iowa; Carl and Harry, who succeeded to their father's large real estate and insurance business in Murray; Ardie, who lives in Murray, and Helen who also resides in that place.

Arthur J. Lochrie is a man of exceptional business ability. He has already had a remarkable career in this line and all who know him prophecy that his future will be one of eminence and success.

VIRGIL J. GHISOLPHY. In the twenty-two years of Virgil J. Ghisolphy's life in America he has had an opportunity to become familiar with it in the east and in the west. The east held him first on his arrival here, then he tried his fortunes in the west, where he engaged in business. Subsequently he returned east, to New York, but not being satisfied with his financial affairs there he again came west and since 1900 Montana has represented his home. The high degree of success he has reached in the musical instrument business in Great Falls is sufficient guaranty of his future and continued residence here, and the city is quite as fortunate in its possession of a man of his qualities as he is in the prosperity he has enjoyed here.

Born in Cremona, Italy, July 23, 1866, Virgil J. Ghisolphy is the son of Charles Ghisolphy and Carrie (Carini) Ghisolphy, both natives of that country. The father was born in 1833 and died in 1909 at the age of seventy-six years. He was a carpenter and contractor in his native land. The mother died in Italy at the age of sixty-seven years, in 1899. They were the parents of five children, all of whom remained in Italy with the exception of Virgil J. of this review. The others are Caesar, Ernest, Liza and Mariana.

Mr. Ghisolphy entered the Italian army when he was sixteen years of age, serving until he was twenty-five. When he left the army he came to America, New York City, in the nature of things, being his first stop. He remained there a short time, playing in bands and orchestras, having learned to play while in the army. In 1891, January 1, he went to San Francisco and in 1893 engaged in the grocery business. He was successful in that line, and continued until 1898, when he sold out and returned to New York, there becoming a member of the brass band of the Seventy-first Regiment there, and continuing through the summer. In the winter he opened a grocery, but the generous success which had attended his efforts in San Francisco was withheld from him in New York and in six months time he failed utterly, losing everything he owned. He left New York again for the west, stopping for a short time in Salt Lake, and moving on to San Francisco, there remaining for two years. During that time he was engaged playing in bands and orchestras, being also assistant leader of the orchestra on the battleship Iowa. After two years he went on to Spokane, and it was there he met the girl whom he had known and who became his wife. After his marriage, which took place in May, 1900, he came to Great Falls, where he was engaged to play in the Black Eagle Brass Band, also being employed at the same time as a sampler at the Boston & Montana Smelter. After a short time he saw an opportune opening in the city and he established the Western Music House in April, 1907, which he has since conducted with a large degree of success. In addition to maintaining this establishment, Mr. Ghisolphy still plays in the band, and is active in all that pertains to musical affairs in the city. He is regarded as one of the substantial citizens of Great Falls, and as such his place is most secure.

Mr. Ghisolphy is a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, the Modern Woodmen of America, the Fraternal Order of Eagles and the Fraternal Brotherhood. He is a Republican in his political views, and a member of the Roman Catholic church. He is one of the well-known men of Great Falls, and is regarded as one of the most successful.

The marriage of Mr. Ghisolphy took place on May 24, 1900, in Spokane, his bride being Miss Minnie Finster. Four children have been born of their union,—Adeleine, born on August 12, 1902; Florence, born August 24, 1904; Irene, born October 24, 1907, and Virgil Charles, Jr., born on Christmas day, 1911. The two older girls attend the Great Falls schools and are bright and attractive young children, as are the younger ones, who have not yet attained school age.

JOHN H. ALVORD. It is indeed fitting that a work of this nature should contain mention of John H. Alvord, of Dillon, than whom no young lawyer of this part of the state shows greater promise, his strength and ability, as already shown, presaging a future of usefulness and distinction. By the circumstances of birth Mr. Alvord is a Californian, his life record having begun on November 15, 1880, at El Rio, Ventura county, that state. He remained a citizen of his native town until about twenty-two years of age, when he removed to Palo Alto, where he resided for five years and then removed to San Francisco, which for one year ensuing was the scene of his activities. His identification with Dillon dates from the month of November, 1909, when he first began his practice of the law in this city. He is associated here with C. W. Robison, one of the leading lawyers of the state of many years' practice, and the two form a remarkably strong combination of legal talent, in his short residence here Mr. Alvord having already been connected and successfully with much important litigation.

Mr. Alvord's parents were pioneers of California, his mother arriving there as a child after a trip across the plains by ox team. His father, a native of New York, began life as a school teacher in the Golden state, and later went into agriculture. Their marriage occurred in that state and the issue of their union were five sons, Mr. Alvord, of this review, being the eldest in order of birth. John Alvord received his elementary education in the public schools of the district in which his boyhood was passed and was graduated from the high school of Ventura, California. He received his higher education and professional preparation in Leland Stanford, Junior, University, from which he received his degree. He was ambitious to secure a good education and gave that fine concentration to his studies which is the result of working one's own way through college, for that was the condition of his education. He is a member of the Universalist church, and finds great pleasure in good literature and music, being by no means fitted for "treason, stratagem and spoils." He enjoys out-door life and sports, his enthusiasms being hunting, fishing and lawn tennis. He is a member of the Beaverhead Club and formerly served as its secretary. Like the typical young westerner, he takes an active interest in politics, giving heart and hand to the cause of the Democratic party. Dillon is indeed to be congratulated upon the possession of a young citizen of such alertness, uprightness and ability.

JAMES S. WATSON. There is an irresistible fascination about railroad life that appeals to many men, and an interest in the work that seems to hold those who have once engaged in it so that they remain loyal to it all their lives. Mr. James S. Watson, who is at present freight agent for the Great Northern Railway Company in Billings, is one of those who began as telegraph operator when a young man and has ever since been engaged in some department of railroad work in various parts of the country.

Mr. Watson was born at Mattoon, Coles county, Illinois, August 25, 1869, the son of John F. and Sarah A. Watson, both of whom were native Kentuckians. The father was born in Hardin county in 1834, and his father, James Watson, was owner of a large plantation there. John F. spent his early life on the plantation and was given a college education. After completing his studies he went to Illinois, locating at Mattoon, and there met and married his first wife, who was the mother of James S. Watson, the subject of this sketch, and who died when he was a very small child. The other two children born of that union died young. The elder Watson's second marriage was to Mrs. Julia Krebs, and she also bore three children. Roy R., is a quartermaster in the service of the United States government, stationed on the Panama canal work; Minnie, wife of Lee Walker, lives at Canton, Mississippi; and Fannie also lives at Canton, with her mother. The father was a carpenter and contractor throughout his life and a prominent citizen of the community in which he resided. Politically he was of Democratic faith. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity and a devout communicant of the Christian church. His demise occurred in 1897.

James S. Watson was educated in Mattoon, Illinois, where he attended public school and later took a course in the Mattoon Business College. When sixteen years old he began to utilize vacation seasons learning telegraphy in the Illinois Central office at Mattoon, this marking the beginning of his career in the railway service. In 1886 he went to Chicago and spent a year as operator in the Western Union office, then accepted a position in St. Paul, Minnesota, with the Eastern Minnesota Railway Company, now a part of the Great Northern System. He acted as operator, later as cashier and agent on this line at various points for a period extending to the year 1890, and then resigned to again enter the employ of the Western Union, this time at Superior, Wisconsin. A year later he left that position and spent one summer as clerk at Mammoth Hot Springs Hotel in Yellowstone Park, but returned in the fall to Superior and became connected with the Great Northern Railroad, Company. He was agent for this line at several points in Dakota during the succeeding years and in 1896 left Larimore, North Dakota, where he was then stationed, to go to Des Moines, Iowa, as traveling passenger and freight agent at that point. Two years later he was again transferred to the Dakota division and returned to Larimore as agent and yardmaster, remaining in that position a little over two years.

In 1899 Mr. Watson made his first and only deflection from railroad or telegraph work, when in that year he became a Larimore merchant. After three years' merchandising he decided to return to his old line of employment and accordingly entered the service of the Great Northern Railway, and was made yardmaster at Crookston, Minnesota. He remained but a short time, however, and in 1903 went to Auburn, Nebraska, and was agent at that point for the Missouri Pacific road until 1908. The following year he was agent for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy at Cody, Wyoming, but in the summer of 1909 went again to the Great Northern and was yardmaster and in charge of work trains at various points on that line, being stationed on the Butte division. Later he located at Billings and in the fall of 1909 accepted his present position as freight agent here. Mr. Watson has always been a faithful and conscientious worker and his services is in demand by those who once employed him. His standing with the various railroad companies is of the highest and the success he has achieved is wholly due to his own exertions and efficient talents.

He is popular in leading social and fraternal circles of this section and maintains various important lodge connections, among them being membership in Ashland Lodge, No. 29, A. F. & A. M., at Billings and Mount Carmel Commandery, No. 3, Knights Templars. He was a member of Brownville Chapter, No. 4, R. A. M. at Auburn, Nebraska, in 1907, but demitted and later affiliated with Billings Chapter, No. 6.

The marriage of Mr. Watson to Marie Loe, took place October 14, 1896. Mrs. Watson is a native of Mabel, Fillmore county, Minnesota, and the daughter of a prosperous farmer of that locality. She was the only daughter of the family, but has four brothers, Louis, Charles, Oscar and Albert. Mr. and Mrs. Watson are the parents of two children, Lucile Marie and Esther May.

HERBERT O. HARRIS has in less than three years' time made rapid strides in the expanding and development of the mercantile business which he established in Great Falls in September, 1909. He has proved himself to be the possessor of unusual talent for the business to which he is devoted, and it is certain that he has all the qualities which make for distinctive success in the business world. Great Falls knows him as one of her most popular and progressive men, and his place in the community is one of no little importance and power.

Mr. Morris was born in Aurora, Illinois, in July, 1863. He is the son of Charles and Betsey (Sheldon) Harris. The father was born in Canada and came to Aurora with his parents as a child. They were among the pioneer families of Aurora and that section of the state. Charles Harris moved to Iowa in middle life and engaged in horse-trading, in which he was especially successful. He was of an adventurous spirit, and was one of the early forty-miners to make the trip to the gold fields of California, crossing the plains with a prairie schooner. He died while yet in his young manhood, being but forty years of age. Seven children were born to Charles and Betsey Harris, of which number Herbert O. was the second born. He received his education in the schools of Manchester, Iowa, to which place his parents moved when he was seven years of age. After finishing school the young man made his way to Montana and located at Billings, engaging in the ranching business near there, taking employment with the Darrel Cattle Company of Chicago on their ranch about fifty-five miles west of Billings. Mr. Harris spent seven and a half years thus occupied, at the end of that time returning to Iowa and taking up farming. The west attracted him still, however, and in 1889 he returned to Montana, where he was variously engaged until 1899. In that year he went to Dakota and became occupied with the real estate business, where he remained until 1909. In that year he again sought Montana as the field of his labors, and he entered a business arrangement with Mr. Arkel, the result of which was the mercantile establishment which was opened in September, 1909, and which, since the day of its inception to the present time, has been in a constant state of expansion and growth. It is easily one of the finest stores in Great Falls today, and enjoys a most flattering patronage, while the excellent management of Mr. Harris amply insures the financial success of the concern.

Mr. Harris is actively connected with various industries of his community, as well as in his old home in Iowa, and he is prominent in business and social circles in and about Great Falls. He is a Master Mason, having taken the third degree in Masonry, and is a member of the Modern Woodmen. He is a member of the Universalist church, and is an independent Democrat in his political views. He has served his town as treasurer.

On October 12, 1884, Mr. Harris was united in marriage with Miss Mary H. Arkell of Billings, Montana. No children have come into their home.

PETER E. CARRIER. One of the first men to appreciate the possibilities of the newly-opened and yet vacant townsite of Hingham, was Mr. P. E. Carrier, who has been the first and only postmaster of that now thriving town, and has been closely identified with its business development from the beginning. He was the third resident of the town and was the first to give practical effect to his faith in the future by erecting a building there. His substantial building was designed for a hotel, and he has been proprietor since its opening and has come to know, as landlord, nearly every permanent inhabitant who at some time or other has been the guest of his hostelry.

Mr. Carrier has had a long and prosperous business career, and is one of the forceful and public-spirited citizens of northwestern Montana. He was born on a farm in Houston county, Minnesota, July 5, 1863, and as a boy attended district school during three months in the year and got practical training as a farmer during the remaining months. Even while a boy he became a close student of agriculture, mastered the art of soil analysis and became an expert in farm machinery, and on arriving at maturity rented a farm and engaged in farming on a very successful scale. He soon went out to South Dakota, where he preempted a quarter section, but the soil not being adapted to his purposes, he returned to his native state and continued farming as a renter four years.

His enterprise had already given him a good start in practical affairs, and his next venture was to take charge of a large force of men who were surfacing the roadbed of the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound line from Savanna, Minnesota, to St. Paul. This task required four years, and at its conclusion he bought land in Twin Valley, Minnesota, where he erected a building and was engaged in the meat business for two years. He was in the same business at Knox, North Dakota, a year, and then took up a quarter section of land at Williston, North Dakota, which he proved up in 1906, and on which he had engaged very successfully as a farmer. During that time he had also bought a meat market at Ray, North Dakota, in a prosperous community, and did a thriving business there until he met with a serious accident. With two ribs and a shoulder broken, he was so disabled that he could not attend to business for some time. He consequently sold out and returned to Knox, North Dakota, where he built a hotel and was landlord there until 1909.

His thoughts had already been turned toward the northwest of Montana, a region as yet undeveloped and with splendid natural resources. In 1909 he came out along the Great Northern as far as the townsite of Hingham, his purpose being to file a claim for land in this section. As he was already a beneficiary from the homestead laws, he found that he could not again be a claimant, so his enterprise was turned into another direction. He bought some real estate on the new townsite, which was then in the midst of a vast prairie, and his building was the first real improvement. Then on the first day of January, 1910, he received appointment as postmaster, and has since had charge of the local mail service in addition to his hotel and other business affairs. He is the owner of some fine farming land in this vicinity, and does an extensive real estate business. As a citizen of Montana he has prospered from a material point of view, and is one of the most loyal and enthusiastic of the state's residents. He has long been an active worker in Republican politics, and is one of the leading Republicans of this portion of the state. He twice filled the office of justice of the peace in Anamoose, North Dakota, and in that capacity had some trying and also amusing experiences in imposing fines on the proprietors of the local "blind pigs." He has taken an active part in promoting the three-year homestead law, in the interest of which he has kept up a continuous correspondence with his congressman, and the measure has received the consideration of congress.

Mr. Carrier is a member of the Congregational church. He has all his life been an active man, and outside of business has found recreation and pleasure in hunting and fishing. He has hunted big game throughout the northwest country. He is a generous, high-minded citizen, and by his own character and personality has gained an influential place in his community.

Mr. Carrier was married at Caledonia, Houston county, Minnesota, December 5, 1887, to Miss Ruth Simpson, daughter of Alexander Simpson, one of the pioneers of Minnesota. The four children born to their marriage are as follows: Mrs. Estella Sauter, now a resident of Hingham, who was born in Houston county, April 7, 1891; Elmer, born at LaCrosse, Wisconsin, August 27, 1893, now in business with his father; Bessie, now attending school, born in Norman county, Minnesota, November, 1897; and Floyd, born October 15, 1900, in Norman county, Minnesota.

Mr. Carrier's parents were William and Mary (Lewis) Carrier, the former a native of Pennsylvania and the latter of Hardin county, Ohio. The mother died in Minnesota in 1889 at the age of sixty. The father was a child when his family moved to Ohio, and he was married in Hardin county, after which he moved to Wisconsin and then to Houston county, Minnesota, where he was an early settler. He was a farmer, and during the Civil war enlisted at Fort Snelling, and served with Sherman's army and later in the campaign ending in the capture of Hood's army near Nashville. He died on January 16, 1910, at the advanced age of eighty-two years.

LARS M. LERBERG. Many of the more capable and thriving business men of the Rocky Mountain states are of foreign birth and breeding, Norway furnishing the United States with some of its best and brightest citizens. Noteworthy among this number is L. M. Lerberg, a prosperous general merchant of Concord, Chouteau county. A son of Martin Lerberg, he was born, December 13, 1884, in Ringerick, Norway, where his earlier years were spent.

Having acquired a practical common school education in his native country, L. M. Lerberg began work on a farm. Desiring a more promising field of labor, he left home at the age of seventeen years, and, following in the pathway previously trod by so many of his fellow-countrymen, he came to the United States, joining friends at Ellendale, Minnesota, where he remained four years, becoming accustomed in the meantime to the ways of the new country. He subsequently spent sometime in North Dakota, clerking in stores in different places. Deciding to engage in business on his account, Mr. Lerberg came to Montana, locating, in May, 1910, in Concord, where he has since been actively and successfully engaged in mercantile pursuits, having built up a large and lucrative trade as a general merchant, his store being stocked with a choice line of goods.

Mr. Lerberg married, August 17, 1910, Miss Mabel Onnlane, of Grand Forks, North Dakota, a very pleasant and most estimable young lady. In his political affiliations Mr. Lerberg is a consistent Republican true to the religious faith in which he was reared, he is a member of the Lutheran church. He is fond of pleasure excursions to the woods or streams, taking great delight in both hunting and fishing.

ALBERT J. SCHMIDT. It is with particular gratification that the historian records the annals of a man whose advance to success has been accomplished by his own steady, determined endeavor. Albert J. Schmidt, was born November 10, 1880, in Travers county, Minnesota. His early education was in the country schools, of which he had taken thorough and conscientious advantage. He has never weakened in his determination to make a worthy name and fortune.

Well knowing that knowledge is power, he secured the next stage of his education in books and life by study in the state normal school at St. Cloud, Minnesota. He thereafter entered the University of Minnesota, where he completed a course in law. Realizing that the inexperienced lawyer has a period of waiting and of financial unproductivity, Mr. Schmidt conquered that difficulty to some extent and gave pecuniary hostage to the future by taking a homestead in North Dakota. In 1905 he began the practice of his profession at Des Lacs, North Dakota, combining it with a loan business in the same place. He also carried on extensive grain-growing operations at Des Lacs, where he still retains extensive interests. His property holdings there include one thousand six hundred acres of farming land, one thousand of which are now under cultivation.

In 1909 Mr. Schmidt made a change of location, coming to Fort Benton, where he became associated with Grover C. Schmidt, a brother, as is elsewhere stated in this series of articles. He has rapidly made his way to the respect and popularity accorded him by Fort Benton citizens. He is now vice-president of the Farmers' State Bank of Des Lacs. In civic and political affairs he has been ever actively interested. On September 11, 1911, he was appointed assistant prosecuting attorney of Fort Benton and he is at present, in 1912, a candidate for alderman. Mr. Schmidt's biography at present can provide no details of a domestic nature, for he is as yet unmarried. He is, nevertheless, an important acquisition to the citizenship and public affairs of Fort Benton.

Geo. W. Hendershott

GROVER C. SCHMIDT. Prominent among the leaders of the business world of Fort Benton, Montana, is Grover C. Schmidt, senior member of the firm of Schmidt Brothers & Greely. He is an aggressive, clear headed type of the modern American business man, and his success has been won by his own efforts, and in the winning his methods have always been upright and honorable. The firm of which he is a member has a reputation for legal ability and authoritative knowledge, especially along the line of their specialty, which is all law pertaining to real estate and lands which is unsurpassed in the state of Montana. In addition to his large practice he also is interested in newspaper work and is in the real estate business on his own account. He has done much for the city of which he is a resident, and in whatever line he interests himself, his interest is certain to benefit the matter in hand, and he is an ardent advocate of every measure that tends to benefit the city and her people.

Grover C. Schmidt was born in Traverse county, Minnesota, on September 16, 1885. His father is Jacob H. Schmidt, who now resides in Chokio, Minnesota, where he is a prosperous merchant. He is a native of Germany and came to this country about 1871, first settling in Wisconsin. He married Mary A. Snyder, a native of Wisconsin. Ten children were born to Jacob H. Schmidt and his wife, of whom Grover C. Schmidt was the fifth. The latter was first sent to the Prairie public schools and later attended the public schools at Chokio, and the Brown's Valley high school, where his elementary education was completed, his graduation from this school taking place in 1906. He then entered Hamline University at St. Paul, Minnesota, where he remained for some time before matriculating in the law department of the University of North Dakota, from which he was graduated in 1909. In the fall of this year he removed to Fort Benton, Montana, and there entered the practice of law, forming a partnership with his brother, Albert J. Schmidt, the firm being known as Schmidt & Schmidt. They soon began to do the greater share of their work in legal questions concerning land, and presently developed a large practice. From this it was easy to drift into the real estate, insurance and loan business, and in this business the firm was known as Schmidt Brothers & Greely, W. T. Greely being the other member of the firm. On the first of April, 1910, Schmidt Brothers & Greely established the Chouteau County Independent, a weekly newspaper. The policy of this paper is Independent Republican, and the circulation in so short a time has risen to eight hundred. Similar success has attended Mr. Schmidt in his law practice, the firm of which he is a member doing the largest amount of business in this line of any law firm in the state. Mr. Schmidt has considerable money invested in real estate, owning 520 acres of land in township 23, range 8, in Chouteau county, part of which is under cultivation.

Politically, Mr. Schmidt is a Republican, but he has never taken an active part. He is unmarried.

GEORGE W. HENDERSHOTT. The hustling little city of Lavina, Montana, has many successful business enterprises which are being conducted by progressive, alert and public-spirited young men, but none have gained a greater amount of prestige than that of Renshaw & Hendershott, which, although in existence only a short time, is already recognized as an important factor in the commercial life of the community. The senior member of this concern, George W. Hendershott, who has charge of the real estate and loans department, has been the architect of his own fortunes since he was a lad in knee trousers, and the prominent position which he holds among the business men of this section has been gained entirely through the medium of his own efforts. He was born December 10, 1879, in Clermont, Fayette county, Iowa, and is a son of William and Flora (Shaffer) Hendershott, natives of Iowa, where they resided until 1909, since which time they have lived on a ranch in the Musselshell country in Montana. There were fourteen children in the family, of whom thirteen still survive, George W. being the fourth in order of birth, while three other sons and five daughters also live in Montana, as follows: Tilden H., Charles and Victor B., of Lavina; Jennie B., who married William Drummond and resides in this city; and Sadie L., Rebecca, Ruth and Ora, residing at home.

George W. Hendershott attended the public schools and high schools of his native state, and when about fourteen years of age began earning money at whatever occupation he could find. He subsequently took a teacher's examination, which he passed successfully, and for six years was engaged in teaching in Iowa, but gave up the profession of educator to engage in the confectionery business. In 1909 he left the state of his nativity and came to Montana, settling in Lavina and engaging in the confectionery and restaurant business, but after two years sold his interest therein and engaged in real estate operations, realizing the fact that this section was soon to become a great agricultural, commercial and industrial center. In January, 1912, a partnership was formed with F. E. Renshaw, under the firm style of Renshaw & Hendershott, and a general law, real estate, loan and insurance business is now carried on. Mr. Renshaw doing the legal work for the firm, while Mr. Hendershott takes care of the other end of the business. A progressive, alert and energetic business man, he has so conducted his operations as to benefit his community, realizing that the success of his business will be commensurate with the development and advancement of all lines of endeavor in Lavina. As a consequence, movements of a beneficial nature have found in him a stalwart adherent, and he has been a prime mover in advancing the settlement of this section. When he has found time from his business cares he has taken recreation in the form of hunting and fishing, horseback riding and automobiling, and he is also fond of theatrical performances, lectures and speeches. Fraternally, he is connected with the Odd Fellows and the Modern Woodmen of America, in both of which he has held office, while in political matters he is a Democrat, and as one of the leading men of his community was appointed to the office of justice of the peace, in which he is giving universal satisfaction, and is now state central committeeman from Musselshell county.

WILLIAM C. POULSSON, who as organizer and secretary and treasurer of the Missouri River Lumber Company has been an important factor in the development of Fort Benton's industrial resources, was born at Christiania, Norway, June 17, 1860, and is a son of Lauritz and Eleanor Elizabeth (Chambers) Poulsson. His father, a native of Norway, and a member of a well-known and historic family of that country, was born in 1828, and died in 1893, his business career having been spent as agent for a large London grocery concern. Mrs. Poulsson was born in 1832, at Newcastle on Tyne, England, survives her husband, and resides at Christiania. Their four children were: W. C.; Esther-dahl, residing in Norway; John, both well-known wood pulp manufacturers of that country; and Margareth Isabella, also living there.

W. C. Poulsson was given a collegiate education in his native land, and as a young man went to England and engaged in the mercantile business, continuing there until he reached his twenty-first year. At that time he came to the United States, and for one and one-half years was identified with a large mercantile house, subsequently going to Minneapolis, Minnesota for a short period. His next location was Fargo, North Dakota, but in 1884 he removed from that city and went to Mayville, North Dakota, conducting a general store and hardware business until 1896, and from that year until 1909 identifying himself with the lumber business at the same point. Believing that he could find a larger field for his operations in Montana, Mr. Poulsson came to this state in 1909, seeking a location, and ultimately chose the city of Fort Benton, where, with a business associate, Mr. Elkins, he established the Missouri River Lumber Company in January, 1910. This has developed into one of the leading enterprises of its kind in the state, and now maintains branches at Loma, Geyser and Spion Kop, all doing an extensive business. Mr. Poulsson is regarded as one of the enterprising and substantial citizens of Fort Benton, and as a business man of distinct sagacity and executive ability, having materially contributed to the upbuilding of the city, in whose advancement he maintains a public-spirited interest. He is a Republican in politics, but has not entered the public arena, although while a resident of North Dakota he served as a member of the normal school board from 1894 to 1898. He belongs to the Lumbermen's Association, the Order of Hoo-Hoos and has attained to the Shriner degree in Masonry. His religious belief is that of the Episcopal church.

In August, 1884, Mr. Poulsson was married at Kilbourn, Wisconsin, to Miss Mary Elizabeth Halberson, and they have four children: Mrs. Eleanor Elizabeth Best, born in 1886, at Kilbourn, Wisconsin, and now a resident of Chicago, Illinois, with one son, William Poulsson Best; Olive Georgia, born in Mayville, North Dakota, and now the wife of Lyle K. Miller, of Fort Benton; Miss Lillian, born in 1891, at Mayville, an able young business woman, who is her father's assistant; and Miss Marguerite, born in 1896, at Mayville, and now a student of the Fort Benton high school.

ROBERT LEE TAFT. Wide-awake and enterprising, Robert Lee Taft has achieved distinction in the financial circles of Teton county, being widely and favorably known as a director and the cashier of the First National Bank of Cut Bank, a position which he has filled most efficiently and satisfactorily for upwards of three years. He was born in Northfield, Minnesota, October 22, 1882, and was there brought up and educated.

His father, Charles A. Taft, a native of the Empire state, followed the trend of civilization westward when young, locating in Rice county, Minnesota, near Northfield, in the early forties. He was for many years one of the most successful and respected farmers of that locality. Having acquired a competency in his agricultural labors, he is now living retired in Montana, near Cut Bank. His wife, whose maiden name was Rosalia E. Bowe, was born, reared, and married in Ohio, where her birth occurred about 1842, in the same year that her husband was born. Of their union, eight children have been born, six sons and two daughters, as follows: Ernest R., Guy H., Charles H., Severnius K., Robert L., Ara B., Mrs. Sylvia R. Akerman, and Mrs. Grant Slocum.

Completing his early education in the public schools, R. L. Taft was for two and one-half years a telegraph operator at a small station on the Northern Pacific Railway. Going then to North Dakota, he was for two years assistant cashier of the National Bank at McHenry, North Dakota, the ensuing year he was employed in a bank at Kensal, that state; and the next three years was cashier of a banking institution in Columbus, North Dakota. Coming from there to Montana in 1909, Mr. Taft has since been cashier, and one of the directors of the First National Bank of Cut Bank, a position of trust and responsibility that he is filling with credit to himself, and to the entire satisfaction of all concerned. He is prominent and popular both in business and social affairs, and delights in athletic sports of all kinds.

Fraternally Mr. Taft is a member of Cut Bank Lodge, No. 82, Ancient, Free and Accepted Order of Masons, and is now serving as its secretary; and also belongs to the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He is a Republican in politics, and a Presbyterian in religion.

Mr. Taft married, January 1, 1910, Ragna Kragerud, of Pelican Rapids, Minnesota, and they have one child, Helen Ruth Taft, whose birth occurred January 22, 1911.

HENRY A. DYKE, the secretary-treasurer and manager of the Montana Culvert Company, was born in Stowe, Vermont, October 7, 1854. While he was still an infant, his parents moved to Wisconsin where they lived until he was about twenty-one years of age.

Then he went on the road as a commercial salesman and special representative of the Osborne Harvester Company. He traveled all over these United States, Canada, England, New Zealand, Australia, and other countries, looking after foreign agencies of the company.

He continued in this capacity for six years, and then he made a connection with a wholesale house in Omaha where he had charge of the credit department. From here he went to Chicago and took a position as manager and secretary of a large corporation. After this he followed various occupations, chiefly as special representative of eastern corporations.

He then came west and made his headquarters at Portland and Spokane. His business there brought him into Montana and that is how he became a permanent resident of the state.

Mr. Dyke came to Missoula in 1909 and organized the Montana Culvert Company, of which he is secretary, treasurer and manager. It is the only institution of its kind in the state and operates over a vast territory. This great company was built up entirely through Mr. Dyke's personal efforts.

Mr. Dyke's early education was obtained in the district school in Green Lake county, Wisconsin, the high school at Berlin, Wisconsin, and finally at a business college at Oshkosh, Wisconsin.

From his earliest years Mr. Dyke was never afraid to work and owes his business in life to his own energy and enterprise. When he was a boy of twelve years he earned two dollars a day by following a cradler in the harvest field. After this he learned the painters' trade and confined his efforts to scenery and high class fancy work. He followed this trade successfully until he was twenty-one years of age when he was forced to quit on account of ill health.

In religion M. Dyke has a leaning toward the Baptist church. He is a member of various organizations. He belongs to the Elks, he is a Mason and has filled every office in this organization. He is also a Knight of Pythias and has filled various offices in this lodge.

He is a Republican and takes an exceedingly active part in political affairs, in fact he is one of the party fighters.

Mr. Dyke is a baseball fan and never fails to root for his favorite team. He likes outdoor sports such as hunting and fishing, and is an intense lover of horses. He says: "Next to home and family, give me a good horse." He takes great pleasure in reading, theatricals and music.

Mr. Dyke is married and has one daughter, Hazel Fae, in whom he takes great pride. She is a graduate of the Spokane high school and also of the sisters' academy at Missoula. She now resides at Spokane where she is a student of the academy. She won the first gold medal, the prize for the best scholar in English, in Montana.

In regard to Mr. Dyke's parents, his father, Josiah F. Dyke, was born in Vermont but is now leading a retired life in St. Paul, Minnesota. He was a farmer. In Vermont he married Miss Clarissa D. Bickford, who died in January, 1894, at the age of sixty-eight years. She is buried at Andover, South Dakota. There were four children in the elder Dyke family, of whom Mr. Henry A. Dyke was the oldest.

THE TETON COUNTY ABSTRACT COMPANY. HENRY D. AND JAMES T. ROBISON. Two wide-awake and energetic young men that are late additions to Montana citizenship are Henry D. Robison and James T. Robison, the former president and the latter secretary and treasurer of the Teton County Abstract Company, Incorporated. This company, organized and incorporated in 1909, is capitalized at $10,000 and is the only incorporated abstract company in Teton county. Equipped with a complete set of records of all lands and lots in the county and with the talent of two keen young business men at the head of its affairs, the company has already reached that strength where it commands nine-tenths of the business in their line. It is a part of business genius to be able to recognize opportunity when it presents itself and in this respect these brothers have not fallen short. Both are natives of Elma, Iowa. They are the sons of John G. Robison, who was born in Albert Lea, Minnesota, in 1858, and was but an infant when in 1859 his parents removed to northeastern Iowa and became the first settlers in their section of that state. The father was reared to farming and took up the same occupation as his own life pursuit. He died on April 11, 1900, when in the full strength of manhood, his age at death being forty-two years. Mary E. Smith, his wife, was born in the state of New York and came with her parents to Sioux county, Iowa, at the age of six years. They also were farmer people. John G. Robison and Mary E. Smith were married at Rock Rapids, Iowa, in March, 1886, and took up their residence together at Elmira, Iowa, where three sons were born to them, the two eldest being the subjects of this review and the youngest being Gaylord G. Robison, now with his mother at Elma.

Henry D. Robison was born October 13, 1888, and grew to young manhood in the vicinity of his birth. He was educated in the district schools of his locality and in the high school at Elma to the twelfth grade. Those acquirements were supplemented by a business course of study at Upper Iowa University, Fayette, Iowa. On November 6, 1908, he severed home ties and removed to Towner, North Dakota, where for eight months he was in the service of the McHenry Abstract Company and applied himself diligently to mastering the essential principles of the abstract business. From there he went to Choteau, Montana, where he at once established and had incorporated the business of which he is now the executive head and which has thrived so remarkably.

James T. Robison was born March 27, 1887, and attended the same schools as did his brother, including Upper Iowa University, where he also took the business course. Joining the latter in Choteau, Montana, on September 17, 1909, he at once took up his duties as secretary and treasurer of the Teton County Abstract Company and has contributed his share towards its success. During 1910 he served four months as deputy assessor of Teton county. He is a member of Choteau Lodge No. 44, Free and Accepted Masons, and of its auxiliary, the Order of the Eastern Star, and is patron of the latter order at Choteau. In church membership he affiliates with the Methodist Episcopal denomination. On March 7, 1912, at Mount Vernon, Washington, was solemnized his marriage to Miss Susan J. Crandall, a daughter of Ervin and Mary Crandall, both of whom are natives of Connecticut.

Both brothers are Republicans in politics. Each is proving up on a 160-acre farm about ten miles northeast of Choteau. They are there not only to avail themselves of the advantages which Montana offers, but to give in return the best of their ability and energy toward the development and progress of the community they have chosen as their home. They are capable, resourceful and enterprising young men and it is such men that are pushing rapidly the growth of this commonwealth.

CLARENCE D. POWELL, M. D., is a prosperous and talented young physician of Valier, in which place he located in October, 1909, immediately following his removal from North Dakota, where he had been engaged in practice for two years. Since coming to Valier he has been especially fortunate in his profession, handling his ever growing practice capably and creditably, and establishing a reputation for ability and winning the unalloyed esteem and confidence of the community at large.

Doctor Powell was born in Rockfield, Indiana, on August 26, 1880, and is the son of Dr. John W. and Sarah E. (Roop) Powell. The father was a native of Illinois and was a prominent physician in central Illinois for many years. He was a graduate of Rush Medical College of Chicago, and attained a high degree of efficiency in his profession during the years of his practice. He was ever a citizen of prominence and popularity, in whatever community he was found, and was a leader in every good work aiming at improved civic conditions and general advancement. The Powell family are of English descent, the original John E. Powell who established the family in America, being the father of John W. Powell and the grandfather of the subject. He settled in Utica early in the history of the country and the family later migrated to Illinois. He was a physician, and many of the name have graced the profession with the passing generations. The mother of Clarence D. Powell was a native of Indiana. She died at Finley, North Dakota, in 1907, at the age of forty-nine years. The father died in Peoria, Illinois, in 1897. They were the parents of two children,—Clarence, the first born, and Florence E., who became the wife of A. J. Heimark, a prosperous physician of Finley, North Dakota.

The son, Clarence, as a boy attended the schools of Peoria, Illinois, and was graduated from the local high school with the class of '98. He then attended Shattuck Military School at Faribault, Minnesota, for a year, after which he entered the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Chicago in 1901, and was graduated therefrom with the class of 1905. After his graduation Doctor Powell served in Chicago Hospital in Chicago, also in Milwaukee, as an interne, spending almost two years in this valuable training, after which he went to North Dakota and settled at Minnekaukan, in Benson county, where he entered into medical practice. He remained there for two years, enjoying a pleasing practice, and in October, 1909, went to Montana, settling shortly at Valier. He was the first physician to locate in the place, and his success here has been of a highly pleasing nature. He has won popularity and prominence and controls a large and ever increasing practice in the town while he is regarded as one of the solid citizens of the community.

The doctor is well pleased with the state of Montana, and has evidenced his faith in it by acquiring considerable property in and about Valier. He owns a valuable farm of one hundred and sixty acres eight miles from town and some city property as well.

On October 10, 1907, Doctor Powell was united in marriage with Miss Mayme Carlon, daughter of Eugene Carlon, native of Wisconsin. He is a prominent farmer of that state, who has now retired from the strenuous life of the husbandman and is living quietly in the city.

ROBERT FERGUSON, the present popular and efficient incumbent of the office of mayor of Conrad, Montana, has gained a position of distinctive priority as one of the representative members of the bar of Teton county, this state. He has gained success and prestige through his own endeavors and thus the more honor is due him for his earnest labors in his exacting profession and for the precedence he has gained in his chosen vocation. Since June, 1909, he has been a prominent and influential citizen of Conrad, his home having formerly been at Drayton, North Dakota.

In the province of Ontario, Canada, July 2, 1854, occurred the birth of Robert Ferguson, who is a son of Peter and Ellen (Robertson) Ferguson, both of whom were born in Scotland. The father immigrated to Canada in the year 1832 and he was engaged in the great basic industry of agriculture in Ontario during the remainder of his lifetime. He was called to eternal rest in 1874, at the age of sixty-five years. Mrs. Ferguson passed away in 1879, aged seventy years. Of the ten children born to them Robert was the youngest.

To the sturdy and invigorating influence of the old homestead farm Robert Ferguson was reared to adult age. He was graduated in the high school at Brussels, Ontario, and was a student in the Rockwood College for two years. At the age of twenty-one years he began to teach school and he followed that calling in Canada for a period of three years, at the end of which, in 1878, he removed to North Dakota, locating at Drayton, where he was principal of schools for the ensuing six years. After school hours and during all his spare time he studied law in the offices of H. D. Borden and he was admitted to the bar of North Dakota in 1889. Immediately after that event he initiated the active practice of his profession at Drayton, where he succeeded in building up a large and lucrative law clientage and where he resided until 1908. He was mayor of Drayton for two terms—from 1901 to 1905. From 1908 to 1909 he was in Oregon and in June of the latter year he came to Conrad. Here he is a member of the law firm of Ferguson & Gray and he and his partner have figured prominently in some of the most important litigations in this section of the state. In politics Mr. Ferguson is a Republican and in April, 1912, he was honored by his fellow citizens with election to the office of mayor of Conrad, on the Citizens' ticket. In addition to his legal work Mr. Ferguson is the owner of valuable farming lands in Teton county, his holdings amounting to 360 acres, a great deal of which is under cultivation. Fraternally, he is a Mason, a Yeoman and an Odd Fellow.

In 1887, in the city of Winnipeg, Canada, Mr. Ferguson was united in marriage to Miss Annie Milne, a daughter of James Milne, who was born and reared in Canada, as was also his wife, whose maiden name was Amie Milne. Mr. and Mrs. Ferguson are the proud parents of four children, whose names are here entered in respective order of birth: Vernon L., Maggie, Robert L. and James M. The Ferguson family are devout Presbyterians in their religious faith.

ALBERT BESANCON is of French parentage, as his name clearly indicates. His father, of French-Huguenot stock, was born in northern France, where he passed his young boyhood, coming to Pennsylvania in his youth. He spent several years in lumbering on the Allegheny and Ohio rivers, and later gave seven years of his life to the French and English armies, part of the time in Syria and China, but five years of the time being passed with an engineering corps in northern Africa. At Buffalo, New York, he married Catherine Bonhatol, an attractive young French woman of Huguenot ancestry, and they made their first home in Buffalo. Finding greater opportunities in Connecticut, they soon changed their residence to that state. Martin Besancon was a contractor and engaged in the charcoal and smelting business at Cornwall, Connecticut. The family remained in Cornwall until 1883, but he was discontented in the East and longed for the freedom of pioneer life in the West, and in 1882 he secured a small piece of land in Marshall county, Minnesota, and removed with his family to that place. The remaining years of his life he devoted to farming in northern Minnesota and later in western Washington, but his success, because of distances, poor crops and the severe climate during his early ventures in farming, was of a mediocre order, and he was unable to give his children more than the commonest educational advantages.

Albert Besancon was born at Cornwall Bridge, Connecticut, on February 21, 1875, and when in 1891 his mother died, the boy at the age of sixteen began to make his own way in the world. Motherless, with only a common school education, and with no other preparation for the trials and vicissitudes of life, the boy began his own education, and from that hour, by dint of supreme effort, he knew not failure. He realized from the first that education would be his greatest and most valuable asset in the battle of life, and this he set out to gain for himself. His determination never wavered, though beset with many hardships. He first completed a business course in a commercial college, then spent six years in the University of North Dakota, from the law department of which he was graduated in 1901, all of which he accomplished with no means other than what he was able to earn during that time and prior to his college career. His record, too, was a credit both to himself and to his alma mater. For more than eight years he practiced law in North Dakota, becoming one of the leading members of the bar and one of the foremost Democratic politicians of the state.

For two years Mr. Besancon was assistant states attorney and afterward held many an elective office of honor in the party ranks. In 1908 he was the choice of his party at a state convention for lieutenant governor, but did not seek the office, knowing the futility of attempting to be elected to the office at that time upon the Democratic ticket.

In 1909 Mr. Besancon moved to Missoula, Montana, and upon locating there almost immediately became recognized as a leading member of the bar. So soon did his ability become known that in 1910, having been a resident of the state for but a year, he was the candidate of his party for the office of county attorney. He has gained prominence in his profession, and the future promises him even greater success than he has known in the past.

The popularity of Mr. Besancon is not confined alone to political and legal circles. The Masonic order is proud to claim him as one of its leading members, and the Modern Woodmen have chosen him as their counsel for five years and sent him to represent them at their head camp in Buffalo, New York, in 1911, and also at Chicago in 1912. He is also a member of a number of other lodges and fraternities.

In 1906 Mr. Besancon was married to Miss Selma A. Peterson, a native daughter of Bismarck, North Dakota. Three years after their marriage they moved to Missoula, Montana, and they are now well known in the leading social circles of the city. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Besancon: Catherine S., Robert M. and Albert P., none of them as yet being old enough to attend school.

Mr. Besancon is a successful product of the new West, but it may perhaps be more to the point to say that it is such products of honest, capable and energetic young men that have brought success in such generous measure to the great new West.

MARTIN VETLESON is the son of Forjus Vetleson, a Norwegian Lutheran minister of the gospel who was born in Dane county, Wisconsin, in the early part of the nineteenth century. His ancestors came from Scandinavia to America settling at once in Wisconsin. The elder Mr. Vetleson passed away some years since and is buried beside his wife in the Otter Tail, Minnesota, cemetery. His entire life was devoted to the propagation of his faith in what was then known as the Northwest. Mrs. Vetleson, the mother of the subject of this sketch, was, prior to her marriage Miss Ingeborg Norman. She was a native of Wisconsin although of Norwegian ancestry.

Seven children were born to Mr. and Mrs. Vetleson, all of whom are now well settled in life. Carrie, the oldest daughter, married Mr. M. Berg, a prominent farmer of northern Minnesota. William offered his services to his country in the late Spanish-American war and was made a sergeant during his stay in the Philippines. He is now in Friendly Inn, Alaska, where he is interested in the fishing industry as well as in some mining property. His next younger brother, Alexander Vetleson is an expert mechanic of Seattle, Washington. Anna, the second of the girls, is now Mrs. Rygh of Minnesota while the youngest brother, Benjamin, is ranchman and a mechanical engineer of near Three Forks, Montana. All of the sons, having still the nomad blood of the norseman red in their veins, have sought their fortunes in "a far country," while the daughters, marrying at an early age have settled near the old home.

Martin Vetleson, now a United States commissioner and a prominent citizen of Three Forks, Montana, was next to the youngest in his father's family of seven children. He was born at St. Fergus, Minnesota, on the fifth day of July, 1884. For some years he studied at Park Region Lutheran College, a denominational school with which his father was, during his activity in the ministry, more or less connected. After completing his preparatory normal course he entered the legal department of the University of North Dakota and was admitted to the bar of the state in June of 1907. For two years he practiced law at Rugby, North Dakota, then, charmed by the allurements held out to the young and ambitious man by the sister state of Montana, he left Dakota for Three Forks, arriving in the spring of 1909. Hardly was his practice well established, however, when, on the second day of June, 1910, he was appointed United States commissioner, a position that he fills with great credit to himself and to the administration. He is actively interested in Republican politics both state and national. In April of 1911, he was elected police judge of Three Forks.

He has always kept up his membership in the Lutheran church to which his father devoted the best of his life. Mr. Vetleson is a member also of the Knights of Pythias and the Montana State Bar Association.

EDWARD J. FREDERICSEN has been identified with the teaching profession since 1897, his labors until 1909 being confined to various cities in Minnesota and North Dakota, but since the latter named date in Sand Coulee as principal of the schools of this city and clerk of the school board. His experience in the educational field has been one of considerable scope, and he has enjoyed exceptional success wherever he has been located. As an educator of progressive ideas and the exponent of all that is recognized as fitting in educational methods, Prof. Fredericsen takes prominent rank among his fellows, and his qualifications are conceded by all.

Prof. Fredericsen was born in Hastings, Minnesota, on August 20, 1879, and is the son of N. C. and Mary (McNamara) Fredericsen. The family comes from an old and honored German house, the paternal great-grandfather of Mr. Fredericsen of this sketch having been Count von Moltke, commander of the German army, who was banished from his native land for political reasons. The castle of the family was known as Frederickshofen, and the son, on coming to America, adopted the name of Fredericsen, the American adaptation of the German Frederickshofen. The maternal ancestors of Mr. Fredericsen were of Irish descent, and the mother was a second cousin to President Hayes. N. C. Fredericsen was born and reared in Minnesota. He was a farmer and a man of no little prominence in his community. He was president of the school board of his town for twenty-eight years, and was town treasurer for a number of consecutive terms. He died on March 17, 1907, at Princeton, Minnesota, when he was fifty-four years of age. His wife, Mary McNamara, was a native of Illinois, and she is now residing in Princeton. Three children were born to the union of Mr. and Mrs. Fredericsen. Edward, of this review, was the first born, and as a boy and youth he attended the Guardian Angel school in Hastings, Minnesota, the town of his birth. He later attended the University of Indiana at Valparaiso, from which he was duly graduated with the degree of B. S., and he took post graduate work at the State Science School of North Dakota. Following his graduation he taught for one year, after which he removed to North Dakota, and took a position as principal of the Wishek school. His next school was at Wyndmere, North Dakota, where he also held a principalship. He remained there for four years, then removed to Hannaford, North Dakota, where he remained for two years. In July, 1909, he went to Montana, locating at Sand Coulee, where he has since been principal of the schools, and clerk of the school board. His work here has been all that could be desired, and he has given every evidence of exceptional ability in his chosen profession.

Prof. Fredericsen is connected with a number of fraternal organizations, among them the Modern Woodmen of America, the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He has occupied all the chairs of each of these orders. He is president of the Public Library Association, a position in which his superior talents are of peculiar value to the town.

On September 24, 1904, Prof. Fredericsen was united in marriage with Miss Ellen Douglas Lowell, the daughter of J. A. Lowell, a native of Hastings, Minnesota, where the marriage took place. One child has been born to them, Marcella Ruth Fredericsen, whose birth occurred on November 4, 1911, at Sand Coulee.

ROBERT INSKEEP RIZER, M. D. The medical profession of Montana is known for the high merit and ability of its members, and foremost among its representatives is Dr. Robert Inskeep Rizer, of Anaconda. Dr. Rizer came to this state a few years ago, thoroughly equipped by training in one of the best of American schools, and by his ability and fine personality has won a front rank among the physicians and surgeons of the state.

He is a native of Boone, Iowa, where he was born on January 25, 1883, and where he obtained his education in the public schools, graduating from the high school with the class of 1900. For his professional school he chose one of the most exacting in its entrance requirements, and was a student for two years in the regular academic department of the University of Chicago before entering the Rush Medical College of Chicago, where he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1906. For two years he was an interne in the Chicago Presbyterian Hospital, and for a similar period was first assistant to Dr. B. W. Sippy of that city.

Dr. Rizer came west and began practice at Anaconda in 1909. As one of the busiest men in the city, with a reputation for ability in his work and sterling citizenship, he has already won a position that many older men might envy. He manifests a keen interest in the civic and social life of his home city, and is especially fond of athletics and motoring as diversions.

On the 15th of June, 1910, he was married in Chicago to Miss Ruth Lackersteen, daughter of the late Dr. Mark Lackersteen, of Chicago, a former surgeon in the English army. They are the parents of two sons, Robert I. Rizer, Jr. and Dean Kirby Rizer. Dr. and Mrs. Rizer are members of the Episcopal church. In politics he is a Progressive. He is a member of the Anaconda Club, the Anaconda Rod and Gun Club and the Anaconda Automobile Club, also a member of the Deer Lodge County Medical Society, the Montana State Medical Society and the American Medical Society. He is local surgeon for the Anaconda Copper Mining Company and the Butte, Anaconda and Pacific Railroad.

Dr. Rizer's parents were Mason S. and Elizabeth (Brown) Rizer. The mother, who is now deceased, was born in Logansport, Indiana. The father, who is a Virginian by birth, is a prominent railroad man, being superintendent of the eastern division of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway. There are three children in the family: Fred W., who is a civil engineer of Chicago; Charles M., a yardmaster of the Lake Shore Railroad; and Dr. R. I. Rizer.

EDGAR EUGENE GIVENS. One of the most successful young men of Kalispell, Montana, is Edgar Eugene Givens, whose business activity is in the field of insurance. Though he has been a resident of this Montana city but a few years, his enterprise, energy and laudable ambition have brought him into prominence in its business ranks and he has come to be recognized as one of the wide-awake and forceful men of Flathead county.

A son of Thales E. Givens, he was born in Abingdon, Illinois, on the 9th of August, 1880. His father is a native of the same state, born near the city of Quincy, but he now resides in Mountain View, Oklahoma, where he is vice-president of the Farmers and Merchants Bank. In Cleveland, Ohio, occurred the nativity of Olive (Lesh) Givens, the mother of Edgar Eugene. To the union of these parents came three children, of whom our subject was the first born.

At Abingdon, Illinois, Mr. Givens completed the usual preliminary educational studies and then took up high school work in Des Moines, Iowa, graduating from the high school course there in 1899. Following this he entered Drake University at Des Moines and was graduated from the pharmaceutical department of that institution in 1901. His student days were well interspersed with periods of labor, for by his own efforts were provided the means to defray his expenses while obtaining his education. Following his graduation from the university he spent about three years in a clerical capacity in the different cities of Des Moines, Denver and Seattle, and then returned to Des Moines. Shortly afterward he became manager of the interests of the National Biscuit Company at Dubuque, Iowa, and continued with this company five years, a portion of the time as a traveling salesman. He came to Kalispell, Montana, on August 1, 1909, and purchased the established insurance business of E. S. Bogart. On this foundation he has built up the largest individual insurance business in Flathead county and follows this line of endeavor exclusively. He writes all lines of insurance and represents twenty of the strongest American and foreign companies engaged in this business. His offices are in the Conrad Bank Building.

The marriage of Mr. Givens was solemnized at Albia, Iowa, on September 12, 1907, and united him to Miss Elsie Clarkson, a daughter of John T. Clarkson, who is a native of Iowa and is a well known lawyer at Albia. On April 2, 1912, at Kalispell, there was born to Mr. and Mrs. Givens, a daughter, Patricia Ann Givens.

The fraternal associations of Mr. Givens are with the Masonic order, in which he has attained the Royal Arch degrees, and with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elixs. He is also a member of the Kalispell Club.

THOR. A. THOMPSON. Though owning but a brief acquaintance with Montana, having located here in 1909, Thor. A. Thompson feels himself permanently established in Kalispell, and is enthusiastic in his regard for the state and its many attractive qualities. Mr. Thompson is a native of Minnesota, born near Long Lake, that state, on March 25, 1879. His parents are Knud Thompson and Anna (Odegard) Thompson, the father a native of the state of Wisconsin and the mother of Norway. In 1880 Mr. Thompson moved to Coopers-town, North Dakota, where he engaged in the merchandise business. He has been prominent in county politics there for many years and has held various county offices of importance, among them the office of county treasurer, which he held for two terms. The wife and mother came to America with her parents when she was a child of seven, and they settled at Heron Lake, Minnesota, where her marriage with Knud Thompson occurred. They became the parents of four children, of which number Thor. was the second born.

Thor. A. Thompson was educated in the public schools of his home town, after which he completed a course of study at the University of North Dakota, followed by two years at the University of Michigan, and in 1907 he received the degree of LL. B. at the University of North Dakota. He entered upon the practice of his profession at Cooperstown, North Dakota, and continued there until June, 1909. In that month he removed to Kalispell, Montana, engaging in practice alone, but in July, 1910, he formed an association with K. Stout, which partnership still endures. The firm is known as Thompson & Stout, and they conduct a general practice in Kalispell. Mr. Thompson is assistant county attorney, and is a Democrat, although not active in local politics.

Fraternally, Mr. Thompson is affiliated with the Masonic order in Kalispell and is a member of the Kalispell Club and the County Bar Association. He is popular and prominent in this district, and is fast making a name for himself among the legal fraternity.

On March 25, 1909, Mr. Thompson married Miss Maude Longfellow at Wadena, Minnesota. She is a daughter of Walter Longfellow, and was born and reared in Minnesota.

RAYMOND F. WITHROW. The business career of Raymond F. Withrow, of Kalispell, Montana, covers little more than a decade but is a fine example of what a young man may accomplish if he has business ability, push, and that tenacity of purpose so essential to a successful grapple with fortune. He came to Montana in the fall of 1909 and purchased an interest in the business of James Harbert at Kalispell, known as the Fair Store. Into this business he put not only the purchase price in money, but the benefit of years of experience in the mercantile business and the vigor of western energy and progressiveness. He has been identified with the establishment less than three years, but in that period the volume of business has more than doubled, which fact of itself is one of the most convincing arguments as to Mr. Withrow's worth and status as a business man. Montana heartily welcomes men of this stamp to the ranks of her citizenship.

It is to the great commonwealth of Illinois that he owes his nativity, for he was born at Geneseo, Henry county of that state, on July 6, 1878. John W. Withrow, his father, who also was born in Illinois, has given his years of activity to agricultural pursuits but has now retired and resides at Geneseo. He is a veteran of the Civil war, his service having been as a member of Company H, One Hundred Twelfth Regiment of Illinois Infantry, and he has taken a prominent part in the public and political affairs of his community, having held various county offices. He married Arvilla Allen, a native of Illinois, and to their union were born seven children, of whom our subject is the youngest.

Raymond F. Withrow grew to manhood in Henry county, Illinois, and acquired his education in the public schools of Geneseo, graduating from the high school there with the class of 1898. His first employment was as a clerk in the store of the John Dedrick Company at Geneseo, Illinois, continuing to follow clerical work only eight months, however. At the end of that period he entered business on his own account as the proprietor of a clothing and men's furnishing store at Geneseo, Illinois, where he continued in that line six years and was quite successful. Disposing of his interests there, he removed to Chicago where he gained much valuable experience in the establishments of Butler and of Carson Pirie Scott & Co. In the fall of 1909 he came to Kalispell, Montana, where he purchased an interest in his present business, his associate now being F. W. Tinkel and the firm style being Withrow & Tinkel. The business was first established in 1898 in a very small way but is today one of the leading dry goods and general merchandise stores in northwestern Montana, with a sales force of eight people.

Mr. Withrow is a member of the Kalispell Chamber of Commerce, and fraternally is affiliated with the blue lodge of the Masonic order. In politics he is a Republican but takes no active part in political affairs.

On November 27, 1900, at Geneseo, Illinois, Mr. Withrow was united in marriage to Miss Maude Schnabele, a daughter of P. S. Schnabele, a native of Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Withrow have a daughter, Elizabeth, born at Kalispell on January 1, 1911.

MERLE C. GROENE. In the new country of northwestern Montana, one of the able and successful young lawyers is Merle C. Groene, of Whitefish, who has been practicing there for the past three years, and has closely identified himself with the community in several official capacities.

Mr. Groene was born in Atchison, Kansas, June 12, 1886, and is a son of J. H. and Lucy A. (Hommer) Groene. The only other child in the family is Everett, now a resident of Kansas City, Kansas. Both parents were natives of Kansas, and the father is now engaged in the real estate business at Kansas City, Kansas.

Merle C. gained a thorough preparation for his professional career, but earned part of his higher education by his own efforts. His youth was spent in Kansas City, Kansas, where he graduated from the high school in 1904, and then entered the University of Kansas, graduating from the law department with the degree of LL.B. in 1909. He supported himself during the greater part of his university life. As a graduate in law he chose Montana for his practical career, and has since attended to an increasing general practice at Whitefish. On his arrival he was appointed city attorney, an office which he has filled ever since. He is also clerk of the school board, and is a member of the county and state bar associations. He is an active worker for the Democratic principles. He is a director in the First National Bank Building Company.

Mr. Groene is affiliated with the Whitefish Lodge No. 64, of Masons and the Eastern Star, and is a member of the Kalispell Club. His church is the Methodist. He was married at Westphalia, Kansas, on the 19th of January, 1910, to Miss Leah Stephenson, a native of that state and daughter of A. E. Stephenson. They have no children.

CHARLES E. FARNSWORTH. The present cashier and active head of the Anaconda National Bank is a banker of many years' experience, and was identified with one of the large banks of Chicago for twenty-one years before coming to Montana. Though comparatively a newcomer in this state, Mr. Farnsworth is one of its most loyal citizens, and in business and social circles he has an influential place in the city of Anaconda.

Charles E. Farnsworth was born in Lake county, Illinois, December 26, 1866, a son of James B. and Alma (Putnam) Farnsworth. His father, who was born in Vermont, has devoted practically all of his active lifetime to school work. For more than forty years he has been a principal in the Chicago and Cook county schools, and few educators in the country have had a larger and more useful career. He was also a soldier of the Union during the Civil war. His interest in religious affairs has been only second to education, and he is one of the prominent laymen of the Congregational church. His wife was also a native of Vermont, and they were married in Lake county, Illinois. Of the three children, Charles E. is the oldest and the only one now living.

Until coming to Montana Mr. Farnsworth spent practically all his life in Chicago, where during boyhood he attended the public schools and the Lake View high school. For two years he taught school, but decided not to follow the same profession as his father. After a year in the wholesale house of Marshall Field & Company, he became cashier and bookkeeper for W. A. Olmsted & Company, a school supply house. A year later he entered the service of the Fort Dearborn National Bank, one of the old and solid banking houses of Chicago, with which he continued in increasing grades of responsibility for a period of twenty-one years. Resigning in 1909, he came to Anaconda to take charge of the Anaconda National Bank as cashier and active head.

Mr. Farnsworth was married in Chicago, November 8, 1894, to Miss Mary Roberts, a daughter of Clark and Elizabeth Roberts, of that city. Mr. and Mrs. Farnsworth are the parents of two children, Jeannette and Mary Frances, both of whom are attending school.

Outside of business Mr. Farnsworth has always taken a keen interest in the varied social activities. As a member of the Presbyterian church, he has held different official places, and was superintendent of one Sunday-school in Chicago for twenty-four years. His wife is also an active member of the same church. In politics he is a Republican but has taken no share in party work. Music has appealed to him most of the fine arts, and he was a choir leader in Chicago for twenty years and holds a similar position in Anaconda. He is also interested in the general athletic sports and is very fond of driving good horses. During his brief residence in Montana his impressions have become very decided. "I do not have the honor of being a pioneer," says he, "but I want to say with all candor and honesty I am sorry I did not come sooner. To me Montana is a wonderful state. There is a charm and delight about it that is inspiring, and I have great faith in its future."

SIMON S. STACEY. Now a prosperous merchant of Whitefish, proprietor of the oldest jewelry business in the town, Mr. Stacey arrived in America fifteen years ago with a cash capital of forty-two dollars and fifty cents, and has won his own way to success.

Simon S. Stacey is a native of England, born June 15, 1878. His father is Thomas Stacey, an English farmer. The mother, whose maiden name was Betsey Ann Smeeth, died in England in March, 1886, aged thirty-eight. The first eighteen years of his life Mr. Stacey spent in his native country, where he attended school, and arrived in America in the spring of 1897, first settling in Hanson county, South Dakota. He made the journey to America alone, and during the first years he was working not only for his living but also to complete his education. He spent some months in farm labor to pay for his schooling in the Wesleyan College of South Dakota, and then during a residence of five years in Davidson county, South Dakota, devoted three years to learning the jeweler's trade with H. G. Nichols, of Mitchell.

Mr. Stacey has been a resident of Montana since 1909, having located at Whitefish in September of that year and bought out the established jewelry business of J. A. Robinson, who had the distinction of being the first jeweler in town. In this line of business he has built up a good trade, and has a large patronage and esteem.

In political opinion Mr. Stacey is Republican. Fraternally he is a member of the Whitefish Lodge No. 64 of Masons, and has held several chairs in the Whitefish camp of the Modern Woodmen of America. He is one of the active members of the local Chamber of Commerce, and is a trustee of the Methodist church in Whitefish. Mr. Stacey's place of business is 209 Central avenue and his residence is on the same street. At Lake City, Minnesota, September 26, 1906, he was united in marriage with Miss Laura L. Paine. Her ancestry is English and German, and her father, Charles Paine, was born in Minnesota. Mr. and Mrs. Stacey are the parents of two children: Ellyn Elizabeth was born at Minot, North Dakota, October 27, 1907; and Charles Thomas was also born in Minot, July 20, 1909.

WILLIAM W. DUNLAP has been a citizen of note at Dixon since 1909 and is here engaged in the hay, grain and oil business, in which enterprise he is achieving unusual success. He is also engaged in various real estate transactions and is the owner of considerable property of value in this section of the state. His enthusiasm in regard to the splendid opportunities offered in Montana for material advancement knows no bounds.

At Leavenworth, in the state of Kansas, occurred the birth of William W. Dunlap, the date of his nativity being the 16th of July, 1865. He is a son of Benjamin H. and Nancy (Dickens) Dunlap, both of whom were born and reared in Ohio, where their marriage was solemnized. Going to Oklahoma, Mr. Dunlap was there engaged in mining and real estate operations for a number of years and where he finally turned his attention to farming. He died in 1907, at the age of seventy-four years, and is buried at Whitesboro, Texas. Mrs. Dunlap survives her honored husband and is now a member of the household of one of her daughters at Whitesboro, Texas. Mr. and Mrs. Dunlap were the parents of four children, of whom the subject of this review was the third born.

When eight years of age, William W. Dunlap accompanied his parents on their removal to southwestern Kansas and thence to northern Texas some years later. His rudimentary educational training was obtained in the public schools of Kansas and Texas, but as schooling facilities were of the most meagre order in the country where he lived, he did a great deal of home study under the tutelage of an elder sister. When he was ten years old he began to clerk in a store and earned a salary of fifteen dollars per month. With this money he purchased his first ready-made suit of clothing. When fourteen years of age he was earning two and a half dollars a day. He subsequently went into the railroad service, working in the commissary department of the M. K. & T. Railroad, under Kilpatrick Brothers with headquarters at El Paso. At the age of eighteen he went into Mexico, where he followed mining for some seven years, and thence went to Crede, Colorado, remaining there during the great boom and following placer mining in Crede for the ensuing fourteen years. At the end of that time he went to the southeastern part of New Mexico, in the Roswell district, there engaging in ranching for three years. In June, 1909, he came to Montana and settled at Dixon. His first work in Dixon was in the lumbering business, and he established the first lumber yard here, and for two years did the largest retail lumber business west of Missoula. In 1911 he disposed of his lumber interests and started his present business, that of dealing in hay, grain, oil, etc. He negotiates a number of real estate transactions during the course of a year and has some ranching property in the vicinity of Dixon. Mr. Dunlap is a business man of unusual shrewdness and is possessed of remarkable executive ability. His methods are of the fair and honorable type and he commands the unqualified confidence and respect of all with whom he has had dealings.

In politics Mr. Dunlap is an uncompromising Democrat but he does not participate actively in public affairs. He is affiliated with the Masonic order at Dixon, and is vice-president of the Dixon Commercial Club. He is exceedingly fond of out-door life in general, and is something of a reader, giving much time to the study of history. It is Mr. Dunlap's expressed belief that Montana will develop faster in the next ten years than she has in the past forty, and he avers that Montana has given to him a feeling of confidence and content such as he never experienced before.

JOHN ALBERT BRASSETT, M. D., who has been engaged in the practice of medicine in Kalispell since October, 1909, is one of the leading physicians in this city, and enjoys a wide general practice in Kalispell and the vicinity. He is a Norwegian by birth, born in Norway on April 17, 1874, and is the son of John and Margerite (Langaunet) Brasset, also natives of Norway. The family immigrated to America in 1887 and settled in Norman county, Minnesota, and there the father engaged in general farming, in which place he still lives. The mother died in Norman county in 1896, aged fifty years. She left six children, John Albert being the fourth born.

John Albert Brasset was educated in the public schools of Norman county, attending them until he reached the age of eighteen, at which time he entered Concordia College at Morehead, Minnesota. He later studied in Dixon College at Dixon, Illinois, for two years, and thereafter he engaged in school teaching, continuing in that work for seven years in Minnesota and Dakota. Giving over his educational labors, the young man entered Hamlin University at Minneapolis, where he engaged in medical studies, and was graduated from that worthy institution with the class of 1906, receiving then his degree of Doctor of Medicine. He spent one year in St. Joseph's hospital in St. Paul as an interne, after which valuable experience and training he entered into active practice in his home town, Halstad, Minnesota. He remained there for two years, enjoying a pleasing degree of success, after which he removed to Kalispell, becoming established here on the 12th of October, 1909. Since that time Dr. Brasset has been busily engaged looking after the practice which he has established in the comparatively brief time of his residence here.

Dr. Brasset represents the energetic and ambitious type of man who will succeed in life, no matter how untoward may be the conditions attending. He worked his way through college, his teaching experiences supplying the necessary money for his studies, and has ever been of that same independent and resourceful nature. He is a member of the State, County and American Medical associations, and is recognized as one of the leading members of his profession in the county. He is a Republican of the progressive stamp, and takes an intelligent interest in the political affairs of the city and county. He is a member of various fraternal societies, among them being the Knights of Pythias, of Halstad, Minnesota, the Modern Woodmen of America, the Modern Brotherhood, the Court of Honor and the B. P. O. E., in all of which he fraternizes with the Kalispell lodges. He is medical examiner for the last three named societies, and also for the Bankers' Life Insurance Company of America. Dr. Brassett is a member of the Lutheran church, the church of his parents, in which he was reared.

On June 1, 1900, Dr. Brassett was united in marriage with Miss Minnie Larson, the daughter of B. B. Larson, a native of Norman county, Minnesota. They have one son, Arnold Harrison, born November 6, 1911.

WHEELER H. MELVIN, M.D. In a new community the services of none of the professions are so much required as those of the physician. Practically at the founding of the now thriving town of Chester, there located among the merchants and other citizens, Dr. Wheeler H. Melvin, who has offered his skill to this community and has not only been a successful physician but has gained a large influence in the citizenship of this locality.

Dr. Melvin was born in Vernon county, Wisconsin, May 20, 1882, and received his preliminary education in the public schools at Cashton, Monroe county, of his native state. His preparation for the profession of medicine was in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, at Chicago, then the medical department of the University of Illinois, where he was graduated M.D., June 6, 1905. His first practice was in Taylor, Wisconsin, for three months, and then for three years in Beach, North Dakota. In 1909 he established his office in Chester, and has since attended an increasing practice and has acquired some good property in this vicinity.

Dr. Melvin's father was Winfield Scott Melvin, who was born in Ohio in 1846 and has been a resident of Wisconsin since the fifties, being one of the substantial farmers of that state. The mother was Hannah (Snider) Melvin, a native of Pennsylvania, whence her family emigrated to Stevens Point, Wisconsin. She died in 1891 at the age of thirty-two. The doctor was the third of their six children, the others being named as follows: Philo H.; Mrs. Nellie Stewart, of Lothair, Montana; and Misses Katie, Beulah and Ruby.

Dr. Melvin married at Beach, North Dakota, October 16, 1906, Miss Etta May Caldwell, and to them on April 29, 1912, was born a son, Wheeler William Scott Melvin. The doctor is a member of the blue lodge in Masonry and the Modern Woodmen of America, and belongs to the American Medical Association and is secretary of the Chester board of health. He is a Progressive Republican, and his wife has membership in the Congregational church.

JOHN T. SAUNTRY. Men of efficiency and character are the type of workers the business, industrial and educational worlds of today are eagerly seeking, and each individual ascends the ladder of fortune to that height which his own ability and merit enable him to reach. Recognizing the need and the value of education, especially along practical lines, in preparing the youth for his work in life, John T. Sauntry chose teaching as his line of useful endeavor and since 1909 has been at the head of the Kalispell Business College. Professor Sauntry is himself an example of efficiency and cannot but inspire those who come under his charge to put forth their best efforts in their work. He has thoroughly prepared for the responsible duties he has assumed. After having completed a common and high school education in South Dakota he became a student at the Nebraska Normal School, Wayne, Nebraska, where he was graduated in 1904. Following this, he spent some time as a student in Valparaiso University, Valparaiso, Indiana, and then returned to Wayne, Nebraska, to take charge of the commercial department of the normal school. After five years there he came to Kalispell, Montana, in June, 1909, and a few days after his arrival he purchased the Kalispell Business College from the original founder, H. F. Albrecht. The college was established in 1901. Its present membership numbers forty-six students, with an average enrollment of fifty, and the institution has grown considerably both in the size of its classes and in the scope of its work since Professor Sauntry took charge of it. The school was first opened in a little building at the corner of Second street and First avenue East, from whence it was removed to another building, and finally to its permanent home, a new building on the corner of Sixth and Main streets erected purposely for use as a business college. The Kalispell Business College is the largest college in this section of Montana and the building it occupies is the largest devoted to this use in the state. Professor Sauntry is a young man of vigor and marked ability and very progressive in his educational views, and what he has already accomplished presages for the college a most prosperous and useful future. It is men of such character that Montana welcomes and values as citizens.

Though an American by nativity, Professor Sauntry is distinctly a son of Erin, for both of his parents were born in Ireland and grew to maturity there. He was born in Cherokee, Iowa, December 6, 1888. Jere Sauntry, his father, came to the United States in 1870 and settled in Cherokee county, Iowa. His active years were given to agricultural pursuits, but he is now a retired resident of Kalispell, Montana. On November 25, 1878, at Washington, D. C., he was married to Miss Mary Campbell, and to their union were born nine children, four of whom are deceased and the eldest of whom is Professor Sauntry of this review. The others living are Mary, a teacher in the Kalispell Business College; Daniel, also a resident of Kalispell and Peter and Katherine.

In political views Professor Sauntry is a Republican, but he takes no active part in party affairs. Fraternally he is affiliated with the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and with the Knights of Columbus, and in religious faith he is a worthy communicant of the Roman Catholic church. He is also a member of the Kalispell Club and of Company F, Kalispell Volunteers, of the Montana National Guard.

In the city where he now resides were pronounced on November 25, 1910, the solemn marriage rites that united Professor Sauntry and Miss Agnes Berne, a daughter of John Berne who came to Montana from his native state of Iowa. Professor and Mrs. Sauntry have a daughter, Katherine Frances, born October 16, 1911.

WILLIAM L. CAMPBELL stands forth in Montana as a man who has done much for the west in the way of settling the new country. He has been identified with the big ranching interests, and later with some of the most far-reaching colonization schemes that have been projected in the west, and his work in the way of town building in Montana and Idaho has been especially praiseworthy. He has been connected with the big irrigation plants, and he has been in many other ways a dominant factor in the interests which have done so much to promote the popularizing and settling of the state.

Born in New Britain, Connecticut, on March 8, 1868, Mr. Campbell is the son of William O. and Clara (Little) Campbell. The father is a native of the state of New York, and the mother of Connecticut. The family moved to Oregon in 1872, where Mr. Campbell became actively engaged as a stockraiser and a farmer, but he is now retired from business and is living a life of quietude in Boise City, Idaho, at the age of eighty-three years. The mother also still lives. They were the parents of three children, William being the eldest. He was educated in the schools of Lewiston, Idaho, and as a lad in his teens helped himself in an educational way by taking a correspondence course. He left school at the age of eighteen and then began stockraising on his own responsibility in northern Idaho, a business which he followed with all success for two years, after which he turned his attention to the machinist's business, and he learned the trade, serving a three-year apprenticeship. He followed that line of work for five years, then engaging in the implement business at Idaho Falls, where he remained for two years. At the end of that time he sold out his interests there, making an advantageous deal, and took the management of the Highland Ranch in Fremont county, Idaho, an incorporated ranching company engaged in stock raising and farming. It was at that time the largest ranch of the irrigated variety under cultivation in Idaho, or, indeed, the west, covering as it did an area of four thousand and eight hundred acres, all under irrigation. The ranch was devoted principally to the production of grains for seed purposes, and only thoroughbred stock was raised on the place. They were breeders of Clydesdale horses, Hereford cattle, and other fancy brands of hogs and sheep. Mr. Campbell had the active management of this great ranch, and in addition to being its manager, he was a heavy stockholder. He continued with the ranch for seven years, and not only did he discharge his duties as manager of the ranch, but he had charge of the irrigation plant as well. Following his association with Highland Ranch, Mr. Campbell became connected with the Clinton-Hurt Company of Boise City, Idaho. He assumed charge of the company's colonization department at Valier, Montana, first locating on February 26, 1909, at Conrad, then the headquarters of the company. During the first eighteen months of his association with the company Mr. Campbell made a phenomenal record, selling over forty-two thousand acres of land and town lots aggregating in value over $2,000,000. On April 1, 1909, Mr. Campbell settled permanently in Valier, and at that time the nearest house to the city was located at a distance of six miles. The Clinton-Hurt Company was the original Twin Falls Company of Twin Falls, Idaho, and since its establishment its stock has advanced from the par value of $100 a share to $200. He is an acknowledged expert in colonization work and town building. He is a director in the Teton Canal & Reservoir Company, and was chairman of the board of commissioners of Fremont county, Idaho, for two years.

Mr. Campbell has large private interests in the real estate of Valier and other sections of the state and in Idaho, and is one of the foremost men in this section of the state. He is a thirty-second degree Mason and has passed through all chairs in the blue lodge, and is a member of the Shriners, El Kora Temple of Boise City, Idaho, and of the Royal Arch chapter and the Eastern Star of Valier. He is also a member of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows of Valier lodge.

On May 27, 1891, Mr. Campbell was married to Miss Viola Page, the daughter of Horace G. Page, a native of Vermilion, South Dakota. Mrs. Campbell was raised in Idaho, where her parents have lived for some years. Two children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Campbell—Grace L., born June 21, 1892, and Viola A., born at Highland Ranch, on January 3, 1904.

LOUIS W. PIERSON. Montana has never been lacking in journalistic enterprise, and its editors and publishers have maintained unusually high standards in their profession. One of the newspapers with intrinsic merit and broad influence is the Havre Promoter, the proprietor of which is among Montana's youngest newspaper men.

Louis W. Pierson, publisher of the Havre Promoter, was born at Dover, New Jersey, April 22, 1879. During his boyhood his family moved west to Larimore, North Dakota, where he was educated in the public schools, graduating from high school in 1897. After leaving school he was appointed assistant postmaster at Larimore, a position which he held for two years under Grover Cleveland's administration. However, during his school days Mr. Pierson had manifested an inclination for newspaper work, and at the age of nineteen he embarked upon his career in that line by the Review at Edinburg, North Dakota. A year later a fire destroyed the plant of the Review, but its publisher continued in the work and later established papers in several other North Dakota towns. At one time he was the owner of five prosperous and influential weeklies and gained a very distinctive position as an editor in North Dakota.

In the year 1909 Mr. Pierson disposed of his newspaper and other interests, excepting his real estate, in North Dakota, and moved to Havre, Montana, where he founded the Havre Promoter. This he has always maintained as an independent newspaper, endeavoring to elect the best men to office regardless of politics. With a large circulation in Havre and vicinity, and carrying much of the representative advertising, the Promoter has become a fine news medium and a paper of substantial influence and character. In addition to publishing the Havre Promoter, Mr. Pierson has become financially interested in the Chester Independent, a weekly paper published at Chester in Hill county, and also the Chinook Democrat and the Montana Idea which he now publishes as one paper at Chinook in Blaine county.

In addition to being a newspaper man, Mr. Pierson also holds the position of receiver of the United States Land Office at Havre. He was appointed to this position on September 8, 1911, during a recess of congress and on January 24, 1912, received a permanent appointment for four years. He is also a member of the Masonic lodge at Granville, North Dakota, and is Exalted Ruler of the Havre Lodge of Elks, his term expiring April 1, 1913.

The parents of Mr. Pierson were S. W. and Mary E. (Johnson) Pierson, both of whom were born in New Jersey, were married in that state and came west to the Dakotas among the early settlers there. The father died in Canada in 1910 at the age of fifty-three and the mother is now living at Metolius, Oregon, at the age of fifty-two. The father was a well-known contractor and builder. Louis W. is the second of three children, all of whom are now living, the other two being Edward T., a well-known newspaper man in Oregon, and Mrs. O. A. Neshime, of Granville, North Dakota.

ROLLA CLYDE PURDY, M. D. is one of the younger set of physicians in this section of the state who has enjoyed a generous practice in the brief time he has been engaged in private practice. Following his graduation from the Chicago College of Medicine and Surgery in 1908, he has been for the most part engaged in government work, and in other capacities, but from the time he opened offices in Whitefish in 1911 for maintaining a private practice, he has been immensely popular with the public, and has a following in and about the city worthy of a much longer residence than he may yet claim.

Rolla Clyde Purdy was born in Black River Falls, Wisconsin,—that prosperous little city which was virtually wiped off the map in the Black River inundation in the spring of 1911. His birth took place on March 24, 1886, and he is the second of the three children born to his parents, Franklin and Katherine (Potter) Purdy. The father was born in New York state, and he came west as a child. He eventually located in Wisconsin, settling at Black River Falls, and he is still living there, at the age of fifty years. He has been for years, and still is, employed as a railroad conductor. The mother is a native of the state of Wisconsin, and was born in 1865, being now in her forty-seventh year. Besides Dr. Purdy, they have another son, Otis, and a daughter who is now Mrs. Inez Reisner, and a resident of the home state.

The town of Watoma, Wisconsin, gave to Rolla Purdy his early schooling, after which he entered the Chicago College of Medicine and Surgery, from which he was graduated in 1908 with the degree of M. D. Following his graduation he began his practice in the Massachusetts General Hospital of Boston as assistant, where he remained for one year, after which he came to Montana as line surgeon for the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railroad. After one year in that capacity he entered the government service at Polson, Montana, and was army surgeon at that post for a year. In August, 1911, he gave up that work and coming to Whitefish, opened offices here, where he has built up a thriving practice in and about the city. He is prominent and popular in his profession, and unusually successful, with every indication of a brilliant career before him. He is a member of various fraternal societies, among them being the Woodmen of the World, the Modern Woodmen of America, the Loyal Order of Moose and the Knights of Columbus. He is medical examiner of the two societies first named. He is a Roman Catholic, as is indicated by his membership in the Knights of Columbus, and in his political connections he takes an independent stand. Dr. Purdy is devoted to out-door exercise and enjoys every phase of Montana life.

In November, 1911, Dr. Purdy was united in marriage with Miss Florence Cavanaugh, at Whitefish, where their pleasant home is maintained, and where both are leaders in the social life of the community.

JAMES MURPHY, M. D. Although he has been a resident of Fort Benton for only a comparatively short period, Dr. James Murphy has rapidly forged to the front in his profession, in which he has built up a large and representative practice, and is becoming recognized as one of the leading physicians of Chouteau county, where he has been honored by election to the position of secretary of the board of health. A man of great energy and progressive ideas, he has not limited his activities to the mere performance of professional duties, but has interested himself in all that has tended to advance the interests of his adopted city, co-operating with his fellow citizens in various movements for the public welfare. Dr. Murphy was born at Anoka, Minnesota, November 16, 1875, and is a son of James F. and Susan (McGuigan) Murphy.

James F. Murphy was born at St. Johns, Nova Scotia, and came to this country with his parents when fourteen years of age, settling at Anoka, Minnesota, in 1850, as a pioneer. Mercantile operations claimed his attention until the outbreak of the Civil war, when he enlisted as a private in Company A, Eighth Regiment, Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, with which organization he served until the close of hostilities, participating in numerous engagements, accompanying Sherman's great army on its famous march to the sea, and subsequently taking an active part in the Indian warfare in Minnesota. On receiving his honorable discharge, he returned to Minnesota to resume his activities in the mercantile line, but the hardships and privations of army service had undermined his health to such an extent that he was forced to move to California, and there his death occurred in 1879, when he was only forty-two years old. His wife, a native of Ireland, came to the United States as a girl of eighteen years, settling at Anoka, Minnesota, where she met and married Mr. Murphy, and at this time she is the oldest living resident of that city, having passed her eightieth year. They had a family of six children, of whom four survive, namely: Mrs. Mary Faherty, of Anoka, Minnesota; Aloysius, also of Anoka; Dr. Eugene, a physician of St. Paul; and Dr. James.

Dr. Murphy's early education was secured in the public schools of Anoka and the high school, and he subsequently attended St. Thomas College, St. Paul, and the Jefferson Medical College of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, from which latter institution he was graduated in 1909. In that year he came to Montana and engaged in a general practice at Harlem, but in 1911 changed his field to Fort Benton, where his abilities gained instant recognition. Dr. Murphy is practically a newcomer, but since coming to Fort Benton has had unusual success in performing several operations of a complicated nature. He is a close and careful student, keeping fully abreast of the various discoveries and advances in his profession, subscribing to the leading medical periodicals and taking a great deal of interest in the work of the F. X. Durkin Society of Philadelphia, the James C. Wilson Medical Society, of that city, the Northwestern Medical Society and the American Medical Association. He belongs to the Greek the Woodmen of the World, a director of St. Clair letter society of his alma mater, is camp physician of Hospital, and secretary of the Chouteau county board of health. His politics are those of the Republican party and his religious connection with the Roman Catholic church.

Dr. Murphy was married at Anoka, Minnesota, June 7, 1910, to Miss Wilhelmina Viedt, daughter of Henry G. Viedt, of Anoka. Dr. and Mrs. Murphy have many friends in Fort Benton, and their comfortable home is a center of social refinement.

GEORGE H. WALLER, M. D. An honored resident and retired physician of Eureka, Dr. Waller and family are closely identified with northwest Montana. Dr. George H. Waller is a native of Rockford, Illinois, where he was born on the 21st of February, 1845. His father, James E. Waller, a native of Kentucky, settled at Rockford, Illinois, in 1844, before the building of railroads through that section. Three years later he moved to Avon, Wisconsin, where he was for many years a substantial farmer, and where he died in 1872 at the age of sixty-one. James E. Waller married a cousin, Eleanor E. Waller, who was born five miles north of Milledgeville, Georgia, was married at Carrollton, Kentucky, March 9, 1830, and died in Charles City, Iowa, August 9, 1900, at the extreme age of ninety-four years three months and twenty-five days. She was the mother of eight children, four of whom attained maturity, and three are still living.

Mr. Waller, the youngest of the family, was educated in the public schools and a seminary at Durand, Illinois. His ambition was for a medical career and he entered the oldest medical school in the west, Rush Medical College of Chicago, where he was graduated M. D. in February, 1869. He was engaged in the active practice of medicine for about forty years, a period in which he did a great amount of disinterested and kindly service, and various communities where he lived still appreciate his work and citizenship. During the first year out of medical school he practiced at Calamine, Wisconsin, and then was a resident of Plymouth, Iowa, until 1885. For two years he was at Marble Rock, Iowa, and then practiced at Rockford in the same state until 1909. In May of the latter year, having retired from active work in his profession, he came to Montana and has since made his home in Eureka. He has interested himself in the movements for a better town, and though never an office seeker, was in January, 1911, honored with the office of justice of the peace, a place of trust which his public spirit would not allow him to decline. He has always voted the Democratic ticket, but has never been a party worker.

Dr. Waller affiliates with the Cornerstone Lodge of Masons at Marble Rock, Iowa, and went through all the chairs of the Modern Woodmen camp at Rockford, Iowa. He was married in Monroe, Wisconsin, March 23, 1872, to Miss Adelaide A. Buffington, daughter of Andrew Calvin Buffington. Mrs. Waller, who died at Rockford, January 3, 1905, aged fifty-eight years ten months and one day, was the mother of five children. Lillian B. is the wife of Willard C. Albee, a merchant of Eureka, and they have one son; Raymond L. is the partner of Mr. Albee in the Waller-Albee Mercantile Company, one of the largest in Eureka. Arthur M. is superintendent of public instruction at Minot, North Dakota. Miss Edith is bookkeeper for the Waller-Albee Company. Claude J. is a mounted customs officer with residence at Glasgow, Montana. January 10, 1907, Mr. Waller married Marie E. Lines, a native of Marble Rock, Iowa, and daughter of John Lines. Mrs. Waller lived only thirty-four days after her marriage, and is buried beside the doctor's first wife in Iowa.

GEORGE RICHARD DAVIES. A man of superior mental attainments, capable and progressive, George Richard Davies, assistant secretary at the Cary Land Act office, holds an assured position among the esteemed residents of Helena. A native of England, he was born September 26, 1867, in the parish of Wales, County of York, and was there educated. His parents spent their entire lives in Wales, England.

Brought up in his native city, George Richard Davies obtained high rank for scholarship while attending college, and after his arrival in this country, while living in Scranton, Pennsylvania, received two diplomas from his alma mater, one on theoretical mechanics, and the other on mathematics. He remained in Scranton six months, while there advancing his education at a business college. Going then to Ottumwa, Iowa, he was there employed as a stationary engineer for a year, during which time he attended a night school, his purpose being to familiarize himself with American business methods. Leaving that city, Mr. Davies was weigh master at a smelter in Anaconda, Montana, for a while, subsequently being a resident of Butte, Montana, for twenty consecutive years. During his first three years in Butte, Mr. Davies was deputy clerk in Judge Lynch's court, and was afterwards department clerk for Judge Lynch for many terms. Being appointed assistant secretary of the Cary Land Act office in 1909, he, of necessity, transferred his residence to Helena, the capital city of the state of Montana. Owing to a subsequent change in the personnel of the land office, Mr. Davies in addition to his original duties is also serving as assistant secretary to the official board, thus giving the engineer more leisure to attend to his particular work.

Politically Mr. Davies is identified with the Republicans, and once, while in Butte, ran for auditor, but was beaten, the whole Republican ticket suffering defeat at that election. Fraternally he is a member, and past chancellor of Mount Maria Lodge, No. 24, Knights of Pythias. He is a prominent member of Saint Paul's Methodist church, being secretary of its official board, and belonging to its choir. He has been successful in his business career, and is financially interested in the mineral lands of Lewis and Clark county.

Mr. Davies married, January 10, 1893, at Butte, Montana, Agnes Jones, a native of Pennsylvania.

JOHN A. COLEMAN, now one of the best-known and most successful lawyers in the city of Lewistown, Montana, where he has been established since 1909, has seen a varied existence since he first began to fend for himself at the tender age of ten years. Ambition and perseverance have constituted the keynote of his life, and he has never been a stranger to hard work. He saw to the acquiring of an education without assistance from family or friends, and the position which he occupies today in Lewistown is the direct result of his own concerted effort.

Mr. Coleman was born in Alamakee county, Iowa, on the 27th of June, 1877, and is the seventh child of the fourteen born to his parents, Michael and Margaret (Corcoran) Coleman. Michael Coleman was born in County Galway, Ireland, while the mother was a native of Covington, Kentucky.

When Michael Coleman was two years of age he came with his parents to America. He was a youth of fifteen years when the Civil war broke out, and straightway his combative and heroic spirit manifested itself in a compelling desire to enlist. His youth caused his parents to resist his impulse and determination, but nothing daunted, the young patriot did not hesitate to take "French leave" of his home and family. He was so unfortunate as to be apprehended before he was able to enlist, and was taken home, much to his disgust. His ardor was not dampened by this slight check, however, and it is of record that the boy ran away a second and a third time before he finally accomplished his purpose and succeeded in joining the Union forces, in which he served honorably until the close of the war. For a full quarter century Michael Coleman lived in Montana and followed the business of railroading, but at present he is living on his ranch in North Dakota. His wife died at Livingston, Montana, in 1901, in the fifty-seventh year of her life. Two of their daughters make their homes in this state. Elizabeth, the wife of John J. O'Connor, lives in Butte, and Stella, who married Michael Crowley, lives in Logan, Montana.

In 1881, four years after the birth of John Coleman in Alamakee county, Iowa, he was brought to North Dakota by his parents, but the stay of the family there was a short one, as it was their desire to locate in the extreme west, or at least, to a more distant part of the west than is represented by the Dakotas. Their next move took them to Eastern Montana, which was their home until 1891, and from there they moved to Livingston. The family continued to reside there until the death of the mother in 1901. John Coleman early began to care for himself, and at the age of ten he found his first employment in the selling of fancy autograph cards, which will be remembered as being immensely popular in those days. He soon gave up that work to take a regular job as herder for the Hatchet Company, at a salary of forty-five dollars a month. This money he gave to his mother to assist in the support of the large family of which he was one. When they moved to Livingston, he was fourteen years old, and there he secured work with the Northern Pacific Railroad as clerk in their store room department. During these years the boy attended school whenever he found it in any way possible, as he had a determination to secure something of an education, at whatever cost. He succeeded in completing the high school course in Livingston when he was nineteen and he straightway left that city and went to Minneapolis, where he entered the University of Minnesota after completing his entrance requirements at St. Thomas College, in St. Paul. His passage through the University was made possible through his own efforts, as he worked his own way, and in 1900 he was graduated from the University. He then returned to Montana and entered the law office of A. J. Campbell of Butte, with whom he was associated for about two years. He was then appointed deputy county attorney for Silver Bow county, spending two years in that office, after which he engaged in private practice in Butte. He was one of the attorneys for the Heinze Company, of western fame, and also for the Fusion party. In 1904 Mr. Coleman was sent to the legislature from Silver Bow county, and served for one term, and he has since then taken a particularly active part in the field of politics, the ranks of the Democratic party finding in him a fighter of strength and courage, and one of the best of organizers. Although he is a Democrat in his politics, Mr. Coleman is a warm personal friend of Colonel Roosevelt, with whom he became acquainted on a cattle ranch in North Dakota.

John A. Coleman

On June 15, 1908, Mr. Coleman married Miss Anna Maguire who is the daughter of Charles and Rosanna Maguire, of Boulder, Montana. The marriage was solemnized in the city of Bozeman. Three sons have been born to them: John M., the eldest, was born in Butte; Don C. was born in Lewistown in 1910, and Joseph B. was also born in Lewistown, in 1912.

Mr. and Mrs. Coleman are devout communicants of the Roman Catholic church, and are very active in its work. Mr. Coleman is a member of the Knights of Columbus, and in both Butte and Lewistown has been prominent in that organization. He has been Grand Knight in the lodge of both cities, and has been especially active in the work of the order. He is also a member of the Benevolent Protective Order of Elks, and is a member of the Judith Club and Elks Club of Lewistown.

WILLIAM J. MARSHALL, M. D. One of the first members of the medical profession to locate in Polson county was Dr. Marshall, of Polson, where he has become well known as a successful physician and citizen of public spirit.

William J. Marshall won his way into professional life by hard work and ability, and the community which has received his service has known him as a hard-working, conscientious and skillful doctor. He was born in Shiawassee county, Michigan, September 5, 1875, the first of two children born to Albert and Ida (Payne) Marshall. The mother, who was the first white child born in central Michigan, died at the age of twenty-two in 1879. Her grandmother was Lydia Payne, whose ancestors had come from England and settled in Connecticut in 1644. The paternal ancestors were also of English stock, the family having been founded in America by the Doctor's great-grandfather, who was a settler in New York state, and the family afterward migrated to Canada. The Doctor had ancestors who served in the Revolution, the War of 1812 and the Civil war. Albert Marshall, the father, a native of Canada, during the '60s became an early settler of central Michigan. Farming has been his occupation and he is now residing in Saginaw county.

Dr. Marshall attended the country schools in Saginaw county and was graduated from the Chesaning high school in 1893. Four years were given up to teaching in northern Michigan, and by this means he earned enough money to prepare himself for a professional career. Entering the University of Michigan in the literary department, he graduated A. B. in 1905 and then took up his studies in the medical department. A position as instructor assisted him in remaining at the university throughout his school career, and during his senior year in medicine he also served as an interne. He was graduated in medicine in 1909, and in the following October located as one of the first physicians at Polson, Montana.

Dr. Marshall is a member of the county, state and national medical organizations, and his fraternal connections are with the Polson Masonic Lodge No. 78, being present master of the lodge; the Odd Fellows, Modern Woodmen of America, Woodmen of the World, the Eastern Star and Rebekahs, all of which are represented at Polson. He is medical examiner for all the insurance orders. In politics he is independent, and his church is the Congregational. The Doctor was president of the Polson school board in 1911, and is present health officer.

Dr. Marshall was married at Detroit, December 31, 1902, to Miss Maude M. Briley, a daughter of Allen and Sarah Briley, of Hetherton, Michigan. Before her marriage Mrs. Marshall was a student of the Agricultural College and the University of Michigan, and is a talented woman, with considerable literary ability. She is a member of the Eastern Star, the Rebekahs and the Royal Neighbors of America.

PROFESSOR HERBERT L. SACKETT. Prominent among the foremost educators of Montana is Professor Herbert L. Sackett, of Lewistown, principal of the Fergus County High School, who during the four years he had filled this important position has won a far more than local reputation as an instructor and a disciplinarian, and gained a position of note in social and literary circles. He was born May 6, 1877, at Smiths Mills, New York, where the days of his childhood were passed.

His father, the late Irving Sackett, spent his entire life of fifty-eight years in Chautauqua county, New York, during his early manhood teaching school at Smiths Mills, and later being there engaged in tilling the soil. He married Maria A. Nevins, a native of the Empire state. She survived him a few years, passing away in 1900, at the age of sixty-four years, her body being laid beside his in the family burial plot, on the old homestead.

The youngest of a family of three children, Herbert L. Sackett acquired his rudimentary education in the public schools of his native town, and after the death of his father moved to Forestville, New York, where he continued his studies to some purpose, taking a four years' course in half of that time. Coming then to Fredonia, New York, he entered the State Normal School, where he completed a four years' course in three years, the ease with which he mastered his tasks bespeaking his physical vigor as well as his mental ability. The ensuing two years Mr. Sackett taught school at West Valley, New York, meeting with such eminent success that when he resigned Mr. A. O. Tillinghast, secretary of the local school board, said that it was a great disappointment of the board to lose his services. Determining to further advance his knowledge, Mr. Sackett then entered Brown University, at Providence, Rhode Island, where he was graduated with honors in 1904, being historian of the class, and also having the distinction of receiving two degrees at the same time, it being the first time in the history of that university that any one had received more than one degree at the same time, his degrees having been those of Bachelor of Philosophy and Master of Arts. He was also made a member, in May, 1904, of the Rhode Island Alpha of the Phi Beta Kappa Society, which is a scholarship organization to which a limited number of each graduating class is invited to join, having been admitted upon the recommendation of Alexander Meiklejohn, dean of the University, who wrote as follows:

"I am very glad to recommend Mr. H. L. Sackett upon the basis of my general knowledge of him as a student in Brown University. Mr. Sackett has done a great deal of outside work while a resident as a student here. He has also taken an active part in the work of the various college organizations. In addition to this he has maintained a very high standard of scholarship, and has done enough extra work to take his A. M. degree, which usually stands for five years' work—as well as his A. B. degree, in four years. Mr. Sackett is a man of strong purpose and thoroughly upright character, as well as of attractive personality. He has very obviously the ability to do a large amount of work, and at the same time keep that work high in quality. In addition to all his outside engagements he has, during his stay in Brown, earned all the money he has used in the payment of his college expenses. I think it is quite evident from what he has done in college that he is bound to succeed in whatever he undertakes. He tells me that his plan is to teach. I am sure that he is admirably fitted for the work, and I know he will be successful in it." Testimonials from the president of Brown University, from the registrar, and from various members of its corps of instructors likewise give unqualified affirmation of the exceedingly high scholarship and manly qualities of Mr. Sackett while in that institution. Letters and recommendations from the principals, superintendents and inspectors of the different schools with which Mr. Sackett has since been connected as an instructor bear proof that he has met with eminent success in his professional career, and show conclusively that Mr. Meiklejohn was not at all mistaken in regard to Mr. Sackett's abilities.

While in college Mr. Sackett was for two years a member of the Glee Club; was three years a member of the college band; and was president of the musical organization of fifty members. Paying his own college expenses, Professor Sackett taught in the evening schools of the city of Providence, Rhode Island, from 1900 until 1904, being vice-principal two winters, and principal two winters. The two years following his graduation, he was Master of Science at the Pingry College Preparatory School at Elizabeth, New Jersey, and from 1907 until 1909 principal of the Dunkirk, New York, High School.

In September, 1909, Professor Sackett assumed his present responsible position as principal of the County High School, in Lewistown, Montana, and is filling it in a most able and creditable manner. Under his régime this institution is in a flourishing condition; its membership has been increased fully forty per cent, a large number of non-resident pupils having been attracted to Lewistown from various parts of the country through the good work accomplished in the different departments of the County High School. Alert and wide-awake to the needs of the school's equipments, the Professor has been instrumental in the installation of many new and desirable features, including among other things worthy of special mention plumbing, drinking fountains, sanitary towels, a new gymnasium, while now the building of a dormitory is being agitated. A thorough course in agriculture has been introduced into the school system, and the academic courses have been remodeled and revised until to-day they are the most advanced of any in the state. The debating society which was formed under the auspices of Professor Sackett won the championship over the other schools the first year of its existence, and has won at some of the contests each year since.

Since its foundation nine years ago, the County High School has made a steady growth in numbers, equipment and efficiency, attaining a high rank among the leading educational institutions of Montana. The courses of study are well arranged, comprehensive and practical, and compare favorably with those offered by the Phillips-Andover Academy, in Andover, Massachusetts, one of the most noted preparatory schools of the East. In addition to its preparatory studies this school maintains a course that consists of four years of English, three years of German or French, four years of mathematics, three years of history, three years of science, and a commercial course of arithmetic or book-keeping, or a thorough commercial course, which in addition to mathematics and book-keeping has a course of commercial geography and railroad transportation, business arithmetic and commercial law, stenography and type-writing, giving the student a practical knowledge far surpassing the training given in the average business college. Languages and music are taught by special instructors, and the course in domestic science and domestic economy recently instituted is proving very successful and popular. Too much credit cannot be given to the board of directors, and to Professor Sackett, for their work in the interests of this school, and to the people of the county whose encouragements have made it possible to achieve so much in so short a space of time.

Professor Sackett is a self-made man in every sense implied by the term, his life record furnishing to the rising generation a forcible illustration of the material success to be gained by persevering industry and persistency of purpose. He earned his first money when but six years old, picking berries for twelve cents a day. At the age of fourteen years he was left fatherless, and became dependent almost entirely upon his own resources. He had previously worked as a farm hand during his school vacations, and he continued a farm laborer for some time, afterwards working with a gang that dug holes for telephone posts, receiving $1.25 a day. Wise in his savings, and prudent in his expenditures, he accumulated in course of time a sufficient sum to warrant him in entering college, and while in college he earned money in various ways, having been purser on an ocean steamer two summers, guide at the Pan-American Exposition, in Buffalo one summer, in the meantime teaching school as opportunity occurred. Since entering upon his professional career he has traveled quite extensively, visiting on his trips abroad all of the large European cities.

Professor Sackett is a member of the Outlook Club, which he served as president one year; he also belongs to the Montana National Guard, being a corporal in Company D, of Lewistown; and is a member of the Ancient Free and Accepted Order of Masons. He enjoys music and theatricals, and is manager of a musical club which he organized in Lewistown in 1911. Especially fond of horseback riding and camping, the Professor takes a trip across the country or over the mountains every summer. He is a man of fine physique, being nearly six feet in height, and weighing one hundred and seventy pounds, and has a pleasing personality, being genial, courteous and approachable. He is a "booster" in every respect, never failing to say a good word for Montana, which he honestly declares is the best state he was ever in for advancement and personal satisfaction in the teacher's profession. Although Independent in politics, the Professor is ever a staunch advocate of all measures tending to promote the welfare of town, county, or state, and can always be counted upon to do his full share in the establishment of beneficial projects.

HARRY JOSEPH MCGREGOR, M. D. It is usually only men of perseverance and strong determination that select the newer in preference to the older sections of our country in which to carve out a career. In June, 1909, there came to Choteau, Montana, a young member of the medical profession, Dr. Harry Joseph McGregor, who had just received his degree, and, well fortified in his educational acquirements and with the alert mentality of his Scotch-Irish blood, had set out to win that success which would entitle him to representation among the best medical ability of the state. Such prestige could scarcely be won in three years, but he has made a splendid beginning and already commands a very satisfactory practice.

The name McGregor is distinctly Scotch and it was from the Land of the Thistle that the originator of the family in America, the grandfather of Dr. McGregor, came. He first settled in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and from thence traveled overland to Iowa, where he became a pioneer settler and took up farming. James McGregor, the father of our subject, was a native of Pennsylvania and removed west during the '60s, locating at Davenport, Iowa, where he became a merchant and has taken an active and prominent part in the civic and public life of that city, serving some years as a councilman. At Dubuque, Iowa, James McGregor married Elizabeth Redfern, a native of Iowa whose parents were early settlers in that state. The Redferns are of Irish descent. Of the six children of these parents, Harry Joseph is fourth in order of birth, his nativity having occurred on December 3, 1874. James McGregor, an elder brother, is a graduate of the state university of Iowa and is now a practicing physician at West Branch, Iowa.

After graduating from the Davenport high school in 1904 Dr. McGregor entered the Iowa State University, from which he was graduated in 1908 with the degree of Doctor of Medicine. In June of the following year he located at Choteau, Montana, and has now become well established in a general practice there. To further his professional qualifications he took post graduate work in Chicago, Illinois, and in Iowa City, Iowa, during the summer of 1911. Dr. McGregor is the present health officer of Teton county. He affiliates fraternally with the Knights of Columbus, and in religious faith is a communicant of the Roman Catholic church.

H. J. M. S. Gregor. M.D.

Dr. McGregor on June 12, 1912, was united in marriage to Mary, daughter of Michael A. O'Neill, of Cut Bank, Montana.

EDGAR R. MCPHERSON. Edgar R. McPherson was born in Ontario, Canada, on the eighth day of September, 1870. He is the son of William McPherson, a Canadian by birth who passed away in 1905. The elder Mr. McPherson, was a carriage maker by trade. For many years he acted as manager for Promlie and Company. In latter life he moved to Galt, Ontario, where he became general manager for Kynock and Percy, the best known firm of carriage makers in Canada. Before her marriage, Mrs. Elizabeth McPherson was Elizabeth Corbett. She became the mother of four children, only two of whom lived through their infancy. The oldest, William, died in his thirty-first year, in the city of Freelon, Ontario. His death left Edgar R. the only surviving member of the McPherson family.

As a boy, Mr. McPherson had attended the common schools of Galt and completed the work of the high school at the early age of twelve. He was then compelled to discontinue his studies on account of his frail physical condition. Even in his childhood he had never been robust and the parents were naturally much concerned as to his health. Shortly, he secured a position with the grocery firm of Gavin, Hume & Company, a position which kept him much in the open and which he retained during the four years following. Most of the evenings of these years were spent in study at the night schools, as he was unwilling to consider his education finished at the age of twelve. George Laird, of Galt, then offered him an opportunity for advancement and kept him in his employ for the next four years. At the age of twenty-one, young Mr. McPherson left Canada for Chicago and there became department manager for the firm of Charles Slack & Company. Four years later he resigned this position to accept a similar one with E. W. Eggers, another grocery house of Chicago. In 1897 he signed a contract with the Kennedy Biscuit Company which merged, later, with the National Biscuit Company. For two years he served them in the capacity of general salesman, being then advanced to special work. Until 1910 he represented the company throughout the west, being in charge of a vast territory in which he had general supervision of all sales. On the thirty-first day of January, 1910, he was appointed general manager of the Helena branch of the National Biscuit Company, with residence in Helena. Here he is rapidly becoming one of the well-known citizens of that place.

Before leaving his Canadian home, Mr. McPherson was united in marriage to Miss Willa McEwan, the daughter of Mr. George McEwan of Guelph, Ontario. The marriage was solemnized in 1899. The following year the young wife became a mother, exchanging her own life for that of her infant daughter who bears the mother's name, Willa. Miss Willa is now attending boarding school in Guelph, Ontario, the home of her maternal grandparents.

Mr. McPherson has always been a student by nature. He is a member of no lodge or secret organization, preferring to devote his evenings to his wife and intimate friends. Not even in politics do they find a rival for his leisure. His sympathies, however, in the political situation have always been with the Democratic party. On the second day of January, 1908, Mr. McPherson was married at Grand Forks, North Dakota, to Miss Isabella Clare Durrick, the daughter of Mr.

and Mrs. John Durrick of that city. Mrs. McPherson has taught her husband the real meaning of the word home. Both are delighted with Helena and its opportunities.

J. REA MORFORD, one of the popular young business men of Melstone, Montana, who is proprietor of a drug store there, was born in Humeston, Iowa, on June 4, 1887, and there received a common and high school education. Later he matriculated at the University of Iowa, from which institution he was graduated with the Ph. G. degree. Before going to college he had been employed in a drug store, where he gained a practical knowledge of pharmacy, and after his graduation he went to Kenmare, North Dakota, where he followed the drug business one year. Thence, in 1910, he came to Montana, and settled first at Glendive, but after one year there he removed to Melstone and established his present business. He carries a complete line of drugs and druggists' sundries and in every way is well equipped to supply his growing trade.

Mr. Morford is a son of Isaac C. Morford, a native of Illinois who removed from that state to Iowa, where he followed farming many years in Wayne county but is now retired. The latter is an active and consistent member of the Congregational church, and as a Republican has taken a prominent part in local political affairs, having served in several of the more important county offices. He was married in Iowa to Ruth Wells, a native of Pennsylvania, and they now reside in Humeston, Iowa.

J. Rea Morford is the youngest of their four children and is the only member of his family in Montana, the others being located in various states. He is a member of the Congregational church and is a member and former officer of the Phi Delta Ki college fraternity. In political views he is a Republican and is keenly interested in the problems that now confront his party. As is usual with college men, he is interested in athletics and in other social diversions and especially enjoys the game of football, both as a spectator and as a participant. Mr. Morford is convinced that no other state offers the young man of pluck and determination as many and as fine opportunities as does Montana.

MESSRS. DUFF & DUFF. The Duff brothers, Messrs. Edward S. Duff and Hardaman Blaine Duff, are successful lawyers, doing business under the firm name of Duff & Duff. They enjoy much prosperity and are very highly respected by all in every way.

Mr. Edward S. Duff had as his birthplace the city of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, having been born there on March 4, 1880. That great city was his home until he had arrived at about the age of twelve years, when he removed with his parents to Minnesota, locating in Duluth. In 1906 the family changed their home to western Canada. There Edward remained until 1909, when he came to Dillon, Montana, arriving here early in 1910. From that time he has been engaged in the active practice of the law here.

Mr. Duff enjoyed the privilege of excellent early education in the public schools of Pittsburgh, and later in Minnesota and Wisconsin. He takes pride in the fact that in boyhood he earned his first cash as a newsboy in Pittsburgh. In church relations he has a preference for the Episcopal worship. In fraternal matters he is an enthusiastic member of the order of Elks and is a member of the Beaverhead Commercial Club. True to the spirit of the home of the "Pirates" and his own early home, as well as to the spirit of Dillon, he is a devotee of the great national game of baseball and is proud to rank himself among the "fans." His enthusiasm for baseball does not, however, prevent interest in other matters, as he is fond of football, loves to hunt and fish, is a great reader of good books, is fond of theatricals and is a lover of music.

Mr. Hardaman Blaine Duff is also a native of Pittsburgh, having been born there October 18, 1884. He received his early education in the public schools of Pittsburgh and of Duluth, Minnesota. He then became a student at the University of Minnesota at Minneapolis, where he was graduated in the class of 1909. There were eighty-five members of his class, and this large number suggests the high honor he attained by being made president of his class. On graduation he received his degree cum laude, which fact indicates that he stood at the head of his class. Mr. Hardaman Duff is in political affiliations an earnest Republican, and he takes an active interest in politics.

The father of these young lawyers was Samuel K. Duff, who was also a native of Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and came west to Minnesota. He had been engaged in the iron business in his native city and he followed the same industry in his new home. He built the first iron plant in West Duluth and for a number of years was associated with the Merritts. He died in April, 1911, in Regina, Canada, and is buried at Winnipeg. At the time of his death he was president of the Northwestern Canada Land Company. The mother, Elizabeth Duff, was born in Pittsburgh, and now resides in Canada with a married daughter. The elder Duff family was large, consisting of eight boys and a girl.

BISCHOFF & JOHNSON. One of the thriving establishments of the city and one known throughout the state is that of Bischoff & Johnson, the leading furriers of Helena. This is a business which is of large importance in the northern section of our country, and the members of the firm have made a thorough study of all branches of the industry. They are expert judges of skins of every sort and there is nothing pertaining to the workmanship of fur garments which they do not know from the foundation.

Charles O. Bischoff, the senior member of the firm, was born in St. Paul, and completed the curriculum of the public schools in that city at the age of fifteen, after which he went into his father's establishment and learned the fur dressing business. He decided not to adopt this as his work, choosing instead to go into the fur trade. To learn this, Mr. Bischoff left St. Paul and went to New York, where he had an opportunity to go into the employ of a large firm engaged in the manufacture of fur garments. After some time in the east he returned to his home city and there went to work for Lanpher, Skinner & Company, furriers of that city. He was connected with them for a number of years and then decided to come to Helena and go into business for himself. In the year 1910, in company with Otto H. Johnson, they established the Bischoff & Johnson Fur Company in Helena. At the beginning their concern was but a small one, but by excellent management and a comprehensive knowledge of the business, acquired by an experience of fifteen years each in leading fur houses, they have quickly built up an enterprise that is rated as one of the representative commercial establishments of the city. The fame of this house has permeated the whole of the west and the many sorts of fur garments that they turn out are worn throughout the state.

Mr. Bischoff is a member of the Commercial Club of Helena and of the Helena Retail Merchants' Association.

Mr. Otto H. Johnson, the junior member of the firm, is likewise a native of St. Paul, Minnesota, and after completing his schooling learned the fur business with E. Sundkvist & Company, in that city. Later he was with Gordon & Ferguson, both firms being widely known in that line. In 1910 he came to Helena and with his partner established the business already mentioned. Mr. Johnson is a member of the Helena Commercial Club and the Helena Retail Merchants' Association. The firm purchases the raw materials or skins of the native animals of Montana, and these skins, after being tanned in the east, are dressed and worked in their establishment. The partners are young men of unusual enterprise and initiative, and the steady growth of their business is but the natural sequence of their straightforward and liberal business policy.

DAVID E. BOAM, the proprietor of the Boam Mercantile Store in Walkerville, Montana, is essentially a product of the west. He was born in Murray, Utah, on April 12, 1883, and is the son of Thomas G. Boam, a native of Salt Lake City, and a resident of Fresno, California, where he is engaged in farming. His mother was Mary (Miller) Boam, also a native of Salt Lake City, and she died there on July 29, 1901, and was buried in the place where she was reared and passed her life. She was the mother of ten children, nine sons and one daughter, David being the third in order of birth. He was educated in the public schools of Salt Lake, and when he was eighteen years of age he began work as a traveling salesman, representing the firm of Miller & Cahoon, manufacturers of hardware and implements, and he followed that business until 1910, at which time he came to Walkerville and assumed charge of the business previously established by Joseph Broughton, the store then being conducted by the widow of Arthur B. Bryan. Under the management of Mr. Boam the business is steadily increasing, and it assumed the rank of the leading store in Walkerville last year, the business increase over the previous year amounting to fifty per cent.

Mr. Boam is a Democrat in his political faith, but he has taken no active part in political life. He is a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints, and is president of the Butte branch. He has always been active in the work of the church, and preached the doctrines of the church when he was a boy of fifteen years. He is a total abstainer from the use of liquor and tobacco.

On September 28, 1910, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Boam to Mrs. Margaret (Gillespie) Bryan, the widow of Arthur B. Bryan. Mrs. Boam is the mother of three sons by her first marriage,—Grant G., Jules A. and Ross G. Of the later union one child has been born, David Emerson Boam, born July 14, 1911. Mrs. Boam was a daughter of John Gillespie, born in Glasgow, Scotland, and a resident of Utah for many years, now retired from active business. His wife, Katherine (Ross) Gillespie, was likewise a native of Scotland, born in Edinburgh, and she died at Tooele, Utah, July 20, 1912. The daughter was reared and educated in Tooele, Utah. Her first husband conducted the business of the store now run by Mr. Boam for the interests of Mr. Broughton for a number of years, and later purchased the business. Mr. Bryan died August 1, 1908.

EVAN LEE, whose constant endeavor to maintain the highest newspaper standard has made the Lavina Independent an example to newspapers throughout the state, and who in the columns of his bright, newsy publication is doing much to influence public opinion in the right direction by telling the truth as he finds it and to give the opinions his clear reasons form, became a journalist by election and has been confirmed in his profession by his zeal. Throughout his career he has been identified with some branch of newspaper work, and the success which is attending his efforts as editor and publisher of the Independent is but the result of inherent ability backed up by industry and enterprise. Mr. Lee was born at Fergus Falls, Minnesota, September 24, 1877. His father, Halvor Lee, was a native of Norway, and came to the United States in young manhood, settling in Minnesota as an agriculturist and continuing to be engaged in farming until his death in 1908, at the age of seventy-five years. He was a devout Christian and an active member of the Lutheran church, to which his widow, a resident of Fergus Falls, also belongs. They were married in Minnesota and had five children, of whom Evan was the youngest, while one other son resides in Montana, Edward, who is married and also resides in Lavina.

Evan Lee was not granted exceptional educational advantages, although his attendance at the public schools of Minnesota amply fitted him to take up the trade of printer, to which he served an apprenticeship in his native state. On attaining his majority he removed to Elk Point, South Dakota, where he followed the printing business for about two years, and then spent a year in North Dakota in the same line. Returning to Minnesota, he worked for about one year in Detroit, and spent the next few years in various towns in that state, and in 1910 came to Montana. After spending some time in looking over various localities with the view of finding a field in which to enter the newspaper field, he finally selected Lavina and established his present plant, the first issue of the Independent appearing soon thereafter. The general excellence of this sheet attracted almost immediate attention and patronage, and general public favor caused its circulation to grow by leaps and bounds, until it now has readers throughout this part of the state and wields a recognized influence in public matters. Its policies as to politics are independent, it being the editor's idea to give the reading public a fair, unbiased view of conditions at all times, and its columns are devoted to matters of general interest, prominent national news, breezy local happenings and terse, well-written editorials. Mr. Lee is one of the progressive men of his community and has been a leader in movements tending to benefit Lavina and the surrounding country. At present he is acting as a member of the school board and in the capacity of constable. Fraternally his connection is with the Odd Fellows, in which he has been through all the chairs and is now past grand, is a member of the Lavina Commercial Club, and religiously leans towards the Lutheran church. Mrs. Lee is a member of the Lavina Ladies' Aid Society.

Mr. Lee was married at Fergus Falls, Minnesota, December 30, 1901, to Miss Mina Sand, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Sand, of Fergus Falls, and they have three children: Dorothy H., Lucille L., and Robert E., the first-named being a bright scholar in the public school.

JAMES M. MILLER, prominent among the younger attorneys of Helena, was born in Westfield, Illinois, on the twenty-eighth day of February, 1882. He is the son of Daniel B. Miller, who was a wealthy farmer of western Illinois. The senior Mr. Miller was a native of Ohio, born in that state on February 16, 1836. While yet a young boy his people moved from Ohio to Westfield, Illinois, and were residents of that state at the outbreak of the Civil war. Mr. Miller volunteered his services and was enlisted in company I, of the Twenty-first Illinois Infantry. During the entire four years of the struggle he remained in the service. For eighteen months of that time he lay in the filthy southern prisons, ill and wounded. Even so, he saw much more real service than did most of the infantry and took an active part in many of the important engagements.

On his return home from the war he was married to Margaret Watkins, a young Irish girl who had come to America with her parents while yet an infant. Both Mr. and Mrs. Miller were residents of Westfield prior to their marriage. Mr. Miller's ancestors were from the German Empire while Mrs. Miller was Irish through her mother, her father being a Welsh man who had married and lived in Ireland before leaving the old country.

James M. Miller was the fifth of six children born to these good people. He attended in his childhood the district schools of Parker township and the high school of Westfield. For one term he attended the Westfield College, but completed his course in the Red River Valley University of Dakota. He was graduated from the legal department of the North Dakota University in the class of 1908.

McVile, North Dakota, was chosen as the city of his first legal endeavor. He remained here but a short time, however, before going to LaMoure, where he practiced for fifteen months. By the expiration of the first year he began to realize that a young man who can make good in a small town can succeed just as surely in the city. Accordingly, he moved in 1910 to Helena, Montana, where he opened an office and began a general practice, which has proved very successful.

Mr. Miller is a Progressive in his political views, but thus far, has been able to devote little time to politics, his growing practice leaving him small leisure. He is not a member of any fraternal organization that affiliates with the Methodist Episcopal church of his fathers. He is a member of the Commercial Club. Although still very young in years, he has shown such ability in the profession of his choice that his friends predict for him a future of more than ordinary brilliance. He has not, as yet, joined the ranks of the Benedicts.

CARL J. ENSRUD. A perusal of the business directory of Butte, Montana, discloses the fact that there are located in this progressive city many commercial and industrial enterprises common only to metropolitan communities of the first class. Among the distinctive enterprises of which Butte proudly boasts is the Butte Dental Laboratory, conducted under the personal supervision and management of Mr. Carl J. Ensrud. There is but one other institution of this class in the state of Montana, and none in this or any other state which performs better work or turns out higher class products in its line.

Mr. Ensrud received his professional training for this character of enterprise in the Minot (N. D.) Dental Laboratory, in that splendid institution completing a full course in the science of prescription dentistry. Upon attaining the necessary educational equipment he sought an inviting location for the establishment of his manufacturing laboratory for dentists' supplies, and in the spring of 1910 came to Butte as the most promising field he could find. He fitted out his laboratory with all appliances necessary to enable him to fill orders with dispatch and in the most perfect manner, and has in the comparatively short time that he has been here built up a very profitable business, being able to furnish everything in the dental line required by doctors of the dental science.

Mr. Ensrud is a native of Rushford, Minnesota, where he was born November 9, 1880, the son of Hans and Mary (Mortinson) Ensrud. His parents were both natives of Norway and immigrated to the United States after their marriage, in 1866 settling in Houston county, Minnesota, on a farm, where the father died August 12, 1895. The mother still survives and is a resident of Rushford, Minnesota, at the present writing.

Mr. Ensrud attended the Houston county schools and later enjoyed the benefit of a commercial course in the Wisconsin Business College. Upon completing his work at the business school he first turned his attention to produce trade and went to Minot, North Dakota, to engage in that business. After two years spent as a produce merchant in that city, during which time he also continued his studies in the Minot Dental College, as previously stated, he abandoned his efforts in the produce line and turned his attention permanently to his present enterprise. His success in this venture has already been commented upon, and it is safe to predict that the future holds even larger material and professional rewards for him than the past has given. His laboratory is located at No. 67 Silver Bow Block.

The marriage of Mr. Ensrud to Miss Roberta A. Laurie, a native of Minnesota, and a daughter of James Laurie, of that state, occurred at Minneapolis, Minnesota, October 17, 1906. Mr. and Mrs. Ensrud have a pleasant and hospitable home in Butte and have a large circle of acquaintances in the leading social sets of the city. Fraternally Mr. Ensrud is affiliated with the Knights of Pythias, holding membership in Lodge No. 170, at Stephen, Minnesota. He is a man of independent thought and action and interested in all affairs that promote the best development of the city and state of which he is an honored citizen.

PHIL F. JESTRAB. The largest establishment for the sale of farm implements in northern Montana is that of Jestrab Brothers in Havre. Though recently established here, the members of the firm are both men of long experience in this line of trade, and through their ability and energy have built up a business to be proud of.

Phil F. Jestrab was born in Osnabrock, North Dakota, May 2, 1884, and is the fourth in a family of eight children whose parents were Frank and Anna (Capauch) Jestrab. The parents were both natives of Austria-Hungary. The father came to America in the late sixties at the age of fourteen with his parents, who became agricultural settlers near Cresco, Iowa. In 1881 he moved to North Dakota, was a farmer resident at Grafton, one of the early settlers, and was subsequently engaged in the farm implement business. He was a very successful business man. The mother also came to America when a little girl, her family also settling in Iowa, where she was reared and married.

Phil F. Jestrab received his education in the public schools of Grafton, North Dakota, and after leaving high school in his eighteenth year became a telegraph operator, being employed in that capacity with the Great Northern eight months. He then entered the establishment of his father at Pisek, North Dakota, and under his direction learned the farm implement business in all its details. After being associated with his father two years he engaged in the business on his own account at Deering, North Dakota, his older brother Frank, being his partner, and the firm name being Frank Jestrab & Company, hardware, farm implements, etc. After six years they sold their well established business in the spring of 1910. For about a year Phil Jestrab traveled in Washington, Oregon and Idaho, looking for a new location, and in the fall of 1910 took up a homestead near Havre. In February, 1911, he and his brother Frank again engaged in business, under the name Jestrab Brothers, at No. 333 First street, dealing in farm implements, wagons, buggies, etc. The first year their trade amounted to thirty thousand dollars, while during the present year of 1912 the business will total at least seventy thousand. This is the largest trade in this particular line in northern Montana.

Mr. Jestrab is a Democrat in politics, but not active. He is a member of the Havre Chamber of Commerce, and affiliates with the local camp of the Modern Woodmen of America. He is a member of the Catholic church. He was married at Cando, North Dakota, December 20, 1910, to Miss Florence Fundeshide, who was born in North Dakota.

Frank Jestrab, the senior member of the above firm, was born in Iowa, May 12, 1880, and received his education in the Grafton public schools, which he left at the age of twenty and entered the business of his father. He came to Montana with his brother, and also took up a homestead in Hill county. He affiliates with the Eagles and the Yeomen, belongs to the Chamber of Commerce, and is a member of the Catholic church. He was married at Seattle, Washington, November 1, 1909, to Miss Anna Larson. She is a native of Minnesota.

HILMAR H. WAHRMUND, cashier of the New York Life Insurance Company's agency at Butte, was born in Gillespie county, Texas, on January 9, 1884, and lived there, except when he was away at school, until he reached the age of twenty. His parents, August and Fannie (Schild) Wahrmund, were of the same nativity as himself. The father was born on October 8, 1853, and died on April 23, 1896. He was a banker and general merchant, and passed the whole of his life in the region where it began. The mother, who is now living in San Antonio, Texas, is a daughter of August Schild, in his day a prominent resident of Gillespie county in that state, and her grand-parents were early settlers there, taking up their residence in the locality when the country was still wild and unpeopled, it being in the early fifties. She was born on June 14, 1856, and by her marriage with Mr. Wahrmund became the mother of seven children, three sons and four daughters, her son Hilmar being the third of the six in the order of birth.

Hilmar H. Wahrmund began his academic education in the country school near his home and completed it at an academy in San Antonio, where he also pursued a course of special training in a good business college, attending school until he was twenty years old. He then left home to take up the burden of making a livelihood for himself, and for his purpose secured a position as collector for the San Antonio Drug Company, extensively engaged in the wholesale drug trade. At the end of one year's service with this company he moved to Los Angeles, California, where he found employment under the F. W. Braun Company, also wholesale druggists. He was given the management of the company's billing department, and remained in charge of it fifteen months.

By the end of that period he had made many acquaintances in the city and saw new business opportunities. He became connected with the New York Life Insurance Company on August 23, 1905, as a bookkeeper and assistant cashier, and he remained in its service in that capacity in Los Angeles four years and a half. He was then transferred to Butte, to take charge of the company's office in that city, and there he has been so employed ever since, having begun his work in Butte on February 25, 1910.

In political faith Mr. Wahrmund is a Republican, but he is not an active partisan and never takes part in political contests of any kind beyond performing a good citizen's duty in casting his vote according to his convictions and desire to promote the best interests of his city, county and state. His religious connection is with the German Lutheran church, in the work of which he takes an active part.

On June 30, 1906, at Los Angeles, California, Mr. Wahrmund was united in marriage with Miss Beatrice Vejar, born in that city November 16, 1884, daughter of Dolores and Mary E. (Goss) Vejar.

Mr. Wahrmund's paternal ancestors came from Germany, Emil Wahrmund having been the founder of the American branch of the family. The mother's grand-parents moved to Texas from Germany in the early forties and her ancestors were also German, but several generations of the family have lived in the United States.

H. MASON RABORG. There is much in having distinguished ancestry to account for a man's success in life. He may or may not inherit the traits of character that gave his ancestry distinction, and if he should inherit them, unless they be basic and of themselves productive, without regard to circumstances, there is no assurance that they will meet the changed conditions with which they will have to contend as compared with those that confronted his forefathers. But if he have that within which is essential and virile, he will make his mark without regard to surroundings and requirements.

H. Mason Raborg came from New York to Montana in 1910 and became president of the State Savings Bank of Butte. He was born in Baltimore, Maryland, on August 2nd, 1867, and is a son of Dr. Samuel A. and Matilda (Mason) Raborg, the former a native of Maryland and the latter of Virginia.

The father was a noted physician of Baltimore and New York and died in the latter city at the age of forty-five years. His great-grandfather, Christopher Raborg, founded the first bank in Baltimore. The mother belonged to the eminent Mason family of Virginia, Maryland. She was married to Dr. Raborg at the close of the war and died in 1898 universally esteemed for her high character, great social culture and useful public spirit. The same qualities gave her husband renown in the state, and his early demise was universally lamented there.

Their son, H. Mason Raborg, was educated at the Georgetown University in the District of Columbia. Starting immediately in business he became agent for several eastern woolen manufactories which were later on absorbed by the American Woolen Company. Young Raborg then bought a seat on the New York stock exchange and formed the firm of Weaver, Raborg & Co., with offices in the Drexel building, New York.

The firm prospered and grew in favor and influence until Mr. Weaver, a somewhat elderly man, withdrew from business and the firm of Raborg & Maucie succeeded. The business continued to expand in volume and a banking business was added to its operations.

The firm of Raborg & Maucie continued in business eight years, and was then dissolved, Mr. Raborg determining to come to the west. The presidency of the State Savings Bank of Butte being offered him he accepted it. Under Mr. Raborg's able management the bank flourished and is now recognized as one of the best conducted fiscal institutions in the country. He resigned from the State Savings Bank in February, 1912, believing there were greater possibilities for usefulness in an institution whose functions would be state wide. To that end he accepted the presidency of the Farmers & Drovers Co. This company was formed to loan on cattle and lands with the idea of promoting the development of Montana.

On Dec. 4, 1905, Mr. Raborg was married in New York City to Mary Wigham, a daughter of John and Phoebe Wigham. John Wigham was formerly a partner of Jay Cook and both men were well-known Wall street financiers.

While devoted to the west, Mr. Raborg still keeps up his eastern associations. He is a member of the following clubs: The Metropolitan, the St. Nicholas, the Railroad and the Larchmont Yacht clubs of New York City and the New York Athletic Club. He is also a member of the Maryland Club of Baltimore; the Canadian Yacht Club of Toronto, Canada; the Silver Bow, the University and the Country Club of Butte, and the Montana Club of Helena. In politics he is a Republican, ardently devoted to the welfare of his party.

As an athlete Mr. Raborg has had quite a career and for a time was quarter mile running champion of the United States.

WILLIAM W. GALT. Loyalty to state and faith in its marvelous resources and possibilities are conspicuous characteristics of Montana's citizenship. This belief has brought many capable citizens of other states to a residence here, and one of these is Mr. William W. Galt, of Stanford, who was for many years prosperous in business and influential in public affairs in Minnesota, but recently moved to Montana as a home for his later years, and where his sons are now prominent in business.

Mr. Galt was born in the state of Wisconsin, May 8, 1854, and when about twelve years old moved to Freehorn county, Minnesota, which was his home until 1910, in which year he located at Stanford. His early education was in the village schools of Wisconsin and Minnesota, and from the beginning to the conclusion of his active career he was identified with agriculture.

During his residence in Minnesota Mr. Galt was one of the leaders in his part of the state in public affairs, and a very active member of the Republican party. He served three terms in the state legislature, and while in that body became the father of the insurance law which was one of the important legislative advances in the state, and likewise gave his support to many other beneficial laws and measures. In his home locality he had been honored with various places of trust and responsibility.

Mr. Galt was married at Albert Lea, Minnesota, on October 27, 1875, to Miss Emaretta Robinson, daughter of Henry and Jane Robinson, of Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Galt have had a happy wedded life for thirty-seven years. They took up the work of the world together with the energy and enthusiasm of youth, and by co-operation and mutual trust established a home, reared a fine family of children, and gained prosperity and honored positions as members of their community. Ten children, seven sons and three daughters, came into their home, namely: Vernon, now deceased; Mabel, the wife of L. E. Eckert, of Minnesota; Edna, the wife of W. E. Donaldson, of North Dakota; William, who has a family and is a resident of North Dakota; Mayme, the wife of Sanford Eckert, of Nebraska; Henry H., who is married and a resident of Stanford, Montana; Errol F., Oliver J. and Glen A., all unmarried and young, progressive citizens of Stanford; and the youngest, Rollin D., a student in the local schools. Mr. and Mrs. Galt took pains to give their children the best influences of home life and a good practical education, fitting them for useful and honorable careers. The sons are now proprietors and active managers of the only exclusive hardware and implement store in Stanford, and have built up a large trade in the town and surrounding country.

The family have for many years been prominent workers in the United Brethren church. In the Stanford church Mrs. Galt is president of the Ladies' Aid Society, while Mr. Galt is superintendent of the Sunday school. One of Mr. Galt's positive beliefs in the near future of Montana is that it will have schools and churches the equal of any in any other state, and the influence of himself and family is one of the factors which promotes the development of these substantial elements in any society. Mr. and Mrs. Galt have an attractive and comfortable home for themselves and children. Good books, music and the wholesome recreations of body and mind are in high favor with them, and their careers have always stood for high moral worth and Christian conduct.

HENRY S. ANDERSON. As manager of the Farmers Elevator Company at Stanford, Mr. Anderson is one of the active factors in the business affairs of this town and surrounding country, and has become in a short time one of the influential citizens of this locality. He has had a varied and interesting career since boyhood, and is one of the most experienced grain dealers in the northwest.

Henry S. Anderson was born in Chicago, Illinois, June 29, 1872. Samuel Anderson, his father, who is now living retired in Minnesota, is a native of Norway, and when a young man came to America, where he found his opportunities and made a substantial and prosperous career. Farming has been his chief occupation, but he is now enjoying a quiet retirement. He is an active member of his home Lutheran church. He was married in the city of Chicago to Aneta Amelia Hurst, also a native of Norway. Her death occurred in Minnesota in 1887, at the age of forty-five, and she is buried in that state. Of their ten children, Henry S. was the oldest.

He was a child of three years when the family moved to Red Wing, Minnesota, and two years later they moved to Herman in Grant county, where he received his early education in the public schools and lived there until he began his practical career. He was about fifteen when he began earning his own way, and has been aggressive and enterprising ever since, and his ability and services have never been without useful employment. As a boy he earned his first wages by work in lumber, iron and flour mills in his home state. For a number of years he had no regular headquarters, and his travels covered nearly every western state. For about twelve years he was engaged in engineering work. In 1900 he returned to Minnesota and for five years was a grain buyer in that state, and for a similar period was in the same business in North Dakota. In 1910 Mr. Anderson became resident manager for the Montana Central Elevator Company at Stanford. August 1, 1912 he became manager for the Farmers Elevator Company, which position he now holds, and intends to make this state his permanent home. He is a loyal admirer of Montana's resources and has identified himself actively with its business and civic life.

Mr. Anderson's religious choice is the Lutheran church. He is active in the fraternal organizations, being master of the Stanford Masonic Lodge, a past grand of the Odd Fellows, and has membership with the Woodmen of America, the Maccabees and the Court of Honor. As a member of the Commercial Club he gives his support to the progressive work in his home town. His political party is the Republican, but he has not been active during his residence in this state. While in North Dakota he held the office of justice of the peace. He is a member of the Stanford school board. In those activities of modern life which are called diversions from the serious business, Mr. Anderson has a broad interest. He is very fond of all the outdoor sports either as a spectator or participant. Books and good music are a feature of his home life, and toward all these departments of culture or recreation he presents an open and appreciative mind.

Mr. Anderson was married at Herman, Minnesota, on December 23, 1900, to Miss Florence L. Kiefer. Mrs. Anderson is a daughter of Edward C. and Amelia Kiefer, now residents of Ladysmith, Wisconsin. One daughter has been born to their union, Hazel F., who is now a student in the local schools.

ALVAH H. LAYTON. The Layton-Peterson Hardware Company ranks as one of the successful business enterprises at Joplin, Montana, where it was established in 1910. Mr. Layton has gained prestige as a prosperous and influential citizen in Hill county and as a man whose business methods demonstrate the power of activity and honesty in the business world.

A native of the fine old Keystone state of the Union, Alvah H. Layton was born in Bedford county, Pennsylvania, August 17, 1872. He is a son of William M. and Rebecca J. (Wink) Layton, both of whom were likewise born in Bedford county, Pennsylvania, where was solemnized their marriage. The father has been engaged in farming enterprises in Bedford county during his entire active career. His cherished and devoted wife passed away in 1886. They were the parents of five children—three sons and two daughters, and of the number the subject of this review was the third in order of birth.

Alvah H. Layton attended the public schools of Bedford county until he had reached his seventeenth year and for the ensuing four years he was engaged with his father in the work and management of the home farm. At the age of twenty-one years he left home and went to Cherokee county, Iowa, where he worked as a farm hand for a period of four years, during which time he managed to save enough money to warrant his renting a quarter section of land, which he conducted with remarkable success for two years. In 1899 he removed to Kenmare, North Dakota, where he homesteaded a tract of one hundred and sixty acres of most arable land, cultivating the same until 1910. In the latter year he and Peter Peterson came to Joplin and here established the Layton-Peterson Hardware Company, a business enterprise that has grown rapidly in the past two years. Messrs. Layton and Peterson began the hardware business at Joplin by first selling their stock from the freight car in which it was shipped to them and after their building, which was then in process of construction, was completed, they moved into it and have since controlled an extensive and most profitable business. On other pages of this work appears a sketch of Peter Peterson.

In politics Mr. Layton is Republican and while he has never aspired for public office of any description he has been the efficient incumbent of the office of clerk of school district No. 59 since its organization, in 1910. The Layton family are devout members of the Presbyterian church in their religious faith and the home is recognized as a center of refinement and most generous hospitality.

At Spencer, Iowa, April 5, 1898, occurred the marriage of Mr. Layton to Miss Myrtle M. Cross, a daughter of Daniel Cross, who was born and reared in the state of Illinois and who is now a prominent business man at Rochelle, Illinois. Three children have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Layton, as follows,—Alice, whose birth occurred May 13, 1899; Clara, born in Illinois, February 7, 1901; and Earl, born in North Dakota, October 8, 1903.

PETER O. PETERSON. The career of Peter O. Peterson is a splendid illustration of what independence, self-faith and persistency can accomplish in America. He is strictly self-made and today he stands supreme as an influential business man and a loyal and public-spirited citizen at Joplin, Montana, where he has resided since January 26, 1910, and where he is most successfully engaged in the hardware business as a member of the firm of Layton & Peterson.

Peter O. Peterson was born in Blooming Prairie, Minnesota, the date of his nativity being the 26th of February, 1876. He is a son of Ole Peterson, who was born and reared in Norway, whence he immigrated to the United States in the year 1868. The father first settled in Wisconsin, went thence to Minnesota, and in 1877 took up a homestead in Grand Forks county, North Dakota, where he has maintained the family home during the long intervening years to the present time, in 1912. He married Margaret Evenson, a native of Norway, and they are the parents of eight children, of whom the subject of this sketch was the firstborn.

After completing the curriculum of the public schools of Grand Forks county, North Dakota, Peter O. Peterson began to assist his father in the work and management of the home farm. He remained at home until he had reached his thirtieth year, when he took up a homestead in Williams county, North Dakota, the same lying forty miles north of Williston. He proved up on his claim in fourteen months and then came to Joplin, Montana, arriving in this place January 26, 1910. At that time there were no buildings in the town and Messrs. Peterson and A. H. Layton erected the first business building and the first residence in the place. They engaged in the hardware business, beginning with a stock of one carload of goods, the greater part of which they sold right out of the car as their store building was not completed. They controlled a tremendous business from the first and the sales during the first year amounted to twelve thousand dollars. It is constantly increasing. In his political faith Mr. Peterson is an unswerving supporter of the principles and policies for which the Republican party stands sponsor and while he does not take an active interest in public affairs he is a willing contributor to all measures and enterprises calculated to advance the general welfare of the community in which he resides. In religious matters he and his wife are devout members of the Lutheran church.

August 20, 1901, Mr. Peterson was united in marriage to Miss Minnie Aasboe, a daughter of Ole Aasboe, who is engaged in farming and stock raising in Grand Forks county, North Dakota. Mr. and Mrs. Peterson are the proud parents of two children, namely,—Pearl V., born in North Dakota, July 20, 1906; and Myron J. O., born in the same state July 28, 1908.

LEO V. BEAULIEU. One of the ablest members of the Havre bar is L. V. Beaulieu, who has been a resident of this city since 1910 and has a large business in corporation and general law. Mr. Beaulieu brought to his profession a thorough scholarship and broad training, and is winning advancement by a well-equipped ability for all the contingencies of legal practice.

A native of Waterloo, Iowa, he was born August 22, 1880. His father, Frank Beaulieu, was a native of Quebec and of French parentage. He now resides in Graceville, Minnesota, retired, having formerly been engaged in the real estate, live stock and mercantile lines. The mother, who is also living, was Miss Elizabeth Lawlor, a native of Kentucky. There were five sons and one daughter in the family.

L. V. Beaulieu while a boy determined to secure the best possible preparation for his career, and that he succeeded was due largely to his own ideals and efforts. At Sheldon, Iowa, he attended the public schools, graduating from the high school in 1899, and then entered the State University of Iowa at Iowa City, where he received his A. B. in 1903, in 1904 the degree of B. Di., in 1905 the M. A., and graduated from the law department as LL. B. in 1906. He also completed his work for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

Mr. Beaulieu was engaged in practice at Williamsburg, Iowa, for two years, was located at Little Rock, Arkansas, a little more than a year, and then held the chair of law and mathematics in the University of Idaho at Moscow for one year. At the conclusion of the school year he moved to Havre and has since engaged actively in his chosen profession, specializing in corporation law but also attending to an increasing general practice.

Mr. Beaulieu was married in Iowa City, December 27, 1905, to Miss Florence Miller, the daughter of John and Mary Miller, both of whom were natives of Iowa. Three sons have been born to Mr. Beaulieu and wife: Francis, born at Moscow, February 9, 1909; Charles, at Havre, July 31, 1910; and Lawrence also at Havre, April 19, 1912. Mr. Beaulieu's mother was a descendant of Kentucky pioneers, and one of her ancestors was Oliver Cromwell, the English Protector.

ELMER W. DENISON. Northwestern Montana has attracted many enterprising and capable young citizens to the service of its growing business and industrial life, and one of the representatives of this class is the present city treasurer of Chester, Mr. Elmer W. Denison, who has been identified with this vicinity since 1910, and was formerly engaged in banking and other lines of business in Minnesota.

He is a native of Adair county, Iowa, where he was born August 14, 1879, a son of Neldo and Erma R. (Shirk) Denison. The father, who was born near Hanna, Indiana, his father having come from Connecticut in an early day, was one of the first prospectors to try the Black Hills diggings. He died in 1882 at the age of thirty. The mother was born at Walnut, Illinois, a daughter of R. L. Shirk, a Pennsylvania German. She is now living with her son in Chester, Montana, and was sixty years old on July 3d of the present year (1912).

Elmer W. Denison obtained his early education in the public schools of Iowa, and also took a special course in law and English in Minnesota. His entrance into business was in the credit department of a large lumber company of Minneapolis, with which he continued seven years, and was then cashier of the Sheldon Brothers Bank until May, 1910, when he resigned and located in Chester. He has built up and now controls a large business in land, town real estate and general real estate brokerage, and is the owner of the Denison Land Company. Mr. Denison has been twice honored with election to the office of treasurer of Chester.

His marriage occurred in the city of Minneapolis, March 24, 1909, to Miss Mary Viets. Her father, W. H. Viets, was formerly a resident of New London, Connecticut, whence he moved west to Minneapolis. Carolyn Ruth Denison, their one child, was born in Minneapolis, September 19, 1911. Mr. Denison affiliates with the Masonic order, Lodge No. 65, at Rugby, North Dakota, is a Republican in politics, and is a member of the Presbyterian church. He takes much pleasure in the outdoor sports and recreations, and is a citizen of broad interests.

JOHN O. BERGLIN. The Sheldon Brothers Bank of Chester was organized March 23, 1910, and has since been one of the solid financial institutions of this part of northwest Montana. The Sheldon brothers (F. P. and A. M.) are residents of Minneapolis, and the local representative of the Chester bank and its executive manager is Mr. J. O. Berglin, cashier. He is an enterprising young business man of this state, and has been identified with business life since a boy, having prospered and won his advancement on merit and a thorough ability for business details.

Mr. Berglin was born in Jemtland, Sweden, January 29, 1881, the third in a large family of children born to Peter and Sarah (Yngve) Berglin. The parents came to America in 1892, settling in Pine county, Minnesota, where the father has been a substantial farmer and respected citizen for the past thirty years. The other children in the family are named as follows: Magnus, Oscar, Axel, Vernon, George, Martha, Tenie, Signe, Anna and Reta, the last five being residents of Sweden and the others of Minnesota.

J. O. Berglin received his education in his native land, and though but a boy when he came to America he soon began working in a general store at Mora, Minnesota, where during the following nine years he laid the foundation of his business career and prosperity. After leaving the store he entered the employ of Sheldon Brothers, the bankers, and was engaged in northern Minnesota four years, at the end of which time he was transferred to Chester as assistant cashier. On the retirement of Mr. Denison from the post of cashier, he succeeded to that office.

Mr. Berglin is affiliated with the Masonic order, having attained the Royal Arch degrees. In politics he is an Independent, and he is a member of the Lutheran church. His sentiments for Montana as his present home amount to sincere loyalty and a thorough appreciation of the wonderful advantages and the future possibilities of this northwestern commonwealth. He enjoys the esteem of a large acquaintance in this section of the state. At Mora, Minnesota, the former home of Mr. Berglin, he organized and maintained several orchestras and bands. He plays all the stringed instruments.

Mr. Berglin comes of a long-lived family, a great-grandfather having attained the extreme age of one hundred and one years. Both of his grandfathers were soldiers in the Swedish army.

CARL F. HAWKINSON. Since January, 1910, Carl F. Hawkinson has been a resident of Joplin, Montana, and here he is most successfully engaged in the restaurant and general merchandise business. He is one of the pioneers in this town, having come hither when there was but one building in the place. He is loyal and public spirited in his civic attitude and no measure forwarded for the good of progress and improvement fails to receive his most hearty support.

Carl F. Hawkinson was born in Sweden, the date of his nativity being August 24, 1874. He is a son of Hokanson and Kate (Kisa) Hawkinson, both of whom were born and reared in Sweden, where was solemnized their marriage in 1856. The father came, alone, to America in 1882 and located on a farm in Douglas county, Minnesota, where he continued to reside until his demise, in 1902, at the age of sixty-nine years. Mrs. Hawkinson, with a family of nine children, followed her husband to America in 1884 and she is still living, her home being in Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Mr. Hawkinson, of this notice, was a child of but ten years of age at the time of his arrival in the United States and he completed his educational training with attendance in the district schools of Douglas county, Minnesota. He also pursued a one-year commercial course in Northwestern Business College at Minneapolis. He resided on the home farm with his parents until he had reached his twenty-first year, when he started to farm in Minnesota on his own account. He homesteaded one hundred and sixty acres of land in Red Lake county, Minnesota, and proved up on the same in five years, at the end of which he disposed of that estate and engaged in the general merchandise business at Farwell, Minnesota. He was a resident of Farwell for a period of four years and in 1894 removed to North Dakota, settling at Tolley, where he was variously engaged for the next four years. In January, 1910, he came to Joplin, Montana, and at that date there was but one building in the place. Mr. Hawkinson purchased this structure and immediately engaged in the restaurant business, which he still conducts, and in November, 1911, he purchased an additional lot, on which he erected another building, in which he runs a strictly first-class general merchandise store. He also conducts a bakery—the only one in the town—and his different business enterprises are netting him a large and most gratifying profit. Mr. Hawkinson has achieved success through his own well-directed efforts and for that reason it is the more gratifying to contemplate. In his political convictions he is a stalwart Republican and in religious matters he and his wife are devout members of the Lutheran church.

At Farwell, Minnesota, August 25, 1899, was celebrated the marriage of Mr. Hawkinson to Miss Esther Rystedt, who was born at Farwell and who is a daughter of Andrew Rystedt, a native of Pope county, Minnesota. Mr. and Mrs. Hawkinson have two sons, namely,—Walter, whose birth occurred in Red Lake county, Minnesota, in 1900; and Carl Wenzel, born at Farwell, Minnesota, in 1906.

WILLIAM J. MINKIEWITZ. One of the business builders and leaders in enterprise in the prosperous and fast growing country along the line of the Great Northern west of Havre is the organizer and president of the Bank of Hingham, William J. Minkiewitz. While a bank is not among the first most important institutions of a newly settled country, it must follow soon to assure the permanent prosperity of any locality. Good banking facilities are the foundation of successful trade and industry, and as the pioneer in banking at Hingham Mr. Minkiewitz is one of the group of citizens who have promoted the solid prosperity and welfare of this splendid country.

Mr. Minkiewitz has been identified with banking throughout his active career. He was born in Henderson, Minnesota, September 21, 1880, and after his attendance at the public schools of that state he became a messenger for the bank at Arlington, Minnesota. Three years in that position was followed by his promotion to the post of assistant cashier in the First National Bank of Minneapolis. He was afterwards in a similar position with the Northwestern National Bank of Minneapolis for two years. For eight years he was cashier of the bank at Anamoose, North Dakota, and while there he became acquainted with the rapid development of the country in northwest Montana along the line of the Great Northern. In 1910 he came out to the town of Hingham, and with his prestige as an experienced and successful banker organized the Bank of Hingham, which has the distinction of having been the first bank west of Havre. It has been a successful institution, has paid its stockholders regular dividends, and has had a splendid patronage from the farming communities for many miles adjacent to the town of Hingham. The charter officials, who are still connected with the bank, were as follows: W. J. Minkiewitz, president and cashier; W. Glotzbach, vice president; J. G. Nostrand, secretary; C. W. Patterson and Clinton Sailor, directors.

Mr. Minkiewitz was married at Towner, North Dakota, October 25, 1905, to Miss Ada Kiekenapp, daughter of Fred Kiekenapp, of Faribault, Minnesota. They are the parents of one child, Mary Evelyne, born at Anamoose, North Dakota, September 18, 1907. Mr. Minkiewitz has one of the attractive homes of Hingham, and is highly esteemed, both in business and social circles. He is affiliated with the Woodmen of the World, and is a member of the American Bankers' Association. His politics is Republican, and he and his family are members of the Catholic church.

Mr. Minkiewitz is a son of John and Antonio (Paderwski) Minkiewitz. The father, who was born in Austria, in his youth came to America and became one of the early settlers at Henderson, Minnesota, where he was a successful general merchant. He is now living at the age of sixty-nine in Arlington, Minnesota. His wife was also born in Austria, and came to America when a young girl, their marriage taking place in Minnesota. She is now sixty-three years old. They were the parents of eleven children, eight of whom are living, and William J. was the eight in order of birth.

EARL S. PORTER, M. D. The present age is essentially utilitarian and the life of every successful man carries a lesson which, told in contemporary narrative, is productive of much good in shaping the destiny of others. There is, therefore, a due measure of satisfaction in presenting, even in brief resume, the life and achievements of such men and in preparing the following history of the scholarly young physician whose name appears above, it is with the hope that it may prove not only interesting but also inspiring. Though young in years, he occupies the position of Moore's leading physician and surgeon and doubtless has an unusually successful and useful career ahead of him. Thorough intellectual training, combined with sound professional knowledge and aptitude to apply his acquirements to the treatment of disease, have won him the confidence of a large number of patients, yet his purpose seems not so much to gain a lucrative practice as to master the profound and mysterious truths of his science.

Dr. Porter was born in Alexis, Illinois, August 7, 1883, the son of Robert L. and Emma Stevens Porter. When he was about a year old his parents removed to Beardstown, Illinois, where they resided for some eight years and then located in East Aurora, where they remained six years. They then went to Chicago, where a period of five years was passed and the general education of the subject was secured in the public schools of the three places mentioned. Dr. Porter chose the University of Michigan at Ann Arbor as his alma mater, and there attended for four years, graduating with the class of 19— and receiving the degree of A.B. Having in the meantime decided to devote his energies to the medical profession, he made preparation in Rush Medical College of Chicago and from that institution received the well-earned degree of M.D. Subsequently he served as interne in two hospitals—at St. Luke's in Denver and at the Kansas City General Hospital—and in September, 1910, his novitiate finished, he came to Moore. His ability and conscientious devotion to his work won him immediate recognition and his usefulness has been of the highest character. He is a close student and wide reader of the standard professional authorities and it is safe to say that he will spare no effort, no self-sacrifice to keep in step with the constantly advancing science with which he is identified.

Dr. Porter earned his first money at the mature age of ten years by selling newspapers in Aurora and he accumulated in this manner a capital of about thirty dollars. He has always been most enterprising and before entering college worked with a surveying party during the summer vacations and in this way earned enough money to take him through the university. He is a member of Phi Rho Sigma medical fraternity. He has a great fondness for outdoor sports, particularly delighting in tennis, baseball and football. He also has a cultivated taste for music and the drama. He believes in the future of the golden west and that Montana is its very heart and he believes that the young man who casts his fortune with it is wise in his day and generation. In the matter of religious faith he is Congregationalist, which is the faith of his forebears. Three generations of the Porter family have produced a Congregational minister and the entire family have been devout church members, who have done much for the good causes promulgated by the church. Dr. Porter does not take an active part in politics, his professional and other interests precluding this and he is independent in his convictions, believing the right man and the right measure to be far more important than partisanship. He has not yet become a recruit to the ranks of the benedicts.

Dr. Porter's father, Robert L. Porter, was born in Connecticut and settled in Illinois, where he was identified with railroad interests, and he now holds the important office of auditor of the Wheeling & Lake Erie Railway. His wife was a native of Illinois. Mr. and Mrs. Porter are at the present time residents of Cleveland, Ohio. Dr. Porter is the third in order of birth in a family of four children. He is genial in manner and impresses all with whom he comes in contact as a man of much more than ordinary power and force. Well informed upon a great variety of subjects, and with most cordial and engaging manners, his society is much sought and his personal friendship highly valued, and an important element of his success, professional and otherwise, is the apparent fact that he has strong mental powers in reserve.

SYLVESTER MCCHESENEY is the proprietor of the Empire Garage & Machine Company, one of the largest and most modern concerns of its nature in the entire northwest. He is now on the point of opening a school of mechanical engineering where he will offer a special course in farm engineering and power. Mr. McChesney will himself become one of the lecturers and demonstrators which will be of vast advantage to the student as he is unusually well equipped for the work by education and training as well as by natural inclination.

Mr. McChesney's talent for machinery, for with him it amounts to little less than a talent, was perhaps, in part inherited from his father, Lewis H. McChesney who although a blacksmith by trade, became, himself, a machinist. The elder Mr. McChesney was born in Troy, New York, but had enough of the nomad in his temperament to make remaining in one place irksome. In consequence, he lived in many states working as a blacksmith, a machinist and sometimes as a building contractor. While in Illinois, he married Agnes Bennett who became the mother of his six children and passed away at Thornton, Iowa, in May of 1909. She was, at the time of her death, sixty-six years of age. His sons are now making a home for their father in Lewistown, Montana, and the new state seems to satisfy the elder Mr. McChesney so completely that he has almost lost his desire to travel.

Mr. Sylvester McChesney, the subject of this sketch was the second of the six children—or perhaps one should say the third as the two older brothers are twins. He was born on St. Valentine's day of 1877, at Muskegon, Michigan. During the second year of his life, his parents moved to Illinois where they remained for about seven years before going to Iowa. In Illinois, the son Sylvester began his schooling. He was graduated from the high school of Burt, Iowa, and later entered Highland Park College, a denominational school in the capital city of Iowa, Des Moines. He was graduated from this institution, receiving the degree of mechanical engineer. His mechanical training, however, long antedated his college training. As a small boy, his chief delight was to play in his father's shop trying to construct engines out of wood and machines from scraps of iron. Later, with the help of his father, and in the same shop, he learned the trade of the machinist. It is interesting to note that Mr. McChesney, although his chief interest was always along mechanical lines, earned his first dollar shocking grain for a neighboring farmer in Iowa. Not one dollar but something more than two did he earn and this in two days time when he was only fourteen years of age. With the proceeds, he bought his first gift for the mother to whom he never ceased to be devoted.

After receiving his degree from Highland Park, he began teaching during the school year and working at his profession in the summer. By this means, a man less determined than he or with less love of his real work would have yielded to the pressure and sacrificed his profession for the weaker one of school teaching. As a school teacher, Mr. McChesney was so great a success that he was not infrequently offered the superintendency of some school. The salary offered looked flattering to a young mechanic only starting out but he put it from him resolutely. He was a popular speaker at the teachers' conventions and did his ablest work but refused to make the run for county superintendent or to accept any responsible position that threatened to permanently interfere with his ambitions.

In 1905, our subject and wife moved from Iowa to Pipestone, Minnesota. Four years earlier, Mr. McChesney had brought back to the Iowa town to preside over his heart and home, a young lady of Pipestone, Miss Minnie E. Schrader, the daughter of Mr.

and Mrs. Charles C. Shrader, prominent residents of that city. Mr. and Mrs. McChesney were married on the 26th day of June, 1901. Both Mr. and Mrs. McChesney are very musical in their tastes, Mrs. McChesney being a pianist of no small ability while her husband is a violinist. They spend many pleasant evenings with their music. In Iowa they both sang in the Methodist church choir and are still affiliated with that organization.

Mr. McChesney's removal from Burt, Iowa, to Pipestone, Minnesota, was largely through the influence of his wife. In the Minnesota town where they made their home for five years, he opened up a garage and machine shop. The business proved a great success but Mr. McChesney says that Montana is irresistible and will yet develop into the biggest and best in the Union. It was the call of Montana that he and his wife were unable to resist. They reached Lewistown in 1910 and have since built up the enormous business mentioned elsewhere. They have recently purchased a valuable three hundred and twenty acre ranch thirty-five miles from Lewistown and here the family make their home. No better place could be found in which to rear the three lively boys that have been born to them.

The daughter, Grace Louise McChesney, died in infancy, Theodore and Merwyn are attending school, and Donald is at home with their mother and Mrs. McChesney is a mother talented and devoted to her home, with whom it is an advantage for a boy to stay.

Mr. McChesney has little or no interest in the politics of the state or nation. When he votes, it is independently, for the best man. His home is his lodge, his club and his haven of rest. He belongs only to the insurance order, the Woodmen of the World. As to his sports, he has never lost his love of athletics gained during his college days when he played baseball on the Highland Park nine back in Des Moines, Iowa. He still remains a fan and a rooter and sometimes feels the longing to himself enter the game.

One other of the McChesney brothers lives in Montana. Casper A. McChesney is a well-known lumber man of Garniell.

ARLO F. WARNER. One of the energetic young business men of Melstone, Montana, is Arlo F. Warner, manager and active head of the Black Mercantile Company of that place, who was reared a farmer boy but who early indicated a preference for business life. Mr. Warner was born at Spirit Lake, Iowa, September 17, 1880, was educated in the public schools there and completed a commercial course in Highland Park College at Des Moines, Iowa. He earned his first wages as a boy cutting corn at fifty cents per day and this money he gave to his mother; then when about seventeen years of age, he began teaching school and continued to do so for several years. Upon attaining his majority he went to Minnesota, where he spent nine years and during that time was connected with the First National Bank of Clinton, Minnesota, in a clerical capacity. In 1910 he came to Melstone, Montana, where he first engaged in the real estate business but in February, 1912, took up managerial duties for the Black Mercantile Company and is now giving to the management of this business the best of his energies and business ability.

Mr. Warner is a son of Samuel C. Warner, a native of Pennsylvania who settled in Iowa and spent the remainder of his life there as a farmer. The father, who was a devout Christian and an active church member, died in 1901 at the age of fifty-one years and was buried at Spirit Lake, Iowa. In that state he wedded Arlette Waugh, who was born in Maine and who still survives her husband, being now a resident of Grand Forks, North Dakota. Of the four children of these parents, Arlo F. is the third in birth and is the youngest son.

At Clinton, Minnesota, on the 30th of June, 1906, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Warner and Miss Agnes Berneice Black, a daughter of John and Alice Black, who conduct a hotel in Clinton. Mr. and Mrs. Warner have one daughter, Alice Arlette. Their religious tenets are those of the Methodist Episcopal denomination and fraternally Mr. Warner is affiliated with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. A Republican in politics, he takes a live interest in the issues of the day, and is now serving as United States commissioner of Montana. In the way of recreation he enjoys hunting and fishing and a good game of baseball, in which sport he often actively participated in younger days. He has found the climatic conditions of Montana to be ideal and is also convinced that there is unlimited opportunity in this state for young men of ability, resourcefulness and will.

HUGH S. MCGINLEY, one of the rising young attorneys of Chouteau county, has been engaged in practice in Fort Benton only since July, 1911, but has already gained the attention of a large clientele. He came to this city with a well-established reputation as one of the champions of the cause of the American Federation of Labor, in whose legal battles in Great Falls he had been an active participant, and has fully maintained his position as an able legist, having gained the confidence and professional business of some of the leading concerns of his newly adopted community. Mr. McGinley was born at Davenport, Iowa, August 4, 1881, and is a son of Hugh and Susie P. (Duffin) McGinley. His paternal grandparents came from Ireland and settled in New York City, but subsequently removed to Iowa, where both died. Hugh McGinley was born in Iowa, where he was engaged in various business enterprises until 1885, and in that year went to Spokane, Washington, being there engaged in a profitable mercantile business until the financial panic of 1893. At that time he removed to Minneapolis, Minnesota, where he now resides at the age of fifty-six years, being connected with the Kelly-Thompson Manufacturing Company. Mr. McGinley married Susie P. Duffin, who was born in Iowa, a member of an old and honored family of that city. Her father, a native of Scotland, came to this country at an early period, served in the Mexican war, was later an officer in the Army of the Potomac during the Civil war, and as a member of an Iowa regiment his copper plate has a prominent place on the state capitol grounds at Des Moines. He was an early settler of Davenport, where his family is well known, as is that of the Van Allens, to which his wife belonged. Mrs. McGinley still resides at Minneapolis, at the age of fifty-six years, as does her only daughter, Mrs. Guy Thomas.

Hugh S. McGinley was four years old when taken to Spokane by his parents, and he there attended the public schools and Gonzaga College. When he accompanied the family to Minneapolis, he became a student in the graded schools, this attendance being subsequently supplemented by a course in St. Thomas College, St. Paul. Mr. McGinley then became a student at Notre Dame (Ind.) College, from the law department of which he was duly graduated, and in 1904 was admitted to the Minnesota bar. Opening offices, he practiced his profession in Minneapolis until 1906, and subsequently was connected with the legal department of the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railway, but in the spring of 1910 removed to Great Falls. There he advanced rapidly in his profession, and was chosen one of the representatives of the American Federation of Labor, in its memorable controversies of 1910, continuing there until he had seen the vindication of the principles for which he had been fighting, and in July, 1911, came to Fort Benton. He had no reason to regret this last move, as his professional business is of a very satisfactory nature, and his reputation has been thoroughly established both in his profession and among the citizens of the community. Mr. McGinley is a valued member of the Montana Bar Association, and on November 5, 1912, was elected county attorney for Chouteau county. His politics are those of the Democratic party.

On June 15, 1908, Mr. McGinley was married to Miss Ida L. Koch, in Minneapolis, Minnesota, where her father, Daniel Koch, now deceased, was for many years a leading contractor. Mr. and Mrs. McGinley have no children.

JESSE V. KELLY, secretary of the Commercial Club of Harlowton, and an extensive dealer in real estate, is one of the most progressive and prominent citizens of his part of Montana, one who has prospered in business and has earned success by his enterprise, natural sagacity and well-established reputation for integrity. Born in Sac county, Iowa, May 14, 1877, he is a son of Nicholas L. and Rose (Prentice) Kelly, the former a native of Wisconsin, who is now extensively engaged in the real estate business in Oklahoma, an active church worker and a prominent Mason. He was married in Iowa, and he and his wife had three children, of whom Jesse V. is the eldest, his brother, Claude P. Kelly, being assistant cashier of the First National Bank, of Cooperstown, North Dakota.

After attending the public schools of Iowa and Louisiana, to which latter state he had been taken by his parents when eleven years of age, Jesse V. Kelly spent three years at Baldwin Academy, at Baldwin, Louisiana, then becoming a student at Galveston (Texas) Business University and subsequently taking a post-graduate business course at Chillicothe, Missouri, whence he had gone after taking part for two years in the Spanish-American war in Cuba. Until he was twenty-two years of age he was engaged in agricultural pursuits, and then spent three years in the rice milling business, then entering the banking business, which he followed until 1905 in Louisiana. In 1905 he removed to North Dakota, where he was identified with financial institutions until 1910, which year saw his advent in Harlowton, whence he came as cashier of the First National Bank. On his election to the office of secretary of the Commercial Club he gave up banking to engage in the real estate business, and now has large realty holdings and deals extensively in loans and insurance. Although he has been a resident of the city for only comparatively a short period, Mr. Kelly has already gained a wide reputation in business circles, and is known as a citizen who is ready to lend his aid and influence to all progressive movements. He has advanced to the commandery degree in Masonry, in which fraternity he has held numerous offices, is a member of the Elks, and in the Order of the Eastern Star, of which his wife is also a member, is worthy patron. In politics he is a Democrat and takes an active interest in the success of his party, although he has no desire for public preferment. Although not a member of any religious denomination, he is a regular contributor to worthy religious and charitable objects. It is his firm belief that the natural resources of Montana will eventually make this the leading state in the Union, and is accordingly doing all he can to encourage its settlement.

On December 31, 1904, Mr. Kelly was married at Lafayette, Louisiana, to Miss Mary McNaspy, daughter of James and Anna McNaspy of Lafayette. Both Mr. Kelly and his wife have numerous friends in Harlowton, and are general favorites in social circles.

WILLIAM L. BULLOCK is a lawyer of prominent and popular standing in Valier, where he has been located since 1910. His residence in Montana has thus been of short duration, but he has in that time built up an extensive law practice in the great western state, and in consideration of manifest talents and abilities, it is not too much to predict a prosperous and brilliant future for him in his chosen profession.

Mr. Bullock was born in Wisconsin, in the town of Hortonville, on August 24, 1873. He is the son of L. B. Bullock, a native of New York, who moved to Wisconsin in 1855, and who was a pioneer Methodist minister of Wisconsin, having given thirty years of his life to his duties as a clergyman. He is now retired and is living in Waupaca, Wisconsin, and has reached the age of seventy-nine years. The Bullock family is of English descent, the first of the name settling in Vermont prior to the Revolutionary war. The mother of Mr. Bullock of this review was Elizabeth J. (Atridge) Bullock, a native of Vermont, and like her husband, of English descent. She died at Manawa, Wisconsin, at the age of seventy-seven, in 1908. The house of Atridge was founded in America in early colonial days, the founder having been kidnapped in England as a boy and brought to the colonies on a British man-of-war, to serve in the Royal army. The plucky youth escaped, and determined that if he was to fight, he would at least choose which side he should serve on, entered the Continental army and served till the close of the war.

William Bullock was the youngest of the three sons born to his parents. He received a general education, preparing for college in Lawrence Academy, graduating from Lawrence University in 1899 with the degree of B. S. and last, in 1908, being graduated from the University of Wisconsin with the degree of B. L. Between his university courses, however, the young man entered the teaching profession and was at one time principal of the Amherst high school at Amherst, Wisconsin, and later was principal of the Shell Lake high school for four years. He read law for a time in the law offices of Cate, Dahl & Nelson at Stevens Point, Wisconsin, which was followed up by a course in the University of Wisconsin Law School and his subsequent graduation therefrom in 1908. In June of that year the young lawyer was admitted to practice in the state, and he carried on a general practice in Madison in company with J. F. Baker, under the firm name of Bullock & Baker, but in 1910 he came to Montana, locating in February in Valier, where he has since continued, actively engaged in the practice of his profession. When he first located in Valier the town had a population of not more than six hundred persons. He was the first city attorney the place elected and also has been chairman of the school board.

Mr. Bullock is an active Republican and enthusiastic in the interests of the party. He is a worker; while carrying on his studies at the university finding other employment as index clerk in the state legislature. In addition to his legal business of a local nature, Mr. Bullock is the Montana representative of the Valier Land Company of Madison, Wisconsin.

Mr. Bullock is a member of the Masonic fraternity, Valier Lodge No. 76, A. F. & A. M., and Valier Chapter No. 21, R. A. M., and is a member also of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. He is a member of the Sons of Veterans, and holds membership in the Ryan Chapter of the Phi Alpha Delta Law Fraternity. He has been admitted to practice in the circuit and district courts of the United States for the western district of Wisconsin, in the federal district court of the state of Montana, and in the supreme courts of Wisconsin and Montana.

On November 30, 1899, Mr. Bullock was married at Stevens Point, Wisconsin, to Miss Nellie E. Nelson, the daughter of A. M. Nelson, a native of Norway. They have one daughter, born to them on January 7, 1901, at Shell Lake, Wisconsin, Marjorie E. Bullock.

STENER T. WIPRUD is a prosperous merchant of Valier, Montana, who has achieved distinctive success through his own efforts, unaided by the advantages of superior education or financial backing, but solely through the application of those qualities of native thrift, energy and business acumen which come so naturally to the Scandinavian. He was born in Norway on April 10, 1871, and is the son of T. A. and Anna (Mork) Wiprud, both native born Norwegians. The father came to America in 1888 with his family and settled in Fillmore county, Minnesota, where he engaged in farming for a number of years. He later retired from active agricultural life and has been a resident of Clay county, Minnesota, for some time. The wife and mother died in Fillmore county in 1890, aged fifty-eight years.

Of the five children born to Mr. and Mrs. Wiprud, Stener T. was the youngest. He attended the schools of his native town as a boy and had the privilege of attending Luther Academy at Albert Lea, Minnesota, from which he graduated. He then went to work as a clerk in a general merchandise store and in that capacity and as a book-keeper he was five years employed by P. L. Quarve at Fessenden, North Dakota. He followed that season of experience by entering business on his own responsibility in 1901, at Wiprud, McLean county, North Dakota, and after three years in that place sold his interests there and moved to Hettinger, in the same state, where he engaged in a similar enterprise. He widened his interests here somewhat by entering the banking business, organizing the Bank of Hettinger, of which he is still the vice-president. In the spring of 1910 Mr. Wiprud came to Montana, and he soon formed a partnership with Carlson Brothers, and together they established a large general merchandise store, the firm being known as the Wiprud-Carlson Company. The partnership endured until February, 1912, when Mr. Wiprud purchased the interests of his partners, and is now the exclusive owner of the store and building. It is one of the largest stores in this section of the state, carrying a stock in excess of $50,000 and doing an annual business of $150,000. Mr. Wiprud still retains his interest in the store in Hettinger, North Dakota, and in his real estate holdings as well. He is also associated with Montana State Bank, capital $20,000, of which he is the vice-president. On the whole, he is one of the prosperous men of the county, and is regarded as a valuable citizen and a capable business man. He is an Independent in politics, and a member of the Lutheran church. He is in a fraternal way connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, being a member of the Valier lodge.

On May 7, 1901, Mr. Wiprud married Miss Caroline Korum at Valley City, North Dakota. She is a daughter of Arne Korum of Brandon, Minnesota. Six sons have been born to Mr. and Mrs. Wiprud. They are: Arthur, Franklin, Roy Bismarck, Thomas Stener, Glen Benjamin and William Julius.

JOHN W. COBURN. An active and able member of the Montana bar, John W. Coburn has made a noteworthy record in his professional life for so young a man, conducting the important cases of which he has had charge with ability and skill, and in a manner reflecting great credit upon himself, proving that the confidence reposed in his power was not unworthily bestowed. A native of Cherokee county, Iowa, he was born, October 24, 1883, in Marcus, coming from substantial and honored New England ancestry.

His father, G. F. Coburn, was born in Vermont, and among its rugged hills spent his youthful days. He subsequently spent a little while in Maine, but did not care to make that his permanent home. In 1878, at the age of twenty-one years, he married, and immediately started with his bride for Iowa, which was then considered the "far west." He took up land, and engaged in general farming, and is still an honored and respected resident of Marcus. He married Mary Coburn who was born in New York state in 1857, the year of his birth, and into their household eight children have been born, five of whom are still living, as follows: Arthur A., engaged in farming in Iowa; Mrs. Pearl Crocker, of Iowa; John W., the subject of this brief sketch; Alva, an Iowa farmer; and Frances.

Acquiring his elementary education in the public schools of Marcus, John W. Coburn subsequently attended the Buena Vista College, after which he entered the law department of the state university, in Iowa, where he was graduated with the class of 1909. Locating at Cherokee, Iowa, in June, 1909, he remained there until March, 1910. The following summer Mr. Coburn went to South Dakota in search of a favorable opening, but not pleased with the outlook in that state he came on to Montana, locating at Cut Bank, a fortunate step in his career, which he has never had cause to regret. As an attorney he has been successful from the start, through his own merits having won an assured position among the leading men of his profession in this section of the county, a county that he has every reason to believe is one of the very best in the state. A man of good business ability, Mr. Coburn has acquired considerable property, owning a homestead ranch.

Mr. Coburn married, June 29, 1910, in Cut Bank, Miss Marian Matby, a cultured and accomplished young woman, and their home is indeed a center of social activity. Politically, a Republican, Mr. Coburn, while living in Iowa, was clerk in the Iowa house of representatives, in 1904, 1906, and 1908. He is a member of the Presbyterian church, to which Mrs. Coburn also belongs.

DONALD A. CRITES. Since March, 1912, Donald A. Crites, who resides at Gildford, Montana, has been incumbent of the office of United States commissioner. He is most successfully engaged in the real-estate, insurance and collection business at Gildford, and in that connection is associated with Frank W. Lurcotte. He is possessed of remarkable executive ability and the success he has achieved in life may be traced to his own well directed endeavors. He is the owner of a fine homestead situated not far distant from Gildford and has been instrumental in promoting a number of business enterprises of local importance in this city.

At Drayton, in the province of Ontario, Canada, October 28, 1863, occurred the birth of Donald Angus Crites, who is a son of William David and Ann (Ruston) Crites, the former of whom was born in the state of New York and the latter of whom is a native of Ontario, Canada. The father removed from his native state to Canada in the early '60s and for a number of years was engaged in agricultural pursuits in the vicinity of Drayton, Ontario. In 1864 the family removed to Akron, Ohio, and thence near Kankakee, Illinois. In 1897 settlement was made in Bottineau county, North Dakota, and there the home was maintained on a farm until 1910, when removal was made to Montana. William David Crites is a carpenter by trade but most of his active career has been devoted to farming enterprises. Since coming to Montana he has homesteaded a piece of land in Hill county and he is engaged in the meat business at Gildford. His youngest son, Jonathan R., is associated with him in the conduct of the meat market. Mr. and Mrs. Crites became the parents of eight children, all of whom are living, in 1912, the subject of this review having been the first in order of birth.

Donald Angus Crites was educated in the public schools of Illinois, being graduated in the high school at Chebanse, that state, as a member of the class of 1875. He remained on the home farm with his parents until he had reached his legal majority and then removed to North Dakota, where he pre-empted a grant of land in Bottineau county. He was engaged in diversified agriculture and stock-raising in Bottineau county for a period of twenty-five years and during that time served as deputy sheriff of the county and as president of the board of the village of Willow City. When that village was incorporated as a city he served for one term as mayor and accomplished a great deal in the way of municipal reform. He came to Montana February 17, 1910, and located at Gildford, where he assumed charge of Carl Shaw's lumber business as manager. One year later he became assistant cashier in the Citizens' Bank of Gildford, retaining that position for six months, at the end of which he formed a partnership with Hiram Christianson to conduct a hay, feed and sale business. In October, 1911, he entered into a partnership alliance with Frank W. Lurcotte to handle real estate, insurance and collections. In March, 1912, he was appointed United States commissioner, a position he is particularly well fitted for. Mr. Crites has a homestead comprising three hundred and twenty acres, the same being located thirteen miles north of Gildford. He was an active factor in the organization of Hill county and has figured prominently in promoting various industries which have tended to boost the town to an appreciable degree.

In politics Mr. Crites is an uncompromising Republican and he is an active factor in promoting the welfare of that organization. While a resident of North Dakota he was urged to become candidate for the office of state senator on several occasions but refused to do so. In a fraternal way he is a valued member of Willow Lodge No. 47, Free & Accepted Masons, at Willow City, North Dakota, and he was worshipful master of that lodge for two terms. He is likewise affiliated with the Modern Woodmen of America at Willow City. Mr. Crites is an intensely energetic man and one whose business methods have ever been above all reproach.

December 1, 1888, in Bottineau county, North Dakota, Mr. Crites married Miss Sarah Simms, a daughter of Thomas Simms, a native of Canada. Mr. and Mrs. Crites have three children,—Minnie is a popular and successful teacher in the public schools of Gildford, Montana; George Maxwell Crites is associated with his father in business; and Francis M. is a student in the high school at Gildford, Montana. In their religious faith the family are devout members of the Methodist Episcopal church.

HENRY PAUL SAMUELL, attorney-at-law, Three Forks, Montana, was born in Mason county, Illinois, October 2, 1886. There he resided until about fourteen years of age and then, with his parents, removed to Jacksonville, in the same state, where they lived for some six years. During their residence in the latter place he finished his public school education and following upon that entered Whipple Academy, from which institution he was in due time graduated. Subsequent to that he matriculated in the Illinois College at Jacksonville, where he remained for one year. Going then to Chicago, he accepted a position with the National India Rubber Company, and after a twelvemonth in that connection he entered the Illinois Wesleyan University at Bloomington, Illinois, where he pursued his studies preparatory to the law and from which he received his degree. Mr. Samuell worked his own way through college and while at Bloomington he acted as advertising manager of the Daily Pantagraph, the oldest newspaper in the state of Illinois. After graduating with the degree of LL. B., Mr. Samuell hearkened to a long cherished ambition and wended his way to the far West, coming at once to Three Forks and here hanging out his shingle. The date of his arrival was August, 1910, and in that short time of his residence here he has won the sincerest liking and regard of the citizens, who recognize his signal worth and unusual ability.

Mr. Samuell is the son of H. B. Samuell, who likewise is a native son of the state of Illinois. After living in that state nearly all his life, his son's eloquent praise of Montana so impressed him that he himself came in 1911, and this highly respected gentleman and his wife are now prominent residents of Wheaton, in the vicinity of which he has extensive ranching interests. Mr. Samuell, the elder, was for many years an agriculturist, but in 1894 abandoned that industry and engaged in the mercantile field until 1896. In that year he was elected circuit clerk of Mason county and held that office until 1900, when he was appointed by Governor Yates chief clerk and assistant superintendent of the Illinois School for the Deaf at Jacksonville. After a year he was transferred to the Illinois Central Hospital for the Insane, where he acted as assistant superintendent and at the same time was a member of the personal staff of the governor. In 1911 he retired and came to Montana. He was married in Illinois, the maiden name of his wife having been Sarah A. Estep. Henry Paul is the youngest of the four children of the Samuell family.

Mr. Samuell is a stalwart supporter of the men and measures of the Grand Old Party, in whose history and traditions he takes great interest and pride. He is by no means a passive partisan, but is a real fighter and at the present time is one of the county committeemen. Fraternally he belongs to the Masons, and in religious convictions he has inclinations towards the Baptist teachings. While in college he was a member of the National Greek letter fraternity, Sigma Chi, one of the strongest student organizations in the United States. He is associated with the Gallatin Valley Club at Bozeman. He is exceedingly fond of football and while in college was for three years a player on the 'varsity eleven.

He is fond of reading. In this connection let it be stated that his fine office possesses one of the well chosen and comprehensive law libraries of the county. In 1911 Mr. Samuell had the honor of being elected secretary of the Eastern Montana Bar Association, an unusual distinction for so young a representative of the profession. He has also served as secretary of the Three Forks Commercial Club. It is, in fact, safe to say that the county has no more prominent and popular young citizen.

Says Mr. Samuell: "The east has lost its charms for me. I am in love with Montana, because it offers brighter opportunities for energetic people than any other state. I never intend permanently to leave the state."

Mr. Samuell has not yet joined the ranks of the benedicts.

W. H. GRAY. In every profession there may be found men who have risen above their fellows and are acknowledged leaders, some on account of their long membership, others by proficiency in their calling and still others who have gained prestige for both reasons. In the last-named class stands W. H. Gray, of Libby, president of the Libby school board and of the Lincoln County Abstract Company, and one of the leading legists of his part of the state. Coming to this city in 1910, with many years of experience in law and jurisprudence, he gained instant recognition as an attorney of ability and a business man of integrity, a reputation he has fully maintained to the present time. Mr. Gray was born in Louisa county, Iowa, April 22, 1854, and is a son of William and Sarah (Stronach) Gray.

William Gray was born in England, in 1824, and was eight years of age when he came to the United States. Landing at Baltimore, Maryland, he made his way to Columbus, Ohio, where he started across the country in a wagon for Iowa, and after a long journey reached Louisa county, where the remainder of his life was spent in agricultural pursuits, his death occurring in 1888, when he was sixty-four years of age. His wife, a native of Maryland, came to Iowa in young womanhood, and was married to Mr. Gray in 1845. Her death occurred in Iowa in August, 1909, when she had reached the advanced age of eighty-four years.

As a youth W. H. Gray attended the district schools of Iowa, and during the summer months assisted his father in the work of the home farm. The life of an agriculturist, however, did not appeal to the youth, who had his mind set on a professional career, and he accordingly entered the law department of the University of Iowa, where he graduated and received his degree in 1876. He at once entered upon the practice of his profession at Columbus Junction, Iowa, that city being his field of endeavor until 1901, when he went to Des Moines. In 1903 he removed to Browerville, Minnesota, removing to Long Prairie, Minnesota, in 1906, and there continued in practice until 1910, which year saw his advent in Libby. Since that time Mr. Gray has built up a large professional business, and has been connected with some of the leading cases tried before the Lincoln county courts. He was the founder of the Lincoln County Abstract Company, of which he is president, Mrs. Gray being treasurer and Morris D. Rowland, vice-president and Mrs. M. D. Rowland secretary. He is at this time president of the Libby Commercial Club, and foremost in everything that promises to be of benefit to this rapidly-advancing community. Politically a Republican, he is secretary of the county Republican central committee and serves as president of the Libby school board, and while a resident of Iowa served for a score of years as a member of the school board and for sixteen years as justice of the peace. Fraternally he is a blue lodge Mason, and his religious belief is that of the Methodist Episcopal church.

Mr. Gray was married (first) to Miss Mary Celia Gray, September 19, 1879, at Grandview, Iowa, who died April 1, 1882, at Grandview and was buried there, having been the mother of one child: Verna C., who married Mr. Wilcox, the principal druggist of Montrose, Iowa, and has four children. Mr. Gray's second marriage occurred May 29, 1883, when he was united with Miss Letitia Northey, of Columbus Junction, Iowa, and they have had two children: Lula H., born in August, 1892, at Columbus Junction, Iowa, and now a teacher in the public schools of Libby; and Charles N., born in August, 1898, who attends the Libby schools. The Gray home in Libby is one of the modern residences of the city, and is a center of culture and refinement. Mr. Gray is known as a man of the strictest integrity in business matters, and as a lawyer who adheres to the ethics of his profession. Although he has not been a resident of Libby for a very long period he has demonstrated himself a public-spirited citizen, and as such is welcomed into the circle of men who are endeavoring to advance their community along the lines of education, morality and good citizenship.

DR. HENRY H. HALL. In May of 1910, Dr. Henry Hall first came to Three Forks, Montana. He arrived just as the town was being laid out and incorporated, thus becoming one of her first physicians in point of time as well as from a professional standpoint. His practice expanded with the town, whose growth has been almost phenomenal, her records now showing a population of fifteen thousand inhabitants. The future holds promise of realized ambitions both for the town herself and for the pioneer physician whose life is devoted to the service of her and her people.

Doctor Hall was born in St. Lawrence county, New York, on the twentieth day of September, 1879. His early schooling was received at Big Rapids, Michigan, after which he attended, for three years, Ferris Institute, Chicago, a private institution. Upon completing his course at this institution, he accepted a position with Reid, Murdoch & Company, wholesale grocers of Chicago, remaining with the house for three years before going to St. Paul, where, in 1900, he was called by the Northwestern Adjustment & Liability Company. During the eight years that he continued in their employ he began, in a desultory fashion, his first study of the science of medicine. For the two and a half years that followed he was an employe of the St. Paul Loan & Collection Company. His evenings were still spent in the perusal of the texts which represented to him his life's vocation. This time he studied with more system, his work being under the direct auspices of the Minnesota State University at Minneapolis. After completing the required work he served for two years as interne in the city and county hospital of Minneapolis and one year in the same capacity at the St. Mary's Hospital, Superior, Wisconsin. In the autumn of 1909 he began the regular practice of medicine in Superior. While he met with deserved success for so young a physician he felt that the opportunities for a career of marked prominence would be greater in the newer cities of the west, hence he disposed of his established practice to begin again in Three Forks with the birth of the town itself. Thus far he has certainly had no cause to regret his decision or question his early judgment.

While still in St. Paul, Doctor Hall was married to Miss Louise E. Ballinger of that city. They are the proud parents of an infant son whom they call Homer B. Hall.

The doctor, unlike most men of his profession, is very active in the fraternal circles of his little city. He is a member of the blue lodge of the Ancient Free and Accepted Order of Masons, of the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Order of Moose, the Knights of Pythias, the Foresters and the Modern Brotherhood of American Samaritans.

Dr. Henry Hall is the son of Charles W. Hall, who was himself born in St. Lawrence county, New York. The senior Mr. Hall had been, in his younger life, active in the local politics of his community, serving his county and city in several offices. He is now a retired farmer and land holder in more than comfortable circumstances. His wife, the mother of the young doctor, was, before her marriage, Mary Stockwell, a native of Holland. She came with her parents to America when fourteen years of age. She died in her home in St. Lawrence county, New York, on the first day of April, 1893, leaving motherless a family of nine children, most of whom had reached their maturity. Clarissa Hall, the oldest daughter, is now married and living in Munson, Michigan. Everett, the first born of the sons, is an artist in Lemon, South Dakota. Lottie is Mrs. B. J. Hunt of Grand Rapids, Michigan, while Gertrude is the wife of B. R. Grant, a cousin of our late warrior and president of the same name. Laura resides in Michigan as Mrs. Charles Carter. The youngest boy, Ed, lives in Fargo, North Dakota, as does likewise his sister Jennie, Mrs. O. S. Clark. Anna, the youngest daughter, married Mr. C. J. Blackford of Grand Rapids, Michigan.

It is, certainly, an unusual decree of Fate to permit so large a family to remain unbroken through so many years and perhaps more remarkable yet that of all the nine, not one has chosen for himself a life of celibacy.

NATHAN HART. One of the first merchants and now the largest dealer in hardware and implements at Polson, Mr. Hart has been a pioneer at several places in the West, and has the spirit of enterprise which ventures for fortune in new places and in advance of the full tide of settlement. He has spent an active and prosperous career of more than a quarter century in the West and Northwest.

Nathan Hart was born in Highland county, Ohio,

April 28, 1858. His father was James Hart, a native of Ohio and a farmer, whose death occurred in 1884 at the age of sixty-five. The mother was Jemima (Coulter) Hart, also a native of Ohio, and her death occurred in 1865. Of the four children Nathan was the youngest. He was educated in the country schools of his native county up to the age of eighteen, and was engaged in farming until he was twenty-five. He resided for a time near Decatur, Illinois, and in Iowa, and in 1886 became the pioneer merchant at Alliance, Nebraska, now a thriving city but then just beginning its growth. His career as merchant there continued fifteen years, and he was very successful. After selling out his interests he removed to the Black Hills district of South Dakota, residing at Lead, where he engaged in mining up to February, 1910. He was a member of the Hidden Treasure Mining Company, being manager of the company six years, and was fairly successful as a miner.

In 1910 Mr. Hart located at Polson, where he bought a lot on Main street, erected a store building 25 by 80 feet, with an adjoining two-story building 25 by 140, and opened the third hardware and general implement business in the town. At the present time he is the largest dealer in these lines in this county. Mr. Hart also owns a farm of one hundred and twenty acres across the river from Polson, where he engaged in farming and stock raising.

In the different communities where he has been a resident Mr. Hart has taken an active part in the activities for progress and welfare. He served as treasurer of the Polson Chamber of Commerce two years until the pressure of business compelled him to resign. He is a member of the Elks Club at Kalispell and the Knights of Pythias at Alliance, Nebraska, and is Republican in politics.

Mr. Hart was married at Lincoln, Nebraska, March 27, 1891, to Miss Josie Barry, a native of Wisconsin and daughter of Lawrence Barry. They are the parents of three children: Ray D. is associated with his father in business; Gertrude Beatrice and Jemima Winifred are the two daughters, both at home.

ISAAC S. MARTINE. The man of initiative is he who combines with a capacity for hard work an indomitable will and a determination to succeed. He whose name forms the caption for this review is a self-made man in the most significant sense of the word for no one helped him in a financial way and he is largely self-educated. He is most successfully engaged in the real-estate business at Conrad, in Teton county, Montana, and at the present time, in 1912, is the popular and efficient incumbent of the office of alderman.

A native of Brown county, Minnesota, Isaac S. Martine was born April 20, 1876, and he is a son of Isaac S. and Elizabeth (Werring) Martine, the former of whom was born in the state of New York and the latter in Minnesota. The father was a gallant soldier in the Civil war, having enlisted as a private in Company G, Second Wisconsin Volunteer Infantry, shortly after the inception of the war. He was in the service of the Union for three years, at the expiration of which he settled in Minnesota, where he was engaged in farming operations during the remainder of his lifetime. He was summoned to the great beyond in 1897, at the age of seventy-one years, and his cherished and devoted wife, who still survives him, is living on the old homestead farm in Brown county, Minnesota. Mr. and Mrs. Martine became the parents of three children, of whom the subject of this review was the youngest in order of birth.

Isaac S. Martine, of this notice, was educated in the public schools of his native place and in 1898 he was graduated in the Sleepy Eye (Minn.) high school. He remained at home on the farm with his mother until 1900, when he went to Kenmore, North Dakota, where he was engaged in the implement business for the ensuing five years. He was decidedly successful in a business way at Kenmore but in 1905, when the town was flooded by the river, he practically lost everything he had. In the summer of that year he went to Idaho, where he taught school for four and a half years, during which time he managed to save up a neat little sum of money. In 1910 he came to Conrad, Montana, arriving here in the fall of that year, and he immediately opened up a real-estate office and began to invest and trade in city and farming property. He is now one of the leading real-estate men in Conrad, where his business dealings have ever been characterized by fair and honorable methods and where he is held in high esteem by all with whom he has come in contact. He is a stalwart Republican in his political convictions and was honored by his fellow citizens with election to representation in the city council. He is a member from the First ward and his term of office does not expire until 1913. He is likewise incumbent of the office of deputy county assessor and has charge of the assessments at Conrad. He is a decidedly active worker in political and civic affairs. In a fraternal way Mr. Martine is affiliated with Conrad Lodge, No. 80, Free and Accepted Masons, and he is likewise connected with the Independent Order of Odd Fellows, the Modern Woodmen of America, the Ancient Order of United Workmen, and the Knights of the Maccabees.

At Sleepy Eye, Minnesota, June 16, 1900, Mr. Martine was united in marriage to Miss Helen Johnson, a daughter of Ole Johnson, of Sleepy Eye. Five children have been born to this union, namely: Alice, Gladys, Myrtle, Howard and Ruth. The two oldest children were born in North Dakota, the next two in Idaho and the youngest in Conrad, Montana.

ROLAND W. REED, who has gained nation wide reputation as a photographer of Indians and of Indian life in Montana and the Northwest, has been a resident of Kalispell since 1910. He is not a native westerner, but was born and reared in Wisconsin, Winnebago county being the place of his birth, which occurred on the 22nd of June, 1866. He is the son of Royal W. and Mary Jane (Hammond) Reed, both of Scotch ancestry, and respective natives of New York state, and of Augusta, Maine. The father moved to the middle west in the early forties and engaged in farm life in Winnebago county, Wisconsin. He saw service in the Civil war as a member of Company C of the Fourteenth Regiment of Wisconsin Volunteers, and was in the service for two and a half years, seeing much of the realities of war and participating in many of the decisive battles of the protracted struggle, with his regiment, as may be seen in the official record of the Fourteenth Regiment. He died in California, at the age of seventy-nine, in the year 1908, having spent all his life in Wisconsin with the exception of two years in California, and four years in Minnesota.

The mother, who was born in Augusta, Maine, was married in Winnebago county, Wisconsin, and died in 1908, when she was in the seventy-third year of her life. They were the parents of five children, of which number Roland W. was the fourth born.

Roland W. Reed was educated in the schools of Winnebago county to the age of eighteen years, and when he had quit school devoted himself to the business of learning the carpenter's trade. He completed his apprenticeship to that trade and gave something like ten or twelve years in all to the work. During those years he was associated with the Southern Pacific and Great Northern Railroads, in construction work, and it was his work for these roads which eventually brought about his coming to the West. He became attracted to the study of photography here, and applying himself to the work in an amateur way, he later decided to go into the work in real earnest. He accordingly took up the study of that art under the instruction of Daniel Dutro, then of Havre, but now of Helena, and in a comparatively brief space he had attained a proficiency in the work that justified Mr. Dutro in taking his pupil in as a member of the firm, which came to be known as Dutro & Reed. From the beginning of his identification with Montana, Mr. Reed had been enormously attracted to the Indians and their life and customs, and he began to make a thorough study of them. During the past six years he has devoted himself in a large measure to his researches among them, and he photographed practically every tribe in the state, as well as those of the state of Minnesota. Mr. Reed has photographs of the chiefs of the Ojibway, the Flathead, the Kootenai, the Pagans and the Blackfoot tribes, and holds the largest collection of bona fide photographs to be found in the state of Montana, and the second largest collection known to exist in the United States. Many of these photographs represent the Indian as he is, depicting him in his natural environment, and they are the results of many a difficult task and exciting experience, and hardships of no inconsiderable nature have been undergone by Mr. Reed in the procuring of this wonderful collection. He is known as one of the greatest, if not indeed the greatest photographer of the Indian, living today. His work has not been confined solely to this branch, however, and Mr. Reed conducts a regular studio business with excellent success. He has a large clientele among the best people of Kalispell and the surrounding country, and gives a portion of his time to conventional studio work, in addition to his activities among the red men.

Mr. Reed is a Progressive Republican, but takes no active part in the political life of the district in which he lives beyond that which is made necessary by the demands of good citizenship.

ANTHONY L. RASMUSSEN. A man of vim and energy, possessing undoubted business aptitude and ability, Anthony L. Rasmussen, secretary and treasurer of the Teton Commercial Company, is identified with one of the leading mercantile establishments of Cut Bank, and holds a noteworthy position among its foremost citizens. A native of Minnesota, he was born in February, 1878, in Todd county, and was reared to agricultural pursuits.

Nels Rasmussen, his father, was born in Norway in 1842. In 1860, following in the footsteps of so many of his fellow-countrymen, he came to America, a land bright in promises, locating in Minnesota. After working as a farm hand for a few years, he bought a tract of wild land, and from that time until the present writing, in 1912, has been actively and prosperously employed in tilling the soil. He married Anna Larsen who was born in Norway, and as a girl came with her parents to this country, settling with them in Minnesota, which has since been her home. She is now sixty-five years of age, and as active as in the days of yore.

The fourth child in a family of four children, Anthony L. Rasmussen was educated in his native state, principally in the public schools of Sauk Center. When about twenty-two years old he migrated to Canada in search of cheap land, and having proved up on a homestead claim was there engaged in general farming several years. Selling out his Canadian property in 1910, Mr. Rasmussen came to Montana to join his brother, who had previously settled at Cut Bank, and had established the Teton County Commercial Company. He bought an interest in his brother's business, and the same year it was incorporated under its present name, with R. C. Rasmussen, president; I. M. Rasmussen, vice president; and Anthony L. Rasmussen, secretary and treasurer. The Teton Commercial Company is one of the leading mercantile organizations of Teton county, its general store being one of the best equipped and best stocked of any in this section of the state, and having the largest trade.

Mr. Rasmussen is well and favorably known as one of the prominent factors in promoting the business and prosperity of Cut Bank, having a large circle of friends in both the social and business world. He is not married, mayhap having been too busily engrossed with his business affairs to form matrimonial ties. Religiously he is a member of the Lutheran church.

CHARLES A. WYETH. A true westerner is Charles A. Wyeth, whose executive ability is of an unusually lively and practical sort. He can make you believe that the center and circumference of the world lie west of the Mississippi. In Wyandotte, Kansas, he was born, on the 31st of January, 1874, and from that time his field of activity has broadened ever and ever toward the westward, for pioneer blood was in his veins. His father, Charles A. Wyeth of Ohio, followed the path of the setting sun, first to Indiana, where he married Miss Theresa Mewhinney, and later to Kansas and then to Colorado when that state seemed still on the edge of civilization. In spite of his having lived through the vicissitudes of the Civil war in his young days and having followed as a life-work the strenuous and useful occupation of a blacksmith, the elder Charles Wyeth is still living in Minneapolis at the ripe age of 76. His wife died in 1895, before reaching her forty-seventh birthday. Their children numbered six, of whom Mr. Wyeth of Polson is the third.

It was in Denver that Charles A. Wyeth, the subject of the present narrative, received his elementary and high school education. After his graduation in 1890 he proceeded to add practical ability to his general knowledge by learning the fine and valuable art of manufacturing jewelry. Having begun this work in Denver, he went to Colorado Springs where he accepted a position with Longbean & Company of that place. After two years here, Mr. Wyeth became interested in the Black Hills region of South Dakota and settled in Deadwood, where he pursued his vocation as the assistant of George M. Butler, the prominent jeweler of that community, continuing the connection for years. At the end of that time he accepted a contract with the Homestaker Mining Company of Leeds, South Dakota, where he maintained an up-to-date jewelry store of his own. In 1910 he was attracted by the promising conditions at Polson and came to this place where he opened the present jewelry establishment, rapidly developing it into one of the largest in the state. Mr. Wyeth is the only manufacturing jeweler in the Flathead. His originality and ingenuity make his emporium a popular one.

In 1901 occurred Mr. Wyeth's marriage to Miss Christina Johnson, a popular young woman of Leeds, South Dakota. A Methodist in religious connection, his attitude toward church, as toward business, is a practical one, closely related to the ethics of every day life. The same habit of mind is seen in his political party preference; for in spite of his own success, Mr. Wyeth is clearly conscious of the many inequalities existent in present national conditions. He believes that the welfare of mankind or of a nation should be considered from a universal point of view, rather than from the narrow outlook of the class or the individual. He is therefore frankly a Socialist in political theory, though always moderate and rational in his applications of such theory to any case in hand. He is a popular and widely known progressive along all lines and is fraternally affiliated with the F. O. E. organization. His rise in life has been due solely to his own intelligent and persevering effort.

FRANK STONE. Among the prosperous and prominent business men of Polson, Frank Stone, the proprietor of a thriving real estate and insurance business, takes a leading rank. His connection with the business interests of Polson has been but a brief one, but in a short time he has been able to establish a good business and win the confidence and esteem of the community.

Mr. Stone was born in Decatur, Indiana, in 1863, the 21st day of December being his natal day. He is the son of Daniel and Lucinda (Laing) Stone, the father a native New Yorker and the mother an Ohioan. As a young man Daniel Stone settled on a homestead in Indiana, in which state he passed the remainder of his life. He was a veteran of the Civil war, having enlisted in the Seventh Indiana Volunteers at the opening of the war, and he served throughout the conflict. He died at his Indiana home shortly after the war was over. The mother, who was born in 1800, lived to the good old age of eighty-two years, her death occurring in 1882. She was one of the best known and most highly esteemed residents of her section of the state when she died, having a host of warm friends throughout the country. Ten children were born to Daniel Stone and his wife, of which number Frank Stone was the youngest.

After receiving such advantages as were available in the schools of his home town, Mr. Stone was variously engaged for some time, and as a young man became connected with the hotel business. For twenty years he conducted a hotel in Indiana, and in 1901 went to Oklahoma, locating in Macade county. He became engaged in farming there and later was identified with the town site business at Hinton, Oklahoma, and is known as the founder of the towns in that section of the country. He came to Montana in 1910, settling at Polson, where he formed a partnership with Mr. Z. B. Silver and engaged in the real estate business. Soon after the partnership was dissolved and Mr. Stone continued alone in the business, in which he has been very successful. In connection with his real estate operations, he is the local representative of a number of prominent insurance companies and is an extensive dealer in farm lands.

The few years that Mr. Stone has been a resident of Montana have been sufficient to convince him of the vast possibilities of the state, and he has not been slow to recognize the opportunities that are everywhere awaiting the man of brains and energy. He is confident that Montana will one day become one of the leading states of the union. Mr. Stone renders allegiance to the Democratic party, and takes a wholesome interest in all its affairs. He is a citizen of sterling value, bearing cheerfully his full share of the civic responsibilities, and is everywhere regarded as one of the leading men of the community. He is a Mason, and affiliates with Lodge No. 32 of the order of Guthrie, Oklahoma, having passed through all chairs of that lodge.

Mr. Stone was married to Miss Lucy Persons of Chickasha county, Oklahoma. They have no children.

ANDREW J. BECWAR. An experienced merchant and man of broad abilities, Mr. Becwar decided to cast his lot in the new town of Hingham, founded about three years ago, and there in the subsequent interval he has become one of the most prosperous citizens and is known and esteemed for his business integrity and personal character throughout a region covering many miles of the flourishing settlements about Hingham.

Andrew J. Becwar is a native of the state of Wisconsin, born in Crawford county, October 4, 1864, and received his education in the country schools near his father's farm. Up to the time he was twenty-three years old he followed farming on his father's place. His natural inclination and tastes were for business life, and he first engaged as a salesman for the Milwaukee Binder Company, covering a large territory and doing a good business for two years. Then for a time he was a railroad conductor, a position which he resigned and invested his savings in a mercantile business in Minnesota. In 1901 he sold out and established a store at Anamoose, North Dakota. All his career has been identified with the great northwest country, and he is one of the men who have promoted the upbuilding of this region.

His business at Anamoose was very prosperous until a destructive fire on July 22, 1907. In the meantime he had established a branch at Berthold, North Dakota, and as this was on a paying basis he moved his home to that point. He is still owner of this business. On February 17, 1910, Mr. Becwar came out along the line of the Great Northern to the newly opened town of Hingham, where he established one of the first stores. With his large experience behind him, and with characteristic energy he has developed the largest mercantile concern of the kind in this section of Montana. His stock comprises all that would be found in a modern department store of the cities, and his trade has been growing steadily from the start. His success has been due in large measure to his complete confidence in the future of this locality, since he has not been afraid to extend his business to meet future growth, and in this way has reaped the rewards of progressive enterprise.

Mr. Becwar's father was Andrew Becwar, who was born in Bohemia, and who died in Crawford county, Wisconsin, where he is buried. His death occurred in 1871, when he was forty-five years old. He came to America in the early '50s, settling first in Galena, Illinois, but not being satisfied with that location, moved to Crawford county, Wisconsin, where he was a prosperous farmer during the rest of his life. He was married in Bohemia to Miss Anna Slayback, who came from a substantial family of that country. She is still living in Crawford county, a very active old lady at the age of eighty-nine years.

Mr. Andrew J. Becwar was married at Prairie du Chien, Wisconsin, in May, 1893, to Miss Frances Marvin. Five children have been born to their marriage: Ethel, born March 24, 1895, at Ortonville, Minnesota; Clarence, born September 30, 1898, at Ortonville; Louis, born in 1901 at Ortonville; Agnes, born in 1902, at Anamoose, North Dakota; and Marian, born November 10, 1910, at Fort Benton, Montana. The first four are all attending school in Hingham.

Mr. Becwar affiliates with the Modern Woodmen of America and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. His politics is independent, his support going to the man and principles rather than to party. He is devoted to his church, the Catholic, and is a strict attendant to his religious duties. His recreation from a busy life is found often in the sports of hunting and fishing, of which he is an ardent follower. He is proud of his citizenship in the great state of Montana, and his business success and his public-spirited citizenship have brought him a host of friends in this new country.

DR. THEOLOP SCHJOLDAGER. The enriching of American life that comes from the addition of brilliant Europeans to our communities is nowhere more interestingly and worthily exemplified than in the case of Dr. Schjoldager. Descended from a fine Norwegian family, traceable back as far as 1558; educated to an unusual degree, both in breadth and specialization; possessed of keenness of intellect, notable strength of character and a genial nature Dr. Schjoldager well deserves the high regard accorded him. His father, Hakon Schjoldager, who was born in Norway, was a prominent colonel of the Norwegian Cavalry. The fact that he was married in Rome, Italy, in 1846 to Agnese Celi adds especial interest to Dr. Schjoldager's parentage. Of the five children born to Hakon Schjoldager, and his wife, the doctor is the youngest.

Theolop Schjoldager was educated in the elementary schools of Christiana and in the Royal University of that city. He completed an eight-year course in medicine at the latter institution, taking his degree in 1907.

At once he began his practice, meanwhile pursuing special courses in Spendorf and in the universities of Berlin and Vienna. Thus perfecting his knowledge of surgery and of the intricate subject of criminal insanity, Dr. Schjoldager was well equipped for an important life work. Having an uncle, Thorwald Schjoldager, who had been one of Chicago's earlier citizens, it was natural that the young physician should look westward and across the sea in his search for suitable field for his professional endeavors.

Coming to America in the autumn of 1909, he practiced first in Knox, North Dakota. Here he remained for one year, his stay in Knox, short though it was, being marked by the happy circumstance of his marriage to Miss Marit Dehli on January 24, 1910. They removed first to Glendive, Montana, and later—in September, 1911, to Polson, where from the very first Dr. Schjoldager has been most prominent in his profession. He was very soon elected health officer for Polson and his practice is increasingly extensive.

Every phase of the young doctor's life is replete with activity and with promise. He finds relaxation in his pleasant home, which is brightened by the presence of two little ones, Arnold Torfinn, born in Knox, November 4, 1910; and little Gerd, born November 16, 1911. Out-door recreation also enters into his life, as do social movements for the public good. Few temperance lectures carry more weight than do those of a scientific and medical authority such as Dr. Schjoldager is known to be. His interest in the Boy Scouts is another outlet for his abundant energy and vigorous human sympathy. Politically he is a Republican, but his friends feel that wholesome measures and clean men in office mean more to him than arbitrary party lines. His social and professional affiliations include membership in the Sons of Norway, the Scandinavian Brotherhood, The Royal Highlanders, The Norwegian Medical Association, the American Medical Association, the Modern Woodmen of America.

Dr. Schjoldager is, in a word, a model type of the high-class Norwegian-American and a valuable citizen of Polson. He believes that the future of the Flathead country is the finest in the United States.

LEONARD H. KNUTSON. A man of undoubted business ability and talent, honest in his dealings, and courteous to all, Leonard H. Knutson is fast winning a place of prominence among the leading merchants of Concord, where, as secretary, treasurer and manager of the Concord Mercantile Company he is carrying on a substantial trade. He was born March 5, 1872, in Norway, on the west coast, being the eleventh child in the family of fifteen children born to Lars and Laurine (Knut) Knutson. His parents were life-long residents of Norway, the father, who for many years was captain of a sailing vessel, dying in 1898, aged eighty-one years, and the mother passing away December 22, 1911, aged eighty-three years.

Obtaining his rudimentary education in Norway, Leonard H. Knutson made up his mind as a boy to begin life for himself in America, a land that always had a special fascination for him. Bidding farewell to home and friends in 1889, while yet in his teens, he came to this country, and located first in Benson, Minnesota, where he remained five years, working on a farm summers, and attending school winters. For five years Mr. Knutson worked in a general store for the Fremod Association, at Glenwood, Minnesota. In 1900 he went to North Dakota, where he proved up on a homestead which he still owns. In the meantime working for a real estate firm. In 1905, Mr. Knutson helped organize The Ertresvoog Company of Battineau, North Dakota, a firm doing a large and extensive business in general merchandise and farm machinery, Mr. Knutson being treasurer and manager of said company for five years. Ready then to start in business for himself, Mr. Knutson came to Choteau, now Hill county, Montana, locating at Concord, and here, in March, 1910, established himself as a merchant, being instrumental in having incorporated, under the state laws, the Concord Mercantile Company, with the following named officers: L. J. Mork, president; H. J. Bidne, vice-president; and Leonard H. Knutson, secretary, treasurer and manager. The company is already well known throughout this section of the county, and has built up a large and exceedingly prosperous trade, its aim to please and accommodate so far as possible all patrons being widely appreciated.

Mr. Knutson is identified with the Republican element in politics, and fraternally belongs to Tuscan Lodge, No. 44, Ancient Free and Accepted Order of Masons. Religiously he is a member of the Lutheran church. He is a skilful fisherman and hunter, finding great pleasure in using rod and gun.

Mr. Knutson married, in Kalispell, Montana, January 7, 1911, Miss Nettie Roland, a daughter of Ole and Anna (Olsen) Roland who came from Norway to the United States settling first in North Dakota, and later in Dunkirk, Montana.

Mr. Knutson has two brothers, Rasmus Knutson of Saint Cloud, Minnesota, and Jacob Knutson, "Vednes" editor-in-chief of the daily, Social-Demokratin, Christiania, Norway, and a great political speaker and leader of said country.

FRED E. RENSHAW. Among the members of the legal profession in Montana many instances may be found of those of the younger generation who have met with immediate success in their chosen vocation, due in many cases to the fact that they have been shrewd enough to select the proper field in which to display their abilities, and in this connection a brief record of Fred E. Renshaw, of Lavina, will not be inappropriate. As junior member of the firm of Renshaw & Hendershott he handles the legal affairs of this progressive and successful concern, and is rapidly gaining an enviable reputation among the legists of this section, where he first settled in 1911. Mr. Renshaw is a native of Sac City, Iowa, where he was born July 19, 1885, a son of Clarence V. and Augusta (Hollingsworth) Renshaw, natives of Iowa. His father spent his life in farming and stock-raising and died in 1904, at the age of forty-eight years, while his mother still resides there. There were five children in the family, of whom Fred E. is the third in order of birth.

Fred E. Renshaw was three years of age when his parents removed to Hull, Iowa, and there he received his early education in the public schools. Later he went to Inwood, in the same state, being a student in the high school there, and after graduating therefrom attended the law department of the University of Iowa, where he received his degree in 1909. Returning to Inwood he entered upon the practice of his profession, but was not satisfied with that locality, and accordingly spent some time in travel through the west, seeking a more favorable location. In 1911, having decided that the town of Lavina offered satisfactory opportunities for the enterprising young professional man, he settled here and in January, 1911, formed a partnership with George W. Hendershott, who carries on an extensive real estate, loan and insurance business. From boyhood Mr. Renshaw has displayed habits of industry and integrity, and these characteristics, in connection with his ability in his profession, have made him a decided factor in the affairs of his adopted community.

In his political views he is a stalwart Republican, and as a member of the county central committee he wields a wide influence in public matters and takes a prominent part in the councils of his party. Fraternally he is associated with the Masonic order, and is also a popular member of the Lavina Commercial Club. He is a devotee of motor cycling, hunting and fishing, and under his able management the Lavina Baseball Club has had several very successful seasons, Mr. Renshaw himself, being a player of no mean ability. Like his partner, Mr. Hendershott, Mr. Renshaw is unmarried.

C. G. CAMPBELL. It is almost trite to state that the press is the most potent influence in modern civilization. In fact it is one of the chief forces in our present day existence, and we are so used to it that we accept its benefits with no thought of what their lack would mean to us. "Gutenberg's gun has the longest range," wrote Lowell in the latter half of the last century, and he was thinking rather of the influence of literature than of journalism. It is a question if even he had a vision of the people of the remotest settlements of our country reading the happenings of Europe, Asia, Africa and the islands of the sea at practically the same time as the dwellers in the great centers of population. But this miracle the increased efficiency of the newspapers and the extension of the postal service have brought to pass. To run a good newspaper is almost as important a service to the community as to conduct a good school and incidentally it requires a decidedly broader training. Whitehall is fortunate in having such an editor as Mr. Curtis Garfield Campbell, who owns and publishes the Jefferson Valley News.

The eleventh of twelve children, Mr. Campbell was naturally endowed with resourcefulness as the children of large families are likely to be, so the sociologists tell us. Hoytville, Pennsylvania, has been the home of the family for generations and is now the residence of all the household except Curtis Garfield. He was born on August 19, 1882, and received his first instruction in the country schools, after which he graduated from the grammar school in Hoytville. He supplemented this by a normal course at Mansfield, Pennsylvania, after which he taught for two years. Having a decided talent for journalism, Mr. Campbell gave up his work as a teacher and went into newspaper work. From the first he was in the editorial department, and so did not get the training of the compositor nor of the printer. He was connected with different papers in the east and at the age of twenty-five went to Chicago, where he remained but one year. From Chicago Mr. Campbell made another long journey toward the west this time to Pocatello, Idaho, where for one year he was on the staff of the Tribune. Mr. Campbell desired to go into the newspaper business on his own account, and so he went to Driggs, Idaho, and purchased the Teton Valley News. For two years he edited and published this sheet and then came to Whitehall and since July, 1911, has been at the head of the Jefferson Valley News. Mr. Campbell's idea is to publish a paper which shall represent the general sentiment of the community, and on that account he takes no part in politics. As he is not pledged to the support of any party, he is free to advocate the measures which seem best for the general welfare. His notion of a paper is that it should aim to give its subscribers the news of the day and that it should be a promoter of every movement which makes for the prosperity and the enlightenment of the district. Until he bought a journal of his own, Mr. Campbell knew nothing of the mechanical part of the business, as his work had always been confined to the editorial end, but he went into the work with the confidence born of the knowledge that all things are to be accomplished with brains and application, and now he is familiar with every process in the preparation of a news sheet and can fill any place which happens to be vacant, from devil to editor-in-chief. He has definite ideas as to what he wants his paper to be, and he has also a sufficient stock of other ideas and an aptitude for receiving and originating new trains of thought. This, combined with an experience in discriminating what is news and skill in presenting it, enables Mr. Campbell to publish an excellent paper and the success of his venture attests the excellence of his methods.

Mr. Campbell's father, Michael C. Campbell, is a farmer, who left his farm to fight under General Grant in the Civil war. At the close of the struggle he returned to the pursuit of agriculture, and it was in growing beans that the present editor earned his first money. His next gainful occupation was in the business which engaged his mother's people—that of lumbering in the Pennsylvania woods. Her maiden name was Catherine English, and her father, William English, was a lumberman at Lloyd, Pennsylvania.

Mr. Campbell is unmarried and is deeply interested in his lodge affiliation with the Odd Fellows. He is an interested attendant of the Baptist church of which he is a communicant. Like most good newspaper men, he is an omnivorous reader and spends a great deal of time at this pursuit, which is at once a recreation and a study with him. All sorts of open air pleasures appeal to him and he does not let his studious tastes prevent his indulging in them. He is an editor by his own choice and also by his own training, and it is evident to all that he has chosen a vocation for which he is eminently adapted. Too much cannot be said of the high character of his journalism and of its splendid influence in Whitehall and the surrounding country.

CHARLES H. ALLEN, editor and proprietor of the Ryegate Reporter, is a wide-awake representative of the journalistic interests of Musselshell county. Montana, who, though he has been a citizen of this state but a short period, gives evidence on the pages of his paper that he has caught the Montana spirit and has the most optimistic faith in the future of both his county and the entire commonwealth. He is well experienced in newspaper work, his acquaintance with printer's ink having begun when he was a boy just entering his 'teens, though he soon discontinued his connections with the profession and did not resume them until recent years.

Mr. Allen is a native of Canada, born April 9, 1871. His childhood, until eleven years of age, was spent in the vicinity of his birth, and the following twenty-two years were passed principally in Duluth, Minnesota, where he completed his common school education and also graduated from the high school. The educational training he had already acquired was then supplemented by a complete course in Parsons Business College at Duluth, and by a two years' course in the University of Minnesota, Minneapolis. He, early, began to learn the printer's trade and earned his first money in this manner when he was a lad of but thirteen years. With the exception of three years spent at his trade as a printer his attention was given to the lumber business during the whole period of his independent activity in Duluth. Upon leaving Duluth he again took up newspaper work, first at Becker, Minnesota, where he conducted the Becker Record one year, and then at St. Cloud, Minnesota, where he was connected with the Daily Journal press two years and then ran a paper on his own account two years. From St. Cloud he went to Sauk Centre, Minnesota, and assumed managerial duties on the Herald, continuing there two and a half years, following which he served for one year in a similar capacity on Wheelock's Weekly at Fergus Falls, Minnesota. He then came to Montana in March, 1911, and located at Ryegate, where he established his present plant, equipped with a cylinder press, typesetting machine and such other essentials as go to make up a modernly appointed newspaper plant.

In politics Mr. Allen is an Independent and is deeply interested in political affairs. He believes in elevating the citizen above the party, a citizen's rights above every other thing; that a man's best guide is his conscience; that he should stand upright and self-respecting and that no treasure can repay him for the surrender of the slightest right of a free individual, independent American citizen. He is a member of the Ryegate Commercial Club and the town and county receive from him the most loyal support in any movement that has for its purpose the progress and advancement of this section. Fraternally he affiliates with the Knights of the Maccabees, in which order he has "filled all the chairs," and he is also a member and the present clerk of the Ryegate lodge of the Woodmen of America. Mr. Allen's literary tastes are strongest in the direction of history, and he has a very fine collection of historical reference books in his private library. Recreation and amusement are wisely given an apportioned place in his life, being fond of hunting and fishing, and of all athletic games, especially baseball.

At Becker, Minnesota, on September 21, 1904, Mr. Allen was joined in marriage to Margaret R., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Doty, of that place. Three daughters and two sons have been the issue of this marriage: Marguerite M., Violet, Cecelia, Charles H., Jr., and Wesley Doty.

DR. LUDWIG F. LUBELEY, a young physician who has but recently located at Ryegate, Montana, for the practice of his profession, has made a thorough preparation for his life work by a full collegiate education and a complete medical training, including a year of hospital work. Montana, already exceptionally favored in the number of men of attainments that are to be found in its professional ranks, ever extends a hearty welcome to the young man of ambition and character, and such an one Dr. Lubeley has proved to be.

He was born at Hartington, Nebraska, on November 21, 1885, and lived there until about fifteen years of age, acquiring his common and high school education in the public schools of that place. From there he went to Quincy, Illinois, where he spent six years as a student at St. Francis College, in which institution he won two degrees, A. B. and A. M. He next took up the study of medicine at Creighton Medical College, Omaha, Nebraska, where he was graduated in the spring of 1910. While pursuing his medical studies at Omaha, he received an appointment as interne at St. James Hospital, Butte, Montana, the duties of which position he took up after his graduation and continued to perform one year. Following his service there, he located at Ryegate, Montana, for the independent practice of medicine, and is there local physician for the Chicago, Milwaukee & Puget Sound Railway. In line with his professional interest he sustains membership in the Musselshell County Medical Society and the Montana State Medical Society, and he keeps in touch with college associates as a member of the Phi Beta Pi medical fraternity. College life and the modern attitude of his profession that it is better to preserve good health than to cure disease, together have made Dr. Lubeley a believer in the value of athletics and he is always an interested spectator of such games, especially of baseball and football. He also enjoys hunting and fishing, and to him good literature is always a source of pleasure and of profit. He shares the universal feeling of Montana citizens that this is a state unexcelled in opportunity for the young man of ability and determination. Dr. Lubeley is a communicant of the Catholic church and affiliates with the Knights of Columbus. In politics he usually supports the Democratic party, but is inclined to be independent in his views and in the exercise of his franchise. He is at the present time a member of the Ryegate school board.

Dr. Lubeley is the sixth in order of birth and the youngest son in a family of ten children born to his parents, August and Elizabeth (Stratmann) Lubeley. The father was born in Wisconsin, but is now a retired citizen of Nebraska, in which state he was for many years engaged in the mercantile business. He is a devout Christian and an active member of his church. The parents were married in Nebraska.

HENRY THIEN, cashier and active head of the State Bank of Ryegate, Ryegate, Montana, and also an interested principal in the corporation there known as the Hilbert-Thien Company, which is engaged in the real estate and farm loan business, is a business man of acumen and long experience. He has been established in this state but a short time, but already his community has profited by his enterprise and push in promoting the advancement of this section, and he in turn is convinced that he has made a wise choice of business location.

Mr. Thien, born near Richmond, Stearns county, Minnesota, December 12, 1863, spent the first fourteen years of his life in the vicinity of his birth, and after that until 1886 resided in St. Cloud, the capital city of his native county. He was educated first in the public schools of Stearns county and later at St. John's University, Collegeville, Minnesota, and began business activity while still a boy, his initiate experience being in the county treasurer's office at St. Cloud. Nearly four years were spent in a clerical capacity in different county offices there, and for two years he was in the employ of a legal firm of that city. He then entered the banking business, and from that time to the present has had to do with banking and finance. Locating at Melrose, Minnesota, in 1886, he was there engaged in the banking business four years and from there went to Browerville, where he established another bank and conducted it until 1897. In that year he removed to Bisbee, North Dakota, and engaged in the banking, lumber and hardware business there until 1909, when he sold out all of his interests and moved to Fargo, North Dakota. Two years later, or in 1911, he came to Montana and located at Ryegate in October. Here he bought out the bank, a private institution, and established the State Bank of Ryegate, of which he is cashier and active head. In connection with the bank there was formed a corporation known as the Hilbert-Thien Company, which department does a general real estate and farm loan business.

Mr. Thien is a direct descendant of sturdy German ancestry, Joseph Thien and Marie H. Terhorst, his parents, both having been born in Germany, though their marriage occurred in St. Louis, Missouri. The father came to the United States in 1845, when a young man, and was located in St. Louis, Missouri, during the first fifteen years of his residence in this country but spent the remainder of his life at Richmond, Minnesota, where he followed farming. He was a devout Christian and an active member of the Catholic church. He died in 1894, at the age of seventy-three years, and was followed to the grave by his wife in 1901, when she too, reached the age of seventy-three. They are buried side by side in the cemetery at Richmond, Minnesota. Henry Thien, their only son and the fifth of their six children, is the only member of the family in Montana, his sisters all being residents of Minnesota.

Mr. Thien was happily married at St. Cloud, Minnesota, on June 22, 1886, to Ida, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Huhn, of that city. Ten children have blessed the union of Mr. and Mrs. Thien and are as follows: Robert R., who is married and resides in Chicago; Clara A., at the parental home, an accomplished young woman, who has graduated in music and drawing and by her skill in these arts has won first prize in a number of contests; Leo H., a civil engineer in the service of the Great Northern railway; Frances, a high school student; Edward, a high school graduate; Raymond A., Lucile, Erminilda and Wilfred, all pupils in the grades; and Harold A., not of school age.

Mr. and Mrs. Thien are communicants of the Catholic church and the former is fraternally affiliated with the Catholic Order of Foresters. Mr. Thien, who is a Republican, takes an active interest in political affairs and while a resident of North Dakota served as mayor of Bisbee and also as a member of the school board there. He gives an appropriate portion of his time to diversions, enjoys riding and driving, and is well informed on the live questions of the day. He is very optimistic as to the future of Montana, especially as an agricultural state, for he has found here abundant natural resources and the strongest of western energy and genius, all of which will in time make accomplishment of what is now possibility. In the person of Mr. Thien, Montana has received a citizen of character and worth, one who will prove a strength in the commercial and industrial upbuilding of his section of this commonwealth.

EDMUND NICHOLS. Years of experience, stern training, natural inclination and a keen insight into human nature, combined with an enthusiasm for his work and a belief in its great importance, have made Edmund Nichols, of the Billings firm of Nichols & Wilson, one of the leading members of the Yellowstone county legal profession, and although he has resided in this city only since January, 1911, he has already gained a wide reputation. Mr. Nichols is a product of the east, having been born at Gouverneur, St. Lawrence county, New York, June 4, 1860, a son of Orson K. and Amanda L. (Jones) Nichols.

Mr. Nichols is a scion of one of the old and honored families of this country, the progenitor of which, John Nichols, came to America from England and settled in Massachusetts, where he married his wife, Abigail, in 1676. Their son, Joseph Nichols, was born in Farmington, Massachusetts, in 1702, and was the father of John Nichols, who was born April 7, 1731. Joseph Nichols, son of John, and great-great-grandfather of Edmund Nichols, of Billings, was born at Farmington, Massachusetts, August 4, 1754, and had a family of fourteen children, among whom was Alphonse Nichols, also born at Farmington, in 1780. Hiram Nichols, the grandfather of Edmund, a carpenter by trade, was born in New York, October 27, 1808, and died August 23, 1899. Orson K. Nichols was a native of the Empire state, and was born June 30, 1835. As a youth he learned the trade of carpenter with his father, and subsequently took up contracting, which he was successfully following at the outbreak of the Civil war. He enlisted in Company A, Fourteenth Heavy Artillery, New York, and at Cold Harbor, Virginia, was taken prisoner by the Confederates and confined in the prison at Danville, West Virginia, where he was unable to survive the hardships and died November 27, 1864. He was married in New York to Miss Amanda L. Jones, a native of Vermont, and she survives him and makes her home in Epworth, Iowa.

Edmund Nichols was the only child born to his parents, and was but four years old when his father died. He first attended the common schools of Gouverneur, New York, later went to the Potsdam State Normal School, and eventually graduated from the law department of the University of Iowa in the class of 1883. After he had spent one year in the office of William S. Forrest, a Chicago attorney, he located at Adel, Iowa, and associated himself with T. R. North. He continued there until 1888, in which year he removed to Perry, Iowa, continuing to practice alone there until 1902, and from 1892 to 1896 served as prosecuting attorney of Dallas county. In 1902 he was elected judge of the fifth judicial district of Iowa, in which capacity he acted for two terms, and continued in general practice there until January, 1911, which saw his advent in Billings. Here Mr. Nichols formed a partnership with Harry L. Wilson, under the firm style of Nichols & Wilson, and they maintained well-appointed offices in the Stapleton building. The records of Yellowstone county show that never before have there been so many able members of the bar within its confines, and because the members of this firm possess the necessary qualifications for success they have taken prominent position among the leading members of the profession.

Mr. Nichols has interested himself in fraternal work, and is a member of Otley Lodge, No. 299, A. F. & A. M., at Perry, Iowa; Perry Chapter, R. A. M.; Girard Commandery, K. T., at Perry; Des Moines Consistory, S. R., at Des Moines; and Za. Ga. Lig. Temple, A. A. O. N. M. S., at Des Moines. He also holds membership in Perry Lodge, No. 407, B. P. O. E. In political matters he is a Republican, and takes a keen and active interest in the success of his party.

On June 17, 1885, Mr. Nichols was married to Miss Dorothy I. Stephens, who was born in Illinois, daughter of James and Susan (Hamilton) Stephens, natives of Oswego, New York, both of whom are deceased. Mr. Stephens was a millwright by trade, and some time after his marriage migrated to Illinois, from whence he subsequently moved to Iowa. His wife passed away in California, having been the mother of six children, of whom Mrs. Nichols is the youngest. Mr. and Mrs. Nichols have had six children, as follows: Lillian H., Dorothy, Josephine, Marion, Edmund O., and Elizabeth.

FRANK K. CAROTHERS, lawyer and ranchman, is an Ohio university man who has chosen Montana as the scene of his business and professional activities and is located at Ryegate. Born in Carey, Ohio, on February 19, 1888, he accompanied his parents from that place to Sidney, that state, when about four years of age and lived in the latter city until he came to Montana in 1911. Upon completing his high school education at Sidney, he became a student at the Ohio State University at Columbus, where he remained six years and won two degrees. At the age of twelve he began his business career by working in a brush factory, his wages being $2 per week, and later he became a traveling salesman, earning in this manner a part of his expenses while obtaining his collegiate education. After graduating from the university he came to Ryegate, Montana, and began the practice of law. Though he has but just entered upon his career in this profession, he is well qualified to succeed in it. Mr. Carothers is interested in the agricultural, as well as professional opportunities of Montana, and is the owner of a fine ranch about three miles from Ryegate. He is a member of the Ryegate Commercial Club, is public-spirited and has given every evidence to the people of his locality that he possesses the qualifications not only to succeed himself, but to advance their interests.

Mr. Carothers is a son of Wilson Carothers and Josephine Keller, both of whom were born in Ohio, were married there and have remained residents of that state, their home during the last twenty years having been at Sidney, where the father is a manufacturer. The senior Mr. Carothers is a devout Christian and an active church member. Of the four children of these parents, Frank K. is the third in order of birth and the only one located in Montana, the others all being residents of Ohio.

At Miles City, Montana, in January, 1912, was solemnized the marriage of Mr. Carothers and Miss Ruby Hutt, a daughter of Mrs. Amelia Hutt, of Van Wert, Ohio. Both Mr. and Mrs. Carothers are members of the Presbyterian church and the latter is a member of the Ladies' Aid Society and takes an active part in church work. Politically, Mr. Carothers is an active Republican. He is at present a United States commissioner of Montana and is secretary of the Ryegate school board. He is a member of the Masonic order and of Phi Delta Theta, Phi Delta Phi and Theta nu Epsilon college fraternities. College life has also made him familiar with all forms of athletic games and he especially enjoys football. He is a young man of vigor, ambition and attainments, and Montana eagerly welcomes such to citizenship.

LOUIS E. FREEMAN. The business of furnishing entertainment for the public is one in which have been enlisted the efforts of some of the most progressive business men of Montana, and of late years, since the advent of the cinematograph, or moving picture machine, houses devoted to this sort of entertainment have sprung up throughout the state. Many of these ventures were ill-advised, their proprietors either being ignorant of what constituted a clean, moral, interesting performance, or else being of an unscrupulous nature that caused them to attempt to get the greatest possible returns from the smallest possible investment, regardless of public morals, taste or satisfaction. Consequently the houses operated along these lines soon lost their patronage as the public, P. T. Barnum notwithstanding, does not "like to be fooled," and many theatres thus changed hands and became the property of shrewder business men, who realized that public taste must be catered to and patronage appreciated. In this latter class stands the Gem Theatre, at Great Falls, Montana, a popular house known as the finest moving-picture establishment in the northwest, the proprietor of which, Louis E. Freeman, has exhibited no small amount of managerial ability in conducting its affairs, and has so regulated his performance and improved it that from a poorly-patronized house that had become a losing proposition, it has become one of the most popular family theatres in the state. It is interesting to note that prior to his present position, Mr. Freeman had had no experience in matters theatrical, the greater part of an industrious career having been spent in railroading. A brief record of the life of a man who has accomplished something in a particular field may not be out of place in a work devoted to the progressive men of a progressive state.

Louis E. Freeman was born at Richmond, Madison county, Kentucky, August 13, 1867, and is the oldest of the five children of W. B. and Sally Ann (Hisle) Freeman. His paternal grandfather, Efford Freeman, was a plantation owner and stockman in the south, where both he and his wife, Susan, lived to advanced years. On the maternal side, Mr. Freeman's grandparents were Louis and Clara Hisle, also farming people of Kentucky. W. B. Freeman has been engaged in farming and stock raising all of his life in central Kentucky, with the exception of some years in Missouri and during the Civil war, when he served as a soldier under the Confederate general, Anderson. He is now sixty-eight years of age, is still actively engaged in business, and is well known throughout his section of the state. His wife, who was born in Kentucky, died in 1889, at the age of forty-six years, and was buried in Missouri. Of their five children, two died in infancy, while one daughter, Mrs. Clara Dunbar, resides in Kentucky.

Louis E. Freeman received his early education in the schools of Kentucky and Missouri, having migrated to the latter state with his parents. Subsequently he took a course in C. W. Robbins' Business College, at Sedalia, Missouri, where he was graduated in 1885. On completing his education Mr. Freeman entered the service of the Santa Fe Railroad, as an employee of the round house, and within two years he was running an engine. During the eighteen years that followed he had charge of an engine running between Chicago and Kansas City, and when he left the company's employ, had one of the finest records ever made by an engineer, and was one of the great organization's most trusted employees. In 1904 ill health caused his retirement from railroading, and at that time he engaged in mercantile business at Moberly, Missouri, where he continued for seven years. In 1911 he came to Great Falls and purchased the Orpheum, a badly managed moving picture theatre, which he converted into one of the finest and best patronized entertainment places in the northwest, installing the first pipe organ in the state of Montana and remodeling the theatre throughout. Rapidly gaining a reputation for the excellence of quality and absolute morality of its performances, Mr. Freeman's house attracted the highest class of trade and its patrons have showed by their support that they appreciate the class of entertainment that is being given them. When Mr. Freeman started life he had but five dollars to his name. In sharp contrast may be mentioned the fact that during his first month as proprietor of his theatre, of which he is now sole owner, he cleared the sum of eight hundred dollars, and at present he has large and valuable real estate holdings in various parts of Great Falls. His success has come to him as a result of wise investment along legitimate channels and because he has never been afraid to work industriously and faithfully at whatever occupation presented itself. His career is typical of the self-made men of Montana who are advancing the interests of the state along various lines, and he has gained a wide circle of influential friends. Political matters have never caused him to neglect his business interests, but he supports the principles and candidates of the Democratic party. He belongs to the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, and his religious connection is with the Christian Science church.

Mr. Freeman was married at Huntsville, Missouri, January 25, 1893, to Miss Carrie Lee Holman, daughter of William Holman, of that place, a veteran Confederate soldier. Two children have been born to this union: William Waldo, born November 2, 1896, at Fort Madison, Iowa, who attended the Great Falls high school and is now attending the Great Falls Commercial College; and Howard, born April, 1898, a bright lad of twelve years, who met an accidental death while bathing at Moberly, Missouri, June 16, 1910.

ADAM STIMPert is the sole owner and manager of the largest farm implement and machinery establishment of Great Falls. He conducts both a wholesale and retail business. All that he has accomplished is directly due to his own efforts, his only aid having come from within. He was born in Woodford county, Illinois, on the ninth day of June, 1869. His father, Theobald Stimpert, was a German by birth who came to this country after reaching his majority and settled in New York in the early fifties. He was one of the family to leave the Fatherland, there being three others that came to America. In New York he met and learned to love Charlotta Muller, a young German girl who had been in America only a few years. After their brief courtship and marriage they moved to Woodford county, Illinois, where they bought a farm on easy payments. By their clever management and German thrift the land was soon their own and here they dwelt in peace for the remainder of their lives. Mr. Stimpert passed away in 1871 in the prime of his life, being then only forty-three years of age. His good frau lived on the old homestead until 1900, being then seventy-four years of age. She left to mourn her death eight children, one having died in infancy. Of the five sons and two daughters who reached maturity, Adam Stimpert, the subject of this sketch, was the youngest.

His young life on the paternal farm was a hard and uneventful one. Few opportunities came to him, the education which he succeeded in winning was obtained under difficulties. For some three months of each year, during his early boyhood, he attended school in the little red schoolhouse of Woodford county. Later he became, for a brief period, a pupil in a German school some four miles distant from his home, making the distance each morning and evening, on horseback when the animal was not needed on the farm, but usually on foot. After his thirteenth birthday his mother considered him sufficiently grown to become a hand on the farm and his schooling abruptly ceased. His subsequent education has been by the means of self-culture alone.

Eight years he spent toiling on the farm turning in all that he earned to the family coffers. His father having died while he was still a mere infant and the elder brothers having mostly married and left home it seemed necessary for him to care for his mother and the farm. On the fourteenth day of January, 1892, he was married in Peoria, Illinois, to Miss Jescena Seggerman, the daughter of Henry Seggerman, a retired farmer. Mr. Stimpert, then in his twenty-second year, took his bride to the old homestead where they lived until the spring of 1896, the young man having assumed the entire management of the farm. Through his labor and judgment it yielded them an excellent income but he longed for a more independent life and something that he might claim as his very own. In 1896 he moved his family to Benson, Illinois, and there engaged in the farm implement and machinery business. In this line of work, his practical knowledge was of great benefit to him. Two years later, he disposed of this business to accept a position as traveling salesman for the Huber Manufacturing Company, of Marion, Ohio, dealers in threshing machinery. His territory was northern Illinois with headquarters in Chicago. While so employed, he attracted the notice of Reeves and Company of Columbus, Indiana, who made it worth his while to enter their employ in a like capacity. He traveled for them, still in Illinois territory until 1911 when they transferred him to Montana with headquarters in Great Falls. The country so appealed to him that he determined to make it his future home. Withdrawing his services from the Reeves Company in May of the same year, he purchased the well-established business of the Judd Implement Company and returned to the east for his family who now share his enthusiasm for the new home. The Judd Implement Company was established in Great Falls in 1895 and was at the time of its purchase by Mr. Stimpert, one of the best known implement concerns in the city. He has since created a wholesale department. The business house is located on the corner of Third avenue, South, and Fourth streets. Although the firm name indicates a corporation, Mr. Stimpert is the sole owner and manager of the rapidly-increasing business.

Mr. Stimpert's interests are by no means bounded by the four walls of this establishment. In politics, he is a Democrat of the progressive and independent type. He is a Mason of excellent standing, belonging to the blue lodge, the chapter, the commandery and the Shrine. He is a member, also, of the Woodmen of America, the Merchants' Association and the Commercial Club, in all of which associations he performs his full duty.

Mr. and Mrs. Adam Stimpert, together with their two sons, Walter and Fred, reside at 806 Third avenue, North. Walter, the older of the boys was born on the old homestead in Woodford, Illinois, on the third day of September, 1894. Fred is almost five years his junior, having come into the world on the seventh day of April, 1899. Both are attending the schools of Great Falls, Montana.

GLENN E. WHITEMAN. Since February, 1911, Glenn E. Whiteman has been a prominent and influential resident of Dixon, Montana, where he is cashier and active head of the Farmers & Merchants State Bank, one of the important financial institutions in this section of the state. Mr. Whiteman takes an active part in public affairs, gives his most ardent support to all measures projected for progress and improvement and in every sense of the word is a representative citizen and business man.

A native of the fine old Gopher state of the Union, Glenn E. Whiteman was born in the city of Minneapolis, Minnesota, January 27, 1883. He is a son of William

C. and Carrie A. (Schram) Whiteman, both of whom were born and reared in Minnesota, where was solemnized their marriage, in 1880, and where they continued to reside until 1910, when removal was made to San Diego, California. While in Minnesota Mr. Whiteman was engaged in the newspaper business in an editorial capacity with prominent dailies in St. Paul and Minneapolis and for a number of years was a resident of Ortonville, Minnesota. In 1910 Mr. Whiteman removed, with his family, to San Diego, California, where he owns and operates a commercial printing and binding establishment. Of the six children born to Mr. and Mrs. Whiteman the subject of this review was the first in order of birth.

Glenn E. Whiteman was a child of but four years of age when the family home was established in Ortonville, Minnesota, where he was graduated in the high school in 1903. He earned his first money as a boy of fourteen years of age, at which time he began to work for his father in the newspaper office. He continued to be identified with newspaper work until he had learned the trade of printer and had established a newspaper of his own. In 1903 he began to work for the Miller-Davis Printing Company at Minneapolis as city solicitor and then turned his attention to the banking business, his first position in this line of enterprise having been with the First State Bank of Dumont, Minnesota. Subsequently he was employed in the Citizens National Bank at Ortonville and in 1908 he went to Burnstad, North Dakota, where he opened up the First State Bank. He remained at Burnstad for a period of three years and in February, 1911, came to Dixon, where he has since resided and where he organized the Farmers & Merchants State Bank, of which he is cashier and active head.

Mr. Whiteman was always interested in the banking business as a boy and only learned the newspaper business at the suggestion of his father. He is Republican in his political proclivities and takes an active interest in the local councils of the party. Since 1911 he has been incumbent of the office of United States commissioner, having been appointed thereto by President Taft. He is a member of the governing board of the Western Montana Associated Commercial Clubs and is president of the Dixon Commercial Club. He is likewise affiliated with the Benevolent & Protective Order of Elks and with the Modern Woodmen of America, in which latter organization he is vice counsel. He says he likes Montana in every respect—its natural conditions and the enterprise and spirit of the people. The successful and terrific activity that is seen in every direction is conducive of good results.

At Ortonville, Minnesota, October 30, 1907, Mr. Whiteman was united in marriage to Miss Maud E. Turritin, daughter of Hugh and Fannie R. Turritin, of St. Peter, Minnesota. Mr. and Mrs. Whiteman are devout members of the Congregational church, in which he is a member of the board of trustees and in which she is president of the Ladies' Aid Society. They are prominent in connection with the best social affairs at Dixon and their beautiful home is the scene of many attractive gatherings.

PERRY F. CLOSE is editor and owner of the Dixon Herald, one of the prominent newspapers in Missoula county, Montana. The dissemination of news, the discussion of public questions and the promotion of the general welfare of his community through the columns of his paper constitute life's object with him as a private citizen.

A native of the fine old Buckeye state of the Union, Perry F. Close was born at Napoleon, Ohio, May 13, 1872, and he is a son of Lockwood S. and Mary L. (Foote) Close, both born in Ohio. The father lived on a farm in Ohio for forty-five years and then moved to the southern part of Minnesota, where he was engaged in farming until 1889. He spent his declining years in Oregon. His wife, whom he married in Ohio and whose maiden name was Mary L. Foote, was summoned to the life eternal in Minnesota in 1893, at the age of sixty-one years. There were ten children in the Close family and of the number three are living in 1912, the subject of this review being the youngest in order of birth.

Mr. Close, of this notice, was educated in the public schools of Minnesota and at the age of seventeen years left school and began hustling for himself. His first job was in a printing office where he worked for eighteen months, at a salary of four dollars per week. Subsequently he was engaged in farm work for a period of three years and he then turned his attention to the trade of machinist, which he followed for ten years. His first position as a machinist was at Grand Forks, North Dakota, and later he worked in Wisconsin for two years and in Minneapolis for two and a half years. In 1906 he returned to North Dakota where he took up a homestead and started a newspaper at Richardton, known as the Richardton News. He published the above paper for five years but in 1911 sold it and came to Montana, settling at Dixon, where he established the Dixon Herald. This paper is a weekly and is rapidly increasing in circulation. Although Mr. Close is a Republican as an individual the paper is conducted on independent principles. Through the medium of his paper Mr. Close is a booster for the town of Dixon and for Montana at large. He says: "While I am comparatively a new comer and have only seen the western half of Montana, I am very much impressed with it and cannot praise it too highly. With all its natural resources, combined with pure water, pure air, beautiful climate, fertile soil and healthy, happy, hustling people, Dixon and this community in time will form an important part of the great Treasure state."

SUTTON H. DRAPER, very well known in Missoula, Montana, as a master mechanic of the Northern Pacific Railroad, is what our Scottish brethren would call "a man of parts." That is to say that he has developed and brought to fruition the best qualities of his mind and heart. He is an excellent example of a self-made man, having made his way entirely through his own efforts without extraneous assistance. He began to hustle for himself at the early age of thirteen years. His father died when he was about ten years old, making it necessary for him to depend on his own efforts from an early age.

On October 28, 1858, Mr. Draper was born in Montezuma, Iowa, and he lived there until his father's death which occurred when he was only ten years old. He then moved with his mother to Cleveland, Ohio, where he remained until about 1880. Then he went to Texas where he worked for the Texas and Pacific Railroad Company in the capacity of locomotive engineer. From this company he went to the Houston & Texas Railroad Company, running out of Houston, Texas, and in 1882, he left there to enter the service of the (Northwestern System), running between St. Paul and Elroy, Wisconsin.

He stayed here until August, 1883, when he entered the service of the Northern Pacific Railroad as a locomotive engineer and he has been with this company ever since that time.

Mr. Draper has the distinction of pulling one of the gold spike excursion trains on the Rocky Mountain division, and he is now the proud possessor of a desk in his office which was used at one time by former President Villard.

His first promotion occurred in 1900 when he was appointed traveling engineer on the Rocky Mountain division. In 1904, he was again promoted to the position of general air-brake inspector of the entire Northern Pacific Railroad System with headquarters at St.

Paul. In 1911, he was appointed master mechanic of the Rocky Mountain division and all its branches with headquarters at Missoula, Montana. This division has the distinction of being the most important on the entire system.

Mr. Draper's early education was obtained in the public and high schools of Cleveland, Ohio, but his education did not stop when he left school but all through his later life his knowledge was augmented and increased by a habit of reading the best literature and by a habit of close observation.

He earned his first money as a boy at the age of fourteen years. His first job of note was that of driving a street car in Cleveland, Ohio, at a salary of forty-five dollars a month, every cent of which munificent sum went to his mother for family support, so it may be seen that habits of self reliance and unselfishness were inculcated in him from youth. Having shown ability and industry, he was promoted to the position of street car conductor, with a moderate increase in salary.

(He managed to save a few dollars and with the money saved, he went into the retail butcher business. This was his first business venture, and unfortunately, he met with a reverse. His failure was due to a partner he had associated with him. This partner proved to be untrustworthy and in that way broke up the little business venture.)

In the meantime, his greatest dream and ambition was to enter the railroad service. His fondness for engineering and railroading began in his early boyhood, when he built an engine by his own efforts. This was the first engine he ever ran; he used it for running the machinery in his butcher shop.

After quitting the meat business, he appealed to his mother for her consent to enter into railroad work; this permission was finally granted him on account of their financial condition.)

His first railroad position was with the Lake Shore & Michigan Southern Railway Company in their shops at Collinwood, Ohio. After a short apprenticeship, he was put on the road in the capacity of fireman. From the very beginning of his entrance into railroad work, he made up his mind that this was to be his life work, and instead of simply looking forward to pay day and watching the clock as so many young fellows do, he determined to make an exhaustive and scientific study of railroad conditions and engineering. He has certainly been more than successful in this ambition, having gone forward with rapid and steady strides.

Upon coming to the Northern Pacific Company in 1883, he found that the use and maximum capacity of break appliances were necessary, especially in the Rocky Mountain division which covers every variety from the level valley to the steepest mountain grades. In the matter of break appliances, Mr. Draper was well equipped, (as a result of having been placed on the mailing list of the Westinghouse Air Brake Company as far back as 1878.) He had made a special study of air brakes as well as the locomotive itself, and from this date until the present time, he has always ranked high as an authority on the subject.

After being promoted to the position of general air brake inspector, he passed over the entire system, instructing and examining all train, engine, and shop men, a total of over six thousand employees under his control. This undertaking required a period of nearly two years steady lecturing and conducting of examinations. He has lectured to the men a great many times for seven hours a day. He is responsible for the successful carrying out of this educational work in his department and also in the way of co-operating with the state university, (here. It is interesting to note that since he inaugurated this movement, it has been installed in Helena and Livingston divisions.)

As has been said, Mr. Draper owes his success entirely to his own efforts, to his practical experience and hard knocks in youth, and above all, to his unswerving ambition and determination to win. He emphasises the value of reading good books as an aid to a well rounded, successful career.

(He is a member of the Masons, the blue lodge and Shrine.) He was a member of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and he has filled various offices in subordinate lodges. He was for over four years a member of the Grand International Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers but he resigned his membership on account of his present official connection with the railroad company.

Mr. Draper is very fond of all out door sports, especially of baseball and hunting. He takes a great deal of interest in athletics of all kinds, being at one time president of an athletic club in Missoula, Montana. (He once took part in a fat man's bicycle race and won the contest.) He is extremely fond of horses and dogs; he enjoys (a band) of good music and he likes lectures especially if they are on scientific subjects. He is very fond of reading scientific books also, and he is the owner of a (fine) selected library.

He is of an inventive turn of mind (is very literary. He has patents on two improvements on steam engines and has written a book on (new revisions on) instructions for operating and maintaining air brakes and air signal apparatus.

(Mr. Draper says of Montana that he realizes that the "wonderful and unlimited resources of the Treasure state are but partially developed" and also that he has gained health, happiness and prosperity in Montana and he proposes to live there for the rest of his life.)

He was married in Helena, Montana, October 28, 1885, to Miss Laura A. Brown, the daughter of William and Mary C. Brown of Helena. He is the father of three children, two of whom are now living. They are: Lillian, married to C. C. Perry of Missoula, (where Mr. Perry is in the coal business); and Florence, married to Dr. E. C. Na Vella, of Seattle. (Both of these daughters are accomplished musicians.)

In regard to Mr. Draper's parents, his father was Mr. Clark R. Draper. He was born in Canada and at the age of seven years, he came with his parents to New Hampshire where he grew up. He entered an orthodox college at Meadville, Pennsylvania, and graduated for the ministry. (He followed this profession until 1855, and then he moved to Iowa. Here he combined the occupations of ministry and farming until 1863. At this time he evinced his love for his country by entering the Union army and remaining in it until the close of the war. His experience in the war weakened his health and eventually caused his death. Before entering the army he made an eloquent address appealing for volunteers and headed the list himself. He was known as a great orator.)

While he lived in New Hampshire he married Miss Cathryn M. Smith, whose ancestry dates back to the Puritans. She passed away at the age of sixty and is buried at Cleveland, Ohio. (Mr. Draper's father died at the age of fifty-five and is buried at Montezuma, Iowa. There were nine children in the elder Draper family, Mr. Sutton Draper being the fifth child.)

EARL M. SICKLES. Schooling and cash capital are important factors in achieving success in the business world today, where every faculty must be brought into play, but they are not the main elements. Persistency and a determination to forge ahead figure much more prominently and a man possessed of these qualities is bound to win a fair amount of success. Earl M. Sickles, whose name forms the caption for this article, earned his own education and during the latter years of his career has climbed to a high place on the ladder of achievement. He is a prominent citizen in Joplin, Montana, where he has been engaged in the drug business since the fall of 1911.

The subject of this review traces his ancestry, on both the maternal and paternal sides, to stanch Scotch-English stock. The forefathers of his mother settled in Pennsylvania in the pioneer days of that state, and his great-grandfather Sickles, the original progenitor of the Sickles family in America, settled in eastern Canada, whence his descendants removed to Michigan. Earl M. Sickles was born in Deckerville, Michigan, March 21, 1885, and he is a son of George Edward and Betsie (Thornton) Sickles, both of whom were born and reared in Michigan, where they were married in 1882. The father is engaged in the banking business at Deckerville, Michigan, and there is recognized as a business man of unusual merit. Mr. and Mrs. Sickles became the parents of ten children and of the number Earl M. was the second in order of birth.

After completing the curriculum of the public schools of Deckerville, Earl Milton Sickles attended and was graduated in the high school of that place as a member of the class of 1901. At that time he was working also in the drug store of William Reed, a pharmacist at Deckerville. Two years later he entered the Detroit College of Pharmacy, in which excellent institution he was graduated with the degree of Doctor of Pharmacy in 1904. He then accepted employment with the Parke Davis & Company, at Detroit, and began making fluid extracts in their laboratories. Six months later he went to Cincinnati, Ohio, and for the ensuing three years was clerk in the retail drug store of Otto Kisker. In 1908 he went to Alberta, Canada, and for nine months was in the employ of F. Munsell, of Grassy Lake. He then engaged in the drug business on his own account in Canada, but as his location did not prove satisfactory he decided to come to Montana and located in Joplin in November, 1911. He established the first drug store to do business in this city and he is the owner of the lot and building in which his business is located. He is an unusually efficient druggist and the fact that he handles nothing but pure drugs commands to him a large and lucrative patronage.

In politics Mr. Sickles is a Progressive Independent. He is vice-president of the Commercial Club of Joplin and is a member of the Independent Order of Foresters. In religious matters he is a Baptist. Since the age of sixteen years Mr. Sickles has been self-supporting. At the time when he left home he had but ten dollars in his possession; he has never asked favors of anyone and his success has been on a parity with his own well-directed endeavors. Mr. Sickles is unmarried.

FRED D. CURTISS, M. D. The first physician to locate in Galata was Dr. F. D. Curtiss. In modern settlement and development of new lands, the physician is often a pioneer, following soon after the first comers have begun their home making. Doctor Curtiss has performed a very important service in this community, and has been one of the prosperous citizens.

Dr. F. D. Curtis was born at Cortland, Illinois, September 26, 1876, and comes of a family whose members have long been identified with the professions and with social service. His father, C. W. Curtiss, now a retired resident in Chicago, was a native of Connecticut and a graduate of Yale College. For many years he was occupant of the chair of literature and mathematics in the Northwestern University at Evanston, Illinois, and has been retired since 1882. He is now eighty years of age. During the Civil war he enlisted in an Illinois regiment and served one year. The mother, Mary (Decker) Curtiss, who is now seventy-six years of age, was born in Illinois and her father was Chaplain Decker, on the staff of General Burnside in the Civil war. Of their four children, the Doctor was the third.

Doctor Curtiss prepared for his profession in the Chicago Homeopathic Medical College, where he was graduated M.D. in 1901. His first practice was in Fisk, Winnebago county, Wisconsin, where he did a very successful business for ten years, but in 1911 came west and became the pioneer physician of Galata. Besides his busy career as physician, he is also owner of a ranch in Chouteau county. He is fond of outdoor life, and has found a pleasant and profitable field of endeavor in this new northwestern country. The Doctor is a chapter Mason, is a member of the Methodist church, and in politics is Independent.

He was married at Fisk, Wisconsin, in 1901, to Miss Elmira Stone. They are the parents of three children: Charles, born in 1902; Frank Chester, born in 1907; and Roy E., born in 1911. The first two were born in Fisk, and the last in Galata.

EDWARD SCHARNIKOW, the senior member of the well-known and prominent law firm of Scharnikow & Paul, of Deer Lodge, was born February 8, 1865, in New York City. While he was a mere child his parents went to reside at Margaretville, Delaware county, in the Catskill Mountains, where he went to the public schools. In 1880 he went to West Hoboken, New Jersey, and attended the high school, taking a special course. Then leaving school for a time, he secured work in a real estate and insurance office at Union Hill, New Jersey, as clerk. Following that he became bookkeeper for a wholesale and retail lumber company, that of Gardner & Meeks. Before leaving Margaretville he worked at printing for a year, in the office of the Utilitarian, a weekly paper published in that town.

He came to Montana in April, 1885, and settled at Deer Lodge. He worked one year as bookkeeper for Albert Kleinschmidt & Company, and one year for E. L. Bonner Company. He then began the study of law, returning to Albany, New York, and taking a two year course at the Union College and graduating in the class of 1890. Returning to Montana, he began practice in July, 1890, with the Hon. Judge Theo. Brantly as partner, remaining in this relation until the judge was elected as district judge in the fall of 1892. He then practiced by himself until the year 1905, when he joined partnership with William J. Paul. Mr. Scharnikow and partner have attained the highest plane in the city and country and are the leading law firm in the city of Deer Lodge today.

Mr. Scharnikow was elected to the legislature in the fall of 1892 and as a member of the city council, and he has been city treasurer for the past twenty years except for one term, when he declined the nomination. In politics he is a Democrat, and while not an orator he is active in behalf of his party interests. He attends, usually as a delegate, all Democratic conventions. He is a thirty-second degree Mason, a Knight Templar and a Shriner, Algeria Temple, Helena. He owns and enjoys a splendid city residence.

He married Miss Martha Humber, daughter of Robert G. Humber, an early pioneer of Montana. They have no children. Mr. Scharnikow is a great lover of music. His wife has a fine voice, the beauty and power of which are well known. He and his wife enjoy long automobile trips, and his wife's skill as a hunter and good shot is well known. She is the hunter, for although her husband enjoys the sport he does not claim any distinction as a shot. He is also very fond of travel and delights in fine scenery.

The father of the subject of this sketch, Edward Scharnikow, was a veteran of the Civil war, a member (sergeant) of Company I, Eighth Regiment, New York Volunteers. He received an honorable discharge on May 23, 1863. He fought at the battle of Bull Run. He was a carriage maker by trade. He died in 1893, at his old home. The mother was Catherine Gerdt, and, like her husband, was a native of Bremen, Germany. They came to the United States as young people. Her death occurred about 1900. She is interred with her husband. There were four sons in this household: The subject of this sketch is the eldest; Henry L. is a member of the New York City police force; Louis G., is a druggist in New York City; John C. is a stenographer to the superintendent of the Pullman Company, in New York City.

While Mr. Scharnikow is an active Mason, he is also a member, with his wife, of the Christian church of Deer Lodge and is very active in its growth and welfare.

WILLIAM J. PAUL, law partner of Mr. Scharnikow, was born April 8, 1881, at Laurel, Iowa, and attended school there until he was eight years of age. His home was with his paternal grandparents at Gillman, Iowa, from the time of his mother's death, when he was but an infant. He continued in high school there and at sixteen attended Highland Park College at Des Moines, taking science and philosophy and graduating in 1901. He then studied law in the same college and graduated in 1903. To get experience he began to practice at Des Moines, Iowa, and remained one year, and in 1904 came to Deer Lodge as instructor in the College of Montana. On July 5, 1905, he became associated with Mr. Edward Scharnikow. He was elected to the legislature in the fall of 1910, on the Republican ticket, and was a member of the appropriation committee, also of the judiciary committee and the committee on banks and banking. He is active during campaign times and is an orator of ability.

Mr. Paul is a Mason, a member of Deer Lodge, No. 14, A. F. & A. M., and of Valley chapter, R. A. M. He is also a member of the K. of P. He married Miss Lillian Humber, a sister of the wife of his law partner.

The father of the subject of this sketch, James Paul, is of Scotch-Irish parentage, and is a prominent and wealthy farmer of Laurel, Iowa. His mother was Sarah Balmer, who died in February, 1882, at Laurel.

JACOB PINCUS. Among the prominent business men of Butte, Montana, who have been identified with the fortunes of the community for nearly a quarter of a century and who came here when the present metropolitan city was but a comparatively small mining center is Mr. Jacob Pincus, president of the Tuxedo Cigar Company, conducting one of the largest and finest retail cigar stores in the downtown district. Mr. Pincus is associated in business with Creighton Largey, who is vice president of the company, and Phil Gillis, secretary of the firm. The concern was organized and incorporated under direction of Mr. Pincus, and the success of the enterprise is largely due to his management and ability as an executive.

Mr. Pincus is a native of Silecia, Germany, where he was born June 4, 1869, the son of Meyer and Ernestine (Nossen) Pincus, both of German birth, and who never left their native land. The father, a retired merchant, is still living in Germany and is now eighty-seven years old. His wife died in 1906. They were the parents of eleven children, six of whom are now living, three sons, Jacob, Isadore and Adolph, being residents of Butte and among this city's most influential citizens. Isadore is a well-known cigar manufacturer here, while Adolph is one of the city's wealthiest men, his rating being that of a millionaire.

Jacob Pincus was the youngest member of the family and when thirteen years old was taken from school and apprenticed to learn the trade of watchmaker and jeweler. It required three years of faithful application to attain proficiency in these lines. When sixteen years old he pluckily started out to make his fortune in the new world and came alone to the United States, locating immediately on arrival in this country at Butte, which city has ever since been his home. The first decade after his settlement here Mr. Pincus worked at his trade and experienced no difficulty in securing employment in the best jewelry stores in the city. His workmanship was always of the highest class, he was industrious and trustworthy and the reputation he gained for proficiency in his work made his services much sought after.

Having saved a sufficient sum of money to enable him to engage in business for himself, Mr. Pincus in 1897 opened up a watch-making and jewelry shop at 10 South Main street, and soon made his establishment one of the largest and best patronized in the city at that time. For the succeeding eight years he conducted this business with marked success and good profit, then disposed of the store. The following several years he devoted his time and attention to the pursuit of various mercantile endeavors and in 1910 organized the Tuxedo Company, as previously mentioned. Mr. Pincus' commercial standing is of the highest character and he is generally recognized as one of the most conservative and substantial business elements of the city. Besides his store he owns numerous other valuable holdings and has mining properties of great worth at Boulder, Montana.

Mr. Pincus was married September 6, 1909, to Miss Cora Beach, who is a native of Wisconsin. They occupy prominent positions in the leading social circles of the city and are held in high esteem by all who have the pleasure of their acquaintance. Mr. Pincus is of Democratic political faith, and while he is not actively interested in partisan affairs is invariably ready to lend the weight of his influence to the advancement of any enterprise that has for its object the development and upbuilding of the city and state, and discharges his duties as a citizen intelligently and conscientiously.

JAMES H. KING, a representative business man and citizen of Butte, Montana, has been a resident of that city since 1885. A native of Omaha, Nebraska, he was born April 2, 1866, and received his education first in the public schools and later at the University of Missouri. His inclination was for a business rather than a professional career, and this was probably responsible for his leaving college at the age of eighteen. He came to Butte in 1885, and for twenty-eight years has been identified with the business interests of this city, first in the line of general merchandise. In 1899 he organized the Butte Floral Company, incorporated under the laws of Montana, with William J. Day, president; Philo A. King, vice president; and James H. King, secretary and treasurer. The Butte Floral Company operates two green house plants, one at Butte and the other at Gregson Springs, Montana. About forty thousand square feet of glass space is used, and the hot houses at Gregson Springs are unique, in that they are the only known plants in the world heated exclusively by natural hot water. The Butte Floral Company caters to an extensive and select trade, not only throughout Montana, but in adjoining states as well.

Mr. King's interests are diversified, and in addition to those mentioned, include real estate holdings in Butte, as well as industrial interests in Great Falls and Seattle.

Fraternally he is a Mason, being a member of the chapter and commandery, as well as being affiliated with the Ancient Arabic Order of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine. He is also a member of the Elks, while socially he holds membership in the Silver Bow Club and the University Club of Butte, and the Electric Club of Great Falls, Montana.
